Mr. Rhodes is using Sir Henry Loch as a stalking horse to cover an advance into Amandebeli country while the Chartered people are massing troops, and Sir Henry Loch is allowing his position as her Majesty's High Commissioner to be used as a mask to cover this advance. While he is negotiating and palavering, the Chief whose subjects have been wantonly murdered is being stealthily stalked.

The men taken from here for the Chartered Company are the sweepings of the town and the police-courts, and a more degraded lot could hardly be imagined. If Lobengula does not resist this invasion, his country will be ravished by irresponsible freebooters of a very low type; if he resists, the whole might of England is to be brought against him for having killed British subjects. Up to now Lobengula has not allowed a single European to be molested.

How high minded Englishmen can sit still, or worse still, applaud, while an act of brigandage like this goes on under the ægis of the Government of a nation ever ready to parade its civilisation, chivalry, and Christianity, is beyond my comprehension. Such acts must bring retribution and a heavy debt of disgrace.

The following occurs in a letter written actually from Victoria (Mashonaland) before the crisis had arrived, and the writer is a prominent and substantial settler. It is well that the public here should understand that there are two currents of opinion in regard to the present operations even among the "pioneers" :—

Matters are very much the same as when I wrote you last week, with, of course, the usual false rumours, amongst which is one that Lo Ben has offered 30,000 head of cattle to purge his offence, but the Company want 60,000. What is really the matter is this, they will go on increasing their demands until it is impossible for Lo Ben to comply, and then that will be taken as a reason for war. Can you stir up public opinion sufficiently in England to stop this piece of rascality? The Company is a failure with Mashonaland, what will it be with Matabeleland added? . . . . The best people have been steadily leaving the country—always a bad sign.

I have been compelled to send this under cover to Cape Town, as many letters here are mysteriously lost, whilst yours would be peculiarly susceptible of such a catastrophe.

Writing from Kimberley about the same time, another correspondent says :—

I see in a recent issue of the Times a letter from Cape Town, urging that decisive action should be taken against Lobengula. Such a letter could only have emanated from some one personally interested in the Chartered Company. Every one who knows anything of Africa knows that the dominant tribes have their tributary tribes, which they are in the habit of raiding periodically for slaves and cattle. The Mashonaland settlers knew, or ought to have known, that Lobengula would raid in that country. If it is necessary to "teach him a lesson," why was this not thought of when the Charter was asked for, and before settlers were invited into the country? If, instead of urging decisive measures against Lobengula for the benefit of Chartered shareholders, English papers would urge a searching inquiry into the internal workings of the Cape Government, as it is at present constituted, they would do much better service to South Africa.

The following letter is from Pretoria, at a later date, and is of more immediate interest :—

SIR,—Permit me through the medium of your paper to draw the attention of the people at home to the way the Chartered Company intend, if possible, to appropriate Lobengula's country. Commandant Raaf was here calling for volunteers to attack Lo Ben. The Chartered Company offer half the loot, a farm of 6,000 acres, and twenty gold claims—all to be taken from Lobengula by the Company.

The men who volunteer are the very scum of the gold fields, totally unfit for any campaign. They have already started looting stores on their way up. The State Artillery were sent out after one draft to bring the looters back, which they did. The volunteers are deserting, finding that the Company only find them arms and ammunition; their pay they must steal from Lo Ben.

The road between Pretoria and Peitersburg is simply full of volunteers tramping back, they refusing to serve without pay.

Advertisements are appearing in the local papers calling for men to assist Lo Ben. Lo Ben will have no difficulty in obtaining volunteers against the Company. He is said by everybody to keep his promises, which the Company certainly does not.

I enclose cuttings from local papers, so you can form your own opinion how matters stand.—I am, &c.,

In view of the attempt that has been made to deceive the British public as to the designs of the Company on Matabeleland, special interest attaches to the offer of land and gold claims to volunteers against Lobengula. As to such an offer having been made, there seems no room for doubt. A Transvaal paper has published the following summary of the terms of each volunteer's agreement, on the authority of a Vryburg correspondent, who asserts that he has taken a copy of the original :—

1st, protection on all claims in Mashonaland, and for six months after the war; 2nd, right to Matabele farm, 300 morgen, pioneer rights, title deeds within reasonable time; 3rd, twenty claims in Matabeleland; 4th, loot, half to Company, and remainder to officers and men equally; 5th, each man to be mounted, equipped, and rationed.

After this, for Heaven's sake let us hear no more of the cant about protecting "the defenceless Mashonas," establishing peace and freedom in Mashonaland, and all the rest of it. What these "brave pioneers" are fighting for is Matabeleland. They have already pegged out in advance the "farms" and the "claims," and when the "bloodthirsty savage" and the majority of his people have been duly slaughtered, the farms and the claims, together with the miscellaneous "loot," are to be divided among those who come forward in time to assist in the slaughter. And why this hunger for Matabeleland? The question has already been answered in TRUTH, but to remove any vestige of doubt, let the answer be given by one of the land-grabbing class. On Thursday last the Pall Mall Gazette gave prominence to the following views of "a South African gentleman now staying in London":—

> Mosilikatze's gangs had the pick of the country when they went on their murdering way from Zululand. [Precisely as Rhodes's gangs are now going on their murdering way from Mashonaland.—ED. TRUTH.] And they knew how to choose. If you had gone through the dreary flats of Bechuanaland, and on through the thorn forests of Khama's country, as I have—not to speak of such a route as the Ngami "thirst country"—you would know how to appreciate hills and vales and grassy slopes when you found them. Lobengula and his people have the best country in South Africa in every way. They say it is even richer than the Transvaal in gold. At Buluwayo itself a missionary whom I know, and who has lived in the country as long as any Englishman, has seen a reef of simply marvellous richness. On the latest map published by the Chartered Company you will see they speak of the "banket" reef near Buluwayo. That means that they have found out the deposit there is the same as that on which so many Gold Companies have been successfully started at the Randt. So you see there is something to fight for.

Precisely. And that is what I have always said was being fought for. But even this is not good enough for an enterprising journal like the Pall Mall Gazette. It having been thus made known that Lobengula is the successor of murdering gangs from Zululand, and that consequently the Chartered Company ought to slay or depose him and take possession of his "banket reef," the Pall Mall Gazette next day (October 20) publishes a map of the whole region, and prints the blessed words "Territory under British Protection" right across Matabeleland, so as to make Buluwayo the very centre of this new British Protectorate. This is, I think, the most sublime stroke in the whole of this unique story. A gang of British Company promoters go to an African Monarch and gammon him out of a concession, by which he permits them to live in his country and take any minerals they can find. On the strength of this permission British speculators enter the African Monarch's country and go to work. They then discover that the African Monarch is a savage, whose uncivilised habits are a serious hindrance to money-making. As Mr. Rider Haggard beautifully expressed it in the Pall Mall Gazette on Monday, "His continued existence as a force in the affairs of men is an insult that civilisation cannot tolerate." At the same time the discovery is made that the territory in which this savage has not permitted Englishmen to reside is far preferable to that to which he has admitted them, and that in the immediate neighbourhood of his capital there is a rich banket reef, which is "something to fight for." The speculators accordingly raise an army, and offer a slice of the banket reef to any one who will assist them in driving the "insult to civilisation" out of his dominions. And thereupon a leading London journal solemnly publishes a map proving that the wretched African Monarch (whose only connection with Britain is that in a moment of weakness he allowed certain Britons to settle under his protection) is himself occupying "territory under British Protection," banket reef and all. Thus is built up that British Empire which is the pride of every patriot and the envy of all our enemies—confound their knavish tricks!

"Do you really regard Lobengula and his Zulus as worthy of approval?" writes a correspondent, and then he goes on to give me a list of their crimes. No, I do not. I regard them as most objectionable savages. I have no doubt, however, that if they had a Rider Haggard among them, he could compile an authentic catalogue of atrocities committed by white men in Africa which would make every Zulu's blood boil. Even granting that Mr. Rider Haggard's picture of Lobengula as a sort of coloured combination of Frankenstein and Jack the Ripper is fact, not fiction, I see no reason why the Matabele should be massacred wholesale by a band of Company-promoters, simply because gold is to be found in their territory, and a rotten, bankrupt Company hopes to find salvation by appropriating the country. Chartered Companies of all sorts I have ever objected to, because I do not believe in Company-promoters being entrusted with jurisdiction over their fellow-men; and still less do I hold that such Companies should be allowed to go to war with their neighbours whenever it suits their interests to do so. That the present war was provoked by the South Africa Chartered Company, no one, I suppose, who is neither employed by the Company nor interested financially in it, doubts. Equally certain is it that Lobengula and his people, although by no means desirable neighbours, have had a war forced upon them because Mashonaland is not a paying property, and the Chartered Company hopes that if it can get hold of Matabeleland, it will, whether it be really so auriferous as is stated or not, get a sufficient number of British investors to believe that it is, and thus be enabled to float fresh shares and fresh debentures.

What, however, disgusts me beyond everything else with the whole business is the hypocritical nonsense beneath which Mr. Rhodes and his allies conceal their predatory aim. The Jingoes are told that their object is a patriotic desire to enlarge our Empire; religious people are told that they want to Christianise the Matabeles; those who object to slavery, that the Matabeles are slave-owners. A few days ago a letter from the Rev. A. Sylvester, signing himself "English Chaplain, Victoria," was published in the Times. His mission appears to be to rally the religious conscience to the side of the Company. His doctrine is one which might have recommended itself to the Israelites on their way to Canaan; to the Caliphs in the early days of Moahmmedanism; to the Spaniards who enslaved in the name of Christianity the Mexicans and the Peruvians;

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. It is the best that money can buy.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Has been awarded Five Gold Medals.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Guaranteed to be free from alum.

and to our late antagonist the Mahdi. But I hardly think that many Englishmen of to-day will be prepared to accept it. Says "the Chaplain":—

We are determined to make a way for the spread of the glorious Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. No mission work can be done with any security and success unless the barbaric power of a heathen and godless nation is subdued. All Englishmen should remember that the introduction of civilisation and successful Christianity into Matabeleland will redound to the honour and glory of the great British Empire, and all nations and creeds will eventually rejoice that the Chartered Company is prepared to settle at once and for ever the future welfare and prosperity of heathen Matabeleland.

Read by the glowing picture of the reference to the banket reef near Buluwayo, and the allusion to the success of the Gold Companies in the Transvaal, more offensive and sickening cant than this was never penned. I fully admit the difficulty of the situation in which the Colonial Office finds itself. This is due to the folly of granting a charter to a gang of speculators based upon a mining concession from an African Chief. I should have thought, however, that Lord Ripon might have insisted upon some man, entirely unconnected with either Mr. Rhodes or his Company, visiting Lobengula, and trying to arrange matters peaceably before hostilities were permitted. As it is, I would suggest that such a man be at once despatched to the front, if he can be discovered in South Africa. Matabeleland is as large as France, so is Mashonaland. If Lobengula has a claim to tribute from the Mashonas, then let the Company pay it, on condition that he confines himself to Matabeleland. In any case, the ultimate terms of peace ought to be settled by the Colonial Office; and these ought to be, Mashonaland for the Company, Matabeleland for the Matabeles, with a clear line of demarcation between the two.

The telegrams of one day generally contradict those of the previous day. But if the telegram respecting the fate of Lobengula's Mission to Sir Henry Loch be true, the war is being carried on by the Chartered Company in a fashion which sets at nought the rules which mitigate hostilities even amongst savages. We are told that Lobengula's brother, accompanied by two chief Indunas, entered the lines of the Company's forces with Mr. Dawson. They stated that they had come from Lobengula as Envoys to Sir Henry Loch. On this they were imprisoned, and, surprised at this treatment, naturally sought to escape. The two Indunas were at once shot. The plea put forward for this outrage was that it was suspected that they might be spies. It is remarkable that this information appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette in a telegram from its Special Correspondent, but was suppressed in the telegrams sent to all other journals.

THE ARMY SHEBEEN.

In looking into some of the tricks and frauds practised at Regimental Depots and Sergeants' Messes, I have become acquainted with one form of irregularity which calls for immediate attention from the civil authorities. The matter was referred to in a letter published in TRUTH of September 7, which contained the following passage:—

The receiving of money from tradesmen in the shape of discounts by the Sergeant-Major, President, Treasurer, and Caterer goes on all round, and tends among other things to create an illegal traffic in liquor. I have seen the passages and back doors of a Sergeants' Mess literally crowded with soldiers and civilians, and frequently among them a sprinkling of police—civil and military . . . I have seen brewers' bills ranging from £70 to £120 per month. Surely Commanding Officers must see that this cannot come from the members each only.

From inquiries which I have made in regard to Sergeants' Messes in different parts of the country, it is evident that the state of things here described prevails very generally. Writing, like the correspondent quoted above, with more particular reference to the Sergeant-Major's interest in this traffic, an N.C.O. says:—

In the 1st —— Regiment ale at 9d. per gallon, and well watered, was for years surreptitiously sold to privates at 4d. per pint. The Sergeant-Major kept himself carefully in ignorance of what went on. Men would occasionally be confined off guard-mounting parade for being drunk. I have heard the Adjutant ask the Sergeant-Major where on earth the men got drink from at that time in the morning. "They bring it in overnight in their pockets, Sir," was the reply. He knew as well as anybody in barracks that the drink was really got at the back door of the Sergeants' Mess. Before early morning parade the place would sometimes be full of privates drinking the 9d. ale at 4d. a pint.; but the Sergeant-Major always kept out of the way. If he wanted one of the Sergeants, or perhaps the Regimental Order book, he always sent a message, knowing very well what he would find if he looked in himself.

The above instances are from England, and I believe they can be multiplied from all parts of the country. Here in London, at Finsbury Barracks, there is a bar open all day on Sundays, and civilians are constantly being served there. At the principal Irish military station there are at least three Sergeants' Messes where N.C.O.'s, privates, and civilians are served with liquor at all hours of the day and night, and on Sundays even more than on week days. Civilians have also been regularly served at one of the canteens. One of the Sergeants' Messes at this station, after being open all night, closes, I understand, at seven a.m. by arrangement with a neighbouring mess, who then get their turn. Among the civilians who have been seen drinking at these various establishments are policemen and women. At one mess the police regularly look in to get drink on Sundays, and one witness states that a few Sundays ago he saw two old women in the mess with pots of beer in front of them, and the Sergeant-Major himself looking on. The last point is particularly instructive. A new block of barracks has been in course of erection at this particular station, and the workmen are reported to have been regular customers at the different messes, with results which have often been only too conspicuous. It is a fair inference that there are few garrison towns where this sort of thing is not going on. Civilians have, as a rule, no difficulty in entering barracks, it being merely necessary in most cases to inquire at the gate for somebody who is known to be on the premises. When a man is once inside, there seems to be no regulations to prevent his being served with liquor wherever he likes to ask for it, and it is the interest of the Mess authorities to serve him.

There are two sides of this matter, which may be kept entirely distinct. The indiscriminate sales of drink to soldiers at the Sergeants' Mess, like other irregularities in Mess management which have been pointed out in RATIONAL DOG FEEDING.—Give wholesome and nutritious food (Spratt's Patent Meat Fibrine Dog Cakes). Do not give tit-bits and dainties because your dog, like a spoilt child, prefers what suits his palate. See that the Dog Cakes are stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "×," as cheap and innutritious imitations are often substituted for extra profit. Pamphlet on Canine Diseases post free, SPRATT'S PATENT, Limited, Bermondsey, London.

Truth, are a matter for the Military Authorities. It is their business to repress these nefarious modes of swelling the "makings" of Sergeants-Major and their colleagues in the management of the Mess; and when it is shown that these ill-gotten gains are in part amassed by encouraging privates to get drunk before they go on parade in the morning, I hope the time has come when the necessity of looking into these scandals will be recognised at the War Office. At the present moment, however, I desire rather to address myself to the civil authorities. I have indisputable evidence in my possession—and the local police authorities can obtain any amount of similar evidence much more easily than I can—to show that "shebeening" is a regular and profitable branch of the business of barrack refreshment bars. Such a state of things cannot possibly be winked at. The Sergeant-Major and Mess officials cannot be allowed to add to their other lucrative sources of income the privilege of carrying on unlicensed public-houses. If it is considered conducive to military discipline that two or three N.C.O.'s in each battalion and depot should have a pecuniary interest in liquor bars to which the whole establishment have access, it is quite opposed to the spirit of the Licensing Acts that civilians should also be free to patronise these establishments. Whether the letter of the Licensing Acts permits such a state of things I do not know; but I should assume, until the contrary is demonstrated, that the manager of a mess or canteen who sells intoxicants to a civilian is on precisely the same footing as a manager of a club who sells to one who is not a member. If that is not the law, it ought to be. It so happens that this is a branch of the liquor traffic which both the public-house interest and the temperance interest are equally interested in suppressing, and I would recommend both of them, as well as the police authorities in garrison towns, to keep an eye on the Army Shebeen.

THE LADY-KILLER.

In the old days, when Mr. Charles Wyndham was the rattling, hop-skip-and-jump, "razzle-dazzle" Charles Mathews of the Criterion, a farce like the "Lady-Killer" would have been as popular at this bright little theatre as "Brighton," or "The Great Divorce Case." But, alas for the merriment of the age! the popular Charles Wyndham, like Edward Sothern before him, has abandoned farce for romance. He takes life seriously, much to the delight of impulsive young ladies. He makes love as David Garrick in plum-coloured velvet and silk stockings, and atones for his little weaknesses in frock-coat and flowing French ties in the "Bauble Shop." Now that the versatile and volatile Charles will have nothing to do with farce, and the young ladies insist upon seeing him as a hero of romance, it is well that two such capital comedians as Mr. Willie Edouin and Mr. Harry Paulton have foregathered at the Strand. In style they are exactly opposite. The humour of Willie Edouin is rich and unctuous; that of Harry Paulton is dry and acrid. But the two actors run excellently together in double harness. There is nothing very strange, new, or wonderful in the mere plot of the "Lady-Killer." But the little play is so well constructed and brightly acted that it is well worth seeing. And those who call in at the Strand for a hearty laugh after dinner will not fail to wait and see the eccentricity called "Binks, the Photographer," which takes some of us back to the Strand laughter-loving days of James Rogers and John Clarke. Not least of the attractions in this piece of welcome absurdity is Miss Alice Atherton, who has returned to the stage smiling and merry as ever and introduces her burlesque on old-fashioned melodrama called "Mary, the Maid of Misfortune." What a delight it is to find some one who can burlesque something! The entertainment of that name elsewhere is merely a round of songs and dances like music-hall "turns."

"Toilet Lanoline" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d. and 1s.; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depôt, 67, Holborn-viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

NOTES FROM PARIS.

MACMAHON AND GOUNOD.

"Struggle-for-lifers" and cynical impostors too often rise to the top of the wheel. What temple is so well attended as that of the Golden Calf, whose worshippers overflow into all the churches? Eiffel, who pocketed endless millions for which he gave so little value to his Panama Company, was the other day allowed to act as a cicerone to the Archduke Francis Ferdinand in his five minutes' visit to the famous iron tower in the Champ de Mars. Arton has been enjoying country air in gentlemanly style in a château near Vésoul, and in the society of an amiable and pretty person. Panama statesmen, a manager of the Comptoir d'Escompte, who survived the copper krach, Emile Ollivier, and a son of the late Duc de Gramont, had some of the best places at the gala performances at the Opera House the other night. Still, there never was a time when fine character was more valued, possibly because there is a dearth of it. We see what value is attached to it by the telegrams received by the Maréchale MacMahon during the Marshal's illness and since his death. Why else should the Sovereigns of Europe be of one accord with Paris and the rest of France in showing reverence for his memory? His funeral was not a French event merely, but a European one. Ireland came into this unique European concert: as well she might, the unswerving integrity of the Marshal and his different virtues having had an Irish complexion. Queen Victoria, the Sultan, the Czar, the German Kaiser, the King of Sweden, the Prince of Wales, Archduke Albert, spontaneously and unaffectedly—and, I may add, affectionately—condoled with the Maréchale, and there was a truce between rival parties beside his grave.

I often attacked MacMahon when he was in power, and do not repent, for he was long the unconscious tool of intriguers. But my admiration for him grew since he retired from power. He faced poverty, as it appeared to him, in quitting the Elysée, but had the luck to escape it, a small fortune unexpectedly falling to his wife. When this heritage devolved on her, they were arranging to sell half their town house, a fairly roomy and unpretending mansion in the Rue de Bellechasse, with a court yard and good stable and coach-house. Being hospitable in an unaffected and large-hearted way, it was a great blessing to the Marshal not to be cramped for space. He might have drawn £28,000 which legally belonged to him, but refused, because he thought the allowance of £12,000 a year voted to him for travelling expenses by the Budget Committee over which Gambetta presided was meant to be a sop. Thiers, in office, had at least one completely disinterested man at his own elbow, his unpaid secretary, Barthélemy St. Hilaire. MacMahon had not a single one. The Duc Decazes rigged the Bourse. Vicomte d'Harcourt, now husband of the Duc de Castries' widow and brother of the Comtesse d'Haussonville, was the Marshal's private secretary. When he filled that office, he and a son of the Duc de Broglie, and many other tip-top Orléanist representatives, embarked in a financial scheme which, in collapsing, impoverished the late Pope, the Comte de Chambord, and the Catholic party generally. If this was not honourable to the party, it is to MacMahon. He had to resist temptation in all directions, and could only take counsel of himself. But his conscience was equal to the strain placed on it. He was decoyed across a flooded Rubicon, but on finding himself landed in a marsh, he recrossed the river in a flying leap, to remain on firm ground for the rest of his days. Marshal MacMahon was un-French, except in passionate attachment to France. He was fond of show in public life, because he thought it a duty to be showy and spend money handsomely, but was untheatrical in his bearing and his speech, and could not for the life of him coin a ringing phrase unless strong feeling prompted his tongue. He could be eloquent when his moral being was in a state of white heat from the sense of danger, or from honest indignation. But he threw all he had to say into one or two short phrases. I should say that he no more knew how to dress up truth than Queen Victoria; for whose simplicity in her private life and faithfulness to her trusts he had deep and warm admiration. As President of the Republic, he thought himself her peer. Still he had a vague feeling of loyalty towards her, which he did not seek to hide the morning on which he met her by appointment in her saloon railway-carriage at the Vilette station.

An Irish capacity for making bulls sometimes caused him to be laughed at. For one bull, however, that he really made, a score were invented. If analysed it would be found that they arose from implying too much and not verbally expressing enough, but that at bottom there was no blunder. For instance, when he at a parade at St. Cyr, at the Governor's request, thus addressed a constantly teased, and most deserving, black cadet: "Vous êtes le nègre, n'est-ce pas! J'en suis content. Continuez de l'être," he meant to say, "You are the negro cadet of whom I have heard so much good. I am pleased to see you. Persevere." The Marshal was a poor hand at taking a cue in public, and had not a good memory for "lessons" given to him by his advisers. The involved trains of thoughts of the Duc de Broglie and the subtle arguments he used in his ear-wiggings puzzled MacMahon, and only entered his brain in bits and scraps. If he had been left to his personal inspiration he would have been sure to speak sensibly and to the point. But as he was straightforward and the set around him wanted to gain their ends, this frankness would never have done. Whenever he had, as in the 16th of May crisis, to go on a political tour in the Provinces, a couple of prompters went with him. At a provincial agricultural show he was put out by having had high words with the bishop, who presumed to tell him what he ought to do. MacMahon scenting a desire for a coup d'état policy, than which nothing appeared to him more criminal, fired up. By the time that he had got to the show he had forgotten what it was agreed he should say about the blessings of agriculture, and the peasants being the backbone of France. General d'Abzac whispered, "Je m'en vais, Messieurs, vous parler des bienfaits de l'agriculture." MacMahon listened intently, but deafening cheers drowned the cue. "L'agriculture," repeated the General. "Le diable emporte l'agriculture!" cried the Marshal. Then, playing off his own bat, he said: "Gentlemen, I am no good at a set speech. But I was born and brought up in the country. I live there as much as I can. If I were a poor man, I should be a peasant or a soldier. I know all about farm produce. What you exhibit is first-rate. I am glad to see you all, and, if I could, would shake hands with all of you, because you are honest men. I like you for that, and hope you will think me honest too. Depend upon me never to deceive you or any one else. That is all I have to say. Vive la France!" This speech never got into the papers, the set one that was never delivered having been sent to them and published. Another time, at Lille, where Gambettism was gaining ground, the Marshal was put forward to decorate a great manufacturer reported to be wavering, and to speak on trade and manufactures. He was to read his speech, but found that he had forgotten his glasses. The prompters were in despair. One of them, however, had time to whisper, "Say something bien gentil to the manufacturer when you decorate him." The Marshal, not being able to deck out truth to order, simply spoke as follows:—"The Prefect told me to give you this (the Cross of the Legion of Honour), I hope you may live long to wear it." What he should have said was:—"I have heard so often of the eminent services that you rendered to trade and manufactures in this industrial town, that I congratulate myself on this opportunity to give you a mark of my esteem." The newly-decorated person expected it, and was mortified to hear that he got the red ribbon because the Prefect told the Marshal to give it to him.

An instance of his peculiar eloquence. The Marshal stood alone in opposing in the Imperial Senate a public safety Bill drawn up under the excitement of the Orsini attempt. It gave the Emperor's Government the power to send any one the police might suspect to Cayenne. MacMahon expressed his feelings, and eloquently, in an improvised speech. There was a single name in the noes list—his own. A friend, congratulating him, asked how he felt when he thus burned his ships. "I did not feel at all. I felt before I took my course that the measure was odious, and that I should be a canaille were I not to protest against it. If my conscience found me guilty of a canaillerie I could not have dared to embrace my child." Is not this utterance one to republish for the edification of those parents who think by the compulsion of girl-floggers to train up their daughters in the way they should go?

The Marshal hated the eloquence of Parliamentarians. He said he attached as little importance to it as to skilful flute-playing, and counted M. Jules Simon the first flautist at Versailles. Nevertheless, he tried to master the secrets of the art for at least eighteen months before he was called to the Presidency. One saw him daily in the Versailles Theatre where the Assembly sat. His place was in a pit-box. Trochu sat on the same line with him, in the next box. The two men contrasted strongly, though both were Celts. Trochu came from the small, wind-swept Belle-Isle on the coast of Brittany, was a mathematician, a master of strategical plans, and seemed to be always cogitating over one. He was dark, had a head of billiard-ball baldness, a singularly high and bulging forehead, and showed a wide expanse of immaculate shirt front. His shirt cuffs were long, and wide, and shiny. The man was an honest prig or pedant. MacMahon had an easy, simple air, betrayed self-consciousness in nothing, had a fresh complexion, and blue eyes with an eager expression. They were the eyes of a single-minded man and of a marksman. He was absorbed in listening to what was said in the tribune, to prepare himself, doubtless, for it. The forehead was a good deal developed at the eyebrows. I did not like his mouth, the upper lip being unfinished. But it was not a loose mouth. He then lived in a large dingy house in the Rue de Gravelle (Versailles). Comte de Mérode, uncle of Maria Vittoria, Duchess of Aosta; the Orleans Princes; the De Witts; Vicomtesse de Rainneville, née Gargarin, who had a face fresh and delicate as a rose petal and wore a new bonnet every day; the D'Harcourts, D'Haussonvilles, De Broglies, and Bishop Dupanloup were always going there. It was agreed among them to shove MacMahon into the place of Thiers directly it suited them to get rid of the latter. But the Marshal was carefully kept in ignorance of this design. Otherwise he could not declare to Thiers that he was not intending to supplant him. When he was offered the Presidency he was only given ten minutes to reflect, and was reminded how Thiers had twice refused to withdraw his resignation. What the Orleanists wanted was to keep the Comte de Chambord out, and the question of the form of government in abeyance until he died, while in the meantime steps were to be taken to assure the succession to the Comte de Paris. MacMahon's wholesome horror of civil war, and the suspicion that he was used to draw Union Générale chestnuts from the fire, eventually rendered him unmanageable, and spoiled the well-laid plan. His wife was more anxious than he ever was for it to succeed, and when it was defeated for him to remain President. Yet she never enjoyed being at the Elysée. Once she understood that she could not stay there, she was glad to retire to private life, and to be no longer obliged to receive crowds of ladies who were not of her monde. She was good to the poor, and she liked the noble and wealthy; but she detested the struggling middle class. They aspired to ascend, and had to be, she thought, kept in their proper sphere. The limitations to that sphere should be, she felt, rigid as the laws of the Medes and Persians. This made her an unfitting person to head a Republic, or, for that matter, a modern Monarchy. But she was a good woman, and she felt and valued what was great in the Marshal.

Gounod, apart from his musical talents and the vein of genius that ran through them, understood and practised the art of reconciling God and Mammon. I often thought he enjoyed better the religious reveries in which he indulged as he sat before his chamber-organ for keeping company so much with Mammon. All his doctors could say, and all the revolts of his organisation against the luxurious dinners to which his wealthy friends invited him, never prevented him accepting an invitation to dine out. The revolts became chronic and of a most unpleasant kind. As he was in a country where such things are as frankly spoken of as in a hospital, he did not mind owning to his infirmity whenever he found it at all convenient to do so. It, however, depoetised him not a little in the eyes of fair votaries. What was more serious, it obliged him to refuse £40,000 which he was offered a few years ago to go to the United States and there lead the orchestra at a hundred renditions of his works. The offer tempted him greatly. He declined it after much sighing and hesitation, and after calling on a renowned medical friend to know whether his constitution could not in some way be patched up to enable him to make the tour. A paralysis of the muscles of the left eyelid showed that he must husband what strength remained to him. Still he continued to go to grand dinners followed by brilliant crushes at which, with charming amiability, he often sat down to accompany the fair vocalists who sang his music. I heard Gounod and St. Saëns succeed each other a few years ago at the piano. A stronger contrast could not be imagined than both presented in appearance, manner, and musical style and feeling. Gounod played, St. Saëns executed. The former was all feeling. The beaming sweetness of his countenance found expression in the notes he touched. He and the instrument seemed en tête-à-tête, and responsive to each other. They billed and cooed, for the piano seemed a living thing inspired by him, and sharing the emotions which he made believe he was feeling. His singing reminded me of what I heard of Moore's rendering of the Irish melodies. The voice never had much range. I heard from one who had known him as a lad that it was always slightly husky; nevertheless, it was a celestial voice even when he was a septuagenarian. There was much real kindness in him. But his religion was not more than religiosity. He cultivated it sedulously as a means to professional success. I recollect being a good deal startled, at a time when I thought him a Saint Francis de Sales, by the following circumstances:—A German Jewess, who had had some brilliant successes in his operatic works, received an offer of marriage from a French nobleman on condition that she became a Catholic. If she did this his family might countenance the match. Of course, she would have to pass through the waters of baptism. The vocalist agreed. Gounod was to be her godfather, and an aunt of the future husband her godmother. I was asked to the giving away of comfits at her hotel, which was to follow the ceremony. When I went, I found that somebody else had stood beside her at the font to promise and vow. The aunt had quitted her at the door of the church, and the betrothed had gone to a racecourse. I asked her why the illustrious composer had failed her. She showed me a note she had received from him a few days earlier. It was to the effect that he had, lightly, to give her pleasure, made a promise which, if he fulfilled it, would be a cause of despair, he being too obedient a son of the Church to commit a sacrilege. That Holy Mother forbade baptismal sponsors from wedding in regular or other marriage their godchildren. There was such a thing as hoping against what seemed hopeless, and he, feeling he was in that case, must decline being a godfather. The diva was enchanted at the compliment conveyed in the letter. When Gounod entered she threw her arms round his neck, and they rapturously imprinted kisses on each other's cheeks. Under ordinary circumstances he would, being then of patriarchal age and a kind of artistic father of the lady, have kissed her forehead.

Family Washing only.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered lay following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

The Russian officers have to thank Marshal MacMahon's funeral for being able to hear the chimes at midnight. They dined wherever they pleased—some at Voisin's, some at Margarey's, some at the Tour d'Argent—but out of uniform, and were not recognised. It was such a blessing not to have to listen to "La Marseillaise" flirting with the Russian Hymn. The Admiral, with some members of his staff, returned to the Military Club to spend there the early part of the evening, and place himself in communication with the Czar. But he had the later hours for private visits. He is the image of Jean de Reske, and about his size. Most of his subordinates wear spectacles. The common people, and the women especially, are charmed with their affability, which contrasts with the stuck-up-ness of most of the men who have climbed to the high places under the Republic. Some of the officers last night went to Les Folies Bergère. Those who fell in love with Judic preferred going to the music-hall where she sings. The idea of an evening at Le Chat Noir was carried out by others. Sarah Bernhardt is not pleased at the conduct of these gentlemen when she fainted at the Figaro. No sooner was she borne from the Hall to another room than they seemed to forget all about her. Americans would have acted differently. Madame Judic's "ne me chatouillez pas," with delicate by-play and underlining, was thought charming. They did not care for Yvette Guilbert. She was too awfully awful, and not pretty—at any rate, to the Russian eye. They will see an exhibition on Tuesday at the Opera of all the bas-bleuism that has got on through gallantry, of la vieille et avant-vieille garde of prettiness in combination with style and theatrical talent, and again be able to survey the statuesque charms of Miss Sybil Sanderson.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

BUSINESS, dear Lady Betty, is business; sentiment is obsolete. The following is the history of a woman's life, recorded with business brevity:—

"Promoters"	Parents.
"Stock-in-Trade" ...	Attractions.
"Preliminary Expenses"	Flirtation.
"Investors"	Bachelors.
"Allotment"	Engagement.
"Capital"	Settlements.
"Letters of Regret" ...	Jilted.
"Managing Director" ...	Husband.
"Registered Office" ...	Home.
"Working Expenses" ...	Allowance.
"Dividends"	Dress.
"Crises"	Children.
"Preference Shareholders"	Lovers.
"Quoted"	Talked about
"At a Premium" ...	Popularity.
"Calls"...	Complications.
"General Meetings" ...	Disputes.
"Extraordinary Meeting"	Consultation with counsel.
"Composition"... ...	Separation.
"Bankruptcy"... ...	Divorce.
"Creditors"	Co-respondents.
"Discharge Suspended"	Queen's Proctor.
"Reconstruction" ...	Re-marriage.

Marriage is woman's investment and man's speculation; love is the capital, happiness and children the dividend.

* * * * *

For over a week now the Parisians, men, women, and children, have been kissing their Russian guests. Kissing is ever an expensive amusement. A new Russian loan is imminent. France will then pay for these kisses.

* * * * *

The death of Lord Vivian, the British Ambassador at Rome, though long foreseen, came with terrible rapidity at the end. For some years the late Lord Vivian had suffered from stricture of the œsophagus. A severe cold, which he contracted a week ago, developed into acute pneumonia, and this, in his already greatly enfeebled state of health, gave him no chance whatever of recovery. The late Lord Vivian was a brother of Mrs. Charles Duff, who died in London only a few weeks back, whilst Lady Vivian is a sister of Mr. Duff.

Hussey-Crespigny Vivian, more familiarly known as "Crespy" Vivian, was in earlier life one of the best-looking men in London, and at the time certainly the most popular. It had originally been intended that he should join the Army, and for this purpose he studied at the Royal Academy, Woolwich. On account of weak health, however, he failed to pass the medical examination, and he then decided to enter the Foreign Office, in which he achieved a brilliant career, dying at his post as British Ambassador at Rome having almost completed forty-two years' service.

I hear that all the drains at the Embassy House in Vienna have been put in order. It was found that they ran into the calorifère, and how Sir Augustus Paget and his family did not get typhoid fever is a mystery.

Mr. Charles Watson Townley, Lord Lieutenant of Cambridgeshire, who died on Tuesday, married Miss Georgina Dalison, a sister of Mr. Charles Dalison. He was a cousin of the Queen's Messenger who at the time of the Crimean War was mentioned by Lord Palmerston in the House of Commons on account of the celebrated ride he made with dispatches against time from Adrianople to Belgrade.

* * * * *

The close-season at Christie's is a sore trial to the bric à-brac lovers of London. It will be a relief to them to hear that the sale-rooms in King-street, St. James's, will reopen on or about the 15th of next month. Amongst the earlier collections to be dispersed here will be a valuable library belonging to Sir George Chetwynd, as also an equally valuable collection of prints, the property of the same Baronet. Since July, great alterations have been made at Christie's, a new frontage has been set up, and a larger and more commodious hall and staircase have been built. No sensational sales, however, are as yet to be expected before the spring, though art treasures almost without number (they will have numbers on presently) await to be dispersed here between this and then.

And, by the way, why does some one not write "The Curiosities of Christie's?" Here is one. When the celebrated collection belonging to the late Mr. Beresford-Hope was sold here a few years ago, among other curios was what was known as the "King of Candy's Cat's Eye." It was even so described in the catalogue. The gem was set in diamonds. It was purchased by a private buyer for some few hundred pounds. After the sale it transpired that this cat's eye carried with it the right of succession over the island of Candy, and though, of course, the Colony now belongs to England, the Government, it is said, made a point of obtaining the jewel; and such political importance is attached to its possession that it is now kept where no possibility of its being stolen can occur.

It is impossible not to offer a few expressions of deep regret for the sudden calamity that has befallen Sir Andrew Clark, the eminent physician, who had a stroke of paralysis on Thursday last. To many of us Sir Andrew has been a kind friend; very many even owe to him their life. Equally in Society as in the Profession, Sir Andrew Clark has earned the respect and the affection of all whose privilege it is to know him. In our ill-health we have had his sympathy and his careful assistance. It is to be regretted that in his ill-health we have but our sympathy to offer.

The following advertisement appeared in the Morning Post of Saturday, the 21st:—

"M.—For Heaven's sake give me an opportunity to speak to you now you are in L."

I trust the writer does not aspirate the wrong letter.

This, too, is from the Morning Post of Tuesday, 24th:—

"A Lady of high social position, living in a palace, wishes to receive a Ward in Chancery, or Chaperon a Girl of good means and position; terms liberal; would take her to Brighton or London at once.—Address Palace."

Can this be the Palace of Varieties?—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

LADAS has been backed for the Derby at the rate of 5 to 2, which seems a preposterously short price, considering that the race will not be run for more than seven months to come. It really appears, however, as if next year's Classic stakes are at the mercy of Lord Rosebery's colt if he goes on all right, and the Derby already looks to be as much a "one-horse" race as this season's event was regarded to be last May by all good judges after the hollow victory of Isinglass in the Two Thousand. I have seen it stated that 1894 will very likely be a dark-horse year, like 1892, but where the now unknown flyer is to come from cannot at present be conjectured. There are some good-looking and promising two-year-olds which have never yet started, because it was wisely decided not to train them for their engagements this season (such as the Duke of Portland's Cossnock, by Galopin out of Wheel of Fortune, one of Sir Blundell Maple's, and Lord Rosebery's Ravelston, own brother to Corstorphine), but it is going very far to assume that any of these animals will turn out to be flyers of high class.

According to the annual handicap of the two-year-olds, which has just been published, the Two Thousand and Derby are only a question of health for Ladas, so far at the "public" lot are concerned. He heads the list with 9 st. 7 lb., and next comes Delphos with 9 st. 4 lb., and Lord Rosebery's colt certainly appears to be supremely favoured in that Delphos has no engagements next season. It will not surprise me, however, if Delphos presently discovers himself to be a non-stayer, and I dare say we shall see him winning the Fernhill Stakes and the T.Y.C. Biennial at Ascot. Match Box is estimated to be 7 lb. behind Ladas, and the Kingsclere colt has to give 3 lb. to Son o' Mine. The fact is that Lord Durham's colt ought to have won cleverly at Kempton Park, and he will certainly beat Match Box when they meet again, which they may do in the Newmarket Stakes, for which race the Kingsclere colt is nominated by Sir F. Johnstone. He is also in the Two Thousand, in which race Lord Durham's colt is not engaged. So far as the public lot of two-year-olds are concerned, I am disposed to regard Son o' Mine as the best and most promising after Ladas, and instead of his being made to receive 3 lb. from Match Box, I expect that he would find no difficulty (with a clear course) in giving more than that weight to the Kingsclere colt. Bullingdon is estimated to be the same animal as Son o' Mine, and this is a colt which can really stay well; but if it is true that he is decidedly inferior to Match Box, he need not be thought of seriously in connection with the Derby. Next comes the mysterious Xury (8 st. 10 lb.), who has no important engagement next year, which is another piece of luck for Ladas, as, when well, the Malton colt is believed to be very smart indeed. Grey Leg and Glare have the same weight as Xury. The Duke of Westminster's colt is another which has no future engagements, and Glare will never get beyond five furlongs. It gives me satisfaction to find Mr. Cooper's filly so high in this official handicap, as I was alone in the spring in entertaining a good opinion of her, which was based, not so much on the Brocklesby Stakes form as upon her excellent trial before Lincoln. At that time there was a deal of jargoning about Faultless, who was declared to be in reality the only good animal among the Brocklesby lot! Next come Arcano, Styx, and St. Florian, all of which are engaged in the Derby, which is the only race next year for which Sir W. Throckmorton's colt has been entered.

The great event of last week was the defeat of Delphos by Marnovia, who is now said to have been well galloped with Kentigern; but as she was scarcely backed for a shilling, it is evident that her friends had but little faith in her ability to beat Mr. Blake's steed, who was certainly not disgraced, as he was giving the filly 20 lb. Chaloner was ordered to wait with Delphos, and when the time came for him to bring his horse along he found a difficulty in getting through. It was a muddy-minded blunder to give waiting orders in a five furlong race with a speedy colt like Delphos, who, if he had forced the pace directly the flag fell, would probably have "chopped" Marnovia and all the other runners.

Go Lightly was a good deal knocked about in the Kempton Park race which was won by Match Box, and she did not run then within a stone of her true form; but she retrieved her reputation on Thursday, when she simply cantered away from Mecca at 9 lb., and she was giving 16 lb. to the highly-tried Comic Opera, who was beaten a long way. Captain Machell and Jewitt made a fine bargain when they bought Go Lightly at Mr. "Abington's" sale for 1,000 gs., for she is a more than "useful" filly, and although she is disqualified for the One Thousand, yet her Oaks entry remains good, as she is nominated by her breeder, Mr. J. S. Harrison. Mecca has been trumpeted about as being the best two-year-old filly of the season, but she would never beat Go Lightly at even weights, to say nothing of La Nièvre and Letterewe.

Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

It is wonderful how, in these days, the so called "great races" at some meetings dismally collapse. There were originally seventy four entries for the Amphion Plate of £1,000, which was to have been run for at Sandown Park last Friday, and ultimately twenty six were left in when the last forfeit was declared on April 4; but the race ended in a walk over for Ravensbury, this being his solitary success during the present season, and well would it have been for backers if Mr. Rose's disappointing and luckless beast had never been foaled.

A couple of Captain Machell's high priced two year olds have been beaten in their trial—Facundo, by Ormonde out of Philosophy, and Giganteum, by Bend Or out of Tiger Lily. Early in the autumn it was thought at Newmarket that Facundo might prove a dangerous opponent to Ladas in the Middle Park Plate, but he did very badly in a recent gallop, and, although capable of great improvement, he is not likely to be heard of in connection with next year's "classic" stakes. If Facundo is a failure on the turf it will be another proof that breeding is the purest lottery, for there is not a finer-bred animal in training, and both his sire and his dam were racers of the highest class. Philosophy did not last long on the turf, but as a two-year-old she was tried by R. Peck to be considerably better than The Bard. Giganteum is very backward at present, and he will probably turn out to be a much better three-year-old than Facundo; but the North Derby at Newcastle, or his engagements at Kempton Park or at Derby will be more within his capacity than the Two Thousand or the Derby.

The weights for the Liverpool Cup will be published to-morrow or on Friday, and some skimble-skamble betting will at once be recorded. But the early speculations only represent the egregious fancies of people who rush in and invest their money in absolute ignorance of the intentions of the owner, and utterly regardless of his interests; and these eager simpletons certainly take nothing by their rash impetuosity, for one very seldom hears of the ultimate triumph of the animal which has been made favourite at the beginning. The Liverpool Cup is now practically a post-betting race, and people who are such fools as to meddle with it before the day thoroughly deserve to lose their money. This race, besides, has considerably diminished in importance of late years, having been very much prejudiced by the success of the Manchester November Handicap, in which there is a great deal more betting, and it is now, indeed, one of the principal speculative events of that class during the season. I expect that this year's Liverpool Cup betting, when it settles down, will be on an even smaller scale than it was last season, and there is not likely to be a large field. The handicaps at Derby may seriously injure the Liverpool fields, and the fact that Delphos has no penalty will utterly spoil the great two-year-old race at the latter meeting.

Next week the "back end" season will begin, and at all the remaining meetings there are sure to be huge fields, composed principally of bad horses, and backers are likely to experience a Moscow campaign, for in November they are speculating with abnormal conditions. There are just now an unprecedented number of desperately bad horses in training, and most of these brutes will be running next month just on the off chance. One danger is that animals may be made favourites on the strength of their having won trials against stable companions which could not win races with a hundred yards of start. People had better avoid all the "good things" of which the November meetings are so prolific, and nearly all of which invariably fail ignominiously, unless they can discover that the fancied animal has really been galloped with a quite recent winner of fair class.

Next week there will be racing on two days at Lincoln, which will be followed by a two-day meeting at Northampton, and both fixtures are likely to be perfectly successful, but at neither of these will the sport be of any general interest nor will any animals of high class be seen out.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer. Restores the colour. Renews the growth. Arrests the fall. Cleanses the scalp.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—There is just a little more life in the stock markets, and confidence seems to be growing steadily if slowly. It is true that the cry of most of the jobbers is still "no business," but then many of them are so mortally afraid of making a little book, and make such wide prices, that they cannot expect to get any business, which is, therefore, passing into the hands of the few courageous ones, while in more than one instance brokers have been compelled to do their bargains outside the "House," being unable to get a price made at which it was possible to deal. The jobbers will have to become a little more enterprising if they want dealings to come to them, and how can they expect the public to come in if they do not themselves set an example?

The Outlook on the Stock Exchange.

The fact is that, if more activity does not show itself soon, the Stock Exchange will have to wait for it until the New Year. But there are, after all, some favourable points. As the Manager of one of our first Banking institutions told me a few days ago, it is a long time since the financial position has been so safe as it is at present, and there are distinct indications of a growth of confidence. Money is plentiful, and capitalists are ready to employ it in good securities. This will, no doubt, be illustrated by the successful issue of the New York Central and Illinois Central Debenture issues at present before the public. A strong proof is also supplied by the active dealings at improving quotations which immediately followed the publication of my list of nineteen "well-secured stocks, which have never defaulted" in Truth of last week, the prices of the majority of these securities gaining from 1 to 2 points. The question of the repeal of the Sherman Silver Act is still hovering in the balance, but there are indications that a favourable decision will come off almost immediately, the strength of the Wall-street market being a significant feature. The splendid New York Bank statement just published is, of course, also reassuring. In Home Rails, the continuance of the coal strike produces discouragement, and, although more coal is coming forward, no lasting recovery is possible until the struggle has terminated. The Mining market has been under the depressing influence of the Matabele war. I have ere this expressed the view that the value of Mining properties in the Transvaal is absolutely independent of events in Mashonaland, but somehow or other the weakness of British Chartered shares seems to affect the rest of the South African market. It remains to be seen if possible successes of the Chartered Company's troops will, on the other hand, benefit quotations of the Randt Mines. There is very little logic in such sympathetic movements, and I credit the public with sufficient geographical attainments to be aware that an immense distance separates the seat of war from Johannesburg. The most promising market is that for South Americans, especially Argentines. Whenever the Rothschild settlement is adopted by the Argentine Congress a further advance may be looked for, while the important advance in Costa Rica Government Bonds and Costa Rica Railway Debentures is an illustration of the sharp improvement which is certain to follow any movement in other South or Central American securities, there being absolutely no stock in the market. It is impossible to tell when the investing public will awake from their lethargy; they will do so some day, probably after a smart rise has been established in many securities, although there seems to be no one to give a lead just now.

Home Rails.

Quotations of the Heavy Brigade have at last commenced to give way on sales, which are by some attributed to holders of real stock, while others maintain that professional "Bears" have been at it again. I do not profess to be able to solve the mystery, but the impending settlement will show which way the wind blows. In the meantime Midlands, North-Western, and Great Western are down about a point. The increased supply of coal which has found its way to the south should presently find its expression in a falling off of the traffic decreases, the more so as trucks laden with Scotch coal are now finding their way to London. Yet there is nothing of a cheering nature in the position of the "Heavies," the huge traffic decreases already recorded rendering a material decline in dividends certain, and the question is simply how shareholders will take this. The Scotch stocks have improved, especially North British, on satisfactory traffic increases, partly due to increased coal traffic. I shall not be surprised to see North British and Caledonian Deferred, which are at present very cheap, improve. Brighton "A" have again turned against the ursine operators, recovering to 144. It remains to be seen if more stock will come forward at the settlement, or if the "Bear" account is still as unwieldy as is asserted by the "Bulls." Much will also depend upon the coal traffic, there being rumours that a good deal of coal is now going over the line. Dover "A" have fluctuated within narrow limits, and at 69½ do not look dear, especially if increases of mineral traffic should also mitigate the decreases in this instance. Hopes are entertained that the next working statement will show a further saving in expenses, but the weekly traffic return just issued is again unfavourable. I hear that a Bill will probably be introduced in Parliament for the long-talked-of amalgamation of the Taff Vale and the Rhymney Railways. In view of the savings which it would be possible to effect under such an arrangement, it is undoubtedly desirable that it should go through, but the matter is not yet finally settled.

Repeal and the Position in the States.

At last the decision in the obstinate struggle for and against the repeal of the Sherman Silver Act appears to be at hand, and there are indications that it will be satisfactory. The New York correspondent of the Daily News has distinguished himself by cabling the most positive statements that President Cleveland will absolutely refuse all proposals of compromise, and that the introduction of the closure resolution in the Senate puts an end to the compromise talk, which is, according to him, only put about by the Silver men themselves. It is difficult to see how a compromise would in any way improve matters. The purchase clause must be unconditionally repealed, for it has wrought all the mischief, and immediate cessation of the purchases seems indispensable, although some subsequent provision for the gradual coinage of the silver in the Treasury would not, perhaps, do any harm, as the metal could no doubt be more largely used as currency in the States. As to the question of the effect which unconditional repeal would have, it is argued, with some show of reason, that per se it would not remedy the position, and that an improvement in business and in railway traffics would not follow unless sound financial measures were to supplement it. But it is well known that President Cleveland has got these cards up his sleeve, and will bring them out as soon as repeal is voted. The splendid statement of the New York Associated Banks, just published, showing an increase in the surplus of 8,740,000 dols. to the huge total of 43,640,000 dols., testifies to the revival of confidence now in progress, and there is little doubt that once repeal voted, and efficient measures dealing with the currency adopted, business would again expand, and railway traffics increase. The mercantile community have been in dire straits during the crisis, but according to mail advices the President of one of the largest New York Banks has expressed himself to the effect that "the Banks are granting extensions to all solvent persons and Corporations with whom they had dealings and who required it. He did not look for or expect any trouble. The Banks, however, were strong enough now to let any insolvent concern go to the wall, and he did not think that an extension would be granted by any Bank to any person or firm that was not solvent." Matters have improved since these words were spoken, and it requires now only the enactment of repeal and of sound currency reform to give a fresh impulse to the business and prosperity of the country. Depend upon it, Ben, the progress would then be as sensational as the rapid recovery in the position of the New York Banks undoubtedly has been. In fact, the Coal Deal by the Vanderbilts, which has just been announced, and which has caused a general rise and a jump in prices, especially of Lackawanna, New Jersey Central, and Readings, shows what important developments may be expected once confidence is fully re-established.

Yankee Rails.

American Railroad stocks have improved in the latter part of the week, partly on the impression that the repeal of the mischievous Silver Bill was assured. Taking an average of forty stocks currently dealt in on the New York Exchange, it will be found that the price is now 49½, against the lowest of the present year of 39⅞, while the highest point touched in the year was 69¼. The market has thus recovered considerably from the effects of the recent panic, but it is still far removed from the not very high level it was on even in the present year. That prices are low must, therefore, be conceded when it it is found that, taking all the stocks—good, bad, and indifferent—together, their average market value is less than one-half of their par value. Only seven of the forty stocks are selling for as much as their par value, and at the very best prices reached during the year only eleven managed to gain that distinction. The obvious conclusion to be come to is, therefore, that provided business revives in the States and no fresh unfortunate accident happens, a gradual advance will take place in quotations. Traffics will perhaps recover but slowly, but the last weekly return of the Milwaukee Company showing an increase of 55,000 dols., and that of the Atchison Company showing a much smaller decrease than those of the preceding weeks (62,000 dols.), are distinctly encouraging. With regard to the Atchison Company it should be remembered that the comparisons for the past two months have been made with the best months in the history of the road. Last year was one of the best years on record for all the Western lines, and, unfortunately, this year has brought the other extreme, so that in the case of the Atchison and the others the decreases reported are not really as big as they seem. The scare concerning this Company, so assiduously fostered by the City Editor of the Standard, has now passed away, and the stocks are gradually recovering, but Atchison Second Mortgage bonds are still at a very low level, almost entirely due to recent forced selling for Dutch account. With reference to the renewal of the Guarantee Fund Notes, I am informed that it is practically assured. Milwaukees have shown remarkable strength, and Louisville are several points above the lowest. It may be assumed that the new Ordinary stock which is to be issued will remain in the Treasury for some time to come, and that other means will be found to provide for the liabilities mentioned by me. The amount of Unified bonds in the Treasury of about 1,850,000 dols. would, for instance, be available for that purpose. The Ives-Belmont faction have carried the day at the Northern Pacific meeting, and it may be hoped that better times are now in store for this unfortunate undertaking. The circular issued by Messrs. C. D. Barney & Co., of Philadelphia, in asking for proxies for the new men who are now in power, was one of the severest indictments ever framed against a railroad management. The charges made therein against the former Board expose the most monstrous system of double dealing and dishonesty. Erie shares and Second Mortgage bonds have been in request on the expectation that a reorganisation on sound lines and without an assessment will shortly be accomplished, and this is also prognosticated for the Reading line, which will, moreover, greatly benefit by the coal deal which is now on the tapis. The Baltimore and Ohio has announced a dividend of 2½ per cent. for the half-year. The Canadian Pacific issue of Preference stock has knocked the price of the Ordinary stock down over two points, chiefly through "Bear" selling, but I fancy that this issue will go off better than the ursine contingent imagine, in which case a substantial rally may be looked for. The Grand Trunk traffics continue exceptionally large, and seem to assure the full guaranteed interest, with, possibly, something to spare for the First Prefs., a contingency which seemed remote indeed only three months ago.

Foreigners and South Americans.

The candour shown by Signor Giolitti in his statement at a banquet in Piedmont on the financial position of Italy, has made the worst possible impression upon the bourses, already somewhat scared by the Franco-Russian enthusiasm in Toulon and Paris, and Italians have again dropped heavily. The wonder is, that they still stand at their present price, and if one of these days war rumours, originating in the new entente cordiale, should be set about, Italians will be one of the stocks most likely to experience a heavy fall. Spanish are also lower, the little war in Morocco being likely to tax the resources of Spain severely. Greeks have, on the other hand, remained very steady. Argentine Government stocks have again improved fractionally, the fall of the gold premium in Buenos Ayres to 214 being a very satisfactory feature. The reported arrest of some directors of the Provincial Mortgage Bank seems to promise the cleansing of this Augean stable, and some tardy measure of justice for the Cedula bondholders. I am told that the Rothschild settlement of the National debt will be confirmed by Congress almost immediately, when the Railway guarantee question will be brought forward. Messrs. J. S. Morgan & Co. have agreed to negotiate this important matter. Costa Rica "A" and "B" bonds have again advanced 6 points, and Mexican Sixes have improved; but Peruvian Corporation Debentures and Prefs. are a point lower for no particular reason. Uruguay bonds, now quoted 35, ought to rise to a higher level, as the November coupons will be duly paid, and the Government shows the most praiseworthy determination to fulfil all its engagements. At 35, however, some tap appears to be turned on, and until that has run dry no further advance is possible. Brazilian Railways are suffering severely from the continuance of the revolution, the end of which does not yet appear to be in sight. I have always considered the Brazilians wanting in pluck, but the manner in which Admiral di Mello and President Peixoto bombard each other with proclamations instead of coming to close quarters places them in a still worse light. I mentioned some time ago that the resumption of cash interest on the Costa Rica Railway First Mortgage Debentures was assured. Their quotation was then 75, while they have now risen to 89! The Second Debentures have also improved to 50, and it is reported that, in consequence of a settlement which has been come to between the Company and the contractors for the shipment of bananas, an amount of £25,256 will be added to the published figures of traffic to the end of June last, which would then also cover the Second Debenture interest. It is not surprising that Costa Rica Railway shares are being bought under these circumstances, the £10 shares being quoted only 1¾. Another promising cheap "lock-up" is Entre Rios £5 Ordinary shares at ¾ and ditto Five per Cent. Preference shares at 2¼, in which active dealings have of late taken place. It will be remembered that Mr. R. J. Neild, one of the Directors, who has recently returned from Argentina, stated at the meeting of shareholders as a result of his visit to Entre Rios that he believed "that eventually all those who originally lent their money to Entre Rios for railway purposes were going to get it back."

A Selection of Investments.

How thoroughly investors appreciate any really useful hints was amply proved by the demand which sprang up for the nineteen "well-secured stocks, which have never defaulted," of which I published a list, together with their yields and particulars of the manner in which they are secured, in TRUTH of the 19th inst. Active dealings took place in the majority of these securities, and an advance was established of 2 in United States Debenture Corporation Debenture stock to 92, and of 1 in the following:—De Beers Five-and-a-Half per Cent. Second Debentures to 103, Bank of New Zealand Estates Five and a Half per Cent. Debentures to 106, A. & F. Pears' Five per Cent. Debenture stock to 108, Trustees and Executors Four per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures to 96 (the yield of which should have been given in last week's table as £4. 5s. per cent.), United Railways of Havana Five per Cent. First Mortgage bonds to 93, Western of Buenos Ayres 1925 Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds to 110, with other improvements of ½. Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Four per Cent. Debenture stock was singled out by special favour and rose 1½ to 95, nor is this surprising, as it is a really gilt-edged stock. It has a first charge on the railway and a Chilian Government guarantee until 1904, as well as a guarantee by the wealthy Huanchaca Company up to December, 1903. It has £2,200,000 of Ordinary stock behind it, upon which interest is paid at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, and traffics are most progressive, having increased 50 per cent. during the last eight months over 1892. It will be seen, therefore, that it is a really high-class stock, still very cheap in comparison with Buenos Ayres Great Southern Four per Cent. Debenture stock at 104, which is also a gilt-edged security.

The Kaffir Circus.

Warlike is the talk of the jobbers in the Kaffir Circus, and war news is eagerly welcomed. The "Bulls" are thirsting for the blood of the Matabele, and the "Bears" would greet a defeat of the Chartered Company with a severe raid on the shares. I do not know that either party will be allowed to make any huge profits in the gamble in Chartered shares which is at present going on in the "House," unless they belong to the privileged few who rejoice in inside knowledge. The news from the Company's representatives at the Cape is remarkably slow in coming to the knowledge of the public here, and there are excellent opportunities for insiders to scalp profits with little or no risk. But who else in their senses will take a hand in this game in which loaded dice are so easily used? Chartered have been down to 20s. and up to 26s., and they will continue to fluctuate with the news which may be allowed to ooze out. In the meantime, Randt Gold Mining shares, after a reaction, are hardening again. The selling was by some big operators, who appear to have it all their own way, and who are now again supporting the market. Crown Reefs alone have scored a rise of ¼, while Jumpers, Salisbury, Ferreira, and City and Suburban are down from ¼ to ⅜, others having lost smaller fractions. But the gold industry at the Randt goes on all the same, and one fine day, when it suits the big operators, the market will advance sharply, and the public will eagerly buy at the top what they would not look at at the bottom. South Simmer and Jack have been more freely dealt in, and the shaft is now stated to be about half way down the 300 ft, at which depth the rich reef is expected to be struck. From the Buffelsdoorn Mine in the Klerksdorp district comes the cablegram that the new 40-stamp mill has started running, so that a good output may be expected for October. According to the Klerksdorp Record, "the mine is in splendid order, and a long way in advance of the mill, more than 100,000 tons being in sight, and further development actively proceeding." The cyanide works were already at work in September, and are treating the old tailings, after which they will be kept busy by new tailings, now that the mill has started. These shares have now advanced to 1 5/16, and are bound for higher prices. A fair amount of dealings has taken place in Afrikander shares at 1⅜, and a large crushing is expected for October. With reference to the African Gold Recovery Company, I have received the following from a Glasgow correspondent signing himself Jacobs:—

Glasgow, October 20, 1893.

The price of African Recovery shares, in spite of the excellent work being done, keeps growing, to the annoyance of a good many good people, small by degrees and beautifully less. Whether it is that Lobengula is to descend from the north, and empty the cyanide vats at one good pull; or that, things generally being bad, the Recovery shares must also suffer, is not quite clear, but certainly the shares being low, in spite of what the Company is doing, a great deal of dissatisfaction exists. The indefinite way future dividends were referred to at the general meeting pleased few people, and, so far as I can make out, has had the effect of causing some few to drop their shares. The impression—which I believe is absurd—is that the Directors purpose keeping to a fixed dividend of 20 per cent. for the coming year, and using the surplus for acquiring mining properties. Any arrangements for acquiring interests in mining Companies will, without doubt, be for the benefit of the Company, but it is time now that bi-monthly dividends were paid.—Yours, &c.,

To Overcome Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Nerve Debility. Pepper's Tonic. Kept everywhere.

JACOBS

The Company referred to is doing remarkably well, and has again a yield of 37,000 oz. of gold to show for September (being nearly 26 per cent. of the Randt output), against 36,000 oz. in August. At that rate it will be able to pay a good deal more than 20 per cent. in dividends, and yet acquire mining properties and increase its reserve fund. Diamond Mining shares are a very uncertain market, especially New Jagersfontein. It is not surprising that the steam has gone out of these shares, as the operators who had recently engineered a rise, found to their cost that they were only helping crippled Hatton Garden holders to unload. Oceana Land shares have fluctuated, and are quoted about 2½, with Oceana Developments at ¼ premium. Recent events in Mashonaland bring the great advantage of the short route to the interior viâ the port of Beira and the railway over the old, long, and costly journey from the Cape into strong relief. It must be galling to Mr. Rhodes that this line passes through Mozambique territory, and that he is thus altogether dependent upon that Company for his shortest communication. Mozambique shares, which had been neglected for some days, have again come into brisk demand at from 1¼ to 1⅜. The Mozambique Company, it may be added, owns half the share capital of the railway, and, therefore, will benefit materially by its success.

Miscellaneous Mines.

The advance in Indian Gold Mining shares has been partly lost again on attempts to snatch profits. Yet the opening of the branch line to the mines from the Colar-road Station, which is now at hand, should produce a great saving in expenses to most of these Companies. Amongst Australian properties the tendency has also been weak. Day Dawn P.C., Craven's Caledonia, and Day Dawn Block easing off. Aladdins are steady at 1 7/16 9/16, pending the arrival of important news, which is shortly expected. This also applies to Wentworth Priority and Ordinary. In fact, a cablegram has just come to hand as I am writing, announcing a crushing of 900 tons of ore, yielding 670 oz. of gold, for the fortnight. Mail advices from Melbourne report an inactive market, new flotations having absorbed a good deal of the money of speculators. The chief business was in Bendigo stocks, the Johnson properties coming in for most attention. At Ballarat favourable developments in the Ballarat East Mines attracted some attention. The Australian Mining Standard reports from Ballarat that the Black Horse United came into notice owing to the receipt of a wire from the Manager that the west vertical vein (which invariably accompanied the golden shoot of stone in the other levels) had been cut in the 1,500 ft. crosscut. The same contemporary reports from Sydney that Baker's Creek sold down as low as 24s. 6d. on their losing the lode in the bottom level, and firmed again to 27s. when a notice was posted in the Company's office saying the lode had made again 2 ft. wide showing gold and antimony. In American Mines, New Guston and Montana have improved, De Lamar and Tolima also advancing, but Richmond and Don Pedro are down.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Ulysses.—I really should not like to advise you. If there were not a certain risk, the bonds would not stand at their present price, but your arguments are correct enough. T. W., Sidmouth.—Hold Chilian bonds, Costa Rica "A" and "B" bonds, and Mexican Central Gold bonds. You might average Costa Rica "B." Otterburn.—This writer's opinion is apparently very unsound. You should hold Mexicans, City of Mexico bonds, and Erie Second Mortgage bonds at present.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

C. A. & Co.—Nothing has appeared of late in TRUTH concerning the person in question. I cannot reply by letter. Delta.—It is a pity that you embarked in the Anglo-Australian Land and Finance Company, but I have always warned my readers of such undertakings. You can get 4 per cent. and more from the securities mentioned by me in the list of securities published last week under "A Selection of Investments." Antofagasta Four per Cent. Debentures, for instance, should suit you. F. F. W., No. 52.—Are you not aware that this New Zealand Company has had to pull up? It is, however, in course of reconstruction, and there is no option but to wait. K. G. W.—I do not know this so-called Bank, and should advise you to be very careful. If they offer high rates of deposit you may be sure it is a swindle. Greenhorn.—1. No, I should advise you not to have anything to do with this outside brokers' concern. 2. A fair investment, but no catch. You can do better by making your choice from my list of stocks published last week under "A Selection of Investments."

Home Rails.

Investor, Harringay.—Yes, there is no reason why you should not buy the small amount of Brighton "A," purely for investment, disregarding intermediate fluctuation. Secretariat.—Your father was quite right to sell half his holding of Metropolitan Districts at 40 at the time, and, as they are not likely to pay any dividend for the present, he will be right to sell the balance, but he will no doubt get a considerably better price by waiting a month or two, and that I should advise him to do.

American and Foreign Rails.

Medicus.—Atchison Four per Cent. Gold bonds are perfectly safe, and should be held for a smart recovery. I stated last week under "Yankee Rails" that there had been an unreasonable scare. The other stocks should also be held for a recovery. Grand Trunk Guaranteed will probably get the full interest, as traffics have been splendid of late. Gordon.—As the Grand Trunk Company is doing well just now, this Debenture stock may safely be held for the present. C. A. E. O.—Certainly hold Central Pacific for a recovery. J. B. S.—Certainly hold the bonds Nos. 1—3 for an improvement. Costa Rica Railway First Mortgage Debentures (2) will go higher, as they are about to receive cash interest again. They are already up to 90. C. J., Cork.—Certainly hold Atchison Second Mortgage "A" bonds; it was an unreasonable scare. Speculator.—The information for which you ask is given week by week in my letter; but you should not buy more than you can pay for. H. P. C.—You should hold Union Pacific now. Hope.—I am afraid that Italians will go lower, as the financial position is so bad. As you have already Americans, Antofagasta Four per Cent. Debenture stock at 95 should suit you as a gilt-edged investment. As a speculation, Nitrate Rails, New Primrose, and Buffelsdoorn should suit you. Deron.—There is no reason for selling Central Pacifics now, although I should not exactly select these for investment. Atchison "A" bonds are recovering, and should be held and averaged. E. F., East Cowes.—These are not gilt-edged bonds, and have declined during the crisis in the States. Hastings.—I gave a list of sound investments in last week's issue, under "A Selection of Investments," in which you will find what you want. Antofagasta might suit you perhaps best, unless you wish to go in for gilt-edged U.S. Railroad bonds. South-Western.—1. Mexican Railway Ordinary stock is not a favourite of mine, but you might hold in the hope of getting out without a loss. 2. Hold Union Pacifics, but do not buy any more. 3. Take them up if you can. 4. If you read TRUTH regularly you must know that I consider that Louisville have touched bottom. Southampton.—Are you not aware that the Delagoa Bay Railway question is under arbitration by the Swiss Government as between the Company and Portugal? There is nothing for it but to wait. J. P. G.—There is a dispute with the Erie Company, but at present price you had better hold for a recovery. Gold.—Either of the Illinois Central issues would be suitable, or you might invest in Antofagasta (Chili and Bolivia) Four per Cent. Debenture stock at 95. R. A.—Yes, you should hold Norfolk and Western Prefs. There is no fear of their going into a Receiver's hand at present. C. S., Darlington.—You should hold the Louisville and Nashville Six per Cent. General Mortgage bonds, 1930. They are a good investment. Capi.—1. There are fears that the Pennsylvania dividend will be reduced. The financial position of the Company has, moreover, deteriorated. 2. Yes, Illinois Central are a good investment, but I should prefer the Atchison Guarantee Fund notes. Phœnix.—1. At present price you should certainly hold Union Pacifics. 2. The Missouri, Kansas, and Texas is doing pretty well, and you should not sell the Ordinary now. Beta.—Argentine Great Western Five per Cent. Debenture stock should be held, as a decision concerning the guarantee and payment of arrears may be expected shortly from the Argentine Government. Provincial Broker.—Yes, the rig of Mexican Railway Ordinary to 17 was evidently engineered for the purpose of unloading. I am always suspicious of such "House" tips. G. C.—I should think it would be preferable to hold these bonds for a recovery. H. S. B.—The Atchison Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund notes rank before the Four per Cent. Gold bonds.

MINTON'S (Limited). MINTON'S CHINA.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

Mining Shares.

Hopeful.—Certainly, you should hold these Land shares for an important improvement, but it would be preferable to take them up. Eblana.—How can you attach any value to criticisms from such a source? J. R.—Hold Craven's Caledonian (1), also Kimberley Roodepoort (2). The latter mine is reported to have commenced crushing. 3. You had better leave the Bank shares alone. Globe.—As this was a somewhat irregular transaction, it is very difficult to advise upon it. You ought to have received notice of the formation of the Company for working the colliery, and the shares are a very poor exchange for your £500. The Company is working at a loss, and the shares are, I suppose, worth very little; they have no Stock Exchange quotation. You had better ask Mr. W. W. what their value is. Hold the Brewery shares for a recovery. Catarina N.—With some patience you will see the cheap shares, Nos. 1 and 2, improve, but you must await the news from the mine. 3. The announcements made at the recent Ooregum meeting justify a higher figure. 4. The ordinary shares are of £1 each, fully paid up. Pagoda.—1. The office is at Leadenhall Buildings, E.C. 2. The 5s. shares are fully paid up. 3. A fair gamble for a small amount. T. D.—I have always condemned the Palmarejo Mine. R. S. P.—"Coming" South African Mines are Afrikander at 1⅜, Buffelsdoorn at 1¾, and South Simmer and Jack. Spero.—If you hold Lisbon-Berlyn, keep them on the chance of a spurt in the price being engineered. Do not put more money into the shares. Arab.—I see no special attraction in Don Pedro at 15s. R. H. S.—Certainly, I maintain my view concerning these cheap shares, and as soon as further news comes to hand, which is expected shortly, I will publish it. Twice Sold.—I am investigating this matter, and shall not, therefore, be able to give my opinion until next week. Until then you had better do nothing.

Industrial Companies.

House.—1. Hold; the French Company, in which this undertaking is interested, has fair prospects. 2. Under the present improved arrangement the Electric Construction Corporation will, probably, pull round. 3. A fair industrial investment. No reason to sell now. Both Nos. 4 and 5 are speculative industrial investments and no particular catch. H. G. W.—I have already expressed my surprise at the contents of the circular of the Secretary of Morgan & Co., Limited, and at the possibility of irregularities such as he reports concerning Messrs. G. H. Morgan and G. S. Heffer, Directors, and H. G. Malcolm, Secretary, but it is for the shareholders to move in the matter. I never recommended investment in this concern. Waiting.—Yes; I think the Company will work round and I advise you to hold. Reg., Dublin.—I am afraid a settlement is not likely for some time. You have omitted to send your name and address.

Mixed Investments.

T. H. C.—1. No particular catch. 2. A fair investment. 3. Leave them alone at present. Vicar.—There is no objection to the proposed investments. Nos. 1—5, although you might do better. The Transvaal Loan (2) can in no way be affected by the Matabele war. The Railway No. 3 is not, of course, progressing just now, but the bonds are safe of their interest. Yes, Costa Rica "B" (4) are a good investment. You might do better in some instances by choosing from the table published last week under "A Selection of Investments." Antofagasta Four per Cent. Debentures, and Six per Cent. Ordinary stock ought to suit you. T. P., Oxford.—With regard to the Trust shares Nos. 1 and 2, I do not see what you can do but to hold now in the hope of a recovery. Atchison Second Mortgage "A" bonds should be held, they are recovering rapidly. Nos. 4 and 5 should also be held. A. H.—The English Company is apparently doing well, but it is a speculative investment, and so is the Land Company. Daisy L.—1. The San Pablo Nitrate Company is doing extremely well, but the prospects of the nitrate industry are not very bright in view of the proposed discontinuation of the restriction of the output. 2. Certainly hold Balkis Land shares for a recovery; also No. 3, which are certain to recover. You have done well to buy Oceana (4) at 2. You might buy a small amount of No. 5, if you can take them up. I do not like Kaboonga (6). Cherchez.—No, I do not recommend the four investments mentioned by you. You had better make your selection from the list of stocks mentioned last week under "A Selection of Investments." M. H.—Really, if you want me to adjudicate on your fifty different investments as to holding or selling, you must give me the prices which you paid, as much must depend upon that. E. G., Sunderland.—Arauco will come right eventually. Certainly hold Australian Broken Hill Consols. Which Nitrates have you got? E. M. H.—You will find what you want in the list of stocks inserted last week under "A Selection of Investments."

Various Investments.

At last the India Council has been able to sell some bills on India at 1s. 3¼d., and it looks as if matters were to look up a little for them, a consummation devoutly to be wished, if a sterling loan is to be avoided. Rupee Paper, too, has been firmer at 66½, while silver has maintained its price of 33⅛d. The suggestion made in several quarters of an amalgamation of Trust Companies, although, perhaps, difficult of execution, appears yet at present to commend itself as likely to bring about very considerable savings, and would work for the general good, especially if the capital were to be cut down at the same occasion. I am afraid, however, that a certain proportion of the Directors will be opposed to the plan as likely to reduce or abolish their fees. Monday's meeting of shareholders in the Industrial and General Trust was extremely boisterous, which is not surprising, as the Directors confess to the loss of £1,000,000 out of a capital of £3,500,000. Special interest centres in the question if this loss is absolute, or if part of it may be recovered with a recovery in the stock markets. The shareholders are, of course, fully justified in putting their house in order, as the Directors have been, to say the least of it, most unfortunate in their selection of investments. The monstrous Articles of Association also require amending. But the shareholders will, all the same, in their own interest, have to be careful to prevent the frittering away of further sums by protracted litigation. The Western Australian loan was a qualified success only, the average price obtained being £98. 5s. 2d., while the scrip is now quoted at ¾ premium on the minimum of 97½. The announcement of the Mexican Railway dividend at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum on the First Prefs. produced little change in quotations, as it had been anticipated. It shows, however, how very far the Second Prefs. are off dividends, and the present price of the latter of 45, to which they have been rigged by Mr. Mackusick and his Universal Stock Exchange is obviously extremely high, especially when compared with the First Prefs. at 65, which have to get 8 per cent. before the Seconds get a penny. The Directors of the Milwaukee and Chicago Breweries recommend a dividend of 7 per cent., or 14s. per share upon the Ordinary shares for the year ending September 30. Owing to the financial crisis in the United States the Directors are adverse to recommending a larger dividend, although they are advised that the profits are considerably in excess of the dividend they recommend. The dividend announced by Messrs. A. & F. Pears & Co., Limited, was satisfactory, being at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on the Preference shares for the half-year; of 12 per cent. per annum on the Ordinary shares for the half-year; and of 10 per cent. per annum on the Deferred Ordinary for the half-year, but the report, which has since been issued, is less favourable. Perhaps some of my readers will favour the writer of the following letter with their views on the case stated:—

October 20, 1893.

Can you from your experience advise me in this matter in the columns of TRUTH? I am a shareholder in a Limited Company incorporated June, 1893. The statutory meeting has just been held, and no routine business was transacted. The Articles of Association say, "The first Directors shall be," &c. "At the ordinary general meeting held in 1895 three Directors shall retire," &c. My query is, should the Directors "appointed" by the subscribers to the articles have been "elected" by the shareholders at the statutory meeting just held according to the law laid down in the "Companies Acts," or are the shareholders governed by the Articles of Association—in other words, are the shareholders without a voice in the matter until 1895, unless they are strong enough to call a special meeting on the subject? I have submitted a case to Counsel, who replies, "the Articles govern," but this seems opposed to equity, and I thought I might venture to appeal to your wide experience for your opinion.—Yours, &c., B. V.

It is rather unusual to ask a journalist's advice after having obtained counsel's opinion, so I prefer to leave the matter to the judgment of my readers. I hear that Messrs. Cox, Buckley, & Co., the well-known church decorators, of 29, Southampton-street, W.C., are turning their firm into a limited Company. The branch of business in which they are engaged and in which they have achieved a world-wide reputation is at present very popular, and I make no doubt that the undertaking will prove as prosperous as a Company as it has been as a private firm. A victim of a fraudulent Building Society protests against the hole-and-corner system of liquidation tolerated in Scotland. He writes that it is nothing short of a public scandal that any one man holding the appointment of Official Liquidator for one concern should be permitted to hold other six antagonistic appointments, which not only prevent proper investigation into that Company's affairs, but most cruelly deprive the creditors on the other estates of almost any voice whatever; indeed, they do not even get the opportunity of independent legal advice either in the law agency or by council. In England this would, according to my Scotch correspondent, not be tolerated for a single day, as a simple script petition —with facts—to the Accountant of the Court is sufficient to have a Neutral Receiver appointed. My correspondent, therefore, argues that the sooner this system is adopted in Scotland, the better will it be for all concerned. Perhaps so, although we have nothing much to boast of as regards our Building Societies, or even our system of liquidation.—Your affectionate uncle, MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

TED'S REFORMATION.

MRS. CHALLONER was an ardent reformer. She did not wear blue spectacles and a rational dress, neither did she cut her hair short and rail against the opposite sex from the vantage-ground of a public platform. She did not even advocate the cause of the shrieking sisterhood in private life, but she was an ardent reformer for all that, and never happy unless she had in hand some work that she fondly believed to be for the ultimate benefit of somebody.

It appeared to her that there was something wrong in the scheme of creation, and so she set about righting the wrong according to her lights. It was rather a big thing to tackle, but she went at it with any amount of pluck, and if her plans often ended in failure, why, that was not her fault, of course, but the fault of a blind and misguided world that refused to bow to her superior judgment.

Her husband was the Rev. Arthur Challoner, Vicar of Elmsdene, a mild, benevolent young man, who had a quite remarkable talent for effacing himself, and who was content to let his pretty little wife drive the domestic coach. On one occasion, and one only, did he venture to interfere with the workings of Providence as exemplified by Mrs. Challoner, and the history of his interference and the subsequent results thereof, I am now about to relate.

"My dear Kitty," said the Vicar, one morning, peering over his coffee-cup, "is there anything special on hand in the reforming line just now, or have you a little time to spare?"

Mrs. Challoner pursed up her lips.

"Let me see," she said, checking off items on her slim white fingers; "there's the new Infant School mistress, to begin with. She is on much too friendly terms with two or three of the choir-men, and she won't join the Primrose League. I'm afraid she is rather an obstinate case. Then there's the Temperance Society. I hear that some of the members actually took brandy-sauce with their plum-pudding at the Club feast the other day, and of course that must be looked into. Then there's the new tenant of Bridge's farm. I am not at all sure that he has not a secret leaning towards the Radical party. Besides, there's the case of that poacher, Giles; and Mrs. Brown's baby is half-starved, I am convinced; and Jones has been beating his wife again; and I can't get young Smith to marry Clara Green—he will hang about after that silly Fanny Taylor. There are heaps of other things, too; but still, I dare say I could find a little spare time if there is anything special you want me to do."

"Well, my dear," said the Vicar, rumpling his hair nervously, "it has occurred to me—this is only a suggestion, of course—it has occurred to me that if you tried you might be able to do something in the way of reforming Ted Hammersley. There's a lot of good in him, but he isn't all he might be, you know."

"He certainly is not," Mrs. Challoner returned, in a tone of chilling severity, and then silence ensued.

Now, Ted Hammersley was the black sheep of the village fold, and a sharp thorn in the pastoral shepherd's side. He was the Squire of Elmsdene, and, of course, being such a prominent person, ought to have been a shining light as well and an example to the neighbourhood. An example he certainly was, but anything but a good one, and his light persistently illumined the wrong road. In short, he was a man of the world, whose chief aim was to live as fast as possible, whose creed was the lax creed of our fin-de-siècle civilisation, and whose habits and associates left a good deal to be desired.

He and the Vicar had been at Eton and Oxford together, and their old friendship had held good until the latter married; but Mrs. Challoner had never taken kindly to the good-looking scapegrace, of whom such dubious stories were told. She had been very carefully trained by refined and sensible parents, and although not a prude, she had her own standard of right and wrong, and Ted Hammersley did not come up to it. Therefore she had always given him rather a wide berth, and among the numberless ideas that crowded her pretty head, the idea of reforming him had never found a place—which was somewhat odd, because, as we all know, there is no prospect so dear to the heart of a good woman as that of reforming a rake.

"Well, my love," said the Vicar, smiling his benign smile, and helping himself to a relay of ham and eggs, "I only made a suggestion. You are not bound to carry it out."

But Mrs. Challoner thought she would rather like to carry it out. During the silence that followed the Vicar's last speech her quick brain had not been idle; she had passed a good many things in mental review, and the result was that she had decided to undertake the somewhat delicate task of Ted's reformation. On the whole, seeing matters in quite a new light, she was inclined to regret that she had not undertaken it before; for it seemed to her now that hitherto she had wilfully neglected what was almost a positive duty. That neglect must be remedied without delay.

"I'll do it, Arthur," she exclaimed with decision, while in her excitement she dropped six lumps of sugar into her husband's cup, "I never have reformed a man, but that is no reason why I shouldn't. I wish you or I had thought of it before. However, it isn't too late. I'll take him in hand to-day."

So Ted was taken in hand forthwith, and led with a silken thread towards the way in which he ought to go.

The process was by no means an unpleasant one. Up to that time Ted had not thought much of his old friend's wife; he had found her cold and difficult to get on with—or, as he expressed it, "heavy going"—but now all that was changed. The warmest of welcomes awaited him if he chanced to drop in at the Vicarage, and he acquired the habit of dropping in every day with quite remarkable rapidity. The Vicar's wife proved herself on closer acquaintance a pleasant and intelligent companion. Moreover, she had a very pretty smile, and Ted, being only a man, was not proof against the charm of a pretty smile; more particularly when, as in this case, it was backed up by soft blue eyes and a sympathetic voice. Before long Mrs. Challoner's new work began to show signs of prospering. The Squire electrified the community by attending church regularly every Sunday, and it was reported that his mode of life was undergoing a change. The Vicar saw and rejoiced. The Vicar's wife also saw and rejoiced.

The process of reformation always occupies a certain amount of time, and this case was no exception to the general rule; but in due course Ted stood forth in the full light of public opinion a reformed character. Mrs. Challoner experienced a thrill of satisfaction and pride as she contemplated the result of her untiring efforts. She had fought a fight in a good cause, and conquered; she had taught an erring brother to see the error of his ways; she had led a wandering sheep back to the fold. That was her view of the case. Ted's was somewhat different.

"I'm quite a good boy now," he remarked, with a queer sort of smile, as they dawdled over five o'clock tea one day in the cosy Vicarage drawing room.

"Yes," Mrs Challoner assented, in a meditative tone.

"I go to church twice every Sunday," Ted went on, still with that queer smile lurking under his moustache, "I've cut drinking and gambling and betting, &c., &c., almost entirely. My old haunts know me no more, and my old friends are conspicuous by their absence."

"Yes," said Mrs. Challoner again, with a nod of approval.

Ted gave her a quick curious glance as she sat there in the firelight's ruddy glow—a slim dainty little figure, with a mignon face, framed softly in fair curly hair. Then he rose and lounged across to her side.

"A man expects some sort of a reward for all that, don't you know," he observed, tentatively.

She looked up at him, flushing warmly through her clear, sensitive skin.

"And you have it," she cried. "Surely you have your reward in your own feelings, and the knowledge that you are sowing good grain instead of wild oats, and doing right instead of wrong."

"Yes," Ted rejoined slowly, "that's all very well in theory, but when you come to put it in practice it doesn't hold water, you see. No doubt the consciousness of virtue and all the rest of it is very delightful, but I am not a saint—Heaven forbid! Even you can't make me one. And I would rather—I would rather"—he paused for a moment, then sat down on the broad, padded arm of her chair. "I did it all to please you, Kitty," he said, abruptly, and, before she could stop him, he had turned her face up to his and kissed her.

Mrs. Challoner could not speak, she could only flash him a look of passionate anger and reproach, as she struggled to free herself from his encircling arms. But he held her with provoking ease, smiling a little to see how utterly unavailing her slight strength was against his.

"Don't cut up rough, Kitty," he said, bending down to her with an audacious light in his handsome eyes. "Didn't you know I did it for your sake? Of course you did," and then he kissed her again.

Mrs. Challoner found her voice at last.

"How dare you insult me?" she gasped, still fighting valiantly against overpowering odds. "How dare you call me Kitty and—and kiss me! You are a mean coward, and I'll never forgive you. Never, never, never!"

"Oh, come!" returned Ted, rather taken aback by the vehemence of her unexpected attack, "it isn't fair to round on me like that. You led me on to do it, you know."

"Led you on!" echoed Mrs. Challoner, springing to her feet and facing him with crimson cheeks and flashing eyes. "How dare you accuse me of such a thing! Oh! you are like the rest. You let me put myself to no end of trouble on your account, and spend weeks and months in trying to make you a respectable member of society, and then, just when I think I have succeeded, you turn round and offer me an outrageous insult. That is a man all over."

Ted's air of confident assurance began to give way considerably. He was silent for a time, pulling his moustache and pondering the situation.

"I suppose I made a mistake," he hazarded at last, "I thought it was your way of starting a flirtation—on my honour I did."

Mrs. Challoner only gasped.

"You see," Ted went on, glancing at her furtively, "women have different ways of doing things. They go on all sorts of queer tacks, but it's generally pretty safe to conclude that they want you to follow them. I've known a good many women in my time, and so, when you suddenly veered round from north to south and began to try and get the whip hand of me, I judged you by former experience. I didn't mind your doing a certain amount of reforming, since that seemed to be your little game; in fact, I rather enjoyed the novelty of the process for the time being. But I've had enough of it now, and, of course, I—of course, I—well, of course, I—don't you know——"

"You thought I was going to let you make love to me," Mrs. Challoner interrupted, with withering scorn. "I, the Vicar's wife—you, my husband's oldest friend. That was the reward to which you looked forward! A worthy one! It did not occur to you for a moment, I suppose, that I was acting honestly in the matter, and trying my hand at reforming you, not as the prelude to a love affair, but for the sake of your own ultimate good?"

Ted had the grace to look uncomfortable.

"Well, no," he admitted, "I can't say that it did. You see, I know women."

Mrs. Challoner shrugged her shoulders, and the gesture was all eloquent.

"You know some women—or think you do."

A silence followed.

"I say," said Ted, presently, edging a little nearer with another of those quick, furtive glances, "you don't mean it, do you? You aren't really cross, are you? You won't send me back to the bad full tilt, will you? Look here, take things like a sensible girl, and—and kiss and be friends. You may go on reforming me if you like, I don't mind, if only you won't throw me overboard. I'm awfully desperately fond of you, I am—on my honour."

"Your—what?" asked Mrs. Challoner, with cutting emphasis. Then she turned and pointed to the door. "Please leave me now," she went on, "and remember that you will never enter the Vicarage again with my permission."

She drew up her tiny figure with an assumption of dignity that was quite imposing, and Ted, looking hard at her, saw that she was in earnest. So he took his departure, muttering strange oaths as he went; and that was the end of Ted's reformation.

* * * * *

"Dear, oh dear," sighed Mrs. Challoner, when she had to a certain extent succeeded in calming her ruffled feelings. "I'll never try to carry out a suggestion of Arthur's again."

And she never did.

MUSIC.

GOUNOD IN ENGLAND.

APART from the interest and regret universally felt when a great man passes to the unknown, England is chiefly concerned in the death of Gounod because it puts a final end to all chances of the completion of the oratorio-trilogy which began with "The Redemption," was continued with "Mors et Vita," and should have been completed with an oratorio on the subject of the Apocalypse. I understand, indeed, that Gounod had already sketched out such a work, and he certainly talked of it in his Tavistock House days, when also, as I have personal knowledge, he had formed intentions, subsequently to be abandoned, to write operas upon Molière's "Georges Dandin" and the history of Charlotte Corday. But after the failure of "Polyeucte" in 1879, and of "Le Tribut de Zamora" in 1881, to say nothing of the hopeless fiasco of "Sapho" in 1884, Gounod recognised that his career as an opera composer was over, and resolved to devote himself exclusively to sacred compositions. His own tendency was always to the religious vein, nor did he a whit mind being chaffed about it. I have before me now a daring caricature of the composer as the deified central figure in a burlesque stained glass window, the hair and beard forming a sort of aureole, while in place of the Saints, who in churches fill up the smaller divisions of the window, there is a boy with patched breeches climbing up the balcony of Juliette, a wooden Marguerite and limp Faust being blessed by Mephistopheles, a Queen of Sheba wearing a pronounced bustle, and a serenade by a cavalier to a cat on the tiles. This somewhat broad piece of humour dates back some eighteen or twenty years, when Gounod was living in SANITARY SURVEYS.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

London, but he greatly enjoyed it, and, perhaps, in order to show there was no ill-feeling, he wrote his autograph at the foot of my copy of it. It is, at any rate, certain that, after the withdrawal of "Sapho," Gounod, save as to a few detached songs, devoted himself entirely to religious music. The greater part of "Mors et Vita," written specially for England, is a full Requiem dedicated by the way, to the Pope. The "Joan of Arc" Mass performed at the Cathedral at Rheims in 1887, the fourth Messe Solennelle, the Te Deum and other works are, of course, all of a sacred character, while a third "Ave Maria," dedicated to his daughter, Madame de Lassus, was found on his desk after he was seized with his last illness. Gounod, despite the fact that he was always an honoured guest within our gates, had no great affection for England, where he believed he had been badly treated, although the idea was quite baseless. He was particularly aggrieved because he drew no royalties from the "Faust" representations, the performing right not being registered in due time. He, of course, failed to take into consideration that in 1862-3 "Faust" was going a-begging, that it had already half-ruined one Parisian manager, and that he was glad to get £40 for the English publishing rights from Messrs. Chappell. Indeed, if the 10 per cent. of the gross receipts after which the soul of the composer hankered had been imposed, "Faust" might still have been in the position of Verdi's "Otello," which is now given only once or twice in a season, or Verdi's "Falstaff," which has not yet been heard here at all. Gounod likewise had a grievance concerning the Albert Hall, where the bouche fermé was laughed at. But, as a matter of fact, he proved himself a very poor choir director, and it was not until the Royal Choral Society was placed under Sir J. Barnby that it became the greatest oratorio choir in this country. Gounod's own choral concerts here were also not taken altogether seriously, and he had other real or fancied grievances during his residence in London, into which I shall not enter, lest they bring an avalanche of correspondence upon me. Nevertheless Gounod owed a very great deal to England. Had it not been that John Hullah, at the instigation of Madame Viardot, gave a concert of his works at St. Martin's Hall in 1851, long before his very name was known in Paris, and had it not been for the warm eulogium of the Athenæum in an article attributed to the friendly pen of M. Louis Viardot (of the Revue Indépendante), and widely quoted in France, the original production of his first opera, "Sapho," might have been indefinitely delayed. Again, "Faust" was a failure until it had received the endorsement of London; and, indeed, nobody would produce it even here until Messrs. Chappell had paid £400 towards Mr. Mapleson's expenses. London also offered hospitality to the composer when, on the approach of the invading Germans, he bolted, leaving on his garden-gate the placard which Prussian shells disregarded—"The Property of Charles Gounod, Composer of 'Faust.'" And lastly, when his operatic muse failed him, the English, by giving him the largest sum ever paid for an oratorio, allowed him to strike out a new line with "The Redemption" and "Mors et Vita," two works which have obtained no foothold whatever in France. It is, however, only due to his memory to admit that in his judgment of British musical taste, Gounod was not far wrong. He stoutly declared that as a nation we could not appreciate opera, and the fact that even now, in the richest city in the world, opera appeals only to the smallest of coteries, and that if less than half a hundred titled or wealthy people, most of them personal friends, were to withdraw from the enterprise, serious opera in London would be impracticable, indicates that he had reason for his judgment. On the other hand, he was sturdy in his belief that "the English public have more educated taste than the French in regard to sacred music, doubtless from loftier religious convictions," and here he was indisputably right. Perhaps the worst experience that ever happened to Gounod in this country concerned a Brighton choir, long since disbanded. A rehearsal with that particular choral body so upset him that he was confined to the house with a nervous disorder for a week or more. But those who knew him at Tavistock House have long forgotten his troubles and his complaints concerning singers, publishers, and critics, and will prefer to recollect the veteran in his Turkish cap and smoking his long pipe, talking of music, or (which he much preferred) about theology. He detested the stiff and formal Sunday afternoons, when he always had to accompany, and occasionally to sing, with perfect expression, but next to no voice. The man of intellect came out best in his sociable moments, when formality was dropped, or in the heat of argument, or (tell it not in Gath) when the lady of the house was away.

For an introduction to the Popular Concerts with his pianoforte quartet in B minor last Saturday, Herr Robert Kahn has, I understand, to thank Miss Fanny Davies. That young lady would, I think, have been better employed in discovering a more satisfactory work from the pen of this promising young Leipsic musician, and even still better in exercising her influence on behalf of English composers, who can write much better music, although under present conditions they rarely, or never, get a chance of a hearing for it. The quartet, at any rate, is—longo intervallo—of the school of Brahms in his most didactic mood, and the slow movement is its best section. So, apparently, thought the audience, for immediately before the finale there was a decided exodus. Nor was Miss Davies quite wise to select as her principal solo on Saturday Beethoven's "Waldstein" sonata, a work which demands a more masculine reading. On Monday she was succeeded as pianist by her schoolfellow, Mr. Leonard Borwick, while Miss Wietrowetz, who is at present leader of the quartet, will be replaced on Monday week by Lady Hallé, and on the 13th proximo that excellent violoncellist, Mr. Whitehouse, will make way for Signor Piatti.

It is now asserted, I know not whether truthfully or otherwise, that most of the songs, &c., in "Miami," which certainly are a good deal too lyrical in style for a dramatic story, were originally intended for a light opera, entitled "Marigold Farm." If the statement be correct, Mr. H. Parry can at any rate adduce illustrious precedent for his action, from Handel and Rossini downwards. The music, too, of Cellier's "Dorothy," perhaps the most popular light opera of modern times, was originally written for Farnie's "Nell Gwynne."

Madame Patti will on Saturday sail from Liverpool for the United States, and she will appear in New York on November 9 and 11 in the garden act of "Faust," the second act of "Martha," and a miscellaneous concert. The tour is not, I believe, to be officially announced as la Diva's "Farewell of America," but she fully intends it to be so.

M. Paderewski commenced his provincial tour at Brighton on Saturday, and next Tuesday he will give his only recital this year at St. James's Hall, the tickets for which, save as to some guinea stalls, have now all been sold out. I expect some of them have gone into the hands of the ticket speculators. The Polish pianist, however, plays on November 22 at the London Symphony Concerts, and on December 11 at the "Pops," when I believe he will introduce some of his new songs.

Miss Emma Juch made a successful reappearance at the Crystal Palace concert on Saturday; for although her voice seems to show signs of the hard work which she has undergone during her Transatlantic opera tours, her high notes are still brilliant, and she sings with refinement and good taste. Some years ago she was best known here as an operatic soprano, but this winter she will adopt the more lasting, and often more lucrative, career of a concert artist. Mr. Wallace's new "Eumenides" prelude, performed for the first time on Saturday, is an ambitious work, said by its composer "to furnish a musical illustration of the Greek idea of Fate." This, of course, no music can possibly do; but as an example of abstruse orchestral workmanship the prelude is undeniably clever.

An obvious, though important, slip in the Crystal

Kinahan's LL Whisky.—"The Cream of Old Irish Whiskies." Kinahan's LL Whisky. Gold Medal Paris Exhibition, 1878. Kinahan's Glenisle Whisky. The Finest Scotch Whisky sold.

Palace announcements has, by the way, been pointed out by a correspondent. For the twenty concerts a serial admission ticket is issued for a guinea. This, when the price of admission was half a crown, was a clear saving, but now it involves an obvious loss. By paying a shilling for each concert you do the thing for £1, whereas if you pay your money down in advance you are asked for £1. 1s. Indeed, as the Railway Companies halve the admission money, you can, when you take your railway ticket, obtain admission to the Palace at sixpence a day, or at each of the twenty concerts for a lump-sum of ten shillings, thereby saving eleven shillings on the season. The defect is very clear, and the Crystal Palace authorities will doubtless speedily rectify it.

Another point has been indicated to me. For the twenty concerts, the Railway Companies now offer to sell twenty first-class two-shilling tickets for a guinea the set. This, of course, is a boon to regular concert-goers, but it is discounted by the fact that, for some occult reason, they can be obtained only at the Crystal Palace. It is almost worthy of a Government department to compel you to take a ticket to the Crystal Palace at full price before you can buy a railway ticket to the Palace at the reduced price. A system of vouchers issued to stall-holders, empowering the ticket clerks at Victoria or Ludgate to accept the reduced fare, would fully meet the difficulty.

The orchestral players have formed themselves into a trade union, avowedly to deal with the wholesale importation of cheap foreign performers. How they propose to set about the task is another matter. We have in London over 1,800 performers; that is to say, quite enough players to furnish at least five-and-twenty orchestras, and while the market is thus glutted, a strike is hopelessly impossible. And as to sending the interlopers to Coventry, as they rarely speak our language, they effectually perform that office on their own account.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—"Did not one of the fathers?" asks Bacon, "in great indignation call poesy vinum demonum, because it increaseth temptations, perturbations, and vain opinions?" And, indeed, both Jerome and Augustine say something of the kind. In confirmation of their definition I may say that some poems of the sweetest of all the American song-birds, Mrs. Sarah Piatt's "A Voyage to the Fortunate Isles" (1), and "An Enchanted Castle" (2), had upon me the precise effect that Tennyson attributes to the pint of port "whose father-grape grew fat on Lusitanian summers." As he drank, he says, he felt

> That child's heart within the man's
> Begin to move and tremble.

Mrs. Piatt's enchanted cup has again and again this effect upon you because of her own perfect sympathy with childhood. I cannot resist quoting for you what seems to me a little gem of this kind:—

IN THE ROUND TOWER AT CLOYNE (C. L. P., July 18, 1884).

> They shivered lest the child should fall;
> He did not heed a whit.
> They knew it were as well to call
> To those who builded it.
>
> He made a ladder of their fears
> For his light, eager feet;
> It never in its thousand years
> Held anything so sweet.
>
> The blue eyes peeped through dust and doubt,
> The small hands shook the Past.
> "He'll find the Round Tower's secret out,"
> They, laughing, said at last.
>
> And what the little climber heard
> And saw there, say who will,
> Where Time sits brooding like a bird
> In that grey nest and still.
>
> . . . About the Round Tower tears may fall;
> He does not heed a whit.
> They know it were as well to call
> To those who builded it.

More subtle, and perhaps more exquisite, in another kind is the little poem, "An Irish Wildflower," which I have not space to quote; while some of the more serious poems in the other volume, "A Voyage to the Fortunate Isles," are as notable for their imaginative depth and reach as for the airy grace of their finish. It is not often that poets, like the Brownings, pair at all, not to say happily, but Mr. Piatt also

> On honey-dew hath fed,
> And drunk the milk of Paradise,

as his "Idylls and Lyrics of the Ohio Valley" (3) testify. He, too, seems to me at his happiest when hymning the happiness of childhood, as in his charming "Marian's First Half-Year." From such clear and pure poetry to the exasperating affectation of Mr. Charles Weekes' clever "Reflections and Refractions" (4) is as a climb from an exquisite valley to a misty mountain side. Occasionally through a rift in the mist you catch glimpses of form and colour definite and fine; but for the most part you are in a rainbow-tinted fog. Now obscurity usually comes either from the ideas you attempt to express being inexpressible, intrinsically, or from their being inexpressible by you through lack of clearness of vision or of utterance. But the obscurity of a modern and maddening school of poets is absolutely deliberate. I know a young poet who has already made his mark, whose practice it used to be to cut clear little gems of verse, submit them to a friend, and, on receiving due meed of praise, re-write them into fashionable form by obscuring every idea irrecognisably. It was just as though you smudged with your elbow, while yet wet, the ink of delicately clear writing. At bottom, all such maddening mistiness comes of the self-consciousness and affectation of a coxcomb. "The moment you become conscious of goodness, you cease to be good," says the Buddhist Bible; and self-consciousness of cleverness defeats itself as certainly and fatally. Mr. Weekes, however, shows such cleverness in "Reflections and Refractions" that I have no fear lest his genuine spring of poetry which, now "choked with sedges, works its weedy way," will not in time run itself clear and rapid. While on the subject of poetry, it is not too late to mention "The Royal Marriage Ode" (5) of Mr. Eric Mackay, which is got up with a solid sumptuousness of paper, print, and binding, that of itself suggests immortality. Its gasping flunkeyism is not a whit more nauseating than the contemporary kowtowings of the free press of free England, but read to-day in cold blood it certainly does sound superlatively silly. Such effusions suggest that the arrogance of caste is the creation of the abjectness of half-caste—according to Heine's witty reflection: "I sometimes think that the devil, the nobility, and the Jesuits only exist so long as we believe in them." There are, however, two lines in the epithalamium which are worth quoting for their unintended sarcasm—

> That was a soldier's pledge,
> And is, to-day, a sailor's, as we know.

More excusable, because less interested and mischievous, is the form of morbid loyalty known as the Lues Boswelliana of biographers, from which the lady who has flung together the facts of "Angelica Kauffmann's Life" (6) is not wholly free. Having admitted that her heroine was a heartless flirt, and that she had a keen, cold Swiss eye to the main chance, she proceeds to account for her secret marriage to a man she understood to be of high rank and great wealth, by suggesting that she was entrapped into it—not by Sir Joshua Reynolds, as Sternberg preposterously asserts—but by the

(1) "A Voyage to the Fortunate Isles." And other Poems. By Sarah M. B. Piatt. (London: Kegan Paul, Trench, & Co.)
(2) "An Enchanted Castle." And other Poems. Pictures, Portraits, and People in Ireland. By Sarah Piatt. (London: Longmans, Green, & Co.)
(3) "Idylls and Lyrics of the Ohio Valley." By John James Piatt. New Edition. (London: Longmans, Green, & Co.)
(4) "Reflections and Refractions." By Charles Weekes. (London: T. Fisher Unwin.)
(5) "The Royal Marriage Ode." For the Nuptials of H.R.H. the Duke of York with the Princess May of Teck. By Eric Mackay. (London: Lamley & Co.)
(6) "Angelica Kauffmann." A Biography. By Frances A. Gerrard. New Edition. (London: Ward & Downey.)
(7) "Stray Sport." By J. Moray Brown, late 79th Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders. Two Vols. (London: William Blackwood & Sons.)
(8) "Seven Stories." By Helene E. A. Gingold. (London: Remington & Co.)

two Nathaniels, Hone and Dance. On what evidence? Absolutely on none, except that Dance might have been mortified by her rejection of him, and Hone by her artistic superiority and success; and that as, both gentlemen were Irish, their Celtic blood would naturally stir them to this "Lady of Lyons'" sort of revenge! But what two Irishmen entrapped the pretended Count Horn into a marriage with Angelica Kauffmann? That is the real and the sole unaccountable mystery of the matter. Any one who reads Angelica's life, or, for that matter, looks at her portrait as painted by herself, will understand how unquestioningly she would accept a handsome man of high rank and great wealth, as the adroit valet appeared to all to be. But why the accomplished and fascinating swindler should have chosen so poor a pigeon as Angelica to pluck is inexplicable. I should strongly advise the biographer in her next edition to represent the two Irishmen entrapping the valet into the marriage by describing Angelica as fabulously wealthy. She has the same precise evidence for one theory as for the other — the natural malignity of the Celt. Talking of natural malignity, I could not help being amused, but not amazed (for one gets at last used to it) at the author of an extremely interesting book on "Stray Sport" (7), speaking of "the fiendish temperament" of a tiger, because it charged the man who had wounded it. As he admits that the tiger would let you alone if you let him alone, this fiendishness is the self-defence of a creature which slaughters its prey for food against a creature which slaughters its prey only for "sport." How would Mr. Moray Brown figure in a book written by a tiger? The last book I shall recommend you is a little volume of "Seven Stories" (8), written avowedly for such hard-worked folk as have no time for novel-reading. Perhaps the best of the tales is "The Rabbi of Moscow"—a sympathetic and even pathetic story of the persecution of the Jews—and the most powerful "Whose was the Guilt?" a plea for such a relaxation of the marriage law as will facilitate divorce.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, very sincerely yours,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—I think furs are a seasonable topic just now. Don't you? There begins to be a sharp feeling in the air, especially in the mornings and late afternoons, that reminds us of approaching winter. We went with Lilla to see at Nicholay's what is to be worn this season. Ermine is, of course, the chief novelty. Capes, collars, muffs, and cuffs are made of it, and coats for day wear as well as evening are lined with it. They had just sent home to some fortunate woman a long coat of blue velvet shot with red, and lined throughout with ermine. The collar, also in ermine, was continued in revers down the front. Their new driving coat was represented in box cloth, lined with nutria, a fur that strongly resembles beaver, but is very much less expensive. It was trimmed with wolverine, with deep cuffs, a wide collar and lapels of the fur. The shape was fitted to the figure at the back, but quite loose in front, so that one side can be folded well over the other. Among the new muffs, which are large, we noticed one which, we were told, is made of cub-bear, like the busby of an officer in the Grenadier Guards. Being the fur of the baby bear, it is quite light. The privates have theirs made of adult bear, the fur of which is much heavier and less costly than the other.

Sealskin is expensive this year. A three-quarter cape of it was trimmed with wolverine and lined with striped green silk brocaded in small rosebuds. Linings are elaborate and costly nowadays. The newest seal coats are made with full basques. The latest novelty in fur collars is made with a deep shoulder piece and a turn-up collar which can be turned back at will. The corners are square this season. We saw one of these in mink, one in skunk, and one in chinchilla. A short, full, ermine cape had a very full turned-down collar and a high one, which was very protective to the back of the neck. The great collars of last season, however, are quite out of favour.

We inspected a great number of Russian sables at prices ranging from three guineas up to twenty-five. Most of the skins were undressed and seamless as they had been taken off the animal. It was explained to us that the way this is done is by turning the skin back and peeling it right off—legs, paws, head and all. It is then inside out, and can be cured in that position. Some of the more expensive ones were wonderfully thick and close in the pelt, and of a beautiful rich colour. We saw a travelling sacque for a lady in dark blue cloth lined throughout with opossum, and made so as to form a bag for the feet. Pockets and a muff occupy appropriate positions in front. A sacque for a man is differently planned, the under part coming right up to the waist. It, too, is lined with opossum, and is an admirably comfortable kind of rug. It is no heavier than the ordinary sort, and can be carried on the arm in the same way.

I always say that men have the best of everything. Being the lords of creation, they possibly have every right to it, but, whether this is so or not, they certainly take care to get it. Is it any wonder that I feel jealous after having seen an overcoat—oh, Amy!—trimmed and faced with sea-otter and lined with seal? And this glorious garment for a mere man! A being who would be quite likely to drop a lighted fusee on the lovely fur, and who would never dream of looking for a moth from January to December. Oh, the pity of it! the pity of it! I do not grudge them fur. Not at all! They look very nice, indeed, in their fur-trimmed coats; but, oh! I do grudge them that magnificent sea-otter.

Lilla's business was to buy a carriage-rug, and she chose a pretty one in beaver mounted on box cloth. As her liveries are nut-brown, this will be very harmonious. We saw a lovely rug of white fox mounted on ruby plush. Noticing a curious white one in stripes with a little black among them, we asked what fur it was, and were told that in every skunk there is a small portion of white fur, and this rug was made from the pieces sewn together. It had a very good effect. We asked what furs are to be fashionable this season, and were told that neither beaver nor Persian lamb will be so much worn as in previous winters, the feeling being for sable and mink. Wolverine is to enjoy a period of popularity again. Skunk is to be worn, and ermine, as I mentioned, is to be worn with both afternoon and evening dress.

As we came away, we looked in at Hayward's window, next door, and saw some of the new, large, square-sided veils in net spotted with chenille and bordered with real Brussels. Some were black, others dark blue, and others brown. We also saw some when we went inside, in black net embroidered with borders and sprays or spots of cream or butter colour. The introduction of real Brussels lace applied upon velvet or silk instead of net is quite a new idea, and we were shown a hat made with a velvet brim with appliqué lace border, the veil matching it in colour and in lace trimming. This looks very smart. The black and white veils will soon appear in your part of the kingdom, so I am sending you one that you may be the first to wear them. I know how Maud and I, when we lived far from the madding crowd, used to enjoy initiating any new fashion that we could afford to indulge in. We saw some pretty fichus and deep collars for evening wear. One of the latter was in fine mauve surah, accordion-pleated and trimmed with lace also kilted to match. There were shapes to suit every taste and all kinds of figures. Some of Hayward's bonnets and hats have cut steel ornaments introduced in the trimming, from which it is evident that steel is coming into fashion again. It is now some years since it was "in" before.

Hunting Season, 1893-4.—Busvine's new designs and materials for this year include several special novelties in Riding Habits, Coats for Walking and Driving, Walking Jackets, Gowns, &c. Can be seen at 4, Brook-street, or will be sent by return of post.—John Busvine, by special appointments to the Princess of Wales, the Empress of Germany, the Empress of Austria, &c., &c.

The most beautiful of Winter Garments are those of Nature's own production—Furs. For an elegant fit, genuine and best furs, go to Nicholay's, Manufacturing Furriers, 170, Oxford-street, London. Seal Jackets re-made to fashionable shapes. Moderate prices.

Evelyn has just returned from Cairo and has brought with her some delightful Cairene embroideries, such as make one covetous. She has several zouaves in fine gold work, and a set that she planned herself and got done for a tea-gown, consisting of yoke and sleeves in this lovely pale gold stitchery. The rest is to be pale green velvet and very fine cashmere of the same shade, Evelyn having a particular affection for this material in the finer kinds. It certainly drapes beautifully when really of the best—that is, costing about 5s. the yard. While Evelyn was in Cairo she had an attack of influenza and was perfectly miserable at the hotel, which was very full, rather noisy, and extremely draughty. The doctor whom Harry called in recommended her to go to a private Home started about two years ago by an English lady, Miss Helen Thomson, a member of the Royal British Nurses' Association, where English people travelling in Egypt can be carefully nursed and tended. There are beds for seven patients, and two trained nurses are in attendance in addition to Miss Thomson. Until this was started there was no place for visitors of standing to go if taken ill. Evelyn says it was delightful to find such a quiet retreat after the bustle of the hotel. She soon got well there. It is called Claughton House.

Charlie was in Leadenhall Market the other day, and told us about a little episode he witnessed, in which a small wiry-haired dog played the principal part. A man was displaying some doggies to a possible purchaser, and when he took this one out of the cage and put a collar on it with a chain attached, the small creature immediately began to bark at the bystanders, and tore at them to the full length of his chain. Quoth the man—

He 'as the 'eart of a bulldog, and thinks he's as big as a helephant. He's most of him brimstone, and the rest of him's quicksilver. He's gone for all of 'em here since he came; size makes no difference to him.

Now, is not that eloquence of a sort? No one can help admiring the graphic vigour of the phrases.

Here is another little anecdote for you. Mrs. Fourstars was in a registry-office for servants the other day, and saw lying on the table a prospectus of a dancing academy. She thought it might possibly do for her youngsters, so she asked the young woman clerk, "What class of people attend these classes?" "Oh, very nice people, indeed," was the reply. "I often go myself."

Was not the naïveté of that perfectly delicious? Still, the answer was just as much to the purpose in its way as the description of the "dawg" in Leadenhall Market. It told Mrs. Fourstars exactly what she wanted to know, better than a couple of dozen sentences could have done.

Evening dress is going to be lovely this winter. Pale tones of brocade, satin, moiré silk, and velvet will be embellished with silver or gold embroidery, and lightened by the addition of folds of silk muslin in similar shades. Sleeves will again be much worn in a different colour from that of the dress. I have seen a beautiful ball dress in sea-green and silver, with blush-pink velvet sleeves. Another is in pale-pink satin brocaded with white flowers and trimmed with pink and blue silk muslin twisted in soft ropes, which show first one colour and then the other. The sleeves are in pale-blue satin. Evening cloaks are in delicious brocades of the creamiest pallor, scattered over with flowers and trimmed with fur. The linings are as sumptuous as the outsides. Think of an apple-blossom brocade with flowers in the very tenderest tones of pink on a ground of mother-o'-pearl lined with satin shot white and gold and trimmed with sable. A shoulder-cape of exquisite old lace makes it deliciously becoming at the neck. The lace ends in a soft jabot in front.

Another lovely evening mantle was in Louis velveteen of a very soft, pale shade of heliotrope. It was trimmed with beaver down the fronts, and was lined with palest pink satin. It was furnished with a hood, also in velvet, satin, and fur, which could easily be detached and thrown over the hair. It was the most becoming thing you can imagine, the pink satin combined with the heliotrope forming one of those unions which, as in the case of pink and blue, subdue the sallow tints of the complexion and make the most of the white and pink.

I see by the programme just issued of the Food and Cookery Exhibition that not only military but naval cookery is to be practically demonstrated. The performers are from H.M.S. Victory, now at Portsmouth. They are to prepare breakfast for thirty men, and to make bread on another occasion. There is also to be on Thursday evening an exhibition of Volunteer Cookery by the Medical Staff Corps, showing the preparation of one day's meals in camp for a company of thirty men. This promises to be very interesting, and I shall enjoy telling you about it.

I have just had an opportunity of seeing (at Mr. Peter Robinson's, 256, Regent-street) the new Lady Mayoress's banquet-dress for November 9 next, and also the dresses that are to be worn on that occasion by her Maids of Honour—Misses Moore, Eglington, Tyler, Whistler, Venables, Hollingsworth, Dimsdale, and King. The Lady Mayoress's gown is made of a magnificent white and gold satin duchess, embroidered in a large and handsome design. The petticoat is of the richest white satin, the train, which is of the brocade, is lined throughout with the satin, and the lace for the corsage is delightful, being most delicately wrought with designs in gold thread introduced into the pattern. The whole of the lace berthe is embroidered in shimmering mother-of-pearl, and huge pear-shaped pendants are suspended from the different parts of the trimming.

The dresses for the Maids of Honour are quite up to date. They are of white ondine silk with narrow bands of velvet in a soft tone of verbena green outlining the seams. The sides of the hips are draped with half-handkerchief shaped paniers (which fashion, by the bye, is most becoming to quite young girls). These paniers disappear under a fan of velvet which joins the corsage at the back, and are altogether very chic and smart. I should think that when grouped together these Maids will prove themselves to be a very attractive double quartet.

Mr. Alderman Tyler—the Lord Mayor that is to be—has been laid up for the last few weeks with a sharp attack of bronchitis, though I am glad to say that he is now about again. But I suppose he has not to bother much about his costume for the great function on the 9th. Still there must be any number of other matters that he has to busy himself with, so it is indeed most unfortunate that he should be laid up at such a moment.

By the bye, I wonder who chooses the liveries for the footmen. If I were Lord Mayor I should go in for a little originality in this direction, coupled, I think, with a little good taste, and instead of having my men arrayed in coats which compete with Joseph's of old—supplemented by an enormous quantity of gold lace (I suppose there was no such thing as gold lace in Joseph's time)—I should clothe them in the style in which the servants of our great-grandfathers were clothed. They would be equally, in fact more, attractive than they are in the present style, and the cost would leave a large surplus in cash for—shall I say charity, or more turtle soup?

Talking of turtle soup. Fred was once at one of the Lord Mayor's banquets on November 9, and was seated next to a lady of rather large proportions. When asked if he would take "thick or clear turtle," he replied "Clear." "Say both," she said to him. "But I couldn't possibly eat both," he modestly answered. She gave him a look of withering scorn, and then whispered, "But I can, and your extra plate as well." He ordered both, and she disposed of the three platesful. Such is evidently a civic education.

You will find these cheese aigrettes, with "pulled" bread, perfectly delicious:—

Half fill an enamelled sauté-pan with a pint of cold water, throw

RIDING HABITS.—A speciality in Riding Habits. Has been declared the best, without exception, by all ladies who have seen it. Quite new. Patented. Made only by G. S. WOLMERSHAUSEN & CO., LTD., 16, Gt. Marlborough-street, Regent-street, London, W.

MESSRS. REDFERN beg to announce that the models of Gowns, Coats, Mantles, &c., designed and prepared for autumn and early winter wear, are now ready, and display the combined ideas of the latest London and Paris Houses.—27, New Bond-street, W.

into it 1 oz. of fresh butter, and set it upon the stove to boil. Now prepare 3 oz. of finely-grated Parmesan cheese (or any old, dry cheese will answer the same purpose) and ¼ lb. of dry and sifted flour. When the water boils stir in the flour by spoonfuls with a wooden spoon until the mixture becomes quite thick and falls away from the sides of the sauté-pan, then add a couple of unbeaten eggs and the yolk of a third. Strew in the grated cheese and flavour with salt and cayenne to taste. Have ready a large and shallow pan half filled with clarified dripping or lard, and allow it to boil. Portion out the prepared ingredients to the size of a plover's egg and drop these "aigrettes" with two spoons into the boiling lard, being careful to put them well into the lard before removing the spoons. When they have boiled some seven or eight minutes, if the aigrettes rise to the top of the pan and are in colour of a delicate brown, remove them with a strainer and set them aside to drain, afterwards sprinkling them lightly with a littled grated cheese. While the aigrettes are draining, pull the inside "pith" from a couple or more of French rolls, fashion them with the fingers into a size and shape corresponding with the aigrettes, moisten them with a little fresh milk, and brown them quickly in a hot oven. When cooked, arrange the bread and cheese on either side of a dainty dual dish, garnish with parsley, and send to table either hot or cold. You will find this a pleasant variation of the inevitable "after course."

Do you like stewed pigeons? If so, try them done thus:—Three pair of pigeons should be ordered ready dressed, as for stewing; do not wash them, but wipe each with a clean cloth, then blanch them in boiling water for a minute. Remove the galls, and put the livers into scalding water, take them out and bruise fine with the back of a spoon; season with pepper, salt, grated nutmeg, a shred of lemon minced finely, and a cluster of parsley, also minced. Add two hard-boiled eggs passed through a potato-masher, two ounces of suet, chopped small, and a teacupful of fine bread-crumbs. Moisten the whole with a little milk. Fill the bodies of the birds with this force-meat, and secure both ends safely. Dip the pigeons into a little boiling stock, dust them with pepper and flour mixed, then lay them in an earthenware jar that has been well rubbed with a clove of garlic. Throw in two ounces of butter and a salt-spoonful of celery-seed. Put the lid on tightly, set the vessel in a pan of boiling water, and let the birds cook for three hours. Mix a teaspoonful of flour into a smooth paste, with mushroom catsup and Worcestershire sauce, with this thicken the gravy that runs from the pigeons before removing the pan of water. Cut two or three parboiled carrots into ornamental shapes, and simmer them till tender in a little gravy. Arrange the birds on a hot dish, with the carrots around them, and pour the gravy over all.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

MARIANI WINE

This inimitable COCA WINE is an aid to intellectual exertion, and is indispensable to brain-workers and others who suffer from Debility, Exhaustion, Mental Depression, Dyspepsia, Sleeplessness, Voice Fatigue; also to promote Convalescence. Written Testimonials from over 2,000 Physicians. "A powerful rejuvenator and renovator of the vital forces." Sold by Chemists, Grocers, and Stores, or delivered free by Importers, WILCOX & CO., 239, Oxford-street, London. 4s. per bottle, or 45s. dozen.

MOURNING FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR.

Messrs. JAY'S

Large and well-assorted STOCK includes a choice and varied selection of COSTUMES, MANTLES, and MILLINERY, suitable for any degree of Mourning, and ready for IMMEDIATE WEAR. Orders to special instructions are executed in a few hours, and Ladies are Waited Upon in any part of the country without any extra charge whatever.

JAY'S,
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY.
Show Rooms—112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supply the Public Direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving Purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Fine Diamond Half-hoop Rings. from £15 to £200.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £8.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
THE
GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE LTD.
(A. B. Savory & Sons), late of 11 and 12, Cornhill, E.C., is incorporated with this Company, and the business is transferred to the above address.

Fine Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Ring, £18 10s.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

The Largest and Choicest Stock in the World of Novelties specially prepared for WEDDING & COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTS.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Border Ring, £25.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Bracelet, £35.

REGISTERED DESIGN
Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Diamond Cluster Ring, £25

REDMAYNE & Co., Ltd., NEW BOND ST., and CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.
High-Class Goods at Popular Prices.

"LE PERFECTIONNÉ" CORSET (REGISTERED No. 219,566). The Queen, October 21st, 1893, says:—"Messrs. REDMAYNE have prepared some exceptionally excellent Stays suited to all figures, and admirably cut. They rejoice in the name of 'Le Perfectionné,' and they have been perfected in every way possible. They can be had with the medium waist, long waist, and extra long, in Black and White Coutille, with the best of all bone, and supporting side steels. They have only to be known to be appreciated." Price in White, 15/6 to 22/6; and in Black 18/6 to 25/6, according to size. Sample pairs forwarded by post on application.

ALICE HILL.
SMART EVENING TOILETTES from 5 guineas.
TWEED GOWNS from 3½ guineas.
Stylish Parisian Millinery, Trousseaux, and Corsets.
22, LOWER PHILLIMORE PLACE, KENSINGTON.

MISS WESTROPP-DAWSON,
Court Milliner,
43, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON (over the Kettledrum Tea-rooms),
FRENCH and ENGLISH MILLINERY, also MANTLES, JACKETS, and TRAVELLING GARMENTS, at extremely reasonable prices.
Things sent on Approval on receipt of Tradesmen's Reference.

CRITERION GRAND HALL.
THIS WEEK.
The SPIERPON ORCHESTRA.
Miss CISSIE TURNER, Vocalist.
RECHERCHÉ DINNERS, AND SUPPERS
AT 5/- & 7/- 6 to 9.30.
AT 4/- 11 to 12.30.
No Charge for Attendance. Separate Tables. Lift from Grand Vestibule to Grand Hall. Constantly Varied Programme and Musical Novelties.

WHITE AND SOUND TEETH are indispensable to personal attractions and to health and longevity by the proper mastication of food.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO

is of inestimable value in preserving and beautifying the teeth, strengthening the gums, and giving a pleasant fragrance to the breath; it eradicates tartar from the teeth, prevents and arrests decay, and polishes and preserves the enamel, to which it imparts a pearl-like whiteness. Decay of the teeth originates in the unseen chinks and crevices, where acids are generated which destroy the lime of which teeth are principally composed; these flaws then become the residence of parasites, which complete the destruction which acidity has commenced. ROWLANDS' ODONTO is an antacid, anti-parasitic, and slightly alkaline tooth powder; will penetrate to the hidden parts of the teeth, and preserve and beautify them for years. Sold everywhere at 2s. 9d. per box.

HOWARD & SONS

FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS.] 25, 26, 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W. [SPECIMENS AT WAREROOMS.

WOOD TAPESTRY.

WALL DECORATIONS.

IMPERVIOUS TO DUST.

25, 26, & 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.

THE NEW PATENT

TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE.

NO. 20,778,

For Ladies and Children.

These goods are spliced at the instep, where, in the case of lace-up boots and shoes, stockings first show signs of wear. In the heels and feet there is also a splicing thread more than is found in ordinary goods. Thereby the wearing power is doubled without the slightest clumsiness or discomfort. The improvement is particularly advantageous in the thinnest summer makes of stocking, where the extreme fineness of the yarn makes the ordinary goods very apt to wear out almost immediately.

Made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

See Reg. Trade Mark "MUSA DYE" on each pair.

To be obtained of all the best Hosiers and Outfitters in the United Kingdom, and

Wholesale only of the Patentees:

DEBENHAM & FREEBODY,
FLETCHER GATE, NOTTINGHAM.

MORANT & Co.

DECORATORS,

91, NEW BOND STREET (4 doors from Oxford St.)

Makers of Venetian Seats, Henri II. Benches, Louis XIII. Sofas, Louis XV. and XVI. Furniture in great variety, not to be seen elsewhere. Chaises Directoire from old models

The CLARET of the SEASON.

CHÂTEAU LA MARNIERE

(VINTAGE 1888, BLANQUEFORT.)

21s. Cash, delivered. Sample bottle, 2s. by post.

Order through your Wine Merchant or Grocer.

SOLE PROPRIETORS:

ARNOLD, PERRETT, & CO., LIMITED,

WINE MERCHANTS,

7a, Lower Belgrave Street, S.W. & Country Branches.

PRICE LIST OF CHOICE WINES AND SPIRITS POST FREE.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.

300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.

ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS,

Weavers of Dress Silks,

Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW NOVELS.

Mrs CAMPBELL PRAED'S New Novel, "OUTLAW AND LAWMAKER," will be ready in 3 vols. at every Library, to-morrow. Oct. 26.

WOMAN AND THE MAN, the New Novel by ROBERT BUCHANAN, Author of "God and the Man," will be ready in 2 vols. at every Library, on Nov. 2.

VASHTI AND ESTHER (a Story of Society To-day), by the author of "Belle's Letters" in "The World," will be ready shortly, in 2 vols., at every Library.

To His own Master. By ALAN ST. AUBYN, Author of "The Old Maid's Sweetheart," &c. 3 vols. at all Libraries.

"A writer who has taken rank among the few who are distinguished by good taste, good English, and refinement without feebleness."—Vanity Fair.

A Wasted Crime. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat," &c. 2 vols. [At every Library.

"A narrative tragedy which, in virtue of the strength and finish of its portraiture, the delicate precision of its literary workmanship, and the inevitableness of its dramatic movement, takes a high place, not only among the novels of the year, but among the achievements of the admirable writer from whom it comes. The concluding chapters of 'A Wasted Crime' represent a good novelist at his strongest and best."—Daily Chronicle.

The Woman of the Iron Bracelets. By FRANK BARRETT, Author of "Folly Morrison." 3 vols. [At all Libraries.

"Though Mr. Barrett does not write for posterity, he has a happy gift of amusing and interesting his contemporaries, and he has seldom used that gift to better purpose. . . . The book is written with undeniable force and energy; there is not a page to skip, and as an example of a bright yet sensational novel it is hard to beat."—National Observer.

The Rebel Queen. By WALTER BESANT, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." 3 vols. [At every Library.

"'The Rebel Queen' is a remarkable work. It is fascinating as a fiction—indeed, we do not think the author has previously displayed so brilliantly his rare gift of imagination—and it is instructive and suggestive as a study in sociology to an extent which is not to be taken in at a first reading."—World.

The Gun-runner: A ROMANCE OF ZULULAND. By BERTRAM MITFORD. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"Mr. Mitford's new story comes with particular opportuneness at a moment when a possible war in South Africa is everywhere discussed. It is an intensely exciting story. The author writes from a fulness of experience."—Review of Reviews.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

NEW WORKS OF FICTION.

NOW READY.

DIANA TEMPEST.

By Mary Cholmondeley.

Author of "Sir Charles Danvers," &c. In three vols., crown 8vo.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "NEAR NEIGHBOURS."

The SWING of the PENDULUM.

By FRANCES MARY PEARD, Author of "The Baroness," &c. In two vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

Dr. MIRABEL'S THEORY. A

Psychological Study. By ROSS GEORGE DERING, Author of "The Undergraduate." In three vols, crown 8vo.

"Remarkably well written, and has much excellent delineation of character, and its lighter parts are amusing, and sparkle with genuine humour, not without strong touches of satire."—Scotsman.

NOW READY.

The COURAGE of SYLVIA

FULGENT. By H. B. FINLAY-KNIGHT. Author of "A Girl with a Temper." In three vols., crown 8vo.

"A powerful story, artistically constructed, and full of dramatic interest."—Vanity Fair.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S Publications.

THE THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.—New Volumes.

Helen Treveryan.

By Sir MORTIMER DURAND, K.C.I.E., Indian Civil Service. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

SPEAKER.—"It is written with remarkable knowledge; it is obvious throughout that its author is experienced in life, and exceptionally well informed. . . . A piece of mature, well-considered, able work. It is also spirited and vigorous."

NEW YORK INDEPENDENT.—"This is one of the best of recent novels. It is full of action, change of scene, vigorous feeling, stirring incidents. Army life in the East, and descriptions of Afghan war, are done with a freshness of touch that is admirable."

John Trevennick.

By W. C. RHOADES. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

ACADEMY.—"From start to finish, 'John Trevennick' will be devoured with unflagging voracity."

SPECTATOR.—"A bright, interesting, and healthy book."

Under Pressure.

By the MARCHESA THEODOLI. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

ATHENÆUM.—"Deserves perusal because of the true, vivid, and intimate picture it affords of a society which will soon be extinct."

NEW YORK INDEPENDENT.—"It is a story of strong situations and picturesque incidents, and through it there runs a current of genuine human sympathy and experience. The story holds its reader by the fascination of romance decidedly novel in some of its aspects."

A Mere Cypher.

By MARY A. DICKENS. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"There is a certain reserve-force about her which places her far beyond the average novelist."

WORLD.—"A fine story; it is simply constructed, it is strong, thoughtful, graphic, and interesting from beginning to end."

Round London: Down East and up West.

By MONTAGU WILLIAMS, Q.C. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"'Round London' has fewer anecdotes than the author's other two books, but it is as good reading, and is quite as instructive."

GUARDIAN.—"There is not a page in the book which does not suggest matter for thought to the student of social questions."

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"The book is well worth reading, and is written with the greatest liveliness and dramatic power."

The Marplot.

By S. R. LYSAGHT. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

BOOKMAN.—"There is not a dull page in 'The Marplot.'"

WORLD.—"It is not often that the path of the reviewer is brightened by so admirable a piece of work as Mr. Lysaght's novel, 'The Marplot.' The descriptions of scenery in Kerry are admirable, and the climax is full of pathos which the closing scene is not likely to dispel."

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"We do not often come across a better specimen of modern fiction than 'The Marplot.'"

MACMILLAN & CO., LONDON.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

Now Ready, in 3 vols. At all Libraries.

MARIE CORELLI'S NEW WORK.

BARABBAS:

A Dream of the World's Tragedy.

THE STAR-GAZERS.—By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of "Eli's Children," &c. 3 vols., crown 8vo, 31s. 6d. [Ready.

EIGHTH EDITION.

DODO: a Detail of the Day.—By E. F. BENSON. Crown 8vo, 2 vols., 21s.

HIS GRACE.—By W. E. NORRIS, Author of "Mademoiselle de Mersac," "The Rogue," &c. Third and cheaper edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

An edition in one volume of a novel which in its two-volume form quickly ran through two editions.

CAMBRIDGE SERMONS.—Edited by C. H. PRIOR, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Pembroke College. Crown 8vo, 6s. A Volume of Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge by various preachers, including the Archbishop of Canterbury and Bishop Westcott.

METHUEN & CO., 18, Bury-street, W.C.

TWO NEW WORKS OF HUMOUR.

DECLINED WITH THANKS.

By ERNEST MULLINER.

Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"Fanciful and farcical, its gaiety is incessant."—Scotsman.

THE MAHATMA'S PUPIL.

By RICHARD MARSH, Author of "The Devil's Diamond."

Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"Very amusing. . . . The idea is original."—Glasgow Herald.

London: HENRY & CO., Bouverie-street, E.C.

NO STABLE IS COMPLETE WITHOUT

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION

WHERE ELLIMAN'S COMES IN USEFUL.

From Lord Haddington,
Tyningham, Prestonkirk, N.B.
December 27th, 1885.

SIRS,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables, and I consider it indispensable in any stable, but especially in the stable of a Master of Hounds.
HADDINGTON.
Master of the Berwickshire Hounds.

From the Earl of Harrington.
January 9th, 1889.

SIRS,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables, and I consider it the best that I can obtain.
HARRINGTON.
Master of South Wilts Hounds.

From Major M. J. Balfe, South Park.
June 16th, 1892.

SIRS,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables, and I can highly recommend it.
M. J. BALFE.
Master of the Roscommon County Staghounds.

From The Marquis of Anglesey,
Plasnewydd, Anglesey.
June 18th, 1892.

SIRS.—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables, and I consider it a most excellent Embrocation.
Marquis of ANGLESEY.
Master of the Marquis of Anglesey's Harriers.

PREPARED ONLY BY

ELLIMAN, SONS, & CO.

SLOUGH, ENG.

1s., 2s., 2s. 6d. and 3s. 6d. Of all Chemists.

From Lieut. J. H. Tremayne,
13th Hussars, Ballincollig.
July 17th, 1892.

SIRS,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables, and I find it most useful.
J. H. TREMAYNE.
Master of the 13th Hussars Fox Hounds.

From W. G. Robinson, Esq.,
Beech Hill, Armagh.
June 27th, 1892.

SIRS,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables, and I find it to be a most useful remedy for sprains, sore throats, &c. W. G. ROBINSON.
Hon. Secretary to the Armagh Harriers.

From John W. J. M. Paterson, Esq.,
Terrona, Langholm, N.B.
June 27th, 1892.

SIRS,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables, and has been for very many years, with most satisfactory results. J. W. J. M. PATERSON.
Master of the Eskdaill Foxhounds.

THE BEST OF THE SIXPENNY MAGAZINES.

THE HUMANITARIAN. Now Ready.

EDITED BY VICTORIA WOODHULL MARTIN.—NOVEMBER.

The Reform of the Public House. The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Chester.
The Education Question (a Reply to the Dean of St. Paul's). The Hon. E. Lyulph Stanley.
The Model Man of Classical Antiquity. The Rev. J. Rice Byrne, M.A.
The Struggle of the Sexes, Its Effect upon the Race. Dr. Strahan.
A Plea for the Domestic Servant. Miss Helena Heath.
Electricity and Health. H. Newman Lawrence.
The Parliament of Religions in Chicago. B.S.
A Good Woman. Morley Roberts.
Notes and Comments. W. H. Wilkins.
Correspondence and Open Column.
Illustration :—Portrait of the Bishop of Chester.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

London : SWAN, SONNENSCHEIN & CO., Paternoster-square.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 937.—NOVEMBER, 1893.—2s. 6d.

CONTENTS:—1st MARCH, 1871.—THIRTY YEARS OF SHIKAR, II., by Sir Edward Braddon.—WHAT WAS TARTUFFE? by Henry M. Trollope.—YARROW AND ITS INSCRIBED STONE, by Professor Veitch.—THE GLOAMING, by Wallace Bruce.—EARLSCOURT, chaps. XXXVIII.-XL.—REMBRANDT AND THE DUTCH SCHOOL.—LINE-FISHERS v. BEAM-TRAWLERS, by Jesse Quail.—DIARY OF AN IDLE DOCTOR, IV.; 1. Italy in Paris; 2. Zoology, by Axel Munthe.—IN "MAGA'S" LIBRARY.—THE FUR-SEAL AND THE AWARD, by Dr. F. H. H. Guillemard.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

Just Published, 2 vols. 8vo, price 32s.

The Diary of Colonel Peter Hawker,

Author of "Instructions to Young Sportsmen." With an Introduction by Sir RALPH PAYNE-GALLWEY, Bart. With 2 Portraits of the Author, and 8 Illustrations by the Author, A. E. CHALON, R.A., J. CHILDE, W. BEHNES, and C. VARLEY, all of which are taken from "Instructions to Young Sportsmen." 2 vols. 8vo, 32s.

 Though the entries are mainly devoted to sporting details, the Editor gives several interesting extracts from the Diary relating to visits paid by Colonel Hawker to the Continent, both before and after the fall of Napoleon. The one great passion of Colonel Hawker's life beyond shooting was music, and he was well acquainted with the most celebrated pianists and operatic artists of his day. He describes himself in the Diary as being both "shooting mad and music mad."

London: LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.

Hatchards, Booksellers, 187, Piccadilly, London.

ALL THE NEW AND STANDARD BOOKS.

Post Orders Promptly Executed. Usual Cash Discounts.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 8d.

London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

MEMOIRS.

By CHARLES GODFREY LELAND
(Hans Breitmann).
In 2 vols., demy 8vo, with 2 Portraits, 32s.

The Times.—"From first to last a very entertaining book, full of good stories, strange adventures, curious experiences, and not inconsiderable achievements, instinct with the strong personality of the writer, and not unpleasantly tinged with the egotism that belongs to a strong personality."

A FRIEND OF THE QUEEN.

(MARIE ANTOINETTE - COUNT FERSEN).
Translated from the French of PAUL GAULOT by Mrs. CASHEL HOEY.
2 vols., 8vo, with Portraits, 24s.

MRS. HUNGERFORD'S NEW NOVEL.

THE HOYDEN.

By the Author of "Molly Bawn." In 3 vols.

A Comedy of Masks.

By ERNEST DOWSON and ARTHUR MOORE. In 3 vols.
"For bright, incisive, and convincing delineations of character this remarkable book is entitled to rank on an equal footing with some of the cleverest works of fiction produced during the past decade."—Daily Telegraph.

THIRD EDITION.

The Countess Radna.

By W. E. NORRIS. In 3 vols.
"In style, skill in construction, and general 'go,' it is worth a dozen ordinary novels, and justifies the place its author has obtained among living masters of fiction."—Speaker.

FOURTH THOUSAND.

The Heavenly Twins.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "Ideala," &c. In 3 vols.
"Everybody ought to read it, for it is an inexhaustible source of refreshing and highly stimulating entertainment."—Daily Telegraph.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

SECRETS of the PRISON-HOUSE; or Gaol Studies and Sketches. By ARTHUR GRIFFITHS, Major late 63rd Regiment, one of H.M. Inspectors of Prisons, Author of "Chronicles of Newgate," "Memorials of Millbank," &c. Illustrations by George D. Rowlandson. In Two Volumes, demy 8vo. [Next week.

OLD COURT-LIFE in SPAIN. By Frances Minto ELLIOT, Author of "Old Court-Life in France," "Diary of an Idle Woman in Italy," &c. In Two Volumes, demy 8vo, 24s. [This day.

CHINA and HER NEIGHBOURS: France in Indo-China, Russia and China, India and Thibet, &c. By R. S. GUNDRY. With Maps, demy 8vo, 18s.

THE LIFE OF SIR RICHARD FRANCIS BURTON, K.C.M.G., &c. By his Wife, ISABEL BURTON. With numerous Portraits, Coloured and other Illustrations, and Maps. Two Volumes, demy 8vo, 12s.

ESSAYS: Speculative and Suggestive. By JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS. New Edition, in One Volume, demy 8vo, 9s.

LIFE ABOARD a BRITISH PRIVATEER in the TIME of QUEEN ANNE. Being the Journal of Captain WOODES ROGERS. With Notes and Illustrations by ROBERT C. LESLIE. New and Cheaper Edition, crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. [This day.

ILLUSTRATIONS of the PRINCIPAL NATURAL ORDERS of the VEGETABLE KINGDOM, Prepared for the Science and Art Department of the Council of Education. By D. OLIVER, LL.D., F.L.S., F.R.S. With 100 Coloured Plates by W. H. Fitch, F.L.S. A New Edition, royal 8vo, 14s. [Next week.

OUR OCEAN RAILWAYS; or, the Rise, Progress, and Development of Ocean Steam Navigation. By A. FRASER MACDONALD. With Maps and Illustrations, crown 8vo, 6s.

EIGHT STORIES IN ONE VOLUME.

MISS PARSON'S ADVENTURE. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. And other Stories by W. E. NORRIS, JULIAN HAWTHORNE, Mrs. L. B. WALFORD, J. M. BARRIE, F. C. PHILIPS, Mrs. ALEXANDER, WILLIAM WESTALL. With 16 Illustrations, in One Volume, crown 8vo, 6s. [This day.

BRITISH EAST AFRICA: a History of the Formation and Work of the Imperial British East Africa Company. Compiled, with the Authority of the Directors, from Official Documents and the Records of the Company. By P. L. M'DERMOTT, Assistant Secretary. With Maps and Illustrations, crown 8vo, 6s.

CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, London.

An Additional Plate is given monthly in THE MAGAZINE OF ART.

Commencing with the NOVEMBER PART, Now Ready, price 1s. 4d., which forms the FIRST of a NEW VOLUME, and contains the following Plates:

1. Photogravure: "VERONICA VERONESE."
By D. G. ROSSETTI.

2. Etching: "THE ALHAMBRA."
By H. MACBETH-RAEBURN.

3. Wood Engraving: "THE HARBOUR OF REFUGE."
By FRED WALKER.

UNIFORM WITH "ROYAL ACADEMY" PICTURES.
NOW READY, Complete in Three Parts, price 1s. each.

EUROPEAN PICTURES OF THE YEAR,

With Reproductions of One Hundred and Fifty Continental Pictures of 1893.

OR HANDSOMELY BOUND IN ONE VOLUME, PRICE 5s.

 Cassell & Company's List of NEW BOOKS for the SEASON 1893-4 will be sent post-free on application.

CASSELL & COMPANY, Ltd., LUDGATE HILL, LONDON.

Messrs. WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

This week will be Published.

A JOURNEY THROUGH THE YEMEN, and some General Remarks upon that Country. By WALTER B. HARRIS, F.R.G.S. Author of "The Land of an African Sultan: Travels in Morocco," &c. With 3 Maps and numerous Illustrations by FORESTIER and WALLACE from Sketches and Photographs by the Author. Demy 8vo.

This Day is Published.

WITH THE WOODLANDERS AND BY THE TIDE. By "A SON OF THE MARSHES," Author of "On Surrey Hills," "Within an Hour of London Town," "Annals of a Fishing Village," "Forest Tithes," &c. Edited by J. A. OWEN. Crown 8vo, 6s.

This Day is Published.

THE ZAMBESI BASIN AND NYASSALAND. By Daniel J. RANKIN, F.R.S.G.S., M.R.A.S. With Three Maps and 10 Full Page Illustrations. Post 8vo, 10s. 6d.
"Imparts much valuable authentic and novel information concerning regions which must sooner or later play an important part in the future development of Africa."—Times.

STRAY SPORT. By J. Moray Brown, Author of "Shikar Sketches," "Powder, Spur, and Spear," "The Days when we went Hog-Hunting," &c. 2 vols, post 8vo. With 50 Illustrations. 21s.
"Not only are the charms of tiger-hunting and pig-sticking in the far East detailed with all an enthusiast's zest—and, be it said, with a good deal of literary skill as well—but sport at home, on moor and fen, loch and river, is ably and pleasantly described."—St. James's Budget.

MILITARY TOPOGRAPHY. Illustrated by Practical Examples of a Practical Subject. By Major-General W. E. MONTAGUE, C.B., P.S.C., late Garrison Instructor; Intelligence Department, &c. With 41 diagrams. Crown 8vo, 5s.
"A more useful and practical book we have not seen for some time."—United Service Gazette.
"The extreme simplicity of the plan on which the examples, the notes, and the diagrams are set in order, together with the knowledge that the book is the work of a specialist, a practical instructor, and, moreover, a soldier, should make the study of military topography by means of its assistance a source of pleasure to the student."—Volunteer Record.

ROUND THE BLACK MAN'S GARDEN. By Zelie COLVILE, F.R.G.S. With 2 Maps and 52 Illustrations from Drawings by the Author and from Photographs. Demy 8vo, 16s.
"Fascinating seems to be the epithet most applicable to this delightful volume."—Academy.
"The great charm of Mrs. Colvile's book lies in its freshness and utter absence of affectation.....It is one of the cleverest as well as most informing books of its class that has been published for a very long time."—St. James's Budget.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

NEW NOVELS.

Margaret Drummond, Millionaire.

By SOPHIE F. F. VEITCH, Author of "James Hepburn, Free Church Minister," "Angus Graeme, Gamekeeper," &c. 3 vols. Crown 8vo. Price 31s. 6d.

"A very thorough and earnest piece of work."—Daily Chronicle.

The Curb of Honour.

By M. BETHAM-EDWARDS, author of "Kitty," "Dr. Jacob," &c. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"A well-told story."—Glasgow Herald.

Paul Romer. A Novel.

By C. Y. HARGREAVES. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"We could welcome more such stories, interesting and thoughtful, and written in the sure and refined English of a thorough gentleman."—Literary World.

NEW EDITIONS.

A Tangled Web.

By LADY LINDSAY. Price 6s.

One Virtue: a Fiction.

By CHARLES T. C. JAMES. Price 6s.

The Last Touches.

By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD. Price 3s. 6d.

Kenilworth.

Vol. 12 of the Dryburgh Edition of the Waverley Novels, containing 10 Page Illustrations by H. M. Paget. Crown 8vo. Price 5s.

"When complete, this will be the best popular edition in existence."—Christian World.

"This edition appears to improve as it goes on."—Athenæum.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, W.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE BATTLE OF DORKING."

Ready this day, at all the Libraries, in Three Vols., post 8vo.

The Lesters;

OR, A CAPITALIST'S LABOUR.

By General Sir GEORGE CHESNEY, K.C.B., M.P.

Author of "The Battle of Dorking," "The Dilemma," "The Private Secretary," &c.

Abridged Edition of the late Mr. J. A. Symonds' "Renaissance in Italy."

On October 31st, with a Steel Engraving of a recent Portrait of Mr. Symonds, demy 8vo, 12s 6d.

A SHORT HISTORY of the RENAISSANCE in ITALY.

Taken from the work of JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS. By Lieutenant-Colonel ALFRED PEARSON.

A Side-light on Voltaire.

Ready this day, crown 8vo, 8s. 6d.

VOLTAIRE'S VISIT to ENGLAND, 1726-1729.

By ARCHIBALD BALLANTYNE.

Companion Volume to Jefferies' "Rural England" Series.

Ready this day, crown 8vo, 5s.

ALL the YEAR with NATURE.

By P. ANDERSON GRAHAM.

THE POCKET EDITION OF W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.

In a new Style of Binding.

The Volumes of this Edition are now supplied, elegantly bound in cloth, with gilt top, as follows:—

THE NOVEL. Thirteen Volumes in gold-lettered cloth case, 21s.

THE MISCELLANIES. Fourteen Volumes in gold-lettered cloth case, 21s.

Ready this day (Sixpence), New Series, No. 125.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE FOR NOVEMBER, containing "WITH EDGED TOOLS," Chaps. 17 to 20—"THE SUBALTERN IN INDIA A HUNDRED YEARS AGO"—"THE WHEEL OF THE LOUGH RUN"—"IN SUMMER HEAT"—"NOVEMBER"—"CHARACTER NOTE: THE CARETAKER"—"AN EGYPTIAN FRAGMENT"—"JANUARY DAYS IN CEYLON"—"THE SURGEON'S GUEST," Chaps. 3 and 4.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO.'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

TO BE PUBLISHED OCTOBER 25th.

LETTERS OF JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL

Edited by CHARLES ELIOT NORTON.

Two Volumes, large 8vo, cloth, 32s.

CROWNED BY THE ACADEMY FRANCAISE.

THE LIFE OF MARIE ANTOINETTE.

By MAXIME DE LA ROCHETERIE. With 27 Portraits, 2 vols., cloth extra, 21s. [October 25th.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

ELIZABETHAN SONGS: "In Honour of Love and Beautie."

Collected and Illustrated by EDMUND H. GARRETT. With an Introduction by ANDREW LANG. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, 10s. 6d. Limited Edition de Luxe, on Imperial Japan paper, £5 5s. [Ready.

NEW VOLUME of STORIES by the AUTHOR of "DODO."

SIX COMMON THINGS.

By E. F. BENSON. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. [October 25th.

NOW READY. HANDSOMELY ILLUSTRATED.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

NOVEMBER.

ABRIDGED CONTENTS.

LONDON IN THE SEASON. THE ROW. CHANGING GUARD AT ST. JAMES'S PALACE. LOVE AND MUSIC. THE CONCLUSION OF WM. BLACK'S NEW NOVEL.

NOW READY. SUPERBLY ILLUSTRATED.

HARPER'S NEW VOLUME

Contains WILLIAM BLACK'S NEW NOVEL.

"THE HANDSOME HUMES" (Complete).

Illustrated by WM. SMALL. 8vo, cloth extra, 8s. 6d. Cases supplied separately, 2s.

LONDON: OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO., 45, ALBEMARLE-STREET.

LONDON LIBRARY

ST. JAMES'S SQUARE, S.W.

PRESIDENT ..... LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P. | The Very Rev. the DEAN of LLANDAFF.
Sir E. H. BUNBURY, Bart. | Sir HENRY BARKLY, K.C.B.

TRUSTEES.

Right Hon. Sir M. GRANT DUFF. | Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart.
Right Hon. Earl of ROSEBERY.

The Library contains 130,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various languages.

Subscription £3 a year. Life Membership according to Age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-room open from Ten to Half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo, price 21s.; to Members, 10s.

C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian

PALL MALL MAGAZINE,

Edited by LORD FREDERIC HAMILTON, M.P., and SIR DOUGLAS STRAIGHT.

NOVEMBER NUMBER NOW READY. PRICE ONE SHILLING.

— CONTAINS —

Coloured Frontispiece—"In the Evening of the Year."

FULL-PAGE ENGRAVING from a painting by JAS. MACWHIRTER, R.A.

STORIES

By Walter Besant, E. W. Horning, Grant Allen, Madame Sarah Grand, Miss Barlow.

POEMS

By the Marquis of Lorne, K.T., W. W. Story, Mark Ambient.

ARTICLES

By "Ouida," Lloyd Bryce, H. A. Bryden, A. W. Savage Landor, Eden Phillpotts, "X.L.," Sidney Whitman, I. Zangwill.

VEXED QUESTIONS

"Is the Theatre Less Popular?" By W. Davenport Adams and W. L. Courtney.

"PALL MALL MAGAZINE" DRAWING COMPETITION (No. V.).

COPIOUSLY AND BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED THROUGHOUT BY THE FOLLOWING ARTISTS:—Sidney Cowell, Raymond Potter, A. E. Fisher, W. H. Margetson, M. Staniforth, R. Savage, Cecil Aldin, G. E. Lodge, "Rab," J. Barnard Davis, L. Baumer.

Copies on sale at all Booksellers, Newsagents, and Railway Bookstalls in Great Britain and Ireland. Editorial Offices: 18, Charing Cross-road, London, W.C.; Publishing Offices—London: George Routledge & Sons, Limited, Broadway, Ludgate Hill, E.C.; Manchester: George Routledge & Sons, Limited, 16, Jackson's-row; New York: The International News Company; Toronto: The Toronto News Company; Montreal: The Montreal News Company.

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.

BAHADUR

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

"JAP" CARPETS

We have just received a shipment of Carpets and Rugs of Japanese Manufacture from our Agents in Hiogo, and as we are able to sell them at a very low price, we offer them to our Customers in preference to submitting them to the Wholesale Trade. They are novel and artistic in design and colouring, and of thick pile.

"JAP" CARPETS and RUGS.

10 feet long	by 9 feet wide	... ...	50/- each.
6 " "	3 "	... ...	8/6 "
4 " "	2 "	... ...	5/- "
3 " "	1 ft. 6 in. wide	... ...	2/6 "

OTHER FOREIGN RUGS.

A FEW MIRZAPORE CARPETS,	9 ft. by 6 ft.	27/6 each.
KURD RUGS,	5 ft. by 3 ft.	5/9 "
DECCAN RUGS	... ...	8/9 "

KURDESTAN CARPETS.

A shipment of these Durable Carpets is now offered at 21/- each, or Carriage Paid to any Railway Station in England, 22 6 each. Size about 3 yds. long, by 4 ft. 6 in. wide.

Catalogues of all the best Floor Coverings free.

TRELOAR & SONS

LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

BERKELEY SQUARE W.—By order of his Grace the Duke of Sutherland. The long Unexpired Lease (nearly 100 years) of a newly built Mansion in this most exclusive position.

MESSRS. TROLLOPE are instructed to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, E.C., on THURSDAY, NOV. 16th, at TWO o'clock precisely (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by private contract), the very special modern MANSION, No. 23, Berkeley-square, containing on the upper floors 11 bed and dressing rooms (one fitted bath) and a bath room; six handsome reception rooms on the ground and first floors, principal and secondary staircases, and exceptionally light and complete domestic offices in the basement. The premises are beautifully decorated, fitted electric light, and all modern appliances for convenience and comfort, while great attention has been paid to the drainage and sanitary arrangements. Held from Lord Fitzhardinge on lease for an unexpired term of 97 years at a low ground-rent. Possession will be given on completion of the purchase.

Particulars of Messrs. R. S. TAYLOR, SON, & HUMBERT, Solicitors, No. 4, Field-court, Gray's-inn, W.C.; and, with orders to view, of Messrs. GEORGE TROLLOPE & SONS, 7, Hobart-place, Eaton-square; West Halkin-street, Belgrave-square, and 15, Parliament-street, Westminster, S.W.

ALDRIDGE'S.

IMPORTANT UNRESERVED SALE. Instructed by Mr. W. BALDING, of Willesden Paddocks who is retiring from business.

MESSRS. W. & S. FREEMAN will SELL by AUCTION, without reserve, at ALDRIDGE'S, on WEDNESDAY next, 1st November, the entire STOCK of 40 High-class

HUNTERS, HACKS, HARNESS HORSES, COBS, & THOROUGH-BRED STALLIONS.

Also Double and Single Brakes, Phaetons, Brougham, Dog Carts, Harness, Clothing, Saddlery, and Sundries. The horses can be seen in harness and saddle, and ridden over fences, a week prior to sale. The valuable Lease of Willesden Paddocks, Hendon, comprising residence, dairy, stabling for 100 horses, 70 acres of meadow land, is for Sale by Private Treaty. W. & S. FREEMAN.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES. — Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c.—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

BOURNEMOUTH.

The favourite Health Resort.

FAST EXPRESS TRAINS, performing the journey from and to London in two-and-a-half hours. PULLMAN CARS run on the 9.10, 12.30, 2.15, and 4.55 p.m. trains. Special Cheap Return Tickets, 28s. 6d. First, 21s. 6d. Second, and 12s. Third Class, are issued by all Trains on Fridays and Saturdays from Waterloo, Kensington, Chelsea, Vauxhall, Clapham Junction, Wimbledon, and Surbiton Stations to Bournemouth. The 1st and 2nd Class Tickets are available to return up to and including the Monday week following the day of issue, and the 3rd Class by any train up to the following Tuesday (day of issue included).

WEYMOUTH.

(The English Naples).

SPECIAL CHEAP RETURN TICKETS, 33s. First, 24s. Second, 16s. Third Class, will be issued from Waterloo, Vauxhall, Clapham Junction, Kensington, &c., on Fridays and Saturdays, available to return on the Sunday, Monday, or Tuesday following, by any ordinary train. First-class lavatory accommodation in principal trains.

Full information from G. T. White, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station, S.E.

CHARLES SCOTTER, General Manager.

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES. Londonderry Wallsend, 34s.; Pittington Wallsend, 33s.; Primrose, 32s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 31s. per ton. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS, by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools, is NOW OPEN at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket (next the Theatre.) Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

PICTURES WAREHOUSED.—THOMAS McLEAN has taken a Large, Light, Dry, FIREPROOF WAREHOUSE, for the purpose of taking charge of Pictures, Water-colour Drawings, and other Works of Art, on reasonable terms.—T. McLEAN, 7, Haymarket, S.W. (next the Theatre).

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S WINTER EXHIBITION includes works by Sir J. Reynolds, T. Gainsborough, G. Romney, Constable, Crome, Stark, Vincent, Cotman, Morland, Wilson, Shayer, Muller, Bristow, &c.—Shepherd's Gallery, 27, King-street, St. James's.

NIAGARA FALLS in WINTER.

Finest and Most Realistic Sight in London.

NIAGARA HALLS, St. James's Park Station.

DAILY, 10 to 10 p.m. Admission 1s. Children 6d.

Tickets, including admission, all Dist. and Met. Ry. Stations.

CRYSTAL PALACE SATURDAY CONCERTS.—On Saturday Next, October 28, Miss Meisslinger will Sing and Mdlle. Janotha will Play. The Grand Orchestra. Conductor, Mr. August Manns. The Programme will include First Performance of New Concert Overture, by Dr. Henry Hiles; Notturno for Strings (Dvorák); Symphony No. 2 in D (Brahms); Concerto for Pianoforte and Orchestra, No. 4, in G (Beethoven); Overture "Der Frieschütz (Weber).—Numbered Seats, 2s. and 4s.; un-numbered Seats, 1s. Admission to Palace on all Saturdays, One Shilling.

ELOCUTION, EXTEMPORE SPEAKING, ORATORY.—Professor HAYSACK, whose Pupils are among the first clergymen, doctors, barristers, solicitors, public personages, and nobility, GIVES INSTRUCTION. Voice strengthened, defects corrected.—70, Talbot-road, Bayswater.

AMUSEMENTS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE ROYAL. Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr AUGUSTUS HARRIS. Every Evening, at 7.30, A LIFE OF PLEASURE, by Sir Augustus Harris and Henry Pettitt. For full particulars see Daily Papers. Box-office open, from 10 a.m., all day.

HAYMARKET THEATRE

Mr Tree, Sole Lessee and Manager.

EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, Henry Arthur Jones' New Play,

THE TEMPTER.

Mr Tree, Messrs. Fred Terry, F. Everill, Fuller Mellish, G. W. Anson, Chas. Allan, Herbert Clark, Revelle, Baldie, Wyatt, Paton, Cowie, &c.; Miss Julia Neilson, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Mrs. E. H. Brooke, and Mrs. Tree.

MATINÉE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.15.

Seats may now be booked two months in advance. Box-office (Mr. Leverton) open daily 10 till 5. HAYMARKET THEATRE.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8, an entirely New Burlesque, in Three Acts, entitled DON JUAN, by James T. Tanner. Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Music by Meyer Lutz. With full Gaiety Company, including Miss Millie Hilton, Miss Cissie Loftus, Miss Louise Montague, Miss Maria Davis, Miss Topsy Linden, Miss Kate Seymour, Miss Sylvia Grey; Mr. Robert Pateman, Mr. Edmund Payne, Mr. Geo. Mudie, Mr. Willie Warde, and Mr. Arthur Roberts.—Box-office open 10 to 6 daily.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, R. Harding, J. Carter, H. Russell, and Arthur Williams; Mesdames Mary Rorke, Alma Stanley, and Agnes Thomas.—Box-office 10 to 6. Doors open at 7.30.

COURT THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—Every Evening, at 9, a Three Act Farce, entitled THE OTHER FELLOW, by Fred Horner. Preceded at 8.15 by HIS LAST CHANCE. Doors open at 7.45. Box-office now open. Matinée Saturday Next, at 3 o'clock. Doors open 2.30.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Every Evening, at 8.45, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY of COMEDIANS (including Miss Ada Rehan, James Lewis, Mrs. Gilbert, Arthur Bourchier, George Clarke, Isabel Irving, &c.) in F. C. Burnand's New Farcical Comedy, THE ORIENT EXPRESS. Preceded at 8.15 by THE RING OF POLYCRATES. Matinées Saturday, October 28, and November 4, at 2. Box-office daily, 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE, Coventry-street, W. EVERY EVENING, at 8.30, an entirely New and Original Musical Comedy, words by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank, Music by Sydney Jones, entitled A GAIETY GIRL. Messrs. C. Hayden Coffin, Eric Lewis, W. L. Bradfield, F. Kaye, L. Bantock, L. D'Orsay, G. Porteous, F. Rimma, and Harry Monkhouse; Misses Decima Moore, Juliette Nesville, Kate Cutler, M. Studholme, L. Pounds, Mrs. E. Phelps, Maud Hobson, Blanche Massey, Ethel Selwick, V. Robinson, and Lottie Venne. Preceded at 7.45 by SIXES. Doors open 7.30. Box-office open 10 to 6. Prices as usual. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

LYRIC THEATRE.—Mr. HORACE SEDGER, Sole Lessee and Manager.—LITTLE CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, by Geo. R. Sims and Cecil Raleigh, Music by Ivan Caryll. EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, with the following cast: Mr. E. J. Lonnen, Messrs Harry Parker, Furneaux Cook, Henry Wright, George Tate, Rowland Carse; Mesdames Maud Holland, Eva Moore, Adelaide Newton, Alice Gilbert, Maud Leicester, Eva Greville, and Miss May Yohé. Increased Orchestra and Chorus, conducted by the Composer. Doors open 7.45. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.30.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.15, MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine, Templar Saxe, and Charles Danby; Misses Lilian Redfern and Ruby Temple. Preceded, at 7.45 by Rex Harley, the inimitable Mimic of Popular Actors. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.30.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.30.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.45, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled FIDELIA. At 10.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 25,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Two GRAND BALLETS.—At 8, KATRINA, and at 10, THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. Grand Varieties. The new entrance from Leicester-street is now open. Doors open at 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Albert Chevalier, Fannie Leslie, Brothers Griffiths, Alice Leamar, Harry Randall, Nellie Navette, Herbert Campbell, Billie Barlow; Brown, Newland, and Leclerq; Leo Stormont, Harry Pleon, Minnie Cunningham, Lillian Alexander, Jennie Valmore, Ada Blanche, J. W. Rowley, Sam Redfern, Harry Freeman, Eugene Stratton, Charles Ross, Tom Bass, G. Robey, Fred Mason, Arthur Rigby, Sells and Young.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s. —Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

PALACE THEATRE.—SCARAMOUCHE, Pantomime Ballet, at 10.40,—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station, in connection with all railways. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations.—New Portrait Models of the late MARSHAL MAC MAHON, His Majesty the EMPEROR of GERMANY, and His Majesty the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA. Magnificent Group containing Portraits of T.R.H. the DUKE and DUCHESS of YORK. The ROYAL TIGER HUNT. Political Celebrities; Cabinet Ministers. Music all day. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open 9 till 10.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards, Tennis Lawn.

BOURNEMOUTH. — NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table-d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HÔTEL METROPOLE.—On the East Cliff, facing the sea, three minutes' from East Station. The largest, and most magnificent Hotel in Bournemouth. Now open to receive visitors. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.
GEORGE ALEXANDER, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. BECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 12s. to 15s. per day.
According to position of rooms selected.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor.
Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 789.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

PORT OROTAVA, Teneriffe.—HOTEL MARTIANEZ (late GRAND).—First-class, standing in a beautiful garden. Shady verandahs, large public and private rooms. Billiards, tennis. Good cooking, good wines, excellent spring water.
Manager, J. R. EGGER.

PORTRUSH (Giant's Causeway), co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL. Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner, from 6 to 8 p.m. French cuisine. Charges very moderate. The HOTEL is UNDER RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.

SALISBURY.—The WHITE HART FAMILY HOTEL, nearly opposite the Cathedral. The largest and principal Hotel in the City. Table d'hôte (two hours each meal) at separate tables daily. Carriages for Stonehenge and other places of interest in the neighbourhood at fixed inclusive charges. Tariff on application to H. T. BOWES, Manager.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL.—First and leading hotel in St. Leonards. Unequalled position, detached, faces sea, due south. Modern improvements, passenger lift, electric light in every room, handsomely furnished. Home comforts. Terms moderate.—Address, MANAGER.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.
TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

LANGHAM HOTEL,
PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.
Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6.30 until 8.15.
Under the Management of WALTER GOSDEN.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.
(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.
THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.
SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.
NO SUPPERS.
TELEPHONE No. 3,507.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn and Lincoln's Inn Fields. A high class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, happily situated, having all modern conveniences and a moderate tariff. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hote, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d., at separate tables. FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Write for tariff.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).
Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL, 180 Apartments. Patronised by H. R. H. the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, K.T. Extensive Structural Alterations and Decorative Repairs have been carried out and 30 NEW BEDROOMS ADDED SINCE OCTOBER, 1891. The entire system of drainage has been re-modelled and re-constructed, and the most improved sanitary appliances fitted to all Bath-rooms, &c. The Hotel stands in its own private gardens of 2½ acres, faces the sea, and is only five minutes' from the Harbour in the lower part of the town and Shorncliffe New West End Station, and is most convenient for Continental travellers.—For tariff charges, &c., please address the Proprietor.
N.B.—During the winter months visitors are received en pension at the rate of 12s. per day.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.
LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED HOTEL IN CHANNEL ISLES, AND THE FINEST SITUATION IN JERSEY.
Directly facing the Channel. Best Sands and Safest Sea Bathing opposite the Hotel. Magnificent Public Rooms. Swimming Bath. Tennis Courts, &c.
TABLE D'HÔTE DINNER at 7 p.m. (separate tables) "best in Jersey."
Terms Moderate (inclusive or à la carte).
Telegrams—"Grand, Jersey." SYDNEY ROGERS Manager & Secretary.

—THE— RUNNACLEAVE PRIVATE HOTEL,
ILFRACOMBE,
(As a Winter Resort.)
120 BEAUTIFULLY FURNISHED ROOMS.
SOUTH ASPECT.
The average mean Winter Temperature of the Town is the highest in the Kingdom, 44·6° (Torquay, 42·8°, Bournemouth, 41·5°).—See Proceedings "Meteorological Society," October, 1892, and British Medical Journal, April, 1893.
The Halls and Corridors of the above Hotel are carefully warmed by hot-water apparatus.
BILLIARDS, TENNIS, ROLLER SKATING, AND YACHTING. FREE OF CHARGE.
Dramatic Performances, Concerts, and other Entertainments constantly given in Recreation Hall.
Inclusive Tariff from Two to Three Guineas Weekly.

ALBANY HOTEL (ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.
Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

EASTBOURNE. CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the Grand Parade. Pleasant sea and land views. Patronised by many of the Royal families of Europe. Appreciated for its first-class appointments and homely comforts. Elegant public rooms, convenient family suites, &c. Passenger lift. Table d'hôte. Moderate charges.
G. LOWMAN, Manager.

HOTELS.

DATLANDS PARK HOTEL, Walton-on-Thames, 17 miles from London (Waterloo Station). Most comfortable and homely winter residence. Warmed throughout. South aspect. Boarding terms, 10s. 6d. to 12s. per day. Capital dancing. Postal address, Weybridge.

WHERE TO SPEND THE WINTER.

HEALTH and PLEASURE RESORT. GRAND HOTEL BELVEDERE Davos Platz Switzerland 5,200 feet above sea level. Magnificent Winter Promenade just completed by well known firm, Messrs. Kurt, Chelsea, London, and his English workmen. Indoor and outdoor Skating. Assembly Hall. Permanently appointed Stage Band. Skating, Tobogganing, Curling, Snow Shoeing, Sleighing &c. Only thirty hours from London. Moderate Prices. For particulars apply H. MOSER, Manager.

MADEIRA. REID'S HOTELS, Santa Clara, Miles's Carmo Hotels New Hotel. Exclusive, in finest situations. Large gardens. Tennis courts. Billiards. Sea bathing. Modern sanitation. All steamers met. Pamphlet free. PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, London, E.C.

ILFRACOMBE.—ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.—Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Seven lawn tennis courts. Large swimming bath. New lounge hall. 200 rooms. Tariff of MANAGER.

— THE —

CAP MARTIN HOTEL,

Between Mentone and Monte Carlo,

RE-OPENS 11th NOVEMBER

(UNDER THE SAME MANAGEMENT).

Perfect Sanitation, Designed and Executed by GEORGE JENNINGS, London.

The Hotel has private Dairy and Laundry. Omnibus meets trains at Mentone.—Address:

MANAGER, CAP MARTIN HOTEL, MENTONE.

BOURNEMOUTH.—MANOR ROAD.—ONE or TWO SUITES of ROOMS TO BE LET privately in a well-appointed house, standing in its own grounds among the pines, with good sea view. Electric light. Stabling. Sitting Rooms from Three Guineas, and Bedrooms from a Guinea-and-a-half per week, inclusive terms.—Address, DUNCAIRN, Manor-road, Bournemouth.

HOTEL CONTINENTAL,

CAIRO.

THIS FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL, newly built, and handsomely furnished, is situated in the finest and healthiest part of the Ismailieh quarter, close to the English and Catholic Churches. Perfect English Sanitary Arrangements. Two large Verandahs; Drawing and Ladies' Saloons; Reading, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms; and 24 Private Suites with separate entrance to each. Terms moderate. Excellent cuisine. Hydraulic Lifts.

Honoured by a prolonged stay of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge and H.I.H. Princess Victoria of Prussia.

Electric Light Throughout.

PROPRIETORS:

GEORGE NUNGOVICH, also Proprietor of the Hotel d'Angleterre.
LUIGI STEINSCHNEIDER, late Manager of Shepheard's Hotel.

HOTEL d'ANGLETERRE.

This first-class hotel has just been rebuilt.

GEORGE NUNGOVICH, Proprietor.
A. AULICH, Manager.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

CANCER WARDS of the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL, Mortimer-street, W. [illegible] URGENT APPEAL for FUNDS in Aid of these Wards. There are 34 [illegible] suffering from this terrible malady. They are [illegible] of [illegible] recommendation. Everything that [illegible] and [illegible] is provided, and sufferers are [illegible] by death. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts & Co.

E. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary [illegible]

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N. The long-continued prevalence of scarlet fever [illegible] on the resources of this Hospital. The [illegible] are [illegible] for HELP. Annual subscriptions of a Guinea and upwards [illegible] as well as donors of ten Guineas or more [illegible] entitled to free treatment for their [illegible] outside the metropolitan area can only be received into the Hospital from the families of Governors.

Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital.

MAJOR W. CHESHIRE.

Bankers—Prescott, Dimsdale, & Co., 50, Cornhill.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM for IDIOTS.

Nearly 600 afflicted cases are receiving special care and education.

FUNDS urgently REQUIRED.

Special provision is made for the reception of Private Cases on payment.

H. GERARD HOARE, Esq., J.P., Treasurer.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.

Cheques or Postal Orders may be crossed Messrs. Hoare, Bankers, 37, Fleet-street, E.C.

Offices, 36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

BENGER'S FOOD.

For Infants, Children, and Invalids.

"Humanly speaking, 'Benger's Food' entirely saved baby's life. He could digest nothing until we began the 'Benger.' He is now rosy and fattening rapidly."—Extract from Private Letter.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED

INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION.

TINS, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s., OF ALL CHEMISTS, &c.

DREW & SONS,

PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Packed free of charge on receipt of cheque.

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free. "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000. Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Esq. 1886.

ARTISTIC HOMES.

"ABOUT OUR HOMES."

MAPLE & CO. "ABOUT OUR HOMES." (Hazell, 1s.). Maple & Co. will be happy to SEND a COPY of this little BOOK, which contains much interesting information upon DECORATION and other matters in connection with modern furnishing, free of charge, upon application.

BEDROOM SUITES

1000 BEDROOM SUITES

1000 BEDROOM SUITES at from 70s. to £300, forming a selection without parallel in the world, in every conceivable variety of style and design, and every description of woods at prices ranging from £3 10s. to £300, thus readily suiting every class of residence. Every one about to furnish should visit the Exhibition of Bedroom furniture.

MAPLE & CO LTD

TOTTENHAM COURT RD. LONDON

The Largest and most Convenient

FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN THE WORLD

EASY CHAIRS

FIVE HUNDRED TO SELECT FROM

MAPLE & CO. have always on show an immense assortment of their world-famous, luxuriously comfortable Easy Chairs, Lounges, and Settees, in various shapes and coverings, all ready for immediate delivery, and at most moderate prices. A Comfortable Easy Chair is always an acceptable present.

TURKEY CARPETS

FINE QUALITIES

MAPLE & CO wish to direct special attention to some very choice Turkey Carpets now on show, remarkable both for their exceptionally fine quality and purity of colouring—many being exact reproductions of the most beautiful specimens of XVII. century art.

NEZOOM CARPETS

NEZOOM CARPETS

MAPLE & CO.'s NEZOOM CARPETS (Registered) are now on show, in all the new patterns and colourings. These carpets, being of the finest quality, and made entirely without seam or join, will wear admirably, and all waste in matching is avoided. List of Sizes post-free

LAHARNA FRIEZE.

Trade Mark

I am the maker of this special Frieze for Overcoats, Ulsters, Ladies' Jackets, and Ladies' Ulster-coats, Capes, &c. All pure wool, fast colours; for lightness and warmth it has no equal. Prices are extremely moderate. Any length cut, or garments made to order. I hold the highest, largest, and most satisfactory testimonials for fit, style, and finish of any house in the trade. I positively undertake to take back any garment if not in every way satisfactory, so thoroughly convinced I am of results.

OLDERFLEET RUG.

I am also the maker of this now celebrated rug, which is also most suitable for ladies' driving or shopping capes. Its warmth and lightness, colour and quality, are unequalled. I claim for it the cheapest, purest, and best rug in the kingdom.

I will send, carriage paid, one rug (58 by 80) on approval for One Guinea. If not approved of, money in full refunded.

GARMENTS ARE MADE TO MEASURE ONLY.

Samples and Measuring Forms sent Free on application to

DAVID TOWELL,

Royal Avenue, BELFAST,

OR LARNE.

BANKERS: BELFAST BANKING COMPANY.

P.S.—Send for Sample and compare side by side with any other Makers' Goods "Quality and Price," and no house will turn out goods better.

CAMEO CIGARETTES

A PHOTOGRAPH IN EVERY PACKET.

A SEPARATE MOUTHPIECE FOR EACH CIGARETTE.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

"The Cup of the Prince, the Poor, and the Peasant."
"The most popular and healthful Beverage of the Century."

By Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

"MERSANO"

A SPARKLING NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE.

Recommended by all the leading medical faculty as the only perfect and health preserving table drink. The most welcome friend in every sick room, and indispensable on every table.

Certificate of Honour and Gold Medal have been awarded for the special excellence of "Mersano."

Wholesale from Local Agents in all parts of the Kingdom. Any difficulty with local supply, communicate with the Patentees:—

Forbes, Maxwell, & Co., Ltd., Aberdeen.

SAMPLE BOTTLE POST FREE NINE STAMPS.

6d. per Bottle.

To be had Everywhere.

TO ENSURE THE GREATEST COMFORT
WEAR THE NEW PATENT

"EIDEX"

COMBINATION

FOR LADIES & CHILDREN.

By Royal Letters Patent.

No. 14016.

The demand for Combination Garments generally has considerably increased during the last few years, but the one weak point in this otherwise most sensible garment was the difficulty in securing an efficient wrap at the back.

This has now been overcome by means of an extra covering inside at the back only, which is an improvement of the utmost practical utility. Ladies will immediately apprehend and appreciate the greatly enhanced comfort to be obtained by wearing the "EIDEX" COMBINATION.

Prices: From 6/11 Pure Wool from 9/11 Ribbed do. from 5/6

NOTE.—The Dog's Head Trade Mark is Attached to Every Garment.

To be had of all Ladies' Outfitters, and Wholesale only of

STAPLEY & SMITH, London Wall, London, E.C.

PINE * WOOL * PRODUCTS
TRADE MARK
L. & L. Lainé

LAIRITZ'S

CELEBRATED

Established 1853. Awarded 18 Medals and Diplomas. For the Relief and Cure of GOUT, RHEUMATISM, COLDS, &c.

Wadding in packets, Knee-Caps, Inside Soles, Oil, EXTRACT FOR BATH, Lozenges. Of all the LEADING CHEMISTS everywhere. Flannels, Underclothing, Knitting Yarn. Sold by all leading Drapers and Hosiers.

Wholesale Depot for Fabrics only: WELCH, MARGETSON & Co., 16, Cheapside, London.

Caution.—Observe the Tree Trade Mark with Signature on each piece.

PINE WOOL.

The Best is the Cheapest!

'Fixed' moderate prices for first quality.

TRADE MARK ON EACH GARMENT

DR. JAEGER'S SANITARY WOOLLEN SYSTEM CO'Y LTD
SOLE CONCESSIONAIRES
PURE WOOL WARRANTED

Dr. Jaeger's "Health Culture," and Jaeger Price List, sent free on application.

WEST-END JAEGER DEPOTS—

3 & 4, Princes-street, Cavendish-square (near Regent Circus);
126, Regent-street (near the Quadrant);
30, Sloane-street (adjoining McPherson's Gymnasium);
456, Strand (near Trafalgar-square).

CITY JAEGER DEPOTS—

85 & 86, Cheapside (near King-street);
158, Fenchurch-street (near Lime-street);
42 & 43, Fore-street (near Moorgate-street Station).

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN, and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S

WORLD-FAMED

BLOOD MIXTURE

"CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE is entirely free from any poison or metallic impregnation, does not contain any injurious ingredient, and is a good, safe, and useful medicine."

ALFRED SWAINE TAYLOR M.D., F.R.S., Lecturer on Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology.

Warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities from WHATEVER cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the blood and bones. Thousands of testimonials. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent for 33 or 132 Stamps, by the Proprietors—THE LINCOLN AND MIDLAND COUNTIES DRUG CO., LINCOLN.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

OETZMANN & Co.

67, 69, 71, 73, 75, 77, & 79,

HAMPSTEAD ROAD, W.

(NEAR TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD AND GOWER STREET STATION.)

GREAT CLEARANCE SALE

NOW PROCEEDING.

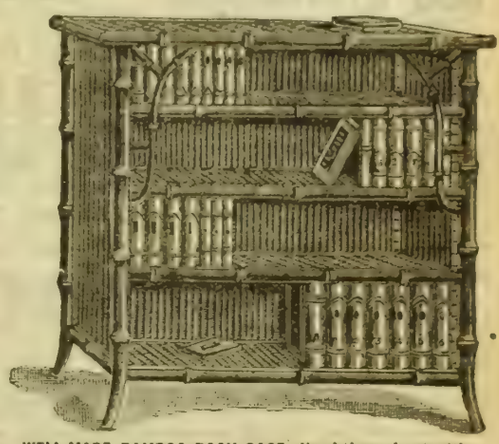
SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED SALE CATALOGUE POST FREE.

AXMINSTER PILE CARPETS, British Manufacture, 3s. 6d. per yard; original price, 5s. 11d. Best Quality WILTON PILE CARPETS, one piece of a pattern, 3s. 11d. per yard; original price, 6s. 6d. Best Quality BRUSSELS CARPETS 2s. 11d. and 3s. 3d. per yard.; original price, 3s. 11d. and 4s. 3d.

ALL CARPETS MADE UP FREE OF CHARGE.

RICHLY CARVED ANTIQUE OAK DINNER WAGON, with 3 shelves, and fitted with two drawers, 4ft. wide by 4ft. high, £3. 7. 6.

ELEGANT BRASS PALM STAND, with new Art Ware Pot, 2ft. 6in. high, 17s. 6d.



WELL-MADE BAMBOO BOOK CASE, lined throughout with Chinese Matting, 2ft. 6in. wide by 3ft. 9in. high, 18/9.
3ft. 0in. " " 21/-
3ft. 6in. " " 23/6.

The Burglar Bewildered.

HOW?

THROUGH THE

HOMACOUSTIC

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC?

The HOMACOUSTIC is a contrivance connected with Speaking Tubes, which entirely supersedes, for indoor purposes, not only the Telephone, but all other existing arrangements for indoor inter-communication.

HOW WAS THE BURGLAR BEWILDERED?

The owner of the house fortunately had a Homacoustic commutator fixed in his bedroom. This commutator placed him in direct communication, not only with his butler's rooms, but with seven other rooms in the house.

Directly he heard the Burglars he explained the state of affairs through the Homacoustic to his butler, and to the occupants of the other rooms; arranged what should be done, and they were thus all enabled to pounce on the Burglars together, and catch them red-handed, without their being even aware that their presence was so much as suspected. There was no ringing of electric bells, no creeping about the house to warn the inmates, NO PERSONAL DANGER.

The Homacoustic is far more dreaded by Burglars than any existing arrangement of "Protection from Burglary," for whereas when an electric bell rings, though it may probably arouse the inmates, it also acts as a warning to the Burglars themselves to be off.

NO HOUSE IS REALLY SAFE

— WITHOUT THE —

HOMACOUSTIC

Independent of its protective advantages, the Homacoustic is invaluable in all private houses for everyday use, and in all properly arranged business premises it is an absolute necessity.

The Homacoustic is automatic, not mechanical. Once fixed, always in working order. Its first cost is its last cost.

With the Homacoustic there is no blowing into pipes. The automatic whistle is always in position. One speaks and listens at the same time. The tube is closed when not in actual use. Ordinary speaking tubes can be utilised.

The HOMACOUSTIC SAVES TIME, TEMPER, & TROUBLE.

HOMACOUSTIC SPEAKING TUBE COMPANY,
22, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

SIX GOLD MEDALS

Goddard's Plate Powder

Non-Mercurial.

THE BEST and SAFEST article for CLEANING SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE. Sold in Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Oilmen, Chemists, &c., everywhere

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.
PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE

For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.

INVALID COMFORTS

Walking Machine for the lame

Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2. Exercising Chairs £5. 5s. Reclining Boards £1.1s. Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d. Easy Chairs £2. 10s. Commode Chairs £2. 10s. Carrying Chairs, £1. Bed Tables 7s. 6d. Crutches 10s. 6d. Folding Couch Chairs 10s. Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS

From £1. 5s.

SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS

£2. 2s.

Invalid Carriages

Perambulators

Rubber Tyres
From £1. 10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telgrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

TOOLS! MECHANICAL TOOLS!

GENTLEMEN!

IT IS AN

INDISPUTABLE

FACT

THAT

MELHUISH'S LARGE ✷ CONTAINS OVER CATALOGUE

800 ILLUSTRATIONS of LABOUR-SAVING TOOLS and MACHINES for WOOD-WORKERS, and is without exception the most complete and cheapest Book of Prices ever produced.

This HANDSOME VOLUME sent Parcels Post. 1/4.

AWARDS FOR EXCELLENCY. BRONZE MEDAL 1884. GOLD MEDAL 1890.

MELHUISH SONS & Co.,

FETTER LANE, LONDON, E.C.

Bricklayers', Plasterers', and Painters' Tools.

ATKINSON'S WHITE ROSE.

"A charming Scent."—H.R.H. The Duchess of York. "The sweetest of sweet odours."

ATKINSON'S IS THE ONLY GENUINE.

Of all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers, and of the Manufacturers, 24, Old Bond Street, London.

GRANT'S MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY.

FIRST-PRIZE MEDALS at LONDON, MELBOURNE, and CALCUTTA.

Is the most delicious Liqueur in the World.

Have you ever tasted it?

It is very strengthening for the weak and aged, and most comforting in damp and chilly weather. Nice with lemonade or soda water.

Sold by Wine Merchants and at Restaurants.

THE WINDOW

Is the most important thing to be considered in the decoration of a house. The eye naturally turns to the opening by which light enters the room; and in the ideal home the view from that opening, and everything that serves to frame it, should be attractive. The most beautiful thing to be seen through a window is a garden of flowers, but nine-tenths of human habitations in civilised countries are so placed that their windows overlook scenes very different—sometimes dreary streets, stables, and chimney pots. Glacier Window Decoration will add beauty to the window, it is not costly, and no alteration of sashes is required. It is the only effective and reliable substitute for stained glass.

Hundreds of specimens can be seen, and all information can be had at

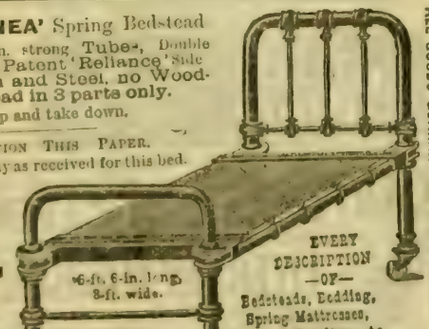
THE GLACIER DEPÔTS,

153, Piccadilly, W., and 56, Queen Victoria St., E.C.

The 'NEW GUINEA' Spring Bedstead Pillars 1-in. Sides 1¼-in. strong Tubes, Double Woven Wire Mattress, Patent 'Reliance' Side Fastenings. All Iron and Steel, no Wood-work. Bedstead in 3 parts only. Easy to fix up and take down.

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.

Orders executed same day as received for this bed.



ALL GOODS GUARANTEED FOR 5 YEARS.

To be had only direct from—

CHARLES RILEY,

Freeman-street, BIRMINGHAM.

Illustrated Price Lists Post Free.

21/- Carriage Paid

EVERY DESCRIPTION —OF— Bedsteads, Bedding, Spring Mattresses, Bedroom Furniture, &c. direct from the Manufacturer.

SPÉCIALITÉ:—THICK LEGS & THIN FEET.

A Want Long Felt, met at Last.

GOLF, SHOOTING, and CYCLING

STOCKINGS!

HOMEKNIT.

Free from all Seams.

Made of pure long staple Scotch Wool, full length, broad ribs, double heels and toes, most comfortable in wear, guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Colours: Navy Blue, Black, Light and Dark Grey, Heathers, and Fancy Mixtures.

ALL SIZES—1/9, 2/3, 3/6.

Spécialité:

THICK LEGS and THIN FEET, 2/6, 3/6.

THE HIGHLAND CHECK,

(As Illustration.)

Hand-Knitted, for Cycling, Golf, or Shooting, 3/6 & 4/6

Thick legs and thin feet 5/6

Postage, 3d. per pair; 2 pairs, 4½d.

Terms: Strictly Cash with Order.

A. W. GAMAGE,

126, 127, 128, 129, HOLBORN, E.C.

TOO FAT. Dr. GORDON'S Elegant Pills cure STOUTNESS, rapidly and certainly. State height, weight, and send 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., or 11s. to DR. GORDON, 24, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses, { 2, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Facing the Mansion House) 158, OXFORD STREET, W.

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET, SHEFFIELD.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

Issue of £1,000,000 sterling 4 per cent. Preference Stock.

In pursuance of the resolution of the Shareholders at the Annual Meeting in May last the Canadian Pacific Railway Company is prepared to receive applications for £1,333,333 4 per cent. Preference Stock, part of the 5,000,000 dols. now authorised.

The price of issue is 90 per cent., payable as follows:—

£5	0	0	per cent. on Application.
25	0	0	„	„ Allotment.
30	0	0	„	„ 21st November.
30	0	0	„	„ 19th December.
£90	0	0

Or payment in full may be made under discount at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum on any Tuesday, between the hours of 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The Stock will rank for Dividend from the 1st October, and 1 per cent. Dividend for the three months to December 31st, the close of the Company's financial year, will be payable on the 1st of April next, and thereafter 2 per cent. will be payable on each 1st April and 1st October.

Allowing for deferred payments and the dividend date, the Stock at the net price of issue yields nearly 4½ per cent.

The Subscription List will be closed on or before 4 p.m. on the 28th inst., and in cases where it is not practicable to make any allotment the amount deposited on application will be returned as soon as possible.

Failure to pay any instalment when due renders all previous payments liable to forfeiture.

The above-mentioned Preference Stock is issued under the authority of the Dominion Government given by The Canadian Pacific Railway Act, 1888, and a Resolution passed at the Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Company in May, 1893.

It is provided by that Act that the Preference Stock shall never exceed one-half the amount of Ordinary Stock outstanding; that the holder of each £20 of Preference Stock shall have the same voting power as is conferred by one Ordinary Share of $100, namely, one vote; that the Dividend on such Preference Stock shall not exceed 4 per cent., and shall not be cumulative, but shall rank upon the earnings of each financial year, taking priority as to Dividend over the Ordinary Share Capital, which now amounts to $65,000,000.

This Preference Stock will be registered at the Company's London Office, will be transferable in amounts of £1 and multiples thereof, and in all other respects the transfer arrangements will be identical with those which prevail in regard to the Company's Debenture Stock.

Overleaf is given a Memorandum upon this issue and the general affairs of the Company, by Mr. Van Horne, the President.

1, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.
October 21st, 1893.

MEMORANDUM BY THE PRESIDENT.

In reference to the present issue of Preference Stock I desire to state that at the Annual Meeting of the Shareholders held on the 10th May last, the Directors were authorised to expend Capital during the current year, as follows:—

1. Permanent bridges and improvements on the Company's Railway not chargeable to operating expenses, according to estimates submitted	$1,900,000
2. For grain elevators and additional terminal facilities, according to estimates submitted	750,000
3. Additional rolling stock, according to estimates submitted	1,250,000
4. For satisfying or acquiring bonds of the Montreal and Ottawa Railway Company, the interest on which the Company has undertaken to pay by way of rental under existing lease	400,000
5. For the construction of the extension of the Souris branch from the International boundary to Pasqua, 102 miles; and of the Temiscamingue Railway, 50 miles; and of the Revelstoke branch line, 28 miles; and of a section of the Eganville branch line	3,700,000
Total	$8,000,000

Of the new works contemplated in the foregoing schedule, the line from the international boundary to Pasqua and 22½ miles of the Eganville branch are completed and in operation, and the Temiscamingue and Revelstoke branches are under construction. The amounts required for improvements, equipment, &c., have been reduced to $2,500,000 for the season, so that the total amount of new Capital required is $6,600,000 or £1,320,000, instead of $8,000,000 or £1,600,000.

The present year has been a disastrous one for many prominent American Railways, but it should be remembered that the main causes of their difficulties have not prevailed in Canada, where the financial storm has been scarcely felt.

The Company's traffic, however, has been affected by the light crop of last year and the exceptionally low price of wheat, which have reduced the profits of the producer, and resulted in a large decrease in earnest in the sections where wheat-growing is the chief industry, but, owing to the great extent of the Company's lines and to the comprehensive character of its traffic, the losses in the wheat-growing districts have been made good elsewhere, and the season is now so far advanced that it is safe to predict results for the year about equal to those of 1892, the best year in the history of the Company.

The crop just harvested is a full average one in point of yield, and an excellent one in point of quality.

The Company entered upon the present year with an undivided surplus of $6,923,531, practically all of which was in cash or in loans on security and immediately available. The advantage of such a large and liquid surplus has been well illustrated during the past months of financial depression, the Company having been able, by drawing upon this fund, to proceed with its new lines and all of its other new work, without interruption and without borrowing; and this issue of Preference Stock will recoup to the Treasury the amount so advanced.

The close of the present year will find the Company with an undivided surplus—after setting aside $1,625,000 for the dividend of 2½ per cent. for the current half-year—of about seven and three-quarter million dollars; four million dollars of which will be specially held in cash in accordance with the decision of the Directors, as announced in the last Annual Report.

London, October 20th, 1893. WM. C. VAN HORNE, President.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

BUYERS and SELLERS of quoted and unquoted Commercial, Industrial, and Mining Securities should communicate with

THE COMMERCIAL STOCK and SHARE CORPORATION, Limited, Stock and Share Dealers, 10, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C. Telegraphic Address: "UNQUOTED, LONDON." All Mining Shares dealt in at close current quotations. Advances made on Stocks and Shares at moderate rates. Send for List, giving numerous quotations not published by any other firm, post free.

REVERSIONS.—The Reversion Mortgage Trust purchase reversions and life incomes, or lend thereon at 4 per cent. per annum. No charge made unless business results.—Apply to Messrs. FELDMAN, 34, New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London. Solicitors' and Estate Agents' attention particularly requested.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Hon. Auditors, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds £16,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited,
No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.

General Accidents.	Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents.	Death by Accident.

C. HARDING, Manager.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803. 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, £1,000,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES.

LONDON OFFICE: 81, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

ASSETS OVER .. .. £31,800,000.
SURPLUS EXCEEDS .. .. £6,100,000.

This Society originated the Tontine System of Life Assurance, under which the premiums paid form a lucrative investment, and not an expense, affording provision for old age as well as immediate family provision in the event of death.
ABSOLUTE SECURITY. LOW PREMIUMS. LARGE PROFITS.
Before assuring elsewhere, send for Prospectus and Illustrative Pamphlets.
A. MUNKITTRICK, Manager for Great Britain and Ireland.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.
(FIRE.)

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.

No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
[ESTABLISHED 1867.]
ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,
From £30 to £5,000,
To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their
NOTE OF HAND ALONE.
ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.
Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.
NO SURETIES REQUIRED.
Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN

CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL

TESTIMONIALS.

COLDS.

Madame Adelina Patti writes from Craig-y-Nos Castle: "Madame Patti has found the Carbolic Smoke Ball very beneficial indeed, and the only thing that would enable her to rest well at night when having a severe Cold."

CATARRH.

The Rev. Dr. Lunn writes from 5, Endsleigh-gardens, London, N.W., 16th November, 1892: "I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad Catarrh."

BRONCHITIS.

J. James, Esq., writes from St. David's-avenue, Bexhill, 27th February, 1893: "I have been using the Carbolic Smoke Ball for Chronic Bronchitis with excellent results."

DEAFNESS.

Mrs. Kingsley writes from Bramshott House, Liphook, Hants, 12th December, 1892: "I have been very deaf for eight years, but since using the Carbolic Smoke Ball my hearing is slowly but surely improving."

THE VOICE.

Rev. J. Cunningham, P.P., writes from Kilnadeema, Loughrea, Co. Galway, 27th October, 1892: "For the past year I have derived the greatest benefit from the Carbolic Smoke Ball. It is invaluable for preventing or getting rid of a cold, it relieves the bronchial tubes immediately, and restores the Voice."

POLYPUS.

Dr. J. Russell Harris, M.D., writes from 6, Adam-street, Adelphi, W.C.: "I have prescribed and recommended your Carbolic Smoke Ball with most satisfactory results. Many people who shudder at the notion of an operation for nasal Polypus will hail your invention with delight."

As all the diseases mentioned above arise from one cause, they can, therefore, be cured by the remedy which stops the cause, viz., THE CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL.

One CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL will last a family several months, making it the cheapest remedy in the world at the price—10/- post free.

The CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL can be re-filled, when empty, at a cost of 5/- post free.

TO BE OBTAINED FROM ALL CHEMISTS AND DRUGGISTS.

CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL CO., LIMITED,

27, PRINCE'S STREET, HANOVER SQUARE, LONDON, W.

GERMS IN SOAPS.

Germs in soaps multiply best at a given temperature. "Vinolia" Soap-basis is kept for weeks at the temperature most favourable to their growth, and if the germs appear the soap-basis is rejected. This is a very strong point in favour of "Vinolia" Soap. Cheap and rancid fats are everywhere used in soap-making, but neither boiling nor anything else will enable a high-class toilet soap to be made from them. "Vinolia" Soap is made from pure, edible fats. This is worth remembering when purchasing, especially in cold weather, when the skin may be a little inflamed, and consequently more sensitive to the action of inferior soaps.

"VINOLIA" SOAP—Premier, 4d.; Floral, 6d.; Balsamic, 8d.; Toilet, 10d.; and Vestal, 2s. 6d. per tablet.
"VINOLIA" CREAM (for Itching, Face Spots, &c.), 1s. 1½d., 1s. 9d., 3s. 6d., and 6s. per box.
"VINOLIA" POWDER (for Redness, Roughness, &c.), 1s., 1s. 9d., 3s. 6d., and 6s. per box, in White, Pink, and Cream Tints.

BLONDEAU et CIE. Ryland-road, London, N.W.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" DOLL SHOW AT THE ALBERT HALL.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

It will be remembered that a new system of awarding the Prizes in connection with the TRUTH Doll Show was adopted last year. It had previously been the practice to give one series of Prizes only, and this plan had naturally led to some difficulty in classification, and, in order to prevent any recurrence of this, it was decided to divide the Dolls, for the purpose of judging their relative merits, into three distinct classes. This plan worked so satisfactorily that it is proposed to again adopt it this year. There will therefore, in connection with the next Show, be three series of Prizes—the first for single Dolls, dressed with exceptional taste and skill and novelty of design; the second for the more striking groups of Dolls; and the third for those larger collections of Dolls, containing fifty and upwards, in the dressing of which any special qualities, such as neatness, variety, durability, &c., may have been exhibited. Thus there will be three First Prizes awarded, probably of equal value, one for the best exhibit in each class, together with numerous other prizes of smaller value, the exact number and worth of which must necessarily depend on the size to which the Show attains. It is still a little too early to state specifically of what these Prizes will consist. From the letters so far received, however, it would seem that intending competitors are, almost without exception, in favour of last year's plan being repeated; and, unless there should be an unexpected change in the tone of the further letters which may reach me, steps will be shortly taken to act on this almost unanimous consensus of opinion. It may also be said that the TRUTH Brooches, of which upwards of 100 were distributed last year, proved very popular; and it will not be difficult, I think, to design for the coming Show a memento which will prove equally acceptable and appropriate.

As readers of this journal will have seen, the coming Show is to be held at the Royal Albert Hall, at Kensington Gore; the authorities having most generously consented to again place this commodious building at the disposal of TRUTH. Seeing, then, that a very large space will be available for exhibition, it is to be hoped that the readers of TRUTH, and their friends, will unite in making a special effort to fill it worthily. Several thousands of Dolls have already been sent out, and all the very large ones have been applied for, but there are still many hundreds remaining, which have to be dressed between this and the middle of December. The Dolls are two sizes, medium and small, and parcels of them will be sent off at once to any ladies who may inform me as to their wishes. There is practically no limit to the number of small Dolls which can be sent to one applicant.

THE HOME-MADE TOYS.

It will not be forgotten, it is hoped, that the Annual TRUTH Show consists of Home-made Toys, as well as of Home-dressed Dolls. The former have always been a most prominent and interesting feature at successive Exhibitions; and it is trusted that there will be no falling off in this respect this year. The Home-made Toys may be of any kind—dolls' houses, model toys, movable and mechanical toys, &c., &c. Scrap-books are also in great request at the Children's Hospitals. Prizes will be given, as usual, for the best of the Home-made Toys.

It will be necessary, too, in order to complete the Christmas distribution on its usual lines to purchase about 25,000 new Toys; and donations in aid of the TRUTH Toy Fund for carrying out this object will be gratefully received. A large sum is needed; and, unfortunately, the balance from last year's account is a heavy debit one. Something more on this subject will be seen on the first page of this number.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 764.—"PLANTING" STATESMEN, &c.

ACTON (real name and address will be given next week) £2 2 0

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 765.

It has been decided to award this prize to ALMAVIVA, whose suggestion for making Garden Parties and Musical At-Homes more popular is printed below. I am inclined to think that Almaviva is about right in his contention. Wives will go to an At-Home to see what the other wives wear, but if husbands are to be induced to attend also some innovations in the direction suggested by the prize-winner will have to be carried out:—

PRIZE SUGGESTION.

The best way to find a remedy for any evil is to discover the cause of the evil, and, if possible, remove that cause. The cause of the dislike shown by husbands to accompanying their wives to garden-parties, musical at-homes, &c., is manifestly that the amusement provided is not to their taste. Men, with very few exceptions, do not care for tea and gossip, interspersed, in the case of the garden-party with mild out-door games, execrably played, and in the case of the musical at-home, with music of a more or less high class, to which they have to listen in silence. Let the amusements be made to suit their predilections, and they will flock to such social gatherings. For this purpose I maintain that the entertainment at a garden-party should be made to resemble as nearly as possible that provided in the gardens of the exhibitions at Earl's-court. There were always plenty of men as well as ladies in those gardens. The addition to the ordinary garden-party of a band playing lively airs, and a general permission to smoke, would go far towards this end. The musical evening is much easier to reform. I have seldom met with a man who did not appreciate a good comic song; in fact, the announcement of a song of that description always produces a smile of expectation from the whole of any audience. At a musical at-home let three or four comic songs by professional singers be fairly spread over the programme, and I am sure that the men would willingly endure the high-class music for the sake of those songs. I am aware that these proposals of mine will cause a thrill of horror in the bosoms of hostesses, but I am quite sure that if the husbands are to be entertained as well as the wives, something of the kind must be done.—Almaviva.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 766.

The announcement of the Prize-winner's name in this competition will be made next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 770.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

THE BEST HUMOROUS PARODY OF THE SONG KNOWN AS "AFTER THE BALL," WHICH IS BEING SUNG JUST NOW AT THE MUSIC-HALLS WITH SO MUCH APPARENT APPROVAL.

It is, fortunately, no part of my duty to account for the popularity which the above composition has obtained. For the purposes of this column it suffices to say that for some recondite reason or another it seems to have hit the taste of the public, and is, I think, well enough known to suitably lend itself to parody. The number of the lines in the original must be in no case exceeded; that is to say, the parody must consist of not more than three eight-line verses, with a chorus of eight lines. It may assist some of the country readers of this page if I append a verse of the original song, with the chorus—

Came a wee maiden, climbing my knees,
"Tell me a story. Do, uncle, please!"
"Tell you a story—what shall I tell?
Tales about giants, or elves in the dell?
Nay; I will tell you something that's true,
Why I've ne'er wed, or had children like you.
Once I'd a sweetheart—my all in all,
But I thought her faithless—after the Ball."

Chorus.

After the ball was over,
After the break of dawn,
After the dancers leaving,
After the stars were gone!
Many a heart was aching,
If we could read them all;
Many the hopes that were shattered,
After the Ball.

All Parodies must reach me at the latest by the morning of Monday, November 6.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name and the address of ETTOL, winner of a half of Prize No. 762, are Mrs. J. SHAW, 36, Bryanston-square, W.

 The real name and the address of BUSHRANGER, winner of a half of Prize No. 763, are R. H. KIRBY, Esq., Haverthwaite, Ulverstone.

TREEVE.—I will endeavour to prevent any misprint of your nom de plume in future.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 767.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ORIGINAL ANECDOTES ABOUT FOOTBALL.

I overheard a cabby—who had driven some people to witness a football match at Leyton last year, and was himself looking on at the game, evidently for the first time—make the following remark to a bystander, who, after an appeal for off-side against one of the left wing forwards had been allowed by the referee, was trying to explain the state of the case to the worthy Jehu:—"Off side the judge calls 'im! Well, then, p'raps e'll say wot he thinks is 'is near side. He don't know 'is business."—Mandeville.

At a recent meeting of a rural football club the village carpenter proposed a resolution in the following somewhat ambiguous terms:—"That the wearing of knickerbockers or trousers at matches be optional." A more educated member caustically remarked that he wondered at "any gentleman making such an outrageous proposal, especially with the Rector in the chair." For his part, he should move "that the wearing of one or other be compulsory."—Pat-a-Cake.

An ex-captain of a University Rugby team was watching with great interest an inter-Board School football match in the Northern capital. Needless to say the game played was Association. A juvenile, but enthusiastic, onlooker presently addressed him with the question, "Do you play footba'?" "Ay!" answered the ex-captain, "I play football." The urchin looked at him a moment, and rejoined, "Na, na, ye'll no play footba'—ye'll play Rugby!"—Land o' Cakes.

Some years ago, during the progress of a Rugby match at Swansea, one of the local forwards secured the ball on the break-up of a tight scrummage, and darted with all speed to the goal line, where he triumphantly finished up with a try under the posts. He was only then made aware, by the laughter of the spectators and the amazement depicted on the faces of the players, that he had accomplished the unique feat of scoring a try over his own goal line.—Gorse.

A team of medical students from one of the big London hospitals came to Mid-Kent to play a local team. The visitors had the misfortune to lose the services of two of their best men, who were placed hors de combat by a violent collision. Two substitutes were found amongst the spectators, one of whom, a strapping young fellow in approved athletic costume, with a badge on his cap, was asked by the Medico Captain if he was a professional. "Noa," he replied, "but ah'm Lanky fra' Preston North End." During the progress of the game it was noticed that, somehow or other, Lanky never seemed to be where he was wanted, and he came in for a good deal of chaff from the onlookers, and continuous cries of "Play up Lanky," from all sides. He never once kicked the ball, though he tried to do so without regard to direction; but just as the Referee called "half time," he kicked one of the local "half backs" in the pit of the stomach, rendering him unconscious. When remonstrated with for his clumsiness, he exclaimed, in quite an injured tone: "Wal, tha' wudn't let ma' kick a ball, an' ah 'ad to kick summat!"—Marlinspike.

Little girl, seeing a football match for the first time. "Mummie, is it a battle?"—Bethy.

A Yorkshire bookmaker went for the first time to an important football match. A friend afterwards asked him how he had liked it. "Eh?" replied Mr. S. P., "it wor fair champion. There wor 6 to 4 laid on one and evens on t' others." "Well, who won?" "Why, lad," replied the honest man of sport; "I dunno. I cleared off wi' t' brass, and left them kicking."—Red Ensign.

OVERHEARD AT A FOOTBALL-MATCH.

1. (Two country bumpkins, referring to referee, who had suspended two men for rough play).—Jack: "Will, I've had my eye on that there cove in the black soot all the time. He's been runnin' about, and ain't kicked the ball at all. What I can see hof hit - he won't kick hisself and won't let hennybody helse kick." Will: "Well, Jack, hit's like this, he's master of the ground, I reckons, and means horderin' heverybody hoff, honey he can't do hit hall hat once. He'll pick hon hus presen'ly." 2. In a football match between Eccles and Malling, the former team opposed the latter's claim to a goal; whereupon the referee shouted out, "Mallin' goal." "Maul-in-goal, be hanged," shouted an onlooker, "how can that be when your playing Association." 3. While witnessing a football-match last year on the Chatham ground, I was standing near a tall man, before whom was a short man wearing a tall hat. At one particular part of the game the Chathamites fairly penned their opponents in, and the tall man began shouting, "Goal! goal! goal!" at every shot, and at the same time throwing his right arm, with clenched fist, up and down, keeping time with the word "goal!" Presently, Chatham scored, and with louder cry of "Goal!" than before (forgetting, in his excitement, the little man in front of him), he brought his fist down with a terrific crash on the crown of the tall hat, driving it down over the wearer's eyes, much to the amusement of everybody but the short man, whose words I will not quote.—Felixicus.

I was once watching a football match in Norfolk, in which two local teams were opposing each other in a friendly game, when I witnessed the following amusing, though very touching scene:—The play had just commenced, when in a struggle to get at the ball one little fellow was thrown violently to the ground. Immediately a scream was heard, and out from amongst the spectators came a little girl about six, sobbing as if her heart would break. "Pa, pa," she screamed, "they have knocked Dickey's head off, and are kicking it about," then she hid her face in her little hands, and rent the air again and again with her cries. Her Pa had great difficulty in quelling her grief, but when she did begin to speak it was soon ascertained that when she saw her brother Dick fall, and seeing the others kicking the ball, she thought surely it was her pet brother's head they were kicking. At that moment the fallen victim came forward, and after giving her a kiss he soon convinced her that he was only knocked down in play.—Archaloner.

Little conversation overheard at a football match, Oxford:—"Oh! have you heard that Jenkins has just broken his nose? He's awfully hurt." "Yes, I have just this minute seen him. Going to the ball this evening?"—Espérance.

I once contemplated becoming a football player, as my doctor told me I needed a great deal of exercise. I knew nothing about the game, so I proceeded to ask my friends for information. The first one I asked was Kickem. "You should join our club," said Kickem; "we play the Association game. Much less danger than Rugby." "What's the matter with Rugby?" I asked. "Oh, Rugby's a very rough game. I saw a man's shirt torn clean off his back playing Rugby." The next man I asked was Grabbem. "You ought to play Rugby," said he; "I don't like Association play. Too much chance of a kick in your face. A man down our way had his nose split right up with a kick, playing Association last Saturday." Then I met Rushem. "Rugby's a jolly game," said Rushem; "only yesterday a fellow made a rush at me, so I planted my heel in the ground and stopped short, and you should have seen him go over. Wasn't he just covered with mud when he got up!" By this time my ardour about football was cooling down, and, on thinking it over, I came to the conclusion that I had no desire to put myself in a position where my shirt could be torn off, my nose split, or my countenance daubed with mud. So I decided that I would give up the idea of football and try to get my exercise by walking.—Almaviva.

FOOTBALL BY DIPPETY

A few years since it was my good fortune to "assist" (in the French sense) at a football match between rival "townlands" in the West of Ireland. Needless to say, the rules were Rugby unwatered—indeed, a long way overproof. The game went on fairly well for a while, when suddenly a terrific personal encounter took place between two players of opposite sides, causing a simultaneous rush of spectators and performers to the scene of conflict. Then the "reveree," as he was termed, made his way through the crowd, and exclaimed in a stentorian voice, "No crowdin'—make a ring. Let the boys foight it out in paice an' quietness. After that the game will be reshumed. The dippeties is prisent." In due time the "incident was closed" by one of the belligerents being rendered hors de combat, and the game was finished by "dippety." I then learned that, as few football matches could be reasonably expected to conclude in that part of Her Majesty's dominions without an interruption of the kind referred to, it was the custom to have a reserve of "deputies" at hand to continue the game, and this they call "playin' it out by dippety."—Bobus.

A well-known football player in the Eastern Counties, some two years ago, experienced a "great surprise" when in the obituary column of a local paper he read a notification of his death, which was attributed to the result of a casualty in a recent match in which he had been engaged. Rushing to the office he inquired who was responsible for the deaths, births, marriages, &c., and on being introduced to the sub-editor that gentleman wanted to know his grievance? "Well, look here, sir," said the "half-back," "I want you to alter this little par, in which you insinuate that I am dead, if not buried, and to explain that I am alive and kicking!" and he suited the action to the word.—East Anglia.

A SAD FOOTBALL STORY.

I, Amos Dumps, was in love. Tom Spindles was, too. We played football together. She watched the game. I bunged up his eye, he returned the compliment and sat on my head. I kicked his right leg, he bestowed a similar attention on my left. I turned a somersault on his chest, he danced the tight-rope on my spinal cord. I succeeded in treading on a bunion which I knew he cherished, he in return knocked out and caused me to swallow three front teeth. We met her after the match, two shattered men were we! Absence of fangs interfered with my articulation horribly, Tom limped like a decrepit Chelsea pensioner. The week after she refused us both.—Jo.

A native of China was for the first time witnessing the game of football in England. The ball struck him on the back. He fell, and, in endeavouring to rise, his pigtail became entanged with the ball, with which he ran off the ground, to the disgust of the players.—Ye Hermit.

"TRUTH"

Can be obtained every FRIDAY Morning in NICE at

GALIGNANI'S LIBRARY,

16, QUAI MASSENA.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,
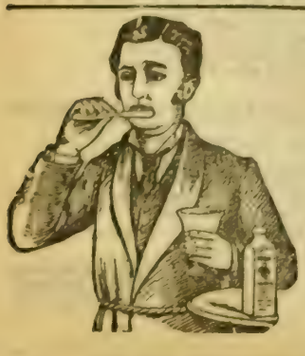
HÆMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.
Box 2s. 6d., stamp included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.
E. GRILLON,
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISES.
The Steamship "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, 3,000 h.p. will leave London on the 22nd November, for a 66 days' Cruise,
To MADEIRA, TENERIFFE, WEST INDIES, AZORES, &c.,
Fitted with Electric Light, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Baths, &c.
Managers { F. Green & Co. / Anderson, Anderson, & Co. } Head Offices, Fenchurch-avenue, London.
For particulars apply to the latter firm, at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, E.C.; or to the West-end Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, London, S.W.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?
PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement and biliousness, it has been pronounced by medical men of high authority as most efficacious.
"I use the Aerated Pitkeathly largely, and value it."—Dr. MATTHEWS DUNCAN.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.
Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.



PERSONAL LOVELINESS

is greatly enhanced by a fine set of teeth. On the other hand, nothing so detracts from the effect of pleasing features as yellow or decayed teeth. Don't lose sight of this fact, and remember to cleanse your teeth every morning with that supremely delightful and effectual dentifrice which imparts whiteness to them, without the least injury to the enamel. The gums are made healthy by its use, and that mortifying defect, a repulsive breath, is completely remedied by it. Sozodont is in high favour with the fair sex, because it lends an added charm to their pretty mouths.

FRAGRANT
SOZODONT

PRINCESS PATENT FLOWER-SHIELD.

Under the Distinguished Patronage of H.S.H. Princess of Wales and H.S.H. Princess May

No, dear, it [illegible] impossible to crush them.

H.S.H. Princess May says "She thinks the Flower Shield a most [illegible] invention, and wishes it success." The custom of wearing sprays of flowers at Balls, Receptions, and Assemblies of the elite is a growing one, and following the Royal example the coming season is likely to see a considerable extension of the fashion. Ladies hitherto have been extremely inconvenienced in having to adjust their sprays of [illegible] frequently in a crowded cloakroom, or else run the risk of the flowers being disarranged and crushed by the opera cloak. The "Princess Flower Shield is a perfect protection is removed an instant upon entering the ball room, and fits inside pocket of opera cloak hen not in use. It is compact, light, and easily adjusted, and when worn does t disturb the dress in any way, or interfere with the fall of the cloak. "A" uality, Superior Nickel Plated, No. 1, 2/6 No. 2, 5/-; No. 3, 7/6. "B" uality, Silver Plated, No. 1, 1/6; No. 2, 2/6; No. 3, 3/6. Of all Drapers, orists, and Costumiers in the United Kingdom. If you cannot obtain in your eighbourhood send Stamps or Postal Order direct to

HE PATENT FLOWER SHIELD CO. 42 BASINGHALL STREET LONDON E.C.

WESTWARD TO THE FAR EAST.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALASIA.—Varied, picturesque, and fastest route via Vancouver.

CANADA AND UNITED STATES.—Through tickets to all points; luxurious ning cars, sleeping cars, mountain hotels.

ROUND THE WORLD.—By arrangement with the P. & O. Company, and all tlantic Lines via Japan or Australia, price £125

FREE FARMS. With Cash Bonus to Settlers in the North-West.—For berths d descriptive pamphlets, apply PASSENGER DEPARTMENT, Canadian Pacific ailway, 67 and 68, King William-street, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, arket street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

PHONOGRAPHS.—The Edison-Bell Phonograph Corporation, Limited, give Notice that they are the owners of the British Patents for e Edison-Bell Phonographs; and that Legal Proceedings will be taken against l persons selling, using, or exhibiting Phonographs not obtained from them.

By order,
W. M. CROWE,
Secretary.

Edison House,
Northumberland-avenue,
London, April, 1893.

THE Edison-Bell Phonograph Corporation, Limited, of London, have the Sole Right to Sell and Use Edison-Bell Phonographs in the nited Kingdom, and all other persons claiming such rights, either as presenting me or the North American Phonograph Company, do so without thority.

THOMAS. A. EDISON.

TASTE

has lost lives. When Cod-liver Oil had to be taken plain or not at all, many Consumptives waited until it was too late before taking it. Now we have which is Cod-liver Oil made palatable and easy to assimilate. No reason to wait now. We can prevent Consumption by taking Scott's Emulsion in time, and even cure Consumption in its early stages.

Scott's Emulsion

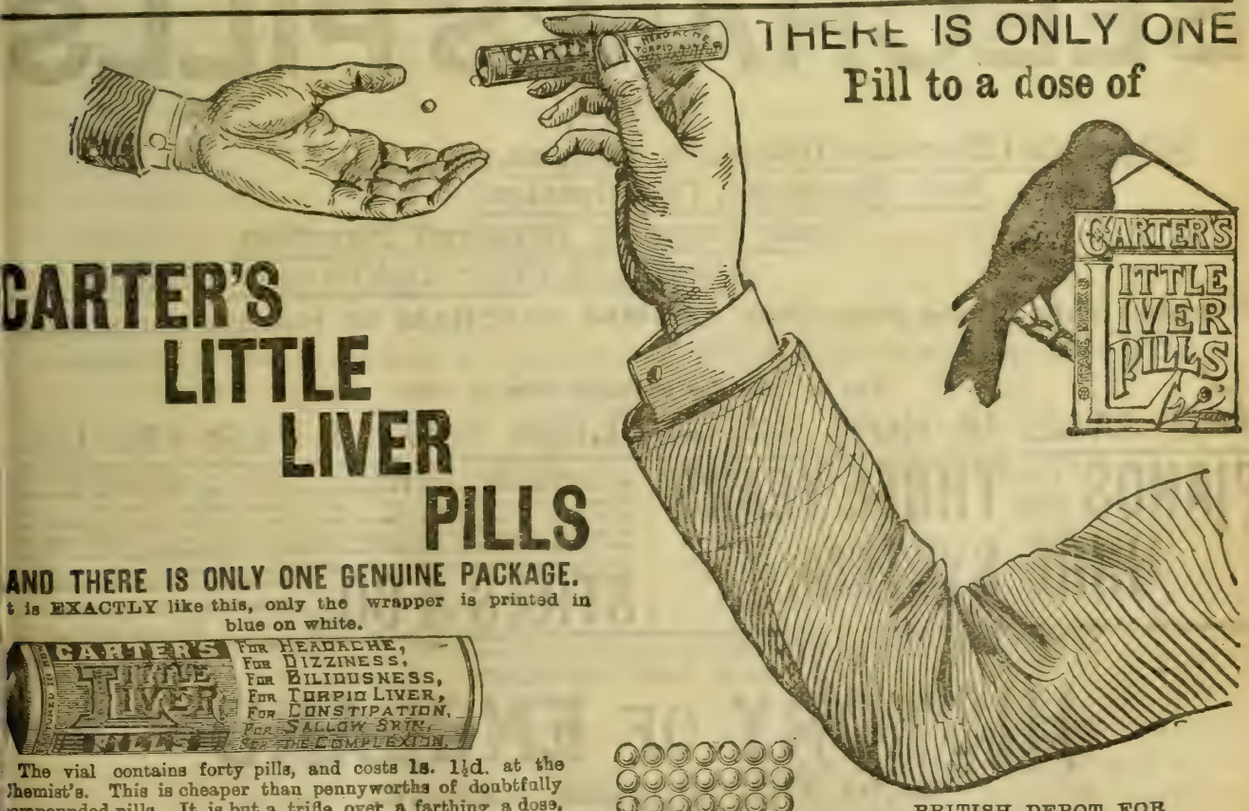
HEREDITARY WEAKNESS

of lungs is easily and speedily cured by Scott's Emulsion Begin taking it in time. Don't wait until Consumption is developed.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Lim., 47, Farringdon-st., London, E.C.
All Chemists, 2/6 and 4/6.

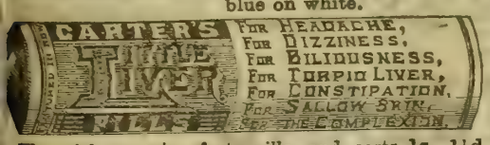
THERE IS ONLY ONE
Pill to a dose of



CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

AND THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE PACKAGE.

t is EXACTLY like this, only the wrapper is printed in blue on white.



The vial contains forty pills, and costs 1s. 1½d. at the Chemist's. This is cheaper than pennyworths of doubtfully compounded pills. It is but a trifle over a farthing a dose, or ONE PILL IS A DOSE, though they are so small hat FORTY-NINE of them only measure one inch square.

Cure TORPID LIVER WITHOUT FAIL. SICK HEADACHE, MALAISE, DISTRESS FROM EATING, and SALLOW COMPLEXION promptly done away with.

BRITISH DEPOT FOR
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS,
46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C.

MANUFACTURERS TO HER MAJESTY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR

HAS 35 YEARS' WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION.

"IS STILL THE BEST COCOA."

SCHWEITZER'S NOURISHING, STRENGTHENING

Cocoatina

Reduced Prices: ¼ lbs., 11d.; ½ lbs., 1/9; 1 lbs., 3/4.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as
Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver, and Female Ailments.

Prepared only by the Proprietor, THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helen's, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere, in Boxes, 9½d., 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each, with full directions.

The 1s. 1½d. Box contains Fifty-six Pills.

THE SALE IS NOW SIX MILLION BOXES PER ANNUM.

PIANOS ON THE THREE YEARS' HIRE SYSTEM.

This system is carried out extensively, liberally, and equitably by CHARLES STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, W.C. The pianoforte becomes the absolute property of the hirer at the expiration of three years, or may be returned at any time, at the option of the hirer. The rates charged are the same as for ordinary hire, and no addition is made to the price. PIANOS, GRAND and UPRIGHT, new and second-hand, by BORD, BECHSTEIN, and other high-class Makers, at from 10s. 6d. to 100s. per month. Lists and all particulars will be forwarded post-free on application to

STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, London, W.C.

NOW READY. In Large Crown 8vo, price 7s. 6d., cloth extra, 1,136 pages.

A NEW AND POPULAR

HISTORY OF ENGLAND

— AND THE BRITISH EMPIRE. —

A Record of Events Political, Constitutional, Naval, Military, & Literary, from B.C. 66 to A.D. 1890

By EDGAR SANDERSON, M.A.

Late Scholar of Clare College, Cambridge; Author of "A History of the British Empire," "Outlines of the World's History," &c. &c.

WITH GENEALOGICAL TABLES, CONTENTS, INDEX, AND 16 MAPS PRINTED IN COLOURS.

FREDERICK WARNE & CO., LONDON AND NEW YORK.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 879. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, November 2, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Prince and Princess of Wales will now make Sandringham their headquarters for about three months. They are to return to Marlborough House for ten days on Monday, December 11, and on Wednesday, the 13th, they will go with their family to Windsor Castle on a visit to the Queen. The Prince of Wales will probably pass the month of February on the Riviera, and early in the spring the Princess is expected to pay another visit to the King and Queen of the Hellenes at Athens.

The Prince will shortly be the guest of Lord and Lady Ashburton, at The Grange, Hants, for a few days. The Grange estate affords about the best pheasant and partridge shooting in the south of England.

The Duke and Duchess of York will constantly reside at Sandringham except when they are obliged to be in London, and the Duke will look after the estate and exercise a general supervision over the management of the Prince of Wales's farms and studs, in all of which he takes a keen interest.

Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg are to be the guests of the Duke and Duchess of Portland for a few days at Welbeck Abbey, Notts, in the course of the winter, and the Duke of Cambridge is also expected there.

I hear that Prince Louis of Battenberg's signalling apparatus, about which so much fuss has been raised, has really proved a failure. It was recently tried several times on board the Royal Sovereign, but without success and the apparatus has been removed from that vessel.

The Royal yacht Osborne is about to undergo an extensive refit at Portsmouth, and she is to be docked to make good a variety of defects.

The announcement of the appointment of Sir Albert Seymour to be a Page of Honour has given much satisfaction in Court circles, as his mother, Lady Seymour, was thought to have been treated with very little consideration. Sir Francis Seymour had apartments in St. James's Palace, which the Queen allowed him to exchange with Sir Algernon West for a set in Kensington Palace. Having reason to believe that these apartments would be continued to Lady Seymour after his death, Sir Francis expended nearly £2,000 in alterations and improvements, but when he died a few years afterwards, they were taken away from his widow, and, of course, not a farthing of compensation was forthcoming, so his outlay was entirely lost, and he was a comparatively poor man. Sir Francis "conducted" Prince Albert to England in 1840, and he was for many years Groom-in-Waiting to H.R.H., and latterly Master of the Ceremonies. He was severely wounded at Inkerman, where he commanded the Scots Fusilier Guards.

The Chief Secretary, after a stay of six weeks at his official residence, Phœnix Park, leaves this week for England. Last week Mr. Asquith was his guest for several days, during which time he visited Dublin Castle and the Four Courts, which he had the opportunity of seeing in working order. Besides dining at the Viceregal Lodge, Mr. Asquith, with Mr. Morley and Sir A. Lyall, were the guests of Lord and Lady Wolseley at the Royal Hospital, Kilmainham, on Thursday evening.

Lord and Lady Digby have been visiting Lord Digby's Irish estates, and arrived at Grashill, King's County, last week. Lord Digby's property in the county is worth about £15,000 a year, and he is conspicuous amongst absentee landlords. The friendly reception accorded to Lady Digby by the tenantry shows that the age of chivalry is not gone in King's County, where Lord Digby is scarcely less a stranger than the bride whom he introduced to the "mere Irishry" last week.

The Duke of Northumberland is entertaining a succession of visitors at Alnwick Castle, where Princess Louise and Lord Lorne are to be guests for a few days towards the end of this month, when on their way south.

Lord Salisbury's next "stump" is to take place during the last week of the month, when he will attend the annual meeting of the National Conservative Association at Cardiff. Lord Salisbury is to be the guest of Lord Tredegar, at Tredegar Park, during his visit to South Wales, and large parties will be entertained during the week by Lord Windsor, at St. Fagan's Castle, by Lord Bute, at Cardiff Castle, and by Lord Dunraven, at Dunraven Castle.

Lord and Lady Lansdowne are expected to arrive in England from India about the middle of February, when they will take up their residence at Bowood Park, the family place in Wiltshire, which has been occupied every winter during their absence by the Dowager Lady Lansdowne, of whose large estates in Perthshire her eldest son is the heir.

Mr. Charles Jenner, of Edinburgh, the elder brother of Sir William Jenner, died on Friday afternoon at his place in Midlothian. Mr. Jenner was for more than forty years one of the leading merchants of Edinburgh, and the story of the rapid growth of the firm in which he was the principal partner is the history of one of the most successful mercantile establishments in Great Britain. A small drapery business, which was established about 1838, became in course of time a huge emporium, which employed more than five hundred people and paid £5,000 a year of rent. Mr. Jenner, besides being a consummate man of business, was devoted to science and art, and he was a most accomplished botanist, and his gardens have long been widely famous. He had a very fine collection of pictures and sculptures. Only a few weeks ago he presented Woolner's splendid bust of Tennyson to the Memorial Committee, in order that it might be placed in Westminster Abbey. Mr. Jenner was warmly interested in the public institutions of Edinburgh, to many of which he was a munificent benefactor, and he gave away a great deal of money in various ways. He was an ardent Liberal, and took an active part in several Edinburgh elections. Mr. Jenner leaves a very large fortune, but no family, and the bulk of his possessions will probably pass to Sir William Jenner.

The late Duke of Sutherland's fine cellar of wines, spirits, and liqueurs is to be sold at Edinburgh on November 18, "by instruction of the Judicial Factor."

Lord Londonderry's sales of Shetland ponies and Clydesdales out of his stud at Seaham Harbour have been very successful this year. There have been three sales (one of which was of ponies only), and they have realised upwards of £8,767.

The hunting season opens this week, and since April there have been an unusual number of changes of Mastership, of which I note the most important. With the Old Berkshire Captain Orr-Ewing has been replaced by Captain Forester, who is one of the heirs of the Duke of Cleveland. With the Cambridgeshire Mr. G. P. Evans has succeeded Mr. Carbery Evans. The retirement of Mr. Hicks Beach from the Cotswold is greatly and universally regretted in Gloucestershire, where he is very popular among all classes. He is succeeded by Major de Freville, who hunted the Eggesford country for a year after Lord Portsmouth's death. Dr. Gaye has given up the South Devon, and is replaced by Mr. St. Maur, who inherited the Stover estate from the twelfth Duke of Somerset, and he will have the kennels at his own place. Lord Henry Nevill has succeeded Mr. F. V. Williams in the Eridge country, and in East Kent Mr. A. B. Worthington has replaced Captain Prescott-Westcar; while in West Kent Major Warde is succeeded by Mr. Stewart Savile. Mr. A. Johnson has vacated the North Herefordshire in favour of Mr. Vaughan Williams, who had the Tedworth country for a few seasons. The Quorn has passed from Captain Warner to Lord Lonsdale, who intends to hunt that famous country in grand style. Mr. C. A. Egerton is succeeded in East Sussex by Mr. Barthropp, who formerly had the Essex and Suffolk country. The Vine has passed into the hands of Mr. G. A. Russell.

A correspondent writes from Ascot:—

If the staghounds are to go on, at least a knacker's cart might be provided, so that the inhabitants should not, as now, be obliged to witness mortally-injured horses performing the ghastly death-walk to the kennels, where they are to be eaten.

There is a talk of a crematorium being erected on Ascot Heath. If near the racecourse will it not be somewhat of a skeleton at the feast?

The Spey salmon-fishing has just closed, after the very worst season, both for netting and angling, which has been experienced for many years.

I am glad to see that another attraction is about to be added to Brighton. The new Prince's Tennis Club, which adjoins the Bedford Hotel, is to be formally opened there on Saturday next by the President, the Duke of Fife. The opening match is to be played by the Hon. Alfred Lyttelton and Charles Saunders. This Club is most luxuriously arranged and fitted up. The courts are lighted both from the top and the sides, and the lights are so made that they can be opened, and thus it will be almost like playing in the open air. The hall is very roomy and comfortable, and the bath and dressing rooms are supplied with sea-water in addition to hot and cold. The dedans, too, is most artistically and comfortably arranged, and will most likely prove a fashionable lounge, where ladies will be able to indulge in afternoon tea whilst watching real tennis. In addition to the tennis court there are excellent billiard, reading, and card rooms. Mr. Hippisley Cox, who founded and established the Prince's Club at Knightsbridge, has personally supervised the fitting up of the club, and he is to be highly complimented, not only on the taste displayed, but also on the completeness of the whole arrangements.

The East Sussex and St. Leonard's Club was re-opened on Saturday last with a dinner, at which there was an encouraging muster of local notabilities, including Mr. C. A. Egerton, who was in the chair, Sir Anchitel Ashburnham, Mr. Inderwick, Q.C., and others. The Club, which was originally on a proprietary basis, has just been converted into a members' Club, which has acquired the freehold of the excellent premises at the corner of Warrior-square and Grand Parade. Some £12,000 has been spent in fitting up and decorating the house, and there is no doubt that the Club in its new shape will add considerably to the attractions of the town.

For AMUSEMENTS, see page 951.
For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 950 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 949.

At the Savoy Hotel a better dinner can be obtained than at any of the famed Parisian restaurants. But those who dine there are favoured with the music of a band, and some members of the County Council objected to this being permitted on Sundays. I have no sympathy with such grandmotherly nonsense. I am by no means clear, however, that the band is a thing of joy to the diners. The dining-room is comparatively low, and the music comparatively loud. Bands at those most boring of festivities—large public dinners—may be a mitigation, for they replace conversation. But as at the Savoy Hotel each dining party sits at a table to itself, the diners may be presumed to wish to interchange audible remarks with each other. If then music there must be, distance should lend enchantment to it. The band should be placed—say, on Waterloo Bridge.

A very promising venture has just been inaugurated by the opening of the "Club Café" in the Strand. In addition to first-class refreshment-room accommodation, there is here provided a comfortable smoking-room, furnished with all the papers and magazines, tape machines, telephone, and similar luxuries; while for ladies a drawing-room is reserved. The tariff is moderation itself, and—a fact which in itself stamps the enterprise with individuality—the attendants are forbidden to receive gratuities. The promoters contemplate greatly extending their scheme of operations, and there is every probability that they will be justified by the result.

"You have been explaining how to get thin, but I am too thin, and I should be obliged to you if you would tell me how to remedy this," writes a correspondent. I never yet saw what objection any man can have to being thin. With women it is another matter, for a certain roundness is a charm. But a man need not be round, and, if he be the reverse, he is never obliged to show his skinny arms and scraggy neck. There are men whom no amount of food will render fat. But I would suggest to my correspondent, if he is very anxious on this point, that he might give himself the chance of increasing his girth by taking plenty of starch and sugar. It will very probably land him in dyspepsia instead of flesh, but il faut souffrir pour être beau. Half the ills of humanity are caused by not eating enough, and the other half by eating too much. Nothing is easier that to create an artificial craving for food. I remember the late Mr. John Bright once explained this to me. "A person," he said, "gets into the habit of distending his stomach with food. He soon feels hungry whenever it is not distended." I was reading only a few days ago a paragraph in a newspaper designed to show that the fashion of long and elaborate meals has almost passed away among the richest classes. As an instance of the habit of the classes to be satisfied with little, the "simple menu" of a lunch given by Baron Ferdinand Rothschild to the Queen was set forth:—"Windsor soup, Norwegian trout, quails on toast, filleted beef, roast ducks, asparagus, and soufflés." With all respect for the guest and the entertainer, they would have found their internal arrangements much better had they limited themselves to a mutton chop and a trifle of cheese. Seven dishes for lunch! Then how many would constitute a "simple menu" for dinner?

Here are some further remarks from Dr. Yorke Davies on fat, which may be of interest to the corpulent section of the community:—

My experience is this, that in cutting off fat forming ingredients from the dietary, that is, sugar, starch, and fat, the decrease in weight is just twice as rapid as if sugar and starch are cut out and fat not. For instance, if a person on a properly apportioned diet, where fat is cut out, is to lose 20 lb. of weight in a month, should fat be allowed with the same food, the reduction in weight would only be 10 lb.

It may simplify matters to say that the use of fat in the system is to supply heat. It is chemically decomposed to this end in the operations of life. If more fat-forming food is taken for this purpose than is required, it is stored as fat, hence obesity. The Esquimaux can consume with impunity 12 lb. of fat a day, and not become corpulent, the system in his case burning it like a furnace to sustain the heat of the body, the radiation being so rapid. For this same reason, I find in England that on a fat reducing dietary a greater amount of weight is lost in winter than in summer—all other factors being equal. It would be useless to burden your space with theories that appertain to the domain of physiology, but it may be of interest to say that in excessive leanness, to put on fat it is necessary that as much fat itself be taken as can possibly be assimilated to get any satisfactory results. The inference is obvious.

No doubt your correspondents will thank you for teaching them how to become lean, but my experience is that those who try to diet themselves fail somewhere, as they make their own rules and break them, and cannot distinguish the difference between a diet that reduces fat and a diet that does not fatten. There is a want of "method in their madness," if I may so express it.

Apropos to what I have been saying the last week or two about the sorrows of governesses, I have received the communication printed below. It cannot fail to prove interesting to the British Matron, and I hope it may suggest to her a way out of her domestic troubles. From what I have seen, however, I am afraid that there is an insurmountable prejudice in this country against the proposed reform. Polygamy might be, as my correspondent seems to anticipate, to the advantage of woman; but can anybody show that it would be to the advantage of man? Among such married men as I know there seems to prevail a strong opinion that one wife is enough—if not too much:—

I don't know that it has ever been pointed out, but the whole of this difficulty in regard to servants, governesses, and so on, whether looked at from the point of view of employer or employed, is the result of our monogamous institutions. Two or three years back you yourself endeavoured to show readers of TRUTH that polygamy was the "coming idea:" and if the idea had been taken up as it ought to have been, a great many social problems would have been solved. It is like this: In a household, though there is only one man, there are necessarily a number of women. It is all one woman's work to cook the meals properly, another's to keep the house clean, another's to mind the children, and so on, the number increasing with the size of the house and family. In a polygamous country, the wives of the paterfamilias discharge all these duties, and everybody is happy. The women are happy because they are all on an equality with one another. The master of the house is happy because none of them is on an equality with him. Under our system, where women have to be hired to do all the domestic duties which the one wife (poor thing) cannot perform, nobody is happy. We thus create the great Servant Question, which renders married life intolerable, and then we ask "Is Marriage a Failure?" and, if so, why? The fact is that, under our vicious system, not only is Marriage a failure, but Woman is a failure. She is conscious of it herself, and is in consequence always trying to change places with Man. In polygamous countries, not only is there no Servant Question, but there is no Woman Question.

HÔTEL BURLINGTON, Boscombe, Bournemouth. Perfectly unique!!! Over 200 rooms, practically designed, sumptuously appointed, and fitted throughout with all the comforts of a well-arranged country mansion. Electric light. Passenger lift. Acres of matured grounds sloping to the Pier. Most moderate tariff, forwarded by Manager, or obtainable at the Burlington and Buckingham Palace Hotels, London. Bournemouth EAST Station.

"A Head of a Small Household" writes:—

DEAR TRUTH,—With reference to your paragraph re "gentlewomen" servants this week, while no doubt many ladies would be only too glad to get them, has it not struck you that where there is a man in the case it would be repugnant to his chivalrous feelings—much though it might add to his comforts—to be waited on by, instead of waiting upon, ladies of the same social standing as himself, in spite of their being paid by him?—Yours, &c, A HEAD OF A SMALL HOUSEHOLD.

No. To tell the truth, this had not struck me. If it had I should have said to myself, what on earth has "chivalry" to do with "social standing?" Are my correspondent's chivalrous feelings towards the other sex confined to those of the same social standing as himself? Does he, before he opens a railway-carriage door to a lady, or picks up any article which she has dropped, inquire whether she lives in Camden Town or Kensington, and whether her male relatives are wholesales or retails? May a chivalrous Duke allow a banker's daughter to pull off his boots for him, although he could not allow a Peeress to perform such a service? Unless he can solve all these problems, I strongly recommend my correspondent to leave chivalry out of the question. If, however, he desires to have a "lady help" and to be chivalrous too, he can easily get over the difficulty by first waiting on the lady help and then allowing her to wait on him.

That I was not wrong in saying that there are openings for ladies, sisters or not, to undertake the whole work of a house without fear of contamination by association with their "social inferiors," is shown by the following advertisement, cut from a ladies' paper:—

Wanted, two lady-helps, sisters (clergyman's daughters preferred). Do entire work small house; wear caps and aprons; one good cook, other charge little girl five, able to take baby from month.

A clergyman's daughter, who sends me this cutting, infers from the absence of any allusion to salary, that the two lady-helps required, are expected to work for nothing. I trust that this inference is unfounded. At the same time, I should say from what I hear, that it is in the matter of pay, rather than in considerations of "chivalry" or personal pride, that the objections to domestic service for ladies arise. The idea seems to prevail among the servant-employing class, that if a lady takes a servant's place she is not entitled to servant's pay. That is an idea, however, which "lady helps" ought to have no difficulty in combating. If they show themselves worth as much as the traditional domestic, or more, they will have no difficulty, in the long run, in getting paid proportionately.

What I long since predicted has come to pass. Coalville has solemnly repudiated George Smith (of Coalville). A public meeting was held in the town the other day, and a resolution carried (only three Coalvillians dissenting), protesting against "the continued and unwarrantable assumption of their town's good name by a person styling himself George Smith, of Coalville, who is neither a native nor resident of their town." The scourge of the dwellers in movable dwellings thus sinks into plain George Smith, and all hope of his founding a family of De Coalvilles is knocked on the head. I trust it may not be long before his philanthropic fads, in which I make no doubt he himself thoroughly believes, meet a similar fate. Smith (late "of Coalville") is, indeed, in the most remarkable position ever occupied by any philanthropist, for it is precisely those about whose welfare he is so concerned who are most unanimous and vehement in denouncing him.

How often our most carefully-planned efforts to do the right thing miscarry the most conspicuously! As a postscript to one letter, I find the following:—

I must apologise for not putting a more complete address on my envelope, but I cannot discover the requisite information from TRUTH.

In this respect French newspapers and periodicals are ahead of us, and they take care that everybody shall know where they are to be found.

Yet, strange to relate, the information which my correspondent is unable to find is the first piece of information given in each number of TRUTH, and is displayed in the most conspicuous place which I have been able to discover in the paper.

"In Search of a Climate" is the title which Mr. Charles G. Nottage has given to an account of what he calls his "latest bit of globe-trotting." Mr. Nottage did not discover the perfect climate for which he sought in Egypt, Australia, Honolulu, or Southern California, but his extensive travels have resulted in the production of a most entertaining volume, which has the additional attractions of being handsomely got up and admirably illustrated. Mr. Nottage was at Honolulu during the revolution some months ago, and perhaps the most interesting parts of his book are those devoted to the Hawaiian Islands. I would particularly recommend the chapter on "Religion and Rum" to the good people who support foreign missions. It fully corroborates all that I have said from time to time regarding the value of the work and the character of many of the men engaged in it.

Mr. R. S. Davis, the American novelist, is giving his impressions of England in Harper's Magazine, and they are very tolerable reading. But what authority has he for saying, in describing the House of Commons, that some of the Liberals are silly enough to make a point of putting their hats on when the Prince of Wales takes his seat under the clock. During a somewhat lengthy experience, I never even heard of a Liberal either putting on his hat or taking off his hat when the Prince of Wales is present. It never would occur to any Member to do either.

I went the other evening to see "A Gaiety Girl," which is amusing and contains a good many telling lines One pleased me especially. A Guardsman is swaggering about Britons ever fighting for their country. "And sometimes for other people's countries" is the answer.

The Palace Theatre of Varieties is a losing concern. The Empire and the Alhambra are most prosperous. This is because the licences of the two latter allow a promenade, and permit liquor to be sold in the auditorium, whilst that of the former does not. I do not enter into the question of whether the promenade and the sale of liquor be desirable or not, but it seems to me that all these enterprises should be put on the same footing. The reason given for the distinction is that the licences of the Empire and the Alhambra were granted before the Council came into existence. This, however, hardly holds water, for a licence has to be renewed each year, and I do not think that I am wrong in saying that this renewal has in many cases been made dependent upon alterations in its conditions being accepted by the licensee.

Stalls at theatres used to cost 5s., and at that time it was customary to exact a fee for a programme, or, in other words, for being shown by an attendant the place that had been paid for. Stalls have gone up, and, as a compensation, fees were abolished. But of late they have again made their appearance at a good many theatres. It is a nuisance to have to search for sixpence, but this is not the only objection to the fee system. No one ever knows in which theatres they are exacted and in which they are not; consequently no one ever knows whether to tender the sixpence or not. The most practical way for the public to protest against this tax would be, never to buy a programme where a charge is made for it.

Mrs. Moore, of Bewdley, has presented the large and very fine collection of fossils, which was formed by her father, the late Colonel Fletcher, to Cambridge University.

It is an extraordinary and unprecedented thing that Lord Robertson should be standing as a candidate for the Lord Rectorship of Edinburgh University, and some effective protest on the subject ought to be registered before so objectionable a precedent is established. The contest is purely a Party contest, and Lord Robertson stands in a peculiar sense as a Party candidate, for he refused to be nominated as an independent candidate, and only consented to come forward as the nominee of the Conservative Association. For a high judicial officer to engage personally in a hot Party fight of this kind, is something new both in Scotland and England, and it is to be hoped that the Lord Justice-General will be warned in time that he is sacrificing the best traditions of the Bench to his intemperate partisan zeal.

The latest news about Christ's Hospital is decidedly interesting. It may be remembered that in May, 1892, I called attention to a serious outbreak of infectious disease in the school. A representative of TRUTH visited the premises, and in consequence of what he saw and was told I published a strong article, pointing out that the condition of things admitted to exist was most dangerous, and that the only proper course was to remove the school from Newgate-street at once, into temporary premises, pending the completion of the new buildings. This advice was not taken, and what is the result? Dr. Sedgwick Saunders now reports a "serious outbreak of scarlet fever," due to "serious defects." He finds that "the sanitary condition of Christ's Hospital renders it absolutely impossible for its further continuance for residential purposes;" and he has, consequently, prevailed upon the authorities to close the school. I understand that it is now closed. This step ought to have been taken a year ago or more, and serious blame rests on those who declined to take it.

The Dean and Chapter of Salisbury have given much satisfaction in the city by presenting the Rev. Herbert Rogers to the Rectory of Stockton, which is worth about £500 a year, with residence. Mr. Rogers, who is one of the most popular and most zealous clergymen in the diocese, has for many years held the poor and laborious city living of St. Thomas's, and he had previously worked hard for a long time at Cranborne, which is another parish with heavy duty and meagre emoluments.

Archdeacon Sinclair is to be the Canon in residence at St. Paul's Cathedral during November, and he will preach on Sunday afternoons throughout the month.

Archbishop Knox, who died last week, was an amiable and dignified ecclesiastic, who was beloved and esteemed by both clergy and laity. He had worn the mitre since 1849, when Lord Clarendon appointed him to the See of Down, Connor, and Dromore, which he held until 1886, when he reluctantly consented to succeed Archbishop Beresford in the Primacy of the Irish Church. Archbishop Knox was a man of temperate judgment and sound common sense, and he proved an admirable President of the General Synod. The vacant Primacy will doubtless be offered to the Bishop of Derry.

The Bishops are more than kind. These spiritual legislators announce that they will not object to the Parish Councils Bill, provided that the "rights" of the Church are not endangered by it. According to them, one of these rights is to continue to distribute village doles, where the Rector and Churchwardens have been made the distributors. But why were they made the distributors? Because at the time of the legacies, they were the only parish authorities in respect to things temporal. The Rector was made a trustee of the fund, not as Rector, but as ex-officio Chairman of the Vestry. If the Rector and the Churchwardens are relieved of their temporal duties in the parish, it seems to me only reasonable that the distribution of the doles should be vested in the hands of those who succeed to the position. The real truth of the matter is this: these doles are used by the Rector to bribe parishioners to adhere to the Church, and to vote against Disestablishment. If fairly distributed heretofore, why should the Church object to be relieved of an invidious task? The money will not disappear, and an equal number of persons will benefit by it. This opposition on the part of the Church is presumptive proof that they were not fairly distributed.

With reference to the transfer of the Rev. Henry Venn from the living of Minster to that of Walmer, I understand that the difference in the net value of the two livings is not so great as would appear from the figures giving in last week's TRUTH, the fact being that the late Incumbent of Minster still draws £300, thus reducing the stipend to about £300.

C.O.M. WHISKY.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—ANDREWS & Co., Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

Last week, at the Chester Consistory Court, Chancellor Espin was required to decide whether it was lawful to place in Old Rode Church a monument with an inscription asking prayers for the departed. The Chancellor's opinion was that the inscription is not lawful, although there is the precedent of the famous church of St. Saviour's, Leeds, "All ye that enter the church, pray for the sinner that built it." Chancellor Espin is apparently unaware of the fact that when Archbishop Longley (then Bishop of Ripon) consecrated St. Saviour's he refused to proceed (after being informed of the aforesaid inscription) until he had been furnished with evidence that "the sinner" was still alive. As a matter of fact, St. Saviour's was built by Dr. Pusey, who survived its consecration for about forty years, so there is no analogy between the two cases. Chancellor Espin has required the applicant in the Old Rode case to "amend" the inscription, which apparently could only be accomplished in the Irish way, by inserting a "don't" before the word "pray." It is quite clear that if such an inscription is unlawful, it cannot possibly be "amended," but must be obliterated and a new one placed on the monument.

The inhabitants of Falmouth are oppressed by an extraordinary ecclesiastical anachronism in the shape of a "rector's rate" at the monstrous figure of 1s. 4d. in the pound, which is levied under a statute of that pillar of the Church and the Christian religion, King Charles the Second. It would seem that the rector is the sole party concerned in the assessment of this monstrous tax, which—whether legally or not I cannot say—is levied, not upon the net, but the full annual rental. Thus, every building improvement, every extension of a house or a shop, puts at once a share of unearned increment into the capacious pocket of the rector. It was a gross piece of negligence, or worse, that these special local rates were left in existence when Church rates at large were abolished, and I would suggest that combined effort to get rid of them should be made by all the places so encumbered.

There is one parson at any rate who has nothing to fear from Disestablishment. Information has reached me concerning a Vicar in North Wales who supplements his more sacred duties of a parish priest by taking part, in partnership with various relatives, in the following businesses:—Hotel proprietor, cab proprietor, furniture remover, proprietor of saw-mills, joiner, blacksmith, wheelwright, painter, paperhanger, miller, grocer, baker, miner, and toll-keeper. He also runs brakes, and is manager of some mineral springs. It would be interesting to know how much of his valuable time this ecclesiastical Whiteley finds himself able to devote to the cure of souls.

There seems reason to suppose that the Rev. Andrew Wilson, of Liverpool, in refusing to baptise a child because the parents had not been confirmed before their marriage, was violating the ecclesiastical law as well as outraging every principle of common-sense and decency. The 68th Canon enacts that

> No minister shall refuse or delay to christen any child according to the form of the Book of Common Prayer that is brought to the church to him upon Sundays or Holy-days to be christened, or to bury any corpse that is brought to the church or churchyard, convenient warning being given him thereof before, in such manner and form as is prescribed in the said Book of Common Prayer. And if he shall refuse to christen the one or bury the other (except the party deceased were denounced excommunicated majori excommunicatione, for some grievous and notorious crime, and no man able to testify of his repentance), he shall be suspended by the Bishop of the diocese from his ministry by the space of three months.

If this be the law, the Bishop of Liverpool has violated it as much as the Vicar. Instead of writing an expostulatory letter to the Vicar, and referring the complaint to a solicitor and the Church Discipline Act, the Bishop ought to have forthwith suspended the Vicar for three months. He seems to have no option or discretion. This Canon appears to be a good serviceable weapon, and it ought to be fired off, and I would suggest to Mr. Barton that he should now appeal to the Archbishop for that purpose.

Publicity has now been given to another eccentricity on the part of Mr. Wilson. In this instance Mr. G. Macmillan, who was recently married at St. Mary's, complains that because he arrived at the hymeneal altar "a little late," a peremptory demand was made for 10s., subsequently reduced to 5s. It was an unpleasant moment for a dispute, and Mr. Macmillan paid the 5s. He did so, however, "under protest," and afterwards wrote to Mr. Wilson, asking under what authority the fine for unpunctuality was exacted, and "to what fund (if any) it has gone." To these awkward questions the Reverend Wilson vouchsafed no reply whatever, and Mr. Macmillan has now been advised by the Bishop's Secretary that the only way to test the question raised is by an action in the County Court.

I would once more remind ladies living in and about Westminster of the existence of the Westminster Needlework Society, which for six years past has been doing valuable work in providing clothing for destitute families in this neighbourhood. The Society, of which Mrs. Langston, 65, Warwick-square, is the President, meets every Thursday at the Town Hall for needlework; and assistance in this work or donations for the purchase of materials are much needed.

I have received the following amounts towards this year's Toy Fund:—

Joseph Sebag Montefiore, £5; Steadman, Van Praagh, Sims, & Co., £2. 2s.; Gladys & Karin, £2. 2s.; Frank M. Dutton, £5; Athenæum, £5; Subaltern, £1; Florence and Maud, 5s.; D. L., 10s.; M. J. Waugh, £2; T. G., 10s.; Lady Diana Huddleston, £1. 1s.; W. S., £1; Mrs. Henry Sutton, £2; A. C. Allen, £2. 2s.

The following contributions have also arrived:—

Anonymously from China, a box of dolls; Mrs. Little, Hong Kong, two dolls; one large scrap-book, Miss Potter, Pau, France

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one half West-end price.—PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion. Perfect fit guaranteed. Caution, the only address, other people are trading on our name.

SILVER DAMASCUS TWIST BANGLE.—A quaint armlet of excellent Eastern design and finish. Its flexibility renders it perfectly safe, whilst it can be altered to suit any wrist, without losing shape. Price 10s. 6d.—LIBERTY & Co., Art Jewellers, Regent-street, W.

Of late I have been constantly appealed to to try and improve the language used in the British Army; but I should like to ask all those who have written to me on the subject what they expect me to do. I have published striking testimony showing that, regardless of rank, every man in the Service is (figuratively speaking) damned. I have endeavoured to show, if the Army is to be delivered from this state of perdition, precisely in what quarter reform must commence. A mere journalist can do no more. It is unfortunately out of the question for me to reproduce the samples of military language which are sent to me. I have had some thoughts of sending a shorthand-writer to attend field-days and similar functions, and take down all he hears, but I know that if I published the result, TRUTH would be in future excluded from all decent houses. We must trust to time, and the spread of education, and the influence of Dr. Edghill's young men, who are understood to be doing so much for the sanctification of the soldier.

I am not particularly given to take up the grievances of officers of the Guards, for, generally speaking, they can look after themselves. But fair is fair, and I do not think that Colonel Stracy, to whose case I referred some time ago, has been quite fairly treated. On ceasing to command one of the Regiments of the Guards, he was deprived of his over-regulation money through what is admitted to have been an oversight of some clerk in the War Office, although it is admitted every officer similarly situated in the last eleven years received this over-regulation. The question is not, therefore, whether officers ought to receive over-regulation, but whether one particular officer ought to lose it through a mistake for which he was not responsible; and that he should under these circumstances lose it is not, as it seems to me, in accordance with justice.

A fortnight back I gave particulars of an hitherto undetected military irregularity, which consists in a soldier getting an order from the Quartermaster-Sergeant on the shoemaker, and receiving cash for it from the shoemaker, instead of goods or work done, the cash received representing only a fraction of the face value of the order. Oddly enough, almost simultaneously with this trick being shown up in TRUTH, an example of it has come to light in Malta. A private made a complaint on the subject to his Commanding Officer. The Company shoemaker was arrested, and made a clean breast of it. The Quartermaster-Sergeant was implicated by his confession and reduced to Sergeant, while the shoemaker got twenty-one days' hard labour.

Considering the character of the offence, these sentences seem excessively light. The soldier who made the complaint stated that on an order for 7s. only 4s. was advanced to him. For what length of time this loan would run I do not know, but at a moderate computation, the interest would work out at the rate of several hundred per cent. per annum. Who pockets this interest? In my last reference to the matter, I suggested the Quartermaster-Sergeant, and the Malta case shows that I was about right. If the Quartermaster-Sergeant was in it at all, he would only be in it as principal, the shoemaker being his agent, working probably on commission. For a Non-Commissioned Officer to engage, in whatever capacity, in a disreputable business of this kind, is a gross offence, and an example should have been made of the offender, for no doubt he is not the only one.

Following on what I have lately said about the "makings" of Warrant and Non-Commissioned officers, I should like to ask the highest military authorities whether it is possible for the following frauds to be perpetrated—let us say in a battery of artillery within an hour's journey of Whitehall. Would it be possible (1) for a man to desert, say, on the first day of the month, for his desertion to be dated in the Pay-list two or three weeks later, and for the Quartermaster-Sergeant and Pay-Sergeant to draw and pocket that man's pay and possibly also his ration allowance for the intervening days? What check has the Paymaster upon the date in such a case?

Again (2), would it be possible for every man in a battery, say 400 strong, to be charged 3d. per month for library subscription, while only about 150 actually belong to the library and appear on the librarian's accounts? If such a thing were done, would it be possible for the difference to find its way every month into the pockets of the Quartermaster-Sergeant and Pay-Sergeant? Would it be possible again (3) for a man's account when he signs it in the Pay List to be made out in pencil and subsequently altered for the benefit of the same parties? If not, what check exists on this form of fraud? Finally (4), would it be possible for a man to be charged for washing when he had none done, and for this charge also to be dealt with in the manner above indicated? I have information which indicates that, owing to the lax system of regimental book-keeping and auditing, all these things not only can be done, but have been done, and if they have been done in one battery or battalion the chances are that they have been done in others.

Here is another question affecting the Royal Artillery which I may take this opportunity of propounding at the same time. Would it be possible for a Quartermaster-Sergeant, whose pay ought not to exceed 4s. 8d. per diem all told, to draw on various accounts a total of 6s. 11d., and to get round the Regulations by inducing a comrade to sign for certain items out of the total, in return for a small commission? I have reason to suppose that in this way a certain Battery Quartermaster-Sergeant is at present drawing the following pay:—Pay of his rank, 4s. 2d.; as Pay-Sergeant of a Battery, 1s. 6d.; for paying band, 1s.; for band-clothing ledger, 3d; total, 6s. 11d. If such a thing is possible it is grossly unfair to other N.C.O.'s, and steps ought to be taken to check such pluralism.

Is there any intention of giving a reply to the memorial of the Staff Corps Officers to the Indian Government? I am reminded by one of them that six months have elapsed since Parliament was informed that the India Office was waiting for the Indian Government. This was the second question that had been asked on the subject, with a very similar result, and to all appearance it is now intended that the process of waiting shall be prolonged indefinitely. If so, a more scandalous exhibition of bad faith has rarely occurred. The Staff Corps Officers were requested by the Indian Commander-in-Chief to drop a petition to Parliament, which had been promoted at great labour and expense. They were further promised that if they would lay their case before the Commander-in-Chief, it would receive the fullest consideration. They promptly and loyally obeyed, and they find, apparently, that they merely lent themselves to a scheme for shelving the whole question.

I understand that the Civil Service Commissioners are now informing candidates for the Royal Engineer Civil Staff that the War Office has power to alter the strength of the Staff from time to time "according to the exigencies of the public service." This is, at any rate, candid, and a similar candour might be shown in some other cases with advantage to those entering the public service. The scandal is that no such intimation has been given before, and that the War Office has already freely exercised the power to alter the strength of the R. E. Civil Staff, to the serious detriment of the members, without previously warning them that this might be done. Whether in the face of this experience, and of the warning now given, candidates will be forthcoming, remains to be seen. But if they are, I hope they will not in a few years time be writing to TRUTH to complain that the result does not equal their anticipations.

An American officer sends me the following letter. The information may possibly be found useful at the Broad Arrow office:—

Newport, R.I., October 14, 1893.

DEAR SIR,—I beg to call to your attention the remarkable reply made by the Editor of the Broad Arrow in theissue of that paper of September 23, to an inquiry regarding the "Brown Regimental Wire Gun" (sic), p. 401, to wit:—

"The Brown gun is an American invention, and 'regimental wire gun' is an Americanism which we take to mean a gun to accompany a regiment or battalion in the field.—ED. B.A."

The Brown Segmental Wire Gun is so called because the tube is made of segmental-shaped bars of steel, around which the wire is wound, or wrapped, at a tension. The gun is 5 in. calibre, and 44 calibres long; its working pressure is said to be 50,000 lb. per square inch; it could be used "as a gun to accompany a battalion in the field" only by the Horse Marines. Perhaps the Editor of the Broad Arrow had that gallant body in mind.

B.

The postal arrangements for H.M. ships on foreign stations are a constant source of trouble and annoyance. On September 21, H.M.S. Phœbe, on the West Coast of Africa, had received no letters since August 7, and as this delay would imply that the mails had been forwarded by mistake to some place where she was not due to call, the ship's company had then every reason to expect that they would be cut off from postal communication with the outer world for two or three months. The Phœbe left Sierra Leone on May 10, returning on September 4, the programme of her movements having been previously forwarded to the Admiralty and exactly followed out; so that there could be not the slightest reason why the mails should not reach her in due course, except through the blundering of some muzzle-headed official in England.

I hear that since the American Line came to Southampton the number of convictions for drunkenness at the local police-court has quadrupled; and the town has been so infested with characters of the worst class that children and young girls have been warned against frequenting some of the public open spaces without protection. This is ascribed partly to the attraction to the town of all sorts of loafers on the look-out for casual employment, and also to the crews of the steamships, who are spoken of locally in very uncomplimentary terms. There is unfortunately a shady side to all commercial greatness.

The story which I gave last week of the Viceroy who remitted home the whole of his salary at the privileged rate of 2s. 2d. per rupee, reveals only a portion of the possibilities thus opened up. I have since heard it narrated of one recent Viceroy that he first remitted home his salary at the above rate, making out of his £25,000 £2,083. He then had the total of £27,083 remitted back again, making on this transaction £17 per £100, or £4,590. The total profit on the two transactions was thus £6,673 per annum, and on this sum, I am told, his Lordship, being a nobleman of economical habits, pretty well lived. He was thus enabled to save an enormous sum, estimated at from £50,000 to £75,000, during his tenure of office, and it is asserted that at the end of his time he remitted the whole of this to England at the privileged rate, making something between £4,000 and £6,000 more on that transaction.

My last budget of letters from India includes one in which I am asked to deal with the price of provisions at Quetta. Employers at that station complain that they have to pay exorbitant wages to domestic servants. Employers here say the same. But it is argued at Quetta (1) that native servants' wages are too high because the necessaries of life are too dear; and (2) that this dearness of food-stuffs is due to excessive charges for shop-rents, market taxes, and octroi duties, coupled with a combination among traders to sell at uniform rates. A Quetta newspaper has urged the Local Government to take various steps which, it is said, would remedy this state of things, and also remove certain other disadvantages under which the natives alone suffer. Having no wish to engage in a controversy on the subject, I prefer not to express an opinion as to the desirability and practicability of the proposed measures.

I have been requested to call attention to the case of Mr. John Clouston, late an examining officer of Customs at Liverpool, who after twenty-eight years' service was dismissed without a pension. In 1891, in consequence of frequent absence from duty through sickness, Mr. Clouston was instructed to send in his papers for superannuation, and he underwent an examination by a doctor on behalf of the Commissioners of Customs. The examination only occupied a few minutes, and it took place in the presence of one of Mr. Clouston's superiors, who is alleged to have been prejudiced against him, and who, whether this be true or not, certainly ought not to have had any communication with the doctor. Two months afterwards Mr. Clouston was informed of his dismissal without a pension. He then learned for the first time that the examining doctor's report was to the effect that his illness had been caused by intemperate habits, and that his constitution had been so impaired that he could not be relied upon for further duty.

Mr. Clouston subsequently submitted to the Commissioners three medical certificates in refutation of the damaging report upon which their decision was based. Two were from doctors who had attended him, and who certified that he suffered from rheumatism, caused by cold and exposure (encountered whilst he was on duty), and that his illnesses were not due to intemperate habits. The third certificate was from an eminent physician, who traversed the statement that Mr. Clouston's constitution was so shattered as to unfit him for further duty, and added that no sign of intemperance could be detected. Most people will regard this testimony in Mr. Clouston's favour as far stronger than the adverse report, founded as it was on a single and more or less cursory examination. The Commissioners, however, having accepted the opinion of one doctor, refuse to listen to the evidence on the other side. It seems to me that they have treated Mr. Clouston with gross injustice, and I hope that means may yet be found of obtaining redress for him.

The Knaresborough Guardians have just decided to apply for a Local Government Board inquiry into the management of the Workhouse. Judging from the scandalous and disgusting disclosures which have been made as to the condition of the Workhouse hospital, an inquiry is urgently needed. And, although the Master is alleged to be responsible for what has occurred, it seems to me that the Inspector might do well to ascertain whether such a state of things could have existed if the Guardians had exercised reasonable care and vigilance in their supervision of the officials. One Guardian observed that theirs "was getting to be known as one of the most cruel Unions in the whole country-side"—a reputation which appears to be fully deserved.

The village of St. Agnes, near Truro, is suffering from a frightful epidemic of diphtheria. Nobody will be surprised at this when it is stated that a doctor found two diphtheritic patients lying in one small bedroom where five other persons also slept; that children just recovering are allowed to go out with other children; and that people take no notice of the disease until they find they have to lie down or go to bed. Between September 15 and October 25 there were fourteen deaths, and the Rural Sanitary Authorities were informed last week that there were likely to be more. The Medical Officer expressed the opinion that if there had been an isolation hospital, only the first case, which was imported from London, would have proved fatal. As the Chairman also mentioned that the Local Government Board had been telling the authority for months to build a hospital, it is pretty clear that these local Bumbles are practically responsible for the loss of life at St. Agnes. What has happened in that unfortunate village should be a warning to Bumbles elsewhere who are equally unprepared.

With reference to the Southampton Tramways, a resident in that town, who claims to have constant opportunities of observing, writes to tell me that he has never witnessed anything that could be called cruelty to horses from overcrowding, except on Bank Holidays, and by the workmen's cars from the docks in the evening, when the conductors are powerless to check it. I would point out in reply, that nothing has been said in TRUTH in regard to such overcrowding except on Bank Holidays. The fact, however, of the conductors being powerless to check the overcrowding of the workmen's cars seems to supply an additional reason why the police should be instructed to exercise some check on the traffic. My correspondent writes more to the point when he says, that the worst cruelty to horses is inflicted by the constant stoppages of the cars, and he suggests that the Company should avoid this by making fixed stopping-places, and halting the cars nowhere else. The Company would probably be afraid of losing passengers, but I strongly hold that such regulations should be made by the police, not only in Southampton but in London and every other town, and for omnibuses equally with tramcars.

Another Southampton correspondent writes:—

It is simply absurd for the Hampshire Advertiser to deny that overcrowding takes place. The paper in question is understood to be carried on by a syndicate. It would be interesting to know how many members of this body are also shareholders in the Tramway Company.

Now that the Bloomsbury barriers are removed, there is a general disposition to get rid of similar obstructions in other parts of London, and I have been invited to head an attack upon the gates at each end of Palace Gardens, Kensington. Until I received this invitation I had no idea that Palace Gardens was not a public thoroughfare. I have myself frequently driven through without asking anybody's leave—but possibly the gatekeeper took me for one of the Royal family. If it is a fact, however, that the road is only open to those having business at the Palace or the adjacent houses, I agree that this state of things requires amendment. The road saves a long détour on the way from Kensington to Bayswater—in fact, there is no other straight and level thoroughfare for at least a mile to the west of it. The houses are few and far between, and lie back behind large gardens, so that the inconvenience resulting from opening the roadway to cabs and light traffic would be inconsiderable.

Apropos of Palace Gardens, it will, I feel sure, be a comfort to nervous Tories to hear that "The London County Council worships the Crown, and is struck dumb with awe at the very sound of the name." I was told this by a Progressive Councillor, so there can be no doubt about it, and it ought to relieve those who look upon the Council as a devouring dragon which seeks to eat up everybody, Crown and all. Owing to this fulsome toadyism on the part of the County Council, it is said to be idle to attempt to get that body to deal with Palace Gardens, which is Crown property. If what is sauce for the Duke of Bedford is not sauce for the Crown, I would suggest that the Crown should follow the constitutional precedent of Constitution Hill, and open the road as an act of grace.

Whether Mr. Monson is guilty or not of the murder of Lieutenant Hambrough is a matter on which a jury will have to decide. In Italy, however, it would be believed that he is a jettatore—that is to say, a person who, from no fault of his own, has the singular attribute of bringing some misfortune on others wherever he goes. The only way for any one brought in contact with such a person to avoid ill consequence is to point two fingers at him. Pope Pio Nono was supposed to be a jettatore, and the most devout Catholics, whilst asking his blessing, used to point two fingers at him. I remember once in Nice there was a gentleman who had this reputation. The Préfet, being a Frenchman, invited him to a ball. He soon, however, discovered that if the jettatore came many others would not, and he had to convey to him delicately the request not to accept the invitation.

A few years ago Mr. Monson rented a large house in the country which was standing idle. Soon the ricks of hay there were burnt down. A little later the stables were burnt, when some horses belonging to him were nearly destroyed owing to its having been forgotten until the last moment to open the door in order to let them out. But as they were his horses, and the property of the jettatore himself never is injured, the stable door was opened by the villagers just in time to save his horses. Mr. and Mrs. Monson left the house on his tenure of it expiring, but a servant was left there to bring up luggage, &c., the next day. That night the house was burnt down, and jewellery belonging to Mrs. Monson was melted. As, however, it was insured, the loss did not fall on Mr. Monson, which would be deemed in Italy an additional reason for believing that he has the "evil eye."

The "Medical Boarding-house" which Dr. Cæsar Douglas Sherrard carries on at Avalon House, Eastbourne, is evidently a remarkable establishment. On Friday an inquest was held there concerning the death of an Irish lady who had been under Dr. Sherrard's care. Her husband stated that on the previous Monday he received a letter from Dr. Sherrard informing him that the deceased had made "a silly attempt to cut her throat, but he (the writer) did not think anything of it, as he was sure God would not allow anything to happen in that establishment." Something did happen, however, for on the Wednesday the lady jumped from her bedroom window and broke her neck. Dr. Sherrard told the Coroner that he had "thirty or forty of these people" at Avalon House, and that, "if they don't get well in three months they generally go to an asylum." His treatment, he further explained, was "moral and spiritual." Although Dr. Sherrard may be satisfied with the Divine supervision of his medical boarding-house, the public will probably agree with the jury in thinking that it should be supplemented by a little attention from the Commissioners in Lunacy.

MAJOR HOWE & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

When a couple of policemen want to tell the same story, an unexpected order for No. 2 to leave the Court whilst No. 1 is giving his evidence may be embarrassing. It was so in a case heard by the Newcastle-on-Tyne Magistrates last week. A young man was summoned for using bad language in Heaton Park. He denied the offence, but admitted that he called one of the constables a coward for striking a lad on the head with a stick, and said it was for this that he was arrested and taken to the police-station. In cross-examination, the first constable stated that the lad cut his head open by running against the stick carried by the other officer! The latter, having been sent out of Court, did not hear this ingenious explanation, and informed the Bench that the lad cut his head open by running against a wall. As the policemen also flatly contradicted each other on another point, and as they were both contradicted by two witnesses for the defence, the Magistrates dismissed the summons. It is now clearly the duty of the Watch Committee to dismiss the two constables.

It is easy to imagine what sort of opinion the people of Walsall entertain regarding their County Court Judge when a local newspaper ventures to write of him in this style:—

> Judge Griffiths, of the Walsall County Court, gave another exhibition of his shortness of temper yesterday. His asperity is rapidly becoming a matter of notoriety, and until he can display less irritability of disposition and more courtesy to those with whom he comes in contact, he will rob his position of the dignity which is popularly supposed to attach to it.

These remarks, and others even more severe, were evoked by a scene which occurred between his Honour and a Birmingham barrister. The latter pointed out an error on the part of the Judge, and although he was peremptorily ordered to "hold his tongue," stuck to his point, and gained it. It is to be hoped that Judge Griffiths will make some effort to curb his temper and improve his manners. He may have no regard for his own dignity, but other Judges care for theirs, and it is a pity that the reputation of the Bench generally should suffer, as it may do with some people, through the irascibility, to say the least of it, of one County Court functionary.

A Judge and Jury last week decided that it is no libel to call one of the fair sex a woman, although she may claim to be a "lady." We shall next hear of a new edition of the Bible, in which "lady" is substituted wherever woman is now used, and divines will refer to the "Lady of Samaria." This plan has, indeed, been adopted by some of the American clergy, to judge by an extract from a sermon preached there, which I lately came across. "Who were last at the Cross?" said the preacher, "Ladies." "Who were first at the Sepulchre? Ladies." Still, if I thought that it would please any particular woman to call her a lady—or, indeed, an angel—I should at once do so. In Austria, when I years ago lived there, it was the custom of every one to address the waitress in a restaurant as "beauteous maiden," and she replied when she got her tip, "I kiss your hand," although the maiden was not always beautiful, nor was the hand kissed. All these sort of terms and expressions are conventional. As to what woman is a lady, opinions may differ; but the general rule may be laid down that the woman who insists that she must be called one, is not a lady.

"IZAL."—The new non-poisonous Disinfectant. The strongest and safest the world has ever known. Of all Chemists, in large bottles, at 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., and gallon tins, 10s.

But it has been reserved to a member of the aristocracy who advertises in the Morning Post, asking brother aristocrats to come to his aid to enable him to pay his bills, to invent a new word for tradesmen who are not prepared to provide "a living business" to fine gentlemen who condescend to live but who are not prepared to work. He says that he is "harassed by plebeians." These plebeians actually want him to pay for goods supplied. What next? Really, Society should band itself together to stamp out such absurd pretensions.

We have, it seems, now got so far as to be blessed with a "Married Women's Protection Society." To relieve any apprehensions which this announcement may cause, I hasten to mention that at present the Society professes only one "object," and that an inoffensive one—namely, "To compel men who have deserted their wives to make proper provision for them without necessitating their having recourse to the workhouse." This, however, may be only the thin end of the wedge. It being impossible to foretell in what direction the movement may expand, I would suggest that no time should be lost in promoting a Married Men's Protection Society.

That something will have to be done for married men before long is shown by the terrible disclosures before Mr. Justice Barnes in the case of Bruce v. Bruce. The unfortunate petitioner in this suit married, in a moment of infatuation, "a very, tall, strong woman." She had been for some years in the habit of knocking him about in a brutal manner, especially when she was "in the usual state—pretty well drunk." She had belaboured him with her fists and threatened to murder him. Occasionally she emphasised her threats with a poker, and once she had half-killed him by throwing a big glass lustre at him. We shall have more of this sort of thing as the race of "tall, strong women" multiplies—and they seem to be growing taller and stronger every day.

The shocking part of poor Bruce's case, however, is that the Judge, in granting a separation, ordered the poor wretch to pay his wife £1 a week, which, he said, was "usual." This is a pretty example of what the advanced school of women call (very justly) "our infamous marriage laws." If a man knocks his wife about and is judicially separated from her, he is ordered to pay a weekly sum for her maintenance. Why, then, if she is separated for knocking him about, is she not ordered to maintain him? What is sauce for the wife-beater should be sauce for the husband-beatress.

EIDERDON PURE WOOLLEN FABRICS, in various weights and colourings, for Dressing Gowns, Smoking Jackets, Ladies' three-quarter Capes, Dresses, and Underskirts; also the new Ballylareen Duffle Frieze for Ulster Coats, Inverness Capes, and all descriptions of Winter Wraps where "warmth without weight" is the desideratum. The Eiderdon Rug. Samples of Boyd & Company's productions, with "The Book of the Ulster," illustrated, and forms for self-measurement, may be obtained, post free, on application to the Sole Proprietors and Makers, BOYD & Co., 77, Royal-avenue, Belfast

The case of the laundrymaid at Caterham Asylum against the Chaplain at that establishment ended last Wednesday in the summons being dismissed, the Bench remarking that there was no particle of evidence to corroborate the woman's statements. This does not surprise me, for, as I have already explained, the parties had each brought their cases to the impartial judgment seat of TRUTH, and it certainly seemed to me that in point of argument the gentleman had the best of it. It was desirable for all parties, however, that a grave charge of this kind should be decided coram populo by a competent tribunal. That was what I have contended for from the first, and that was what Mr. Closs desired, so that everybody is satisfied, except the young woman, and even she has enjoyed the satisfaction of assaulting Mr. Closs in the street and knocking his hat into the gutter.

It has been my privilege to represent the Justice of the Peace in many interesting lights, but I cannot remember that my readers have ever yet had an opportunity of studying him in the character of a betting agent. Councillor J. Seaton Loweth, J.P., of Stamford, has now kindly enabled them to do so. At Derby County Court the other day he sued to recover a sum of £44, to which amount he had backed certain horses on the instructions of the defendant. The defendant took refuge in the plea that the transaction was illegal, and, of course, got judgment. It is to be hoped that in his own Court this worthy J.P. will never have to pass sentence upon anybody convicted of offences against the betting laws, or questions may be raised as to whether he is quite the right man to be entrusted with that duty.

Last Thursday one Crumb, a labourer at Curry Revel, Somersetshire, was convicted before the county Magistrates at Ilminster of having most brutally ill-treated his daughter, an imbecile girl aged thirteen, who has one side paralysed. It appeared that this miscreant had beaten her naked body violently with a stick, and she was seriously injured. The compassionate Justices let off the ruffian with a fine of ten shillings. If Crumb had killed a rabbit, or if he had stolen a few turnips, he would no doubt have been sent to Taunton gaol for three months.

The case of the tram-driver, Sherwood, at Birmingham, was in one respect worse than I represented it last week. The man was actually fined 10s., in addition to being ordered to pay the costs. These costs, I am given to understand, amount to between £3 and £4, so that the man has really received a most severe punishment. It is stated that the Union have taken the case up, and that there is to be an appeal against the decision. The most effective way of reviewing the sentence, however, would be for Mr. Asquith to order the fine and costs to be remitted, and at the same time intimate to the Birmingham Justices that the oath of one policeman, preferring a charge, ought not to outweigh the evidence of three disinterested spectators.

PFUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. PFUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. Several sentences from Quarter Sessions again demonstrate the utter failure of these Courts, as at present constituted, to administer the law on anything like just or rational lines. In the record of Police-court performances, the most grotesque exhibition of injustice is supplied by a learned Magistrate at Dublin, who visits a technical, if offensive, assault on a policeman with a penalty eight times heavier than that imposed upon the ruffians who knocked down and kicked two girls so violently that they had to be removed to the Infirmary. Amongst the English cases the convictions for exceptionally atrocious cruelty to animals at Llandudno, Wilmslow, and Hazel Grove are noteworthy as examples of the inexplicable lenity with which the Great Unpaid treat this offence. In each instance a term of hard labour was obviously the only fitting punishment:—

East Suffolk Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. A. C. Pretyman and other Justices. William Newson pleaded guilty to an indecent assault. Two months.

East Suffolk Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. C. H. Berners and other Justices. Arthur Sparrow, charged with obtaining 6s. 6d. by false pretences. Three years.

Newark and Retford Quarter Sessions. Before Major Becher, General Warrand, Colonel Burnell, Messrs. Thorpe, Oates, W. E. Dennison, Willson, C. C. Curtis, and Edge. John Healy pleaded guilty to indecently assaulting Hannah M. Winks. Six months.

Newark and Retford Quarter Sessions. Before the same Magistrates. Henry Hickman pleaded guilty to putting lime in the river Greet, being private water, to destroy fish. Five years.

West Sussex Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. Lumley Smith, Q.C. Charles Harris, convicted of indecently assaulting Fanny Baxter. The Chairman said it was intolerable a respectable girl could not go home without being assaulted. Two months.

West Sussex Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. Lumley Smith, Q.C. Charles Reeves pleaded guilty to stealing a sheep-skin and a lamb-skin. Three months.

Essex Quarter Sessions. Before the Rev. E. F. Gepp. George Roe, charged with an indecent assault, which was described as exceptionally gross and cruel. Three months.

Essex Quarter Sessions. Before Lord Rookwood. John Brooks, indicted for obtaining thirty-six beer bottles by false pretences. Six months.

Dublin Northern Division Police-court. Before Mr. Keys, Q.C. Michael Daly and James McCarthy charged with being disorderly by fighting. Daly was further charged with assaulting a girl named Mooney by knocking her down and kicking her. McCarthy was also charged with kicking Mooney and assaulting and kicking another girl. Both girls had to be taken to the hospital. Fined 5s. each or four days.

Dublin Northern Division Police-court. Before Mr. Keys, Q.C. A young man named Albert Hitchinough charged with using abusive and insulting language to a constable; also with assaulting the officer by spitting at him. Fined £2 or one month.

Penzance Petty Sessions. Before Mr. R. H. Preston, Major Ross, and Alderman Coldwell. John Tyack, charged with cruelty to a mare. The animal having fallen and being unable to rise, Tyack beat her violently on the head with his whipstock, which he broke, and kicked her with thick, heavy boots. Fined 10s. and costs.

Penzance County Magistrates' Court. Before Messrs. T. W. Field and C. C. Ross. William H. Bidder and Arthur Lashley, charged with vagrancy. They were found sleeping under a tree in Tranecre Fields. One month each.

Torquay Police court. Before Messrs. W. B. Hamlyn, P. B. Drinkwater, and J. Tyler. Charles Ayshford, charged with being drunk. He was found lying asleep on the footpath, and a policeman took him home. Fined 7s. 6d. including costs.

Torquay Police court. Before Mr. W. B. Hamlyn. Henry Reid, tramp, charged with sleeping out. He was found lying at the entrance of the Royal Public Hall with a bottle of rum by his side. Fourteen days.

Llandudno Police-court. Charles Brown, game-keeper, charged with cruelty to a terrier belonging to Thomas Parry. Complainant's wife was out with the dog, when defendant shot it in the hind legs. He afterwards dashed the dog against a tree, horribly mutilating one of its hind legs, and then threw it down and left it. Fined 20s. and costs.

Penrith Police-court. Before Messrs, J. E. Hasell, H. Riley, W. L. Brooksbank, F. C. Cowper, J. W. Nelson, and Joseph Parker. John Thompson, John Watson, and Joseph Yeates, charged with poaching. Two months each, and a further six months in default of finding sureties.

Wilmslow Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. E. H. G. Greg, H. C. Yates, T. Collier, and Colonel Dixon. A farmer, named Wilkinson, charged with cruelty to a horse. Defendant bought the horse for £2, knowing that one of its feet was badly diseased with canker. He tied the animal to the back of a cart to take it home. Before he had proceeded half a mile the horse's diseased foot came clean off, but defendant continued his journey, which could be traced by the blood left on the road. The horse was afterwards turned out in a field. Fined £5 and costs.

Salford Hundred Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. Addison, Q.C. John Barnes, charged with stealing a suit of clothes. Nine months.

Edith A. Clarke, aged 23, charged with stealing a shawl. Six months.

West Kent Quarter Sessions. George Walters, charged with stealing 6 lb. of cob-nuts. Twelve months.

Hazel Grove Petty Sessions. William Coope, market-gardener, charged with cruelty to a horse. He bought the horse for £2, and attached it to the rear of his cart. It was so weak that it fell down, and was dragged along the road for some distance. The horse was then detached, and a constable found it lying on the roadside. Along the road there was a large quantity of blood and horsehair. Fined 20s., and costs.

Maidstone Police-court. Sarah Chaplin, a young woman charged with stealing two cabbages from a field. Seven days.

Maldon Petty Sessions. Before Rev. E. R. Horwood and Mr. James Barrill. Thomas Ford and William Partridge, charged with sleeping out. Seven days each.

Liverpool Police-court. A policeman convicted of an unprovoked assault upon a man whom he struck under the chin and knocked down, inflicting severe injuries. The Bench said "they were sorry for the defendant, but he must pay a fine of £1 and costs."

Dundee Police-court. Mary Hargellon convicted of assaulting a policeman by striking him in the face. Three months.

Lanark Police-court. Before Bailies Murphy and Milton. William Wilson, farmer, charged with assaulting a child, knocking two teeth down his throat, and otherwise injuring him. The child had been hanging on to accused's cart, and Bailie Murphy said this annoyed people. Fined 10s.

Bolton Police-court. Before the Mayor (Alderman Nicholson) and other Magistrates. Richard Orrell, charged with cruelty to a horse, which was being worked whilst bleeding from sores and shockingly emaciated. The animal was so starved that it gnawed its manger. Fined 5s. and costs.

It would save a good deal of trouble to all parties if my Indian readers would understand that I cannot run a "Pillory" for the benefit of Indian Magistrates. For instance, by a recent mail I received some communications about a case in which a tailor was fined and imprisoned for stealing a yard or two of lace. My correspondents think that the tailor was wrongly convicted, and I dare say he was; but I see no evidence of it in the accounts of the case furnished to me, and this applies to a great many other cases. Gross miscarriages of justice occur in India and many other parts of the world which deserve the notice of the English press, and to which I am delighted to attend. But India is such a large country, and such a long way off, that I cannot undertake to look after the daily doings of all the local police-courts.

THE IMPERIAL, EAST CLIFF, BOURNEMOUTH.—Position, appointments, and cuisine unsurpassed. 100 rooms. Luxuriously furnished. Electric light. Private omnibuses meet trains. Telegraphic address, Imperial, Bournemouth.—CHAS. A. REINGPACH, Manager.

In preparation for the cold season, ladies and gentlemen should visit Ulster House, Conduit-st., W., where their orders for every kind of garment will have prompt and careful attention.

At Scarborough Police-court last week a woman named Crosier was fined £21 and costs for cruelty to her baby, who owing to her wilful negligence was found in a most revolting condition. Did it not occur to the Bench, as it must to everybody else, that a pecuniary penalty is a preposterously inadequate punishment for such an offence? The woman's neglect was attributed, I see, "wholly to drink." Surely that was an additional reason why she should have been subjected for a time to wholesome treatment in one of her Majesty's prisons.

A discussion by the Bournemouth Town Council has emphasised what I said last week as to the necessity of watching the conduct of Local Authorities in matters relating to the administration of the law. Some time ago the Inspector of Weights and Measures for the Borough obtained a summons against a certain butcher. He did so upon the advice of the Town Clerk, who made the very proper and perhaps significant remark, "We must serve all alike who break the law." After the summons had been served, the Mayor took upon himself to order its withdrawal. His Worship had, of course, no right to do anything of the kind, and the Inspector would have been perfectly justified in going on with the case. It is hardly necessary to say, however, that the Mayor was obeyed, and his most objectionable action has been practically approved by a majority of the Council. One Member, in referring to the withdrawal of this particular prosecution, said "he wanted all tarred with the same brush, whether they were members of the Yelverton Club or not." To people at a distance, this observation appears somewhat enigmatical. Doubtless it is thoroughly understood at Bournemouth.

The course adopted by Mr. Curtis-Bennett in a case at West London Police-court the other day has given a much-needed advertisement to an excellent Act which was passed last Session, and which has not been so widely noticed as it deserves to be. An extremely asinine provision of the law, which has been denounced in TRUTH for years past, has hitherto compelled Magistrates to commit juvenile delinquents to gaol prior to their reception in a reformatory. Under the Reformatory Act, 1893, Magistrates are for the first time enabled to dispense with the preliminary term of imprisonment, and by doing so Mr. Curtis-Bennett has set an excellent example, which will, I hope, be followed throughout the country. If the offender cannot be at once removed to a reformatory, he may be detained at any place of which the Court approves. At the request of the Wolverhampton Stipendiary the Guardians in that town have consented to temporarily receive such cases when necessary at the workhouse.

The individual charged at Bow-street last Wednesday with a long catalogue of frauds, and described by several papers as "Colonel Barrow" (alias Count Hovardi, Count von Howard, Colonel Howard, Colonel Tempest, Colonel Cleveland, &c.), will probably have been recognised by most readers of TRUTH as our old friend "Colonel Berron," of the Secret Cabinet, alias "Evans, Evans, & Co.," of Swansea, alias "Alpha Menteith," of Reading. It will be remembered that when I first introduced him to public notice in 1891, he was carrying on in partnership with Mr. Usher, of Swansea, an agency for introducing young ladies with money but no antecedents to Court and Society. Other interesting phases of the agency conducted in the name of Evans, Evans, & Co. have also been described in TRUTH, as well as the Secret Cabinet business, and the Colonel's more recent attempts to marry off bachelor English noblemen to Colonial heiresses. In the present state of the proceedings at Bow-street, I am precluded from saying more about Barron's history; but without in any way prejudicing the result, I may, perhaps, be allowed to hope that he will eventually be dealt with in accordance with his merits.

From such facts as reach me from time to time I come to the conclusion that justice is administered in the Channel Islands in the most primitive fashion known to any civilised country. An elderly Frenchwoman, named Levrier, was recently found dead in her room one morning. A man named Bréanchel, who was alleged by one or two witnesses to have been seen in her company overnight, was arrested on suspicion. The case at first looked somewhat mysterious, but the medical evidence at the inquest showed that the woman was a drunkard, and that her heart and other organs were in a diseased condition, and the verdict was "death from natural causes." Bréanchel, however, was called as a witness at the inquest. He was examined by an officer called the Queen's Comptroller, who appears to be both an advocate and an executive legal official. Bréanchel admitted that he went to deceased's room to pay her for work done, but denied that he was there more than ten minutes, or that he had seen and spoken to other witnesses. The Queen's Comptroller warned him that if he continued to deny he would be charged with perjury. But he did continue to deny, and thereupon the Queen's Comptroller ordered a constable to arrest him on the charge of perjury, and he was removed from the witness-box in custody. What has happened to him since I cannot say, but bearing in mind that at the time of the foregoing incident the man was under arrest on suspicion of being concerned in the woman's death, and that he was being pressed to answer questions directly tending to criminate himself, a more outrageous abuse of legal procedure can hardly be imagined.

There was an amazing display of Magisterial imbecility at Newtown, Montgomeryshire, last week. After hearing the evidence in a charge of indecent assault, the J.P.'s present—Mr. R. Lloyd and Captain Pryce-Jones—retired to consider their decision. On returning, the Chairman, addressing the defendant, said, "There was some doubt in the matter, the benefit of which he would receive, and he would, therefore, be discharged." Then he told the man that his conduct had been shameful, and that he had had a very narrow escape. "Had you been sent for trial," he continued, "you, no doubt, would have been sentenced to a long term of imprisonment." The ludicrous inconsistency of these utterances will be apparent to everybody—except, perhaps, the muddy-minded Shallow responsible for them. If the prisoner would have received "a long term of imprisonment" if committed, the Bench have obviously been guilty of a gross breach of duty in failing to commit him.

COACHING of highest excellence in West of Eng. at "Crawford's," Wykeham Ho., Clifton, Glos., for ARMY EXAMS. (Univ. and Civ. Serv.). Five crowded years of success. No vacancies till Jan., '94.

Bailie Crawford, of Partick, has managed to completely eclipse in point of absurdity the sentences for attempted suicide upon which I commented last week. This intelligent magistrate has just committed a man to gaol for twenty days merely because he had threatened to cut his own throat. The defendant was a rejected lover, and he told the young woman that if she did not change her mind he would cut his throat. He seems to have been before the Court for a similar "offence" in August. Next time he utters this terrible threat he should be charged with endeavouring to induce a lady to change her mind by false pretences.

A good deal of interest has been excited at Southport lately by a case in which a Mr. Joseph Sutton Dickin was summoned for aiding and abetting a woman charged with objectionable behaviour in a public place. The female defendant pleaded guilty, and two detectives gave evidence in support of the summons against Mr. Dickin. The Magistrates, however, dismissed both cases. The decision does not seem to have been accepted as satisfactory, for last week the Watch Committee held an inquiry into the matter, with the result that they "unanimously decided" that they had the utmost confidence in the two detectives, and "thoroughly believed their statements." These proceedings are certainly not calculated to promote confidence in the administration of justice at Southport, and I am curious to learn what the next move will be.

Certain facts have come under my notice which reflect very seriously upon the management of a West End Registry Office for Foreign Governesses, though I believe that very similar practices go on at many other employment agencies for women. A girl is induced to come to London by a representation that the agency has a vacancy which will just suit her. On her arrival the promised vacancy is not available, but the girl is taken in as a boarder at the registry office on the representation that another situation is sure to be forthcoming in a day or two. There she remains, as might be expected, until all her money is gone, and perhaps a good slice of her first year's salary pledged, when the agency proceeds to find her a place. In the particular case which I have had under my notice, a girl who was boarding at a registry office in this way wrote to a lady desirous of engaging her, and offered to take the situation if the lady would advance her the money to pay her debts at the office. The money having been advanced, the girl eventually arrived minus her watch which had been detained as security for a further balance, alleged to be due from her to the office. English girls and foreigners alike ought, of course, to be warned by their friends against looking for employment at agencies which also undertake to board them.

From certain advertisements, answers to correspondents, &c., which have recently appeared in a ladies' newspaper respecting Mrs. "Anna Ruppert," it would appear that the editor of the journal in question is not aware of the character of the preparations sold by the lady in question. I therefore take the liberty of calling my contemporary's attention to the result of a recent case heard at Dublin, where it was clearly proved that Mrs. Ruppert's goods were not merely useless, but positively injurious. After that exposure, I take it that no respectable newspaper ought to advertise Mrs. Ruppert's wares, much less give her editorial recommendations. In saying this, I am only preaching what I myself practise. Mrs. Ruppert's advertisement was for some time received and published in TRUTH in the ordinary course of business; but when the reports of the Dublin case apprised me of the real nature of the objections to the lady's trade, I declined to advertise her further.

I may add that I took precisely the same course as that just mentioned with regard to Mr. Harness, whose name has lately occupied public attention, when the result of litigation made it apparent that his proceedings were open to grave suspicion. In this connection, I would point out to Dr. Arthur Welsford, who wrote a few days back to the Pall Mall Gazette from 6, Cambridge-terrace, Dover, that he is in error in stating that a large advertisement of Harness's had appeared in the then current number of TRUTH. The advertisement referred to—an advertisement inviting the public to take debenture stock in the Company—was of an essentially different character from an advertisement inviting the public to buy Harness's belts; and it did not reach this office through the same channel as Harness's trade advertisements. This, doubtless, accounts for the fact that the debenture stock advertisement appeared in several journals which, like TRUTH, declined to advertise the belt further after the result of the Harness libel cases. Had this special advertisement been brought under my personal notice, I might possibly, under all the circumstances, have declined to let it appear; but I should have felt under no obligation to do so, merely because I had previously refused the trade advertisement.

The ethics of newspaper advertising is a subject on which I have several times discoursed, and in regard to which I hope that I have made my position clear to every reader of TRUTH. I do not accept, and no editor accepts, any responsibility for the statements made by advertisers respecting their wares. They are published as the statements of the advertisers, and they are entitled to just as much, or as little, weight when made in a newspaper as when placarded on a hoarding, or uttered across the counter. As between the tradesman and his customer, the rule of law is Caveat emptor—the buyer must look after himself. If this rule protects the tradesman who makes the statement, a fortiori it should protect a third party who is a mere medium of publication. But there is a point at which even a tradesman's puff may become dishonest, and where the law gives the buyer a remedy. There are also mischievous and objectionable trades of many kinds—e.g., girl flogging—which are carried on in the guise of legitimate business. When a newspaper proprietor—or for that matter the proprietor of a hoarding—becomes aware of circumstances of such a nature, it is clearly his duty to refuse to advertise the tradesman in question. If he does not refuse, he appears to me to become a party to the iniquity, whatever it may be. These are the principles on which I have, so far as practicable, always acted, both in conducting TRUTH and in criticising advertisements appearing in other journals.

For THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH, Epps's Glycerine Jujubes will always be found effective. Sold only in boxes 7½d., or tins 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

At the end of last week I received a circular letter from Mr. Harness, informing me that in March last he had invited the heads of several learned bodies to form a Committee of Investigation into his belt, and asking, "what more could he do?" The answer to this last question seemed to me simple—namely, bring an action for libel against the Pall Mall Gazette. I am glad to see, however, that Mr. Harness has now saved me the trouble of pointing this out to him. I have no faith in scientific Committees of Investigation; but I believe fully in the good old-fashioned Judge and Jury. Unless by faith-healing, I do not think that the Harness Belt has ever afforded relief to suffering humanity. This may, however, be said of many so-called remedies. Far more serious are the allegations of blackmailing made against Mr. Harness.

I rejoice that the whole question is now to be threshed out. To my mind, however, the moral effect of the impeachment of Harness's business has been somewhat spoiled by the extravagant jubilation of the "regular practitioner" over the assault upon a "quack." There is a little too much of a cash basis about this virtuous indignation, and it leads to decidedly inconvenient results. For instance, Dr. Welsford, to whom I have referred above, is for making short work of all the patent-medicine men:—

> If you inquire (he writes) into the nature of other quack remedies you will find much the same thing. In the majority of the pills and potions so extensively advertised, there is but one active ingredient—Barbadoes aloes—one of the cheapest drugs in the market. By lying and spurious advertisements, people are induced to pay large sums of money for this common drug, which, &c., &c.

What "large sums?" Thirteenpence-halfpenny, at the outside. Will Dr. Welsford cure me of a bilious attack for less than that? Are we to understand from him that the regular practitioner regulates his charges according to the market value of the drugs he dispenses? I myself habitually patronise some two or three well-known and much-advertised patent medicines. With their help I find that I can deal with all the minor ills that flesh is heir to. I can well understand that the regular practitioner would like to see the vendors of these drugs suppressed, in order that he might physic me for a guinea, where I can physic myself for thirteenpence-halfpenny. This, however, I do not consider would be to my interest. Still less would it be to the interest of the large class with whom guineas are even more scarce than with me, and to whom even thirteenpence-halfpenny is a matter of consequence

It is the story of the advertising dentists over again. A year or two ago a Wimpole-street dentist wrote and published a paper denouncing me for publishing the advertisements of dentists—even legally-qualified men with a legal right to advertise. This caused me to look closely into the matter. The result of my inquiries conclusively showed that the advertising dentist's method of doing business was the sound one, and that it was the Wimpole-street man who is the enemy of the public. I would respectfully warn the medical fraternity against raising a similar question.

Apropos to some remarks in TRUTH, a correspondent sends me a recent issue of the Yorkshire Gazette, containing what purports to be an article or a story under the heading "Girls of the Right Sort." This fiction—fiction it most certainly is, and of a most disgusting nature—is in reality a paid advertisement of a well-known quack remedy; but there is no indication of any sort that it is an advertisement, and the obvious intention is to conceal that fact, and to palm it off upon the ignorant as a piece of editorial matter, if not authentic news. That this sort of thing is an abuse of newspaper advertising, and a discredit to the Press generally, is a matter on which there can be no two opinions.

It is strange, but nevertheless true, that a passenger travelling to the Isle of Wight by the last train at night from Waterloo is expected to pass the interval between the arrival of the train at Portsmouth and the departure of the boat in the open air. This interval is about two hours and three-quarters. The hotels refuse to let the traveller a bedroom, or sofa-room, for this time. The station and the pier waiting-rooms are closed against him. On a stormy or wet night his position is, consequently, lamentable; and a resident in the Island, who is my authority for these statements, tells me that on such occasions he has been reduced to hiring a cab by the hour, and sitting in it till the boat starts. As I understand that the steamer is lying at the pier-head all this time, why on earth cannot passengers be allowed to go on board when the train arrives?

In view of their patents running out during the next month, the Edison-Swan Company has already reduced the price of its electric lamps from 4s. 6d. to 1s. 9d. I believe, however, that they might be sold at 1s. with a good profit. I therefore hope that a spirited competition amongst manufacturers will bring them down to that figure.

There is little use in disputing whether employers or employed are responsible for the strike in the coal trade. What with differences between amounts paid in pits, difference of the days of work in them, and differences in retentions, it will be very difficult to come to any very clear understanding as to what the average wage of a miner was before the strike. At present prices, there is no doubt that pits can pay the old scale of wages. If, therefore, the owners are wise they will agree to pay them for the next three months. During this time a modus vivendi between employers and employed might be arranged. Irrespective of the past, the amount that constitutes a fair wage ought to be decided, and in no case should any one be employed for less than this wage. Then comes the question of short time. This might be met by making the wage weekly instead of daily—a week being five and a-half days of eight hours. What would then become of the mines that could not work profitably full time? This:—A coal mine is property in the sense that land is property. The owner has a right to extract coal and to sell it. But if he cannot do this, then it is absurd to say that he may hinder others from doing it. The condition of the proprietary right in a coalpit should be, that the coal be worked; if the individual owner ceases to work it, his proprietary right should lapse to the State.

"VERREY'S" RESTAURANT, Regent-street, corner of Hanover-street. The oldest and most select French Restaurant in London. Ladies' luncheons at moderate prices a specialty. Dinners à la carte.

The result of such a plan would be that a considerable number of coal pits would cease to be worked, for the plain reason that if a fair wage be paid they cannot be worked except at a loss. This would necessitate a number of men, now employed in coal-getting, having to find some other occupation. But this is the inevitable consequence of there being more pitmen than work for pitmen, and there is no existing remedy for this but reducing their number.

I do not believe in any sliding scale of wages dependent upon the price at which an article is sold, or the profits of the employer. This conflicts with the idea of a fair wage being the first charge on the undertaking. If I were a large employer of labour I should, in good years, possibly make a present to my employés, but this would be an act of free will, and would not form a portion of my bargain with them. The sliding scale means that the wage ought to be dependent on the amount of profit earned, but this conflicts entirely with the principle of a fair wage as a first charge, whether there be large profit or no profit. And when I say that I am opposed to a sliding scale, I am speaking entirely in the interests of the employed.

The coal business is so enormous, and a dispute in it is so far-reaching in its effect, that the State should lay down hard-and-fast lines under which pits are to be worked, and there should be some sub-department in the Board of Trade to see that the law is fairly carried out by coal-owners. A Committee of the House of Commons, or a Royal Commission, should sit as soon as possible, to settle what these lines ought to be.

Do prices rule wages, or can wages rule prices? This is at the bottom of the dispute in the coal industry. Where there is heavy foreign competition, the first is the rule, because the wage-earners throughout the world cannot combine. Where there is no foreign competition, or but little, the latter is possible, at the cost of a reduction of output. Take a coal-pit. An owner has to buy machinery, &c. The cost of this machinery is a fixed one, and not dependent upon the selling price of coal. So it ought to be with wages. The living wage, like the cost of the machinery, should be a fixed charge. If the seam is so thin, or if it is so situated that the cost of bringing coal to the surface does not allow for a living wage to the employed, then the pit cannot be worked, and ought not to be worked. Coal is one of our necessities. But it is not a necessity that coal should be sold at a price which either gives no profit to the coal-owner, or only secures him a profit by sweating his employés.

In last week's TRUTH doubt was thrown upon the authenticity of a letter published in the Times under the heading "A Working Man on the Coal Strike." So high is my opinion of the intelligence of the working classes, that I found it impossible to believe that any working man could really suppose that strikes and bad trade were the natural result of the existence of a Home Rule Ministry. It seems, however, that I was mistaken. The writer of the letter has been discovered somewhere near Manchester, and I am satisfied that he really is a bonâ fide working man, though unfortunately he is at present out of work—of course, through the fault of the "Grand Old Word-Spinner."

This statement is due to the Editor of the Times. It is, however, also due to working men at large that I should explain that the evidence of his identity, privately furnished to me, shows this proletarian scribbler to be entirely out of sympathy with his own class, and cordially in sympathy with the class above him. He is one who feels that he is a cut above those among whom he works, and he would like to find himself in some sphere affording a wider scope for his talents, such as a paid lecturer who could go about instructing working-men in the duties of citizenship, and (I suppose) enlightening them respecting the iniquities of Mr. Gladstone and the Irish Members. In short, he is only a bonâ fide working-man from force of necessity, and would much prefer to be a bogus or platform working-man. That entirely explains his letter to the Times. Well, he need not despair. There is a wide opening in the direction to which he aspires, and, as I pointed out last week, a new Tory organisation is even now being formed for the purpose of hiring working-class missionaries to instruct the working-classes in the true political faith.

I have had an interesting communication from Mr. Joseph Weston, formerly Chairman of the Trinidad Tramways Company, who gives the following facts with reference to what has lately been said in TRUTH as to the labour question in the West Indies:—

> The Company's employés are paid 21s. per week, and work fifteen hours per day for six days in the week, less forty minutes for meals, and on the seventh day they work one hour and twenty minutes, making a total of 87 hours 20 minutes per week, instead of 119 hours, as you have been informed. The hours are undoubtedly long, but the work is light and the rates of wages very high for Trinidad. The Company can get plenty of labour of a kind, but there is considerable difficulty in getting steady, reliable men, although the total staff only amounts to about thirty men.
>
> I am afraid you do not quite understand the conditions of labour in Trinidad, or you would not object to the State aided Coolie immigration.

HOUSE DRAINAGE.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

From an experience of ten years in Trinidad, I can state that labour is scarce, and that the negro population prefers to do any kind of work in preference to field labour. The negro also prefers town life to country life, and the small amount of negro labour can find ready employment in towns and villages, and also on estates, in the capacity of coopers, blacksmiths, &c. I do not consider, therefore, that the coolie in any way interferes with the negro, as the coolie is quite content to work as an agricultural labourer, which the negro is not.

Personally, I should like to see the importation of coolies doubled every year, provided the Government would do away with the return passage to India at the end of ten years' stay in the Colony, and offer greater inducements, not only for the coolie to settle permanently in the Colony, but also for negroes, not only of Trinidad, but of other West Indian Islands, to acquire land in Trinidad. . . . .

Mr. Weston goes on to describe how he has for years advocated the opening up of the country by light railways, and that he considers the removal of the surplus population of a country like India to a sparsely populated country like Trinidad, of advantage to both. This is sound enough, but it has no bearing on the point with which I started some weeks back—namely, that in the West Indies, only among civilised communities, the conditions of labour have deteriorated of late years, and that coolie immigration is the most potent cause of this. What Mr. Weston says about the negro and agricultural labour, strikes me as precisely what may be, and is said, about the agricultural labourer here. Other things being equal, town life attracts him more than country life; a fortiori if wages in town are higher, the labourer will not stop in the country. What will keep him in the country, however, is an interest in the land. I expect that this, which Mr. Weston thinks is true of the negro, is pretty true of mankind of all nations and of all colours.

With regard to coolie immigration, however, there seems to be another phase of the question which I have not yet touched upon. The San Fernando Gazette, in an article published last month, denounces at great length, and with a shocking abundance of detail, the cruelties and outrages perpetrated upon the coolies of many estates. A correspondent in the island tells me that this only applies to a minority of estates, though he admits that, as regards this minority, it is true enough. It seems to me that, whether it applies to one estate or one hundred, such doings ought to be stopped; and, in fact, except that their servitude is temporary, I see very little to choose between the position of these coolies and that of the African slaves whose places they have taken. In view of some of the criticisms with which I have been favoured, I am glad to see that the San Fernando Gazette is strongly of opinion that my former reference to the economic mischief of coolie immigration was only a mild and incomplete statement of the true state of the case.

As the statements of Mr. Oliver Davis concerning the first attack on the Matabele at Victoria have been "officially" denied, and every effort made to throw discredit upon them—though I have published reports from two other eye-witnesses which entirely tally with Mr. Davis's—the following remarks about him may be of interest. The writer is a prominent English citizen of the Transvaal, who recently forwarded me a report of an interview with Mr. Davis, and who had himself had a talk with that gentleman:—

Mr. Davis is well known in Natal, and moves in the best circles there. He has a good reputation in every way, and is credited with a perfectly honest tongue. Personally, I believe every word that he says in regard to the Victoria massacre. The interview is in no way cooked or coloured. His remarks were taken down in short hand, and I can vouch for the accuracy of the report.

As this interview is merely to the same effect as what has already been published, there is no necessity to reproduce it.

No one can have a stronger desire than I have that the State Church in Wales should be disestablished and disendowed; indeed, I agree with Mr. Bright that what he termed the incestuous union between Church and State should everywhere be dissolved, and I should wish to see the public funds, now in the hands of a sect, devoted in every part of the United Kingdom to the general uses of the community. But I suppose that the Lords would throw out a Bill disestablishing the Church in Wales, on the same ground that they threw out the Irish Home Rule Bill. With all respect, therefore to the Welsh Members, I would suggest to them that they will be acting more in accordance with the true interests of their cause, if they allow electoral reform to precede their Bill. We cannot tell when an election will be on us. Generally, elections come, like a thief in the night, in a very unexpected fashion, and our first object should be to put our artillery in good working order and to make sure that our men will be brought into the field whenever the battle is on us.

Each different section of the Liberal Party naturally desires that its particular reform should take the first rank. This is natural in an Assembly which is composed of representatives from various geographical sections, and from various reforming sections. It is only by an effort that they can be brought to realise the necessity of subordinating each particular reform to one which, whilst approved of by all sections, does not interest one section of the Party more than the other. This, however, does not alter the fact that practically all reforms hinge upon our having a majority at the next General Election, and that consequently we ought to make victory at that election our primary aim.

There is no use blinking fact. We had a majority in the country last autumn, as was proved by the elections. It is admitted that, if we were to appeal to the country now, success would be doubtful. Something, therefore, must have been wrong in our tactics. I cannot help thinking that the mistake was in attempting to carry the most important Bill in our programme, with the full knowledge that the Lords would throw it out, instead of insisting upon the ability to carry it being secured to us by powers being taken to crush out the opposition of the Peers by rectifying the balance of parties in their House. I do not believe in spending a year in battering a stone wall with our heads, and leaving us at the wrong side of it, when the year is over. I prefer, if we are to make progress, the more practical expedient of removing the wall.

However, we must not whimper over spilt milk, but rather see that there is no more spilling. The autumn sittings are to be devoted to the Employers' Liability Bill and to the Parish Councils. If we pass them, so much the better. The real question, however, is, What is to be done next year? In order to decide what ought to be done, we should know precisely what is our aim. According to reasonable probabilities, there will be a dissolution before the coming year is over. On this dissolution will depend whether the Progressive Party or the Tory Party is to be in office for a term of years. To secure victory, therefore, at this election should be our aim. In order to do this, we must push forward Bills giving equal franchise to all, making registration self-acting, and throwing the cost of the returning officers on the community. In no case should any amendment of the Lords to a Bill be accepted, for it is far more to our interest that Bills should be thrown out by the Lords, than that they should be passed in an emasculated shape. We should go to the country on the large, broad issue whether the House of Commons is to represent the country in the fullest sense of the term, and whether, when the country declares in favour of us, the Ministry, which is the outcome of that decision, is to be rendered impotent by the permanent majority in the Lords of the Party against which the country has declared.

I am sick of rolling stones up hill, in order to have them kicked down hill by the Tories in the Lords, but I do not waste my breath abusing the Lords for doing precisely what is to be expected of an assembly of Tory Peers. The fault is with us, in allowing them to retain their pernicious powers. If a man were to keep in his sitting-room a number of skunks, what would be thought of him if, instead of cleaning them out, he were only to deplore their unpleasant smell? It is just as much in the nature of Tory Lords to oppose Liberal measures as it is in the nature of skunks to emit an odour the reverse of fragrant.

Assume that we go to the country on the programme of the last General Election, and that we get a majority. What would happen? If we attempt Welsh Disestablishment the Lords will throw it out on the ground that the majority was made up of Home Rulers, Local Optionists, &c., and that there is no evidence of the country being for Welsh Disestablishment. If we attempt Home Rule, or Local Option, or any other item on the programme, the same plea will be used in the Lords for throwing it out. We shall, therefore, be no further advanced than we are now, for we shall again be brought to a standstill by the hereditary wall. What, in the name of common-sense, is the use of playing the game, and allowing our opponents to mark the points as they please? The Liberal Party has again and again suffered by a hand-to-mouth system. The only reason for having a Liberal Ministry is, that Liberal measures should be passed, for probably, man to man, the Tories have as good administrators as we have. Office is a means to an end, but the mistake of party hacks is to regard it as the end.

Probably Mr. Curzon and others of his way of thinking will take the opportunity of Parliament sitting to make many inquiries about Siam. It must, however, be remembered that the Conservative Government deliberately decided that Siam was not to be included within our Asiatic area of influence. It remained, therefore, an absolutely independent country. Unless, then, we are prepared to lay down the doctrine that no European Power may anywhere alter the territorial distribution of Asia without our consent, I hardly see where was our locus standi for interference.

But I go a step further. I do not believe in buffer States. I prefer hard-and-fast frontiers. Afghanistan is not a case in point, for Afghanistan is, although locally independent, politically within our lines, and we rightly tolerate no interference there on the part of Russia. But Siam, if treated as a buffer State, would become a centre of intrigue on the part of France and ourselves. There would be an English party and a French party, and this might bring us into collision with France. If it be contended that France ought not to exercise influence there, we have the Conservative Government to thank for her being able to do so; for there was a moment when, without let or hindrance, the country might have been included in our sphere. The Tories are at their old game. When in office they do not act upon their views. Directly they leave office they abuse their successors for not doing what has been rendered impossible owing to Tory supineness. As it was in Uganda, so it is in Siam.

SCRUTATOR.

THE LATEST SPIRITUALISTIC FRAUD.

MR. MASKELYNE ON "PROFESSOR" BALDWIN.

IN the current number of Borderland—the "Quarterly Review" of "occult" literature and phenomena recently launched by Mr. W. T. Stead—there appears an article headed "A Puzzling Problem: Clairvoyance, Telepathy, or Spirits? A Report on Professor Baldwin and his Wife." On reading this report, it occurred to me, as I hope it would to every reader still in possession of his wits, that Mr. Stead's "puzzling problem" was very easy of solution; and that there was another explanation besides "Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Spirits," which both Mr. Stead and his correspondent had unfortunately overlooked. The theory which suggested itself to me was, that Baldwin and his wife were nothing but a pair of very commonplace conjurors, and the "phenomena" some of the stalest tricks known in the trade. With this idea in my mind I sought an interview with Mr. Maskelyne, of the Egyptian Hall, whose familiarity with every phase of spiritualistic imposture is, as my readers are aware, second to that of no man living. I found Mr. Maskelyne already burning to expose Mr. Stead's "Professor." He had already had Baldwin under his notice, and had had opportunities of witnessing the mischief which this impostor is doing. With all the pleasure in life, therefore, Mr. Maskelyne enlightened me as to Baldwin's modus operandi, and the information which he gave me I propose now to give the public, almost in his own words. The result will show conclusively that the "puzzling problem" which Mr. Stead gravely presents to a wondering world is simply the result of impudent trickery practising upon the most childish ignorance and credulity.

In order to make the explanation intelligible, it is necessary that I should first furnish the reader, who may not have Borderland at hand, with some particulars of the "Report on Professor Baldwin and his Wife." I should say at the outset that this Baldwin is an American, who has been for some time travelling about the British Empire with a miscellaneous entertainment, combining a "variety show," with "thought reading" or "clairvoyance" by himself and his wife. He is at present touring about in the provinces, but he has never to my knowledge shown himself in London in which, doubtless, he is wise. The title "Professor" has, of course, just as much, or as little, significance as it usually has in this profession. The writer of the Borderland report is a Nonconformist Minister in a large Midland town, of whom Mr. Stead says, he "is personally known to me as a man of the highest character, and of considerable reputation as a student in philosophy and political economy." He is an M.A. of London, was a John Stuart Mill scholar, and a favourite pupil of the late Professor Croom Robertson. This worthy man states that on returning from his holidays he found his town in a buzz of excitement over "the startling and bewildering performances" of Baldwin and his wife. In an evil hour he went to investigate for himself. He saw an exhibition of clairvoyance by Mrs. Baldwin which I will describe more in detail hereafter. It was a performance such as I, and, I suppose, nine out of ten readers of this paper have seen given dozens of times by professional entertainers. The John Stuart Mill scholar, however, was apparently a novice at the clairvoyance business. He called upon two or three persons in the audience whose questions Mrs. Baldwin had answered, and by this simple means he found (he says) that "as far as I could judge there was no trickery, no collusion, and no possibility of deception in the matter." He then put himself in communication with Baldwin, with a view of learning more of Mrs. B.'s "marvellous power." Needless to say, he found Baldwin most affable and communicative, and he very soon began to learn a great deal, not only about Mrs. Baldwin, but about her husband. After two interviews a séance was arranged, and here I think it will be preferable that I should give the reverend gentleman's own account of his experiences:—

The Séance.

We sat down at a large table on opposite sides, facing each other. He handed me a number of slips of soft, thin, ordinary printing paper, each measuring about 4 in. by 3 in. Then he took for himself a little pile of sheets of ordinary writing paper measuring, perhaps, 8 in. by 6 in. There were a number of lead pencils on the table, so that when he was writing he might not have to stop to get one sharpened.

I then wrote eight questions on eight slips of paper, each one addressed to some friend or other person whom I knew to have passed away, and each one written in the form of a letter. A book was placed in front of me to act as a screen, and to prevent the possibility of his seeing what I was writing. When he knows anything about the questions, it is always more difficult for him to get accurate results, as then his own thoughts mingle with those he receives and pervert the substance of the message.

Brandauer's Circular-Pointed Pens. Neither scratch nor spurt. Glide over the roughest paper with the ease of a soft lead pencil. A 6d. assorted sample box of any stationer.

The Modus Operandi

As I wrote each question, I folded and refolded it five times, doubling it each time, so that at last the paper was only one thirty second of its original size. When written and folded, I threw the paper down on the table in front of me. It was broad daylight, there was only one mirror in the room (the ordinary dining room of an ordinary dwelling house), and that was covered over with a newspaper. Mrs. Baldwin, the professor, and I were the only persons in the room.

When I had written the first paper he said: "I am tired and ill to-day, and I am not sure that I shall get any impressions."

Then he took the paper and placed it on his forehead. "Yes, that will do," he said. "Now write another."

I went on writing as directed.

"Go on," he said, placing the papers, as I wrote, folded, and gave them to him, on his forehead, "I am not tired yet."

When I came to the fifth or sixth paper he said, "I think I shall be in good form to-day, after all. You are charged with electric vitality: your whole personality is thrown into every stroke and every dot you make. I would advise you now to ask some question the answer to which will be of some practical benefit to you."

Just before I wrote the eighth paper he said, "You can write just one more, and I think that will be enough."

I then took the eight folded papers into my double hands, and shook them all up together, so that it was impossible for either of us to have the slightest inkling or knowledge of the person to whom any particular paper was addressed. After this I put them down on the table again.

He picked two or three of them up, one at a time, and placed them to his forehead again. Then he looked round a little to his right and murmured, as if talking to himself or to some invisible being on his right-hand side, or somewhere about him, near or far:—

"Yes, yes, a brother—two brothers

"You want to speak to him?

"Yes, yes, you'll speak presently.

"What, that's my name?

"I say, that's my name; what's yours?

"Your name too! Oh, I see. Your name is S—— too.

Then, turning to me, he asked: "Have you got a brother called S——?"

"Yes," I replied, "I had."

Then addressing himself once more to the invisible being or beings on his right, he said quietly: "Yes, yes. Oh! a professor."

Again turning to me, he asked: "Do you know a Professor Robertson?"

"Quite right," I replied; "I do."

Again addressing the invisible, he said: "Wait a bit, what is it you say?

"Oh, Professor Croom Robertson."

Once more he turned to me, and asked: "Had you a teacher at school called Professor Croom Robertson?"

"Yes," I replied; "he was my teacher in philosopy at University College, London."

"Ah, yes," said he, "that's what I mean; we call them schools in America."

A little later, or possibly a little earlier, he turned to me again, and asked: "Have you got a brother F——?"

"Yes," I replied: "that is quite right."

We were now ready to commence business.

First he asked me to touch one of the papers. No response. Then a second, then a third. "That's it," he cried. He then told me to take the paper and hold it in the palm of my hand, closing my fist and keeping it there.

"Do you know," he inquired, "which paper it is that you hold in your hand?"

I said: "No; that is quite impossible."

The papers had remained on the table before me the whole of the time. There was no possibility of deception, so far as I can see. It was broad daylight. Not one of the papers was removed from before us; from this time forth I kept it in my hand, which was firmly closed.

"Now, then," he said to me, "you can do what you like; you can read or walk about the room, or anything else, just as if you were in your own parlour. You can watch me; only don't get excited. Keep your mind perfectly passive, or else you will perhaps impress your thought on my mind, and I want to be perfectly calm, placid, and colourless."

Then he took up a pencil and began to write. He went on for fifteen or twenty minutes, writing as hard as he could. Meanwhile I read a few pages of a copy of The Review of Reviews, the one with the sketch of "Besant and Rice" in it, which lay on the table before me.

A Startling Test.

At the end of that time he looked up and said:

"Now then, keep that paper in your hand, and keep your hand closed, but just hold it underneath the table, and put your ear to the table. You will then hear him write a brief answer in one or two words on the question-paper itself as it lies in your hand."

I did so, and I heard a sound as if some one came and took up a pencil, and then, after a moment, put it down on the table again. It was so real that I thought it was Professor Baldwin himself who was doing it. Perhaps it was; I am not quite clear on this point. I did not hear the scratch of the pencil-writing as I expected to.

Then he said, "Now open your hand and see."
I opened it, and here is a copy of what I found there :—

Yes.

PROFESSOR G. CROOM ROBERTSON.

DEAR SIR,—Do you think it would be well for me to examine into the rationale of these communications by means of this inscrutable force or whatever it is?—Yours respectfully, V. W.

On the left hand margin, just as above, was written, apparently in Professor Croom Robertson's own handwriting, the word "Yes."

I have just looked at it again to-day (September 26). It seems to have been written by some electric-chemical or some other extraordinary process. The professor says he thinks it is written with plumbago, a form of carbon used in blacklead pencil. It is equally clear, distinct, and legible with my own writing, but seems to have been written in lines, each of which is made up of dots. I have not, however, seen it under the microscope. It does not show through to the other side of the paper. The rest of the writing on the above slip is the question which I wrote and addressed to Professor Robertson in my own hand.

Professor Baldwin then tossed over the sheets of the letter he had been writing. It was contained on eight pages, in Professor Baldwin's ordinary handwriting, and read as follows :—

MY DEAR W., (Page 1)

Why not :

Was any man ever the worse for more knowledge? It cannot be of any harm to you to know more—ay, much more—of a force, yes, a real power, [the existence of] which is now being admitted by most of the real, true thinkers of modern society. This man is not a good medium. He is worn (page 2), and he is ill, and his finer nature is blunted. I cannot control him as I would like, and I may not be able to say all I would like to you—it is as if we was (sic) writing with a pen that splutters and with thick ink, and I may not be able to give you such (page 3) proofs as I would like of my absolute identity. I have said (on the first page) that there is a force, I might say that there are millions of forces, that can communicate through the proper mediums. These forces are not, properly speaking, mere forces (page 4); they are identities, they are individualities. . . . .

So it goes on for over half-a-column. I will not weary the reader with the reproduction of the whole of the balderdash, in which, as in all communications of the same character ever yet received, there is not a word that might not have been penned by a ready-witted impostor accustomed to frame plausible answers on any question presented to him. Neither can I undertake to reproduce here the whole report of this séance, which fills seven columns of Borderland. I will briefly summarise what passed in regard to the remaining questions. Only four of them were answered. In none of these cases did the spirit attempt the feat of writing; the answer was in each case, with one exception, given by the "Professor" in his own handwriting, after more or less conversation with the supposed controlling spirit at his elbow. At each question the same business was gone through of the minister picking up one of the folded papers from the table, and holding it in his hand while the oracle worked. Occasionally, while the "Professor" was writing, the minister looked into a magazine lying on the table, strolled round the room, looked out of the window, or chatted with Mrs. Baldwin, who was in the room throughout. The second question dealt with was the following, addressed to the minister's grandfather :—

DEAR GRANDFATHER,—Will N —— be well advised in pursuing his business with B. W. Downs?

Considering that the last spirit in answer to an equally simple question had dictated eight folios, the grandfather's spook was commendably brief :—

I think N—— will be very well in business with W. B. D.

It struck me when I read this answer that it did not presuppose any intimate acquaintance on the spook's part with the nature of the business referred to. It also occurred to me that whereas it was the easiest thing in life for a medium to write eight folios on the desirability of studying spiritualism, it was a difficult thing for him to say anything to the point about a "business" of which he necessarily knew nothing. It finally occurred to me as odd that while the spirit came back (as he did) to supplement the above answer by giving (through the "Professor") the name "Downs" on a separate slip of paper, he should yet have been so careless as to dictate Mr. Downs's initials in the wrong order. None of these reflections, however, seems to have occurred to the John Stuart Mill scholar.

The next question, however, was the one which throws most light on the performance. It was the only one which really contained a test of the slightest value, the only one, that is to say, which required an answer which the medium did not know, or which could not be answered by plausible generalisation. The question was addressed to the inquirer's brother, and asked the date of the birth of the inquirer's child. Observe how the 'Professor" deals with this poser :—

Presently he began again addressing himself in the usual way, in a musing, meditative, reverie-like tone, as he turned to the right and held his head a little down, as if looking for something in an absorbed, absent-minded kind of way.

"Will you come? Will you come?

"Hem? Eh? I can't make it out.

"Yes, yes. To see that you know.

"Yes, but what about that?

"He'll know? Well, but what for?"

Then he turned to me and said, "He says he won't write: he only wants to tell you something. It's about your little girl. Will you take a paper and write down four or five dates, and among them the date on which your little girl was born?"

I took a sheet of paper and wrote at random :—

January 7
March 8
—— 22
July 7

Then I gave it back to him.

He hesitated considerably, turned to the spirit and said, "Eh, what—that one?"

Then he drew a circle round the last date, July 7, gave the paper to me, and said, "Is that the day on which your little girl was born?"

I said, "Do you mean that one—July 7?"

He felt that there was something wrong; so he said to me, "Did he know the day your little girl was born; is there any reason why he should remember the date?"

I said, "No, of course; he died long before she was born."

So then he turned to the spirit once more, and said, "Eh? Oh! that one. Then why didn't you say so before?"

He then marked the date, ——— 22, gave the paper back to me, and said, confidently, "That's it."

So that in this one case the "Professor" had to have the answer written down for him, and then succeeded in guessing it in two shots out of a possible four. Wonderful, is it not?

Two other questions were dealt with. In the first of them the minister asked his deceased father, "How can I spend my life so as to do the most good possible?" In answer to this the "Professor," after ascertaining by a question that the father was "not a literary man," and "not accustomed to do much writing," is moved by the spirit of the deceased father to write a letter containing such valuable advice as this :—

To be good is to do good. The way generally is shown to those who seek it. You will manage to find the way. I cannot at present suggest any better method than that shown you by your own common-sense. I am glad to say that, from what I can see, you are much esteemed and liked, &c., &c.

The rest is made up of compliments to the son on his career, and supplication of the blessings of God upon him; but not a word more of answer to the question. "It is exactly the kind of letter," says the poor infatuated cleric, "that I should have expected from my father if he had been watching over me for the last fourteen years, and was now permitted for one moment to speak to me through the veil." And it is exactly the kind of letter which the merest tiro at the business in Baldwin's place would have written to this worthy man without any spook to prompt him.

SANITARY SURVEYS.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

In the remaining question the minister asked his deceased brother to advise him respecting his investments. The answer was given in the same way as before. The ordinary investments known to the British investor are not alluded to in it. The spook points out the stability and advantages of certain Canadian banks, and recommends the inquirer to deposit his money at 4 per cent. in the Bank of British Columbia or the Bank of Montreal. Why the deceased brother should have been unable to advise any equally desirable investment nearer than Canada does not appear, unless in the world beyond the grave they do not make a close study of tape prices and Stock Exchange quotations. But why an American citizen like the "Professor," called on at a moment's notice to advise a British investor, should be unable to discourse glibly on any but Canadian investments, requires no explanation. There remained after this three questions unanswered. But at this point the "Professor" suddenly announced that his power was gone and he could do no more, and the proceedings terminated. The minister does not state what the unanswered questions were, which is a pity, for had he done so they might possibly have thrown further light on Baldwin's mysterious powers. But it is not really needed.

I have now shown precisely what was done. So far as the matter of the answers goes, every reader can see for himself that there is not a word in any of the utterances which required any agency more "occult" than Baldwin's unaided intelligence to inspire it. One question remains, and one only. How could Baldwin, under the circumstances described, know the contents of each slip of paper as the minister took it off the table preparatory to its being answered? That this question need not be difficult to answer, every one with the slightest knowledge of ordinary conjuror's business will see at once, even though he may not be able to answer it himself. I sought and found the answer at the Egyptian Hall, under the guidance of Mr. Maskelyne, and now I will give Mr. Maskelyne's explanation of Baldwin's little trick:—

"I am delighted to have an opportunity of explaining Baldwin's performance," Mr. Maskelyne said, "for though the tricks are as old as the hills, this man and his wife are doing an immense amount of harm. If the tricks were presented to the public merely as tricks, I should be the last to expose them; but against this illegitimate business of duping people with the pretence of supernatural agency I have always waged war, as you know."

"I do. So you have heard about Baldwin already?"

"Oh, yes. During the past few weeks several persons have applied to me whose minds have been completely unhinged by these abominable frauds. I have heard from the reverend gentleman who reports upon Baldwin in Borderland. A few days earlier I heard from the Rector of a parish in the same part of the country, whose Curate had been dangerously upset by a message, supposed to have been transmitted from beyond the grave through Mrs. Baldwin. There is no limit to the mischief done by this form of imposture. The Curate I cured. I explained the trick in a very few words, and had the satisfaction of knowing that he was thoroughly ashamed of himself for having been deceived by such a commonplace dodge. Clergyman No. 2, Mr. Stead's correspondent, was much more badly bitten. He sent me a full account of his experiences about a month ago, and since then he has paid me a visit. His communications were confidential, but as he has since published the greater part, there is no reason why I should not comment upon them."

"What sort of a man is he?"

"A man, as you would expect, of a highly nervous and emotional temperament, with the conviction now firmly rooted in his mind that he has been in communication with loved ones who have 'crossed the bar.' When I told him that he had been duped by some of the oldest and clumsiest tricks used by pretended spirit-mediums, he received the blow with evident pain and mental agitation, and seemed unwilling to let his better judgment have its way."

"Well, now Mr. Maskelyne will you kindly give me the explanation as you gave it to him? You may take it that all I really want to know is, how Baldwin acquaints himself with the question inside each of the folded papers."

"In the first place I inquired of him whether Baldwin smoked during the performance, the reason of which you shall hear presently. I was told that he did not. The first point in the report to which I called his attention was that Baldwin himself provides the paper on which the questions are written—'soft, thin printing paper.' That is indispensable. The next point deserving notice is that the only looking-glass is covered with a newspaper. That is ostensibly to preclude the suspicion that the writing of the questions can be surreptitiously observed in the glass; to my mind, the reason is to prevent the writer seeing what Baldwin is doing under cover of the table. Our clerical friend writes his question on the piece of paper given him, folds it up a certain number of times, and places it on the table. Baldwin picks it up and presses it against his forehead. Apparently he puts it back on the table. But does he really? Not at all. What he puts back on the table is a dummy pellet of paper, which he has had concealed in his hand for the purpose. The pellet containing the question remains in his hand. Our friend is then directed to write his second question. While he is doing so, Baldwin opens the first slip or pellet under cover of the table, reads it, re-folds it, and makes some slight mark or crease upon it, so that he can recognise that particular pellet again. You now see the reason for the 'soft printing paper.' It is a special paper which can be opened and refolded without the slightest noise. The second question having been written, the folded slip is passed to Baldwin in the same way as the first, pressed to his forehead, and apparently returned to the table. But, in reality, what is returned to the table this time is pellet No. 1, which Baldwin has read. Pellet No. 2 remains in his hand, to be read while the inquirer is writing his third question. The same business is pursued with No. 3, and so on through the series. The last one Baldwin has to retain until he finds an opportunity of reading it and passing it on to the table in exchange for the dummy pellet which he used at starting. In this way every question is read by the medium, or might be; but you will observe that in this case Baldwin only attempts to answer five out of eight questions—doubtless the five which he found most easy to deal with. After all the papers had been shaken up by the clergyman, Baldwin went through the pantomime of pressing them against his forehead a second time. This would be done in order to sort them, and to smuggle in the last one left in his hand. He has then nothing to do but to pick the pellets out in the manner described, and write his answers to the questions. The answers, I need hardly tell you, are based entirely on the information supplied in the questions, eked out by anything he can pick up in the course of his pretended conversation with the imaginary spirit."

"Just so. That is clear enough on the face of it. But why did you ask whether Baldwin smoked during the performance?"

"For this reason. The trick, as I have described it to you, is the invention of an American medium named Foster, and it has been known for years in the profession as 'Foster's Pellet-Reading.' Foster, however, performed it very much more cleverly than Baldwin appears to have done. He would sit at a table with two, and sometimes three, persons at a time, and it was very long before his modus operandi was discovered. He always asked to be allowed to smoke, as it helped to bring his mind into the requisite state of tranquillity. It was at last noticed by some extra 'cute visitors that his cigar required a great deal of lighting, and on one of the company looking round quickly into Foster's hand, as he was holding it before him while applying the match to his cigar, one of the pellets was seen spread open in his palm In this way he read the questions before the very eyes of his audience, after obtaining possession of the papers in the way adopted by Baldwin. There is the whole trick for you. Like most others, it is as simple as A B C—when you know how it's done."

A Fair Beautiful Skin.—By washing with Sulpholine Soap the natural tint and peach-like bloom of a perfect complexion is ensured.

"Undoubtedly. But there is one point you have not explained—the word 'Yes' written on the question paper by the spook of Professor Robertson."

"That, of course, was written by Baldwin while he had the paper in his possession. The paper, you observe, was never unfolded after it returned to the table until the spirit was supposed to have written this mystic word."

"And what was the writing like?"

"Ah," said Mr. Maskelyne, "that was where our poor clerical friend thought that he could non-plus me. 'Look at the extraordinary character of the writing,' he said, producing the paper from among a number of other precious scraps carefully preserved in a leather case. 'It appears to have been written by some electric-chemical or other mysterious process' (you see he repeats this mysterious phrase in the Borderland article), 'and further, it is in the handwriting of the late Professor Croom Robertson. The letters, you see, are formed by a succession of minute dots.' That is quite true; they were. Well, I examined the writing with a watchmaker's eye-glass. Baldwin's ingenious theory—that 'it was written with plumbago, a form of carbon used in blacklead pencil'—was perfectly sound. I found that the word 'Yes' was faintly written with ordinary lead pencil, and in a schoolboy's characterless round hand. If it was Professor Robertson's, it might equally well have been that of twenty thousand other persons. The dotted appearance of the characters was simply caused by the pencil travelling very lightly over the rough surface of the paper. I said to my visitor, 'How is it possible that you can recognise this word of three letters, written in a round hand, as the writing of any person known to you?' He examined the writing with my glass and replied, 'I could not be sure that it was the hand of my late tutor.'"

"I gather, Mr. Maskelyne, that you look on Baldwin as a very clumsy performer?"

"Most certainly."

"Of course you see that although the first question is addressed to 'Professor G. Croom Robertson,' Baldwin's letter in answer to it is signed 'J. Croom Robertson.' That means, I take it, that in the interval between reading the question and answering it, Baldwin had forgotten the Professor's initials?"

"Yes. Unless you prefer the alternative that in the interval between his death and reappearance, Professor Robertson had forgotten his own name."

"Then when Baldwin comes to answer the question about the business with 'B. W. Downs,' he at first writes, instead of the name, the initials 'W. B. D.' We are told that, after he had handed the answer over, there was a moment's pause, and then another conversation with the unseen spook, after which Baldwin announced that the spirit would give the name, which he forthwith wrote on another piece of paper. The explanation of this incident is, I suppose, that Baldwin had at first forgotten the name 'Downs,' as well as the right order of the two first initials, but then, after a moment's reflection, bethought him of it?"

"That would be my conclusion," said Mr. Maskelyne. "But the most notable instance of his bungling is over the date of the child's birth. Here he is utterly at fault. He has, therefore, to resort to the antiquated dodge of having the date written down, together with two or three fictitious ones, and then pointing to them in succession with a pencil, in the hope of gaining from the sitter some indication when he is approaching the right one. He commences at the bottom of the list and works upwards, because it is well known that an unsophisticated writer usually places at the bottom the word or name he wishes to conceal. Then, again, although Baldwin seems to have been very intimate with our reverend friend for several days—they had dined together and chatted for hours—yet he gained no information of which he was able to make any use at the séance. Looking at all this, and seeing that he actually had to give up three questions out of eight, it seems to me that Baldwin's performance was beneath contempt."

"And did you find that the clerical inquirer was unable to see the force of this reasoning?"

"I could see that he was much distressed in his mind, but not convinced. I begged him to analyse the performance he had seen with a calm and unbiassed mind, and with that he took his departure. To me it was indeed a pitiable sight to see an educated and undoubtedly talented gentleman—a clergyman with a large congregation—led blindly into the lethal swamp of that Will-o'-the-Wisp, 'Spiritualism,' by means of one of the oldest and most simple of all the devices employed by spiritualistic impostors. I said to myself, Surely the time has arrived when a knowledge of all these forms of deception should be taught in our schools and colleges, for all these frauds are rendered possible simply because the public are ignorant of the A B C of the medium's trade. I may say that in a subsequent letter which I had from Mr. Stead's correspondent, he writes:—'Your hypothesis explains all the facts, I must admit. So does the Spirit Individualities hypothesis. But in the former case I am bound to believe, in addition, that Baldwin is a deceiver, which I can't.' When a man has arrived at that state of mind," said Mr. Maskelyne, "what use is it to reason with him?"

At this point Mr. Maskelyne turned to another branch of the subject, namely, the public performance of Mrs. Baldwin, of which an account is also given in the Borderland article. This I must defer for consideration next week. It will be sufficient for the present to dispose of the "Professor." By way of clinching his exposure of this individual, Mr. Maskelyne tells me that he has already made to Mr. Stead's reverend contributor the following offer:—

> I told him that I was prepared to stand to my opinion, and that I would challenge Baldwin for £100, to be paid to a charity, to give a rational answer to a question which my clerical visitor should write at my dictation, fold up, and hold against Baldwin's forehead. I have received no further communication upon the subject.

This challenge Mr. Maskelyne now authorises me to repeat publicly in his name. He is prepared to put down £100, to be forfeited to a charity if Baldwin succeeds in giving, in Mr. Maskelyne's presence, a correct and rational answer to a question dictated by Mr. Maskelyne, written and folded up in the manner adopted at the séance, but held by the writer himself against Baldwin's forehead, and never allowed to pass into Baldwin's hand. Mr. Maskelyne has sufficient confidence in the bona fides of Mr. Stead's contributor to trust him to perform the experiment. I should like to add that if Baldwin does not consider the amount sufficient, I am ready to add another £100 on my own account to Mr. Maskelyne's, subject to the same conditions.

That Baldwin will accept this challenge, I do not for a moment suppose. No instance is on record in which a professional medium has responded to a challenge so framed as to preclude trickery. Baldwin will reply, I anticipate, if he replies at all, that the ghosts of the departed decline to communicate with the living through him except when several questions are written down and passed through his hands precisely in the manner described above. That is the misfortune under which spirits (and mediums) invariably labour. Their communications are made in such a way that there is no means (other than the intrinsic probabilities of the case) of deciding whether they are genuine utterances of supernatural beings or an ingenious fraud on the part of the medium. As soon as it is suggested that the communication should be made in such a way as to preclude fraud on the part of the medium, the spirits grow sulky and decline to hold further converse with their friends. The vitality of these stale tricks in the face of persistent exposure - for scarcely a year passes in which some professional medium is not caught flagrante delicto and put to utter confusion—is the most impressive proof in existence of the eternal folly of mankind. There are as many people to-day ready to fall dupes to any impostor who professes to have established intimate relations with an unseen world as there were in any of the bygone epochs which we look upon as specially prone to credulous superstition. All that is necessary is that the impostor should adapt his methods and his language to current habits of thought, and appeal to the superstitious faculty of mankind through the medium of the latest form of pseudo-scientific religion. If, in addition to this, he can get a Nonconformist minister to vouch that "there is no possibility of trickery, or chicanery, or deception" (Borderland, p. 168), and a Stead to boom the result, authenticated by his own certificate that "there is no doubt that Professor Baldwin and his wife have extraordinary gifts" (Borderland, p. 142), his fortune is made—or would be, if there were no Maskelyne in existence to show "how it is done."

RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR has for over Half a Century sustained its High Reputation as an Indispensable Toilet requisite. RIMMEL'S Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, Powders, &c.—London & Paris.

RESURRECTION OF ANGUS MACLEAN.

In my last reference to Angus Maclean, I compared him to one of those reptiles which, when beheaded or bisected, or otherwise mutilated, have the power of repairing the damage and re-appearing, after a brief retirement, in all their pristine vigour. He has justified this description of him even sooner than I anticipated. So recently as July he disappeared from the last "offices" of the "British and Foreign Association," leaving the landlord to seize the empty packing-cases and other valuables, which constituted the office furniture, in satisfaction of the rent owing. On September 30, the following advertisement appeared in the Daily Telegraph :—

REQUIRED.—TWO GENTLEMEN, Capable of acting as business manager and sub-editor, respectively, of new weekly journal covering entirely new ground. None need apply who have not a moderate amount of capital immediately available (to be under own control), with view to co-partnership.—Address, Messrs. Miller & Son, Solicitors, 10, Bell-yard, Royal Courts.

The advertiser of this tempting offer is our old friend Maclean again. As the desired capitalist has not yet been found, and, as Maclean is still advertising, I lose no time in warning the British investor against the latest scheme of this "incorrigible rogue." The "new weekly journal" with which Maclean proposes to cover "entirely new ground" is to be called The Clansman. It is designed for the comfort and edification of those Scotchmen who, like Maclean himself, are sojourning, either from choice or the force of circumstances, in South Britain, and more particularly London. In answer to the above advertisement, a young journalist—but, I am sorry to say, not a Scotchman—communicated with Messrs. Miller & Son, and was put in communication with Angus Maclean. In passing, I may remark, for the benefit of those who may not remember the name, that Messrs. Miller & Son are the firm who, when the blackmailing operations of the convict Morland were exposed in TRUTH, acted for that worthy in an action against me. If Messrs. Miller are establishing a connection among the class of individuals whom I am accustomed to deal with, they are likely to have a busy time of it, and I sincerely trust that the business may prove lucrative. The gentleman who applied to Messrs. Miller & Son's client in this instance, exchanged some correspondence, and then had an interview with Maclean. Maclean informed him that the Clansman was to be modelled on the lines of the Glasgow Baillie, of the staff of which paper he had been a member. He estimated that there were 400,000 Scotchmen in London, and that they would consume about 10,000 Clansmen per week. He produced a specimen copy of the paper, and stated that he had taken an office at 4, Bouverie-street at 6s. 6d., per week, that he had already 1,000 subscriptions paid in advance, and advertisements promised for three months. On this basis he reckoned that a net profit of £3 per week was assured from the first number. He now proposed to sell one half share of this valuable property for £300 cash; the purchaser to further provide £100 of working capital which Maclean himself would supplement by a further £100. In addition to this, the purchaser had the opportunity of becoming sub-editor at a salary of three guineas per week—Maclean himself being (of course) editor-in-chief at five guineas. As if all this were not sufficiently tempting, Maclean further pointed out that as soon as the thing was started "additional capital" could easily be obtained. Nothing would be simpler than to obtain a "business manager" who would put in £1,000, £500 of which would be banked to the credit of the Clansman, while the other £500 would be divided between Maclean and his original colleague. In order to establish the bona fides of these proposals, he gave two references to friends. A banker's reference he was unfortunately unable to give, as "he was living on a very small income," and had not a sufficiently large cash balance to keep a banking account.

The negotiator wrote to the two Glasgow references. Here are their replies :—

City Institute, Oriental Department,
40, Imperial-buildings, Ludgate-circus, E.C.,
London, October 11, 1893.

DEAR SIR,—I am in receipt of your favour of yesterday's date, and in reply beg to state that I have known Mr. Angus Maclean for some years intimately and have had several monetary transactions with him, and that his actions have always been upright and gentlemanly.

I am very favourably impressed with the idea and the prospects of the Clansman, and I fully believe that in Mr. Maclean's hands the said journal is sure to be a success. Permit me to add that were I in your place I should have no hesitation in making the venture.—Yours truly, GEO. BAIRD.

Why not cultivate your hair? Encourage it and strengthen it, or, if your hair is grey or white, the natural colour can be restored by a few applications of Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer.

City-buildings, Greenock,
October 11, 1893.

ANGUS MACLEAN.

DEAR SIR,—I am favoured with yours of yesterday's date, re Angus Maclean.

Mr. Maclean comes of an old and respected Greenock family, and by education and training ought to make a good appearance in any scheme requiring intelligence, shrewdness, and literary ability.

I have known him for many years, and have found him honest and straightforward.

As to his financial position, I am not in a position to say anything. His mother died here some time ago and left considerable property.

He has always had the reputation of being a good business man.—I am, yours truly, A. J. MACDOUGALL.

I should like to know more of both these gentlemen who thus vouch for the respectability and integrity of one of the most persistent and impudent impostors of his class. Mr. George Baird, in particular, should enlighten the public further respecting his relations with Maclean, for if, after "several monetary transactions" with that worthy, he can still truthfully describe him as "always upright and gentlemanly," his experience has been indeed unique. Fortunately the gentleman to whom these testimonials were addressed was not so easily satisfied of Maclean's uprightness and gentlemanliness. By way of testing them further, he wrote to the Editor of the Baillie, and found that that gentleman had no recollection of ever having heard of Maclean. He next mentioned to Maclean that he had a friend who might be disposed to invest as much as £600 in the Clansman, if a place could be found for him on the staff. Maclean jumped greedily at the idea, and, at a further interview, pressed his first correspondent to conclude his agreement at once, in order that they might divide between them £300 out of the second victim's investment. This ingenuous proposal was enough, however, for negotiator No. 1. An agreement embodying the terms sketched out above was put before him for signature, but he declined to sign it, dropped the negotiations, and came round to TRUTH office. A day or two later (October 19), the following advertisement appeared in the Daily News, showing that Maclean is once more in search of a capitalist:—

Assistant Editor and Business Manager, with a few hundreds to invest, wanted for a high-class London journal, covering new ground. Excellent prospects. Every investigation courted. Address 95 Y, Daily News Inquiry-office, 67, Fleet-street.

What is to be done with a rascal like this? I have already at one time and another devoted dozens of columns to him in TRUTH; I have shown him engaged in swindle after swindle, touting for half-guineas under cover of distinguished names which he had been forbidden to use, selling at huge premiums worthless appointments in his own office, robbing governesses and unemployed clerks under pretence of getting them employment, and, finally, bolting from his premises without paying his rent. Yet here he is, after three months' retirement, endeavouring, without any attempt to disguise his individuality, to sell for £300 a share in a newspaper which has no existence, and baiting the trap with a promise that as soon as the money is paid it shall be recouped by fleecing another victim. I can, of course, add one more to the innumerable warnings which I have published against this scoundrel; but it is quite clear that Maclean will never be effectually disposed of until he has seen the inside of a prison, and it is a deplorable state of things that no public authority exists which can deal with him upon such facts as are already in evidence against him.

"DON JUAN."

Mr. Arthur Roberts should certainly be allowed the same privileges as were claimed by the late Fred Leslie during the last years of his life. He should be permitted to add his name as the author of the so-called burlesque in which he was engaged, and presumably on the same understanding receive his share of the authors' fees. When Mr. Leslie came to the conclusion that the skeleton presented to him to study was, as a general rule, no play at all, that he had no material to work upon, and that it fell to him to invent business, suggest songs, and contribute comical ideas, he reasoned very fairly that he should be paid for his work as author as well as actor. Hence the name A. C. Torr, which was in reality Mr. Fred Leslie, the actor. Mr. Arthur Roberts has also a gift of invention. His resource is remarkable. The basis of his best work is pure pantomime. We saw this the other day in the "Modern Don Quixote," when we found him keeping an audience in fits of laughter for at least ten dumb minutes by imitating a coquettish girl putting on her bonnet at the glass, and generally tittivating herself up for conquest before going on parade. The barren and empty shell of a play like "Don Juan" requires the immediate assistance of Arthur Roberts. He should come along at once with his own songs, imitations, sketches, and entertainments. Miss Cissie Loftus comes from the music-halls, with her reproductions of the style and manner of well-known artists, and she makes an instant success, not as Lord Byron's Haidée, but as Cissie Loftus, the clever child who has a distinct gift of mimicry. It is, indeed, a very remarkable gift, and the cleverness of the girl is shown in that she detects mannerism where it is least shown to the unpractised ear. To imitate, for instance, Mr. Eugene Stratton in his negro songs, or Mr. R. G. Knowles in his flurried orations, or Mr. Gus Elen in his costermonger ballads, is a task comparatively easy, for all their styles are very marked. But she succeeds best with her most difficult subjects, such as Mr. Hayden Coffin and Miss Letty Lind. For until Miss Cissie Loftus told us so with such clever emphasis, possibly very few of us guessed that, after all, both singers have a very decided manner. This engagement at the theatre is in every way satisfactory concerning the future of this clever and attractive child. She was being worked to death at the music-halls. She made an instant success, and was far too much of a willing pony. She never knew what it was to be beaten, but the audience soon saw that their little favourite was fagged and weary, and already wanted a rest. This she will obtain at the theatre, where she has easy work comparatively, and only one of the dreaded turns that must exhaust the strongest of such singers.

Better dancing of the first class cannot be seen than at the Gaiety just now. It is right that it should be so. The Gaiety has ever been the best school of stage-dancing. Here it was that Miss Kate Vaughan, who, in her own pure and poetic school, has never had a formidable rival, led the way with the first of the graceful skirt-dances that have degenerated into tom-boy nonsense and ugly contortion. The very best of the Kate Vaughan school has been Miss Sylvia Grey, who for some unaccountable reason has been kept comparatively in the background and never allowed to show exactly what she could do. Now she at last gets her chance, for surely that Sylvia Grey dance of the animated statue in the last act of "Don Juan" is one of the prettiest things of its kind that has ever been seen at the Gaiety. The remark on the first sight of "Don Juan" was "I never knew that Sylvia could dance so well" or "How Sylvia Grey has improved!" It is merely that at last she has been given her chance and leads, instead of playing second fiddle to those who were in no sense her artistic rivals. Another very graceful dancer of the Kate Vaughan and Sylvia Grey school is Miss Sinden, who is inventive, intelligent, and has been extremely well taught.

MINTON'S (Limited). MINTON'S CHINA.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

The originally-despised music-hall has given the stage another artist in Miss Millie Hylton, who was bound to succeed wherever she went. She is an artist, and her success does not depend on the gifts given to her by bountiful nature. No one can have heard Miss Millie Hylton sing a pathetic ballad at "the halls," as they are called, without recognising her talent. It was her misfortune, not her fault, that she was connected with a song called "The Rowdy-Dowdy Boys," of which absurd capital has been made by the puritanical members of the County Council. If the idea of the song was a little vulgar, the execution of it certainly was not, and if the people are to be denied the privilege of smoking a pipe of peace and drinking something a little stronger than "a small lemon" at the well-conducted halls because a song-writer makes use of a silly refrain, then there is no end to the blind inconsistency of puritanism. "The Rowdy-Dowdy Boys" as sung by Miss Millie Hylton could not have shocked the most squeamish of County Councillors. Is there to be no end of this arguing from general principles to particulars? The people at large want free trade in their amusements. They want to amuse themselves soberly and discreetly. It was the law and the straining of the law that made the music-hall of the past a scandal and a disgrace. Since the temperate and common-sense managers of London theatres refused to put in action the existing law that forbids the elements of drama with the demon of drink, the music-halls have improved wonderfully in tone, in character, in decency, and in order. The better the entertainment the less drink. The higher class the show the less hunger for excess. Cannot the excellently-intentioned County Councillors understand this when they hinder free trade and fly in the face of consistency, because an isolated song has a vulgar refrain, and because some silly waiter exceeds his authority or refuses to supply a small lemon instead of a large one? It is absolutely childish to reflect that the liberties of the people are to be frustrated because of the thoughtlessness of one song-writer, and the stupidity of one uninformed waiter. That Miss Millie Hylton is not vulgar, that her art is the very reverse of vulgar, is sufficiently proved by her engagement at the Gaiety, where she promises to refine modern burlesque as she has already refined the music-hall song. When some of us remember and recall the days of George Leybourne and Vance, there is little need to enlarge on the "Rowdy Dowdy Boys." My own opinion is that the music hall proprietor of to-day would not in the interests of his patrons permit half the licence that is tolerated at the modern theatre. If there be any licence anywhere it is where drink is forbidden in the auditorium, not where it is allowed. But, after all, is it not straining at gnats and swallowing camels? Which is the better, secret drinking or public drinking? To drink at a bar on the sly round the corner is infinitely worse than to take a glass openly coram populo. The very surroundings suggest abstemiousness. The more society there is, the more moderation is encouraged. Besides, it has been proved up to the hilt, again and again, that the order and refinement of the modern music-hall have of themselves banished drink from the auditorium, not because it was forbidden, but because it was not wanted. In America the people will not allow drink to be sold in a theatre—that is to say, they stay away from theatres that are veiled public-houses. This is not done by the law, but by the people; not by the police, but the patrons. Give the people liberty, and they will set their houses in order. Meanwhile, "Don Juan" is interesting in that it shows how theatres of the lighter class stand in need of music-hall art. Mr. Arthur Roberts and Miss Millie Hylton both graduated at the halls, because they have the art of amusement at their fingers' ends. Some go from stage to hall, some come from hall to stage. It is a case of give and take. The best artist is the one most constantly in demand.

THE INDEPENDENT THEATRE SOCIETY.

What would be seriously thought of professors who opened academies or schools to teach painting to the colour-blind, singing to such as had not a vestige of voice, composition to all who were ignorant of grammar, or music to such as had never been grounded in thorough bass? I very much fear that such professors would be accounted quacks, if nothing worse. And yet the principles of the Independent Theatre Society are little less exaggerated than any of these. They say, Give us plays by all means, but don't dream of sending in plays for consideration that conform to any known rule of play-making. Let them be dull, dreadfully dull. Let them be horrible—the more horrors the better for us. Let their consistent depression be never relieved by the suspicion of a laugh. Let there be ever shade—never light. If your story tends to a suspicion of sunshine through the clouds, shut out the sunshine and draw down the blinds. Whatever is natural is wrong; whatever is humour is foolish; whatever is gladsome is contemptible. Abandon laughter, all ye who enter here. The two ladies who write under the name of "Michael Field" would doubtless have written a very passable and interesting play had they not been fettered by the formation of the new school of dramatic writing. They have power. They have a strong sense of what is dramatic, as distinct from what is merely theatrical; but "A Question of Memory" fails to interest, first, because it is so constantly depressing, and, secondly, because its conclusions are so hopelessly erroneous. As a well-known Ibsenite character observes, "People don't do such things" as they are represented to do in the last act of this extraordinary work. Women who hear of the sudden murder of their three most intimate female companions, one of them being a sister, are no heroines, indeed, they are positively unnatural, when they refuse to express any sorrow at so sudden a calamity. Cowards who betray their companions are not heroes, even though they boast and brag about their cowardice. There is nothing clever in reading human nature upside down. This kind of wearisome topseyturviness should be left to Mr. W. S. Gilbert. For the life of me I cannot see anything strange, wonderful, or moral in writing a play to say a bad woman must always be a bad woman, or a coward must always be a coward, or a drunkard must always be a drunkard, or to enforce the doctrine that "he that is filthy let him be filthy still." Such statements may be very startling, but they are not borne out by the logic of facts. Women as radically bad and vicious as a dozen Mrs. Tanquerays have been reformed and changed by firm and sensible men. Repentance is not in itself impossible, or even ridiculous. The ludicrous thing is to state with a grave face a solemn untruth, and to try and make people believe it is profound philosophy. The success of reformation is often exaggerated, no doubt; but we don't want plays written to tell us that the ordinary doctrines of Christianity are so much flim-flam. Dramatists may cry their folly aloud from the housetops, but no one will believe them.

TYPEWRITERS of all makes for Sale or Hire. Machines bought or taken in part exchange for new ones. Documents copied with accuracy and despatch.—N. TAYLOR, Manager, National Typewriter Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane.

But if this ambitious society does not discover good dramatists, it encourages excellent players, who, as a matter of course, are successful in the scenes that are stamped with truth and nature. No better acting of its kind could be seen on any stage than that of Mrs. Theodore Wright in this play, and yet I have scarcely seen it mentioned in one of the journals that advocate the tenets of the Independent Society. Nor have I seen any encouragement given to Miss Hall Caine for a remarkably clever performance. I can only conclude that some of the gentlemen are too much occupied in analysing bad plays to devote any attention to good acting. Coppée's "Le Pater" is a very poetical and powerful little play, and would succeed in the hands of a weird actress of the stamp of Mrs. Patrick Campbell. Now this play is essentially dramatic, and, moreover, it is true to human nature. It satisfies because the woman is a woman, and forgives. One of the new-fangled dramatists, horrified at convention, and with the bee of unconventionality in his bonnet, would most probably have made the priest's sister hand her betrayer over to death, and allowed the curtain to fall on her grim chuckle. But though the minority might have said, "How true; is it not exactly what the woman would have done?" the majority would have said, "How horrible; it is revolting, and no sane woman would do anything of the kind." Coppée is, however, a greater artist than Michael Field. He makes his heroine forgive her enemies, and the curtain falls on the suffrages of the Lord's Prayer.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

SARDOU'S NEW COMEDY.

"MADEMOISELLE SANS-GÊNE" must be a bitter pill—I won't say for the Princesse Mathilde, she being bonne femme, bonne fille, and bon garçon—but for the Murats, De Moskowas, De Rivolis, De Bellunes, and other grandees owing their titles to Napoleonic creation. As they think haughtiness adds to their dignity, the hits at them in Sardou's play are doubly enjoyable to those who go to be amused by it. This comedy is a most spectacular one. Any one desirous of knowing what the Court of Napoleon was to the eye as well as to the philosophic mind will find in it a delightful treat. There is not much in the play itself. But the original, the splendid, the inimitable cleverness of the chief actress, Mdlle. Réjane, taken with many of the situations, and the telling dialogue, make it an effective comedy. Réjane, as Catherine Hucher, nicknamed Mdlle. Sans-Gêne, and wife of ex-Sergeant Lefebvre, Duc de Danzig by Napoleon's grace, plays a symbolical part. She is the incarnation of what was humane, just, generous, heroic, popular, in the Revolution, as Fouché and Bonaparte's sisters and courtiers were of what was base. Catherine is a parallel to the late Madame Boucicaut. She is vulgar to those who can only admire what is conventional, and she is not in harmony with the pomps and vanities of a Court, but she is bright with mother wit, shrewd, good-natured, and picturesque in her strong originality. The moral of the play is that nothing is more reasonable than to follow bravely the impulses of a good heart.

Catherine Hucher is supposed to have been in 1793 running a small laundry in one of the narrow streets, pulled down by Haussmann, which ran across what is now the Place du Louvre. We first see her on the memorable Tenth of August, when the Tuileries were attacked by the people, the Swiss Guard massacred, and the Royal Family taken to the Convention on their way to the Temple prison. Catherine is a winsome, jolly wench — a patriot, too, as we see from the Revolutionary songs, engravings, and proclamations hanging on the walls of her laundress's shop. She has good-humoured and funny retorts for all the idlers who, thinking perhaps she may be galante, stop to pay compliments to her and her apprentices. Her tongue is ready, and as she has not time to lose, she sends them quickly about their business. How she toils and moils, and with what cheerfulness! It is hard for her, times being bad, to make both ends meet. She is busy ironing a shirt she has often mended. It is that of an artillery officer, one Buonaparte, who speaks broken French like an Italian. He is hard-up and miserable. She has not the courage to press him to pay her, and she reflects that perhaps he could not if she did. He may soon be better off. Another bad customer is Fouché, an attorney's clerk. As Catherine irons, discharges of musketry, and then of cannon, are heard. Presently Swiss Guards and Court gentlemen come flying down the street by her shop. Some are wounded. Patriots pursue them. The fugitives are the last defenders of Royalty at the Tuileries. Catherine hastens to put up her shutters, and sighs and laments about her sweetheart. Sergeant Lefebvre, of the ci-devant Garde Française, now incorporated in the Garde Nationale. He must be in the fray. She is about to close the door when a young Austrian officer, Comte Neipperg, rushes in bleeding and imploring shelter. Catherine's patriotic heart melts, She bolts the door. Knocks with the butt-end of a musket are soon heard. The fainting Neipperg is thrust into her bedroom, and she opens the street-door to—as it turns out—her sweetheart, who has his soldiers behind him. He asks, why the delay in opening the door? Catherine gives an evasive answer. "Is she hiding a lover?" he asks himself. Snatching a key from her, he unlocks the room door, and finds the Austrian on the bed. To test the depth of her love for the foreign officer, the Sergeant rushes back saying that he is dead. The laundress is all pity, but betrays no passion. "Are there papers in the dead man's pockets to show his identity?" she asks. "If so, his relatives can be warned; if not, she will have to arrange to get him buried." This calms Lefebvre, and his men drink wine she offers, and he brings them away to let her attend to the Austrian as her good heart prompts her.

Eighteen years later we find Lefebvre Marshal, Duc, and Governor of Compiègne, where Napoleon and Marie Louise hold their Court. His wife—except in looking matronly, for she had had a baby every other year—is the same old Catherine Hucher, the laundress. Her fine feathers do not make her a fine bird. She dresses in all the colours of the rainbow, and looks like a Queen in a gaudily-coloured engraving, the dress being red and the train pea-green velvet. The good soul cannot manage the curtsey to the Empress, and is at once the despair and the joy of the old Professor of Court Deportment, who is at heart a Royalist, and is tickled almost to death at the free-and-easy manners of La Maréchale, and the ridicule she brings upon the Court. She is sans gêne in giving home-thrusts to the sisters of Napoleon and other fine ladies, who all bother Lefebvre to allot them the finest rooms and equipages (save the Emperor's) at Compiègne. Caroline, Queen of Naples, and Elisa, Grand Duchess of Tuscany, each want to be on the best footing, and are insolent and overbearing. The new-fledged Duchesses are just as bad. When they presume to quiz the Governor's wife, she retorts, and not courteously, but funnily and wittily. But if she gives them as good as she gets—and better—she stirs their bile and excites their malignity. All cabal against her, and the Queen of Naples and Grand Duchess decide to ask Napoleon to force the Governor to divorce her.

In the second act, Napoleon is in his cabinet at Compiègne, in the plain uniform of the Chasseurs de la Garde. He drinks cup after cup of coffee, blows up aides-de-camp covered with gold lace and military trappings, loses his temper with his secretaries, and then receives a visit from his two sisters, between him and whom a quarrel arises. They bandy words with each other. When they get to the bottom of their French vocabulary, they resort to the Corsican dialect for epithets. Napoleon seizes the tongs, and, flourishing them, cries, but in vain, "Basta," which means "shut up." They have come to complain of the Duchesse de Danzig. She is summoned, and told that her incongruous language and bad manners make the Court a laughing-stock. To put an end to this the Emperor offers to make her a handsome allowance, if she will consent to the Marshal divorcing her. Catherine defends herself with clearness, and sometimes with warmth. When warm, she is eloquent, and is always adroit. Marry come up, indeed! Is it for the wives of ex-coopers, ostlers, hucksters, smugglers, and such-like to talk of her manners? They have dared to blow upon her virtue. If she was kind to a few soldiers, it was because they were soldierly and risked their lives for their country. To whom were the fine ladies about her kind? To dandies and to valets. What right had they to throw stones? What were the Murats, or the De Bellunes, or any of the lot? It was true that Catherine Hucher was a laundress. It was also true that she lived in a little street near the Tuileries. She had some good and some bad customers; some who paid her, and some who did not. Lefebvre paid her with devoted affection. He never forgot what he owed her. But there were some who had since become Dukes and greater, who never paid her bills. The Duc d'Otrante was one. A little artillery officer was another. He was poor, solitary, hard-up, and interesting. Napoleon grows uneasy. He stirs the fire and comes back to his desk. "Who was he?" he asks. Catherine Hucher takes a yellow-with-age list of the shirts and stockings she washed and mended out of the breast of her low-cut corsage. The total of the unpaid items comes to sixty francs. She hands the paper to the Emperor. "Lieutenant Buonaparte, Dr.," is at the head. This scene is exquisite.

But hark! The tread of a cavalry officer is heard in the ante-room of the Empress's bed-chamber. Who can it be? Napoleon in an instant is out of his mind from jealousy. He puts out the lamp, rushes out, and comes back dragging an Austrian officer, Count Neipperg, whom one of the Red Ladies had mysteriously brought into the presence of Marie Louise. Napoleon calls on Roustan and his Mamalouks to strangle the Austrian. Mademoiselle Sans-Gêne protests against a soldier being murdered by Turks. What cowardice to treat him thus! Condemn him to be shot if he has had criminal conversation (she uses stronger words) with the Empress; but first make inquiry. At any rate, observe formalities. Lefebvre, she goes bail, will keep the officer (whom she recognises) a close prisoner if he is given to his custody.

This scene is much ado about nothing. Neipperg had been summoned by the stupid Marie Louise to take a letter to her father asking for the Comte to be recalled to Vienna. She had noticed that he was in love with her, and she wanted to get rid of him at once. So, after a narrow escape, Neipperg goes back to Vienna, Napoleon is enchanted with his wife's prudence, La Maréchale

Lefebvre triumphs over the cabal, and everything is for the best in the best of worlds for three years more, at the end of which time the Empire was to be wound up, Napoleon sent to Elba, Marie Louise given over by her father, the Emperor Francis II., to Neipperg's embraces, and La Maréchale Lefebvre to shine forth as the only honest woman among the Duchesses of Imperial creation.

It was, I think, a mistake to have violated history in order to bring in Neipperg. Any one else would have done as well, for Marie Louise was such a neutral being that she would have loved any one with will enough to undertake the conquest of her. If all the ins and outs of Napoleon's Court were not so well known, there would be no harm in the anachronism of giving Neipperg a part to play in 1811. But, as every one must know that he never saw Marie Louise until 1814, the use made of him weakens the general impression of probability which the costumes and stage accessories give. Lovely Caroline Murat is just as Madame de Rémusat paints her—a hard-hearted, aspiring, selfish hussy, malodorous with pride, and very vulgar. Eliza, her sister, having more intellect, and being better educated (she was at school at St. Cyr), is not so bad. But they both are only good to serve as foils to Mademoiselle Sans-Gêne. Duquesne's rendering of Napoleon comes up to all Sardou's requirements; and you know how exacting Sardou is! He is not the legendary Emperor, but he is Napoleon as I dare say he appeared to Talleyrand, who said, after witnessing one of his tantrums, "What a pity so great a man is such a cad" (si mal élevé).

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

WE English, dear Lady Betty, are a righteous race; an altogether superior people.

But our neighbours do not love us. The reason for this is simple. We have too high an opinion of ourselves, and too low an opinion of others.

According to the popular estimate—

Americans are Vulgar,
French are Immoral,
Russians are Barbarians,
Italians are Beggars,
Spaniards are Cut-throats,
Germans are Boors,
Greeks are Sharpers,
Australians are Convicts,
Swiss are Harpies,
Turks are Unspeakable, and every other people—below contempt.

Foreigners are, in fact, deceitful, effeminate, irreligious, immoral, unclean, and unwholesome.

Any one Englishman is a match for any seven of them.

The only wonder to me is that the Nations do not arise and annihilate us.

* * * * *

Deny it as we may, the English character has seriously changed during the last half-century. We were insular before; we are now cosmopolitan. But in becoming this we have adopted the follies of our neighbours without acquiring their good qualities. They, however, have adopted whatever was best in us.

We have discarded our beef and beer, and taken to their fancy foods and their thin wines; we have become frivolous, fickle, and restless. They have adopted our love of sport, exercise, and athletics. The English character has changed just as our cuisine has. The sturdy, independent, intolerant, insular superiority bred from strong beer, strong beef, and strong language, is dissolving under a treatment of fricassees, thin claret, Pilzener, and pastry.

* * * * *

London is full of everything but news just now. "Je commence," wrote some one once, "parce que je n'ai rien à faire, et je finis parce que je n'ai rien à dire." I might very justly write the same to-day.

And apropos of this, Talleyrand was celebrated for his curt epistles. A woman once wrote to inform him that her husband had died. He answered, "Chère Marquise: Hélas! Votre dévoué, Talleyrand." A little later she wrote again to tell him that she was about to re-marry. To this he replied, "Chère Marquise: Ho! Ho! Votre dévoué, Talleyrand."

* * * * *

The Prince of Wales and the Council of the Imperial Institute have decided to attempt a further departure by founding an Orchestral and Choral Society for the purpose of giving smoking and other concerts. Sir Somers Vine has been authorised to appoint Mr. Luther Munday to assist him in the organisation of this scheme.

All that can be told of the late Maharajah Dhuleep Singh has already been said. He was passionately fond of sport and was a capital shot. At intervals he was subject to violent fits of religious enthusiasm. It may be told to his credit that he has made provision for all his children, his life having been heavily insured. He was devoted to his elder son and successor Prince Dhuleep Singh, a devotion which was as warmly returned.

Having no longer any kingdom, Prince Dhuleep Singh has decided to retain his present title and not to adopt that of Maharajah, a decision which is in every way wise. Being much attached to Elveden, his father's place in Norfolk, he intends to do all that is in his power to retain this. As it is, if sold, two-thirds of the purchase-money is devised to him and the remaining third to his step-mother, the Maharanee. It is to be hoped that the Government will assist him in his effort to retain Elveden, for whatever his faults may have been, but scant justice was meted out to his father.

Elveden is a fine place, but mostly celebrated for the quantity of game there is on it. The Hall is exquisitely decorated in the Oriental style, as are also some of the rooms. The chief picture of interest is a portrait of Runjeet Singh surrounded by his Court, which provides a striking contrast in the history of three generations of a ruling house.

Lord Carnarvon has kindly lent Bretby, his place near Burton-on-Trent, to Prince Dhuleep Singh for a while, and the latter left London for this place yesterday (Tuesday).

Many will learn with regret that the Comte de Fitz-James, a younger brother of Duc de Fitz-James, lies seriously ill in Paris. Equally widely known in England as upon the Continent, Comte de Fitz-James is celebrated for his courteous manner, his ready wit, his conversational powers, and his large experience of the world.

It is only with excessive delicacy that it is possible to touch upon the sad death of the late Captain Frederick Howard, a brother of Lord Effingham, who blew his brains out last week whilst suffering from an attack of temporary insanity. Great anxiety, exaggerated in the excitement of the moment, unhinged his reason, and there only remains now the power to sympathise with those to whom this tragic calamity has brought such sudden sorrow.

But how anybody under any circumstances whatever can be induced to commit suicide has always been a matter of mystery to me. If we would only see things as they are, we should realise that we attach altogether undue importance to the trivialities of life. What can it possibly matter to any one, for instance, what others think of him? And yet, in nearly every case, it is a dread of exposure which is the main cause for this act.

RATIONAL DOG FEEDING.—Give wholesome and nutritious food (Spratt's Patent Meat Fibrine Dog Cakes). Do not give tit-bits and dainties because your dog, like a spoilt child, prefers what suits his palate. See that the Dog Cakes are stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "×," as cheap and innutritious imitations are often substituted for extra profit. Pamphlet on Canine Diseases post free, SPRATT'S PATENT, Limited, Bermondsey, London.

* * * * *

The latest addition to the open-air lecturers in Hyde Park on Sunday afternoons is an unemployed butler, who now assembles around him each week large crowds of disaffected fellow-servants. It might surprise those who care to see themselves as others see them to attend some of his meetings, for the lecturer pretends to possess minute knowledge of the habits and customs—above stairs and below stairs—of the various West End households. And he repeats them.—Believe me to be very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

CONSIDERING the acute financial depression which at present overshadows the turf, it is an exceedingly fortunate circumstance that Callistrate was beaten for the Cambridgeshire. If M. Abeille's horse had won, then a huge stake would have been landed, nearly the whole of which would have gone to France, and not a farthing of the money would ever have been recovered. As a rule, when a great stake is won on the turf, the bookmakers can afford to regard the coup with equanimity, well knowing that in nineteen cases out of twenty all the money will sooner or later come back, and probably with substantial interest. It is very different when a well-backed French horse is successful. During the last thirty-two years the French have won the Cambridgeshire six times, and at least £250,000 crossed the Channel in consequence, and, what is worse, the money has stayed there. When Montargis won, just twenty years ago, some £60,000 was netted by the French, and in that season the Cambridgeshire betting was on such a gigantic scale that the horse was all along a rank outsider, and he started, as far as I remember, at 66 to 1. Then great sums were won over Gladiateur and other horses owned by Count de Lagrange, and only five years ago there was the Cesarewitch victory of Tenebreuse, which took over £30,000 out of the country. Callistrate was, I believe, "chopped" to some extent at the start last Wednesday, and the race was nearly over when he got fairly into his stride. He was going very strong indeed at the finish, and if there had been another mile to go, Callistrate would, no doubt, have been the winner. He is certainly a good stayer, and I understand that we shall see him running next year for the Gold Cup at Ascot if he goes on all right.

When writing about the Cambridgeshire a fortnight ago there were only two animals which I mentioned with favour—Llanthony and Molly Morgan. Sir Robert Jardine's horse went very badly in the betting at the finish, and he never showed in the race. As to Lord Dunraven's mare, I wrote of her on October 19 that "she will be all the better for another ten days of sharp work, and she will be more suited by the distance." Molly Morgan had the race in hand a long way from home, and she won in a common canter. If Molly Morgan had won the Cesarewitch she would assuredly have achieved the double event, for she had more than a stone in hand last Wednesday. Raeburn ran very creditably, but he never had a chance with the winner, and the importance of his Manchester victory over Isinglass was preposterously over-rated. Mr. McCalmont's horse would have been a good second for the Cambridgeshire if he had started. It is now clear that Prisoner is not a stayer, and that (as I all along maintained) his Doncaster Cup victory was an arrant fluke. It was an extraordinary piece of luck for the Ring that Lord Cadogan's horse just managed to scramble into the third place, for Metallic, who finished fourth, had been backed for more money for a place than any other animal in the field. I never could fancy La Flèche with her weight, for she has evidently gone off considerably since last autumn, and nearly twelve months ago I predicted that she would not accomplish much as a four year old. The St. Simons, whatever their other merits, certainly do not train on, and the four year old history of La Flèche is simply a repetition of that of her own sister, Memoir, who so direfully disappointed her legion of Cambridgeshire backers two years ago. Castleblaney, about whom so much elaborate noise had been raised, ran a perfect wretch, but was reported to have been "chopped" at the start by Laodamia, who was started to make running for him! William ran well for five furlongs, and then stopped. He is probably a non-stayer, and will doubtless win a good T.Y.C. handicap next season. Laodamia was in front for three-quarters of a mile, and it is certain that she is a very smart mare, and must be backed whenever she is "slipped." Le Nicham ran well, and would have been placed if he had been ridden out, but he was judiciously eased when Molly Morgan was seen to have the race in hand, in order that he might be in good trim for the Free Handicap on Thursday, which he won in a trot. Macready was the gross impostor of the race, and there must have been some egregious blundering about the "great trial" which he was alleged to have won. It is all hugger-mugger nonsense to try a horse over a shorter distance than that of the race for which he is being prepared, and if it is true that Macready was galloped merely over the easy D.M., no rational being should express surprise at his complete and ignominious collapse in the Cambridgeshire.

I plumped for Lady Rosebery for the Jockey Club Cup, and what the bookmakers were about when they laid evens against her it is impossible to understand, considering the poor lot which were running.

The Duke of Westminster was exceedingly ill advised in running Orme for the Limekiln Stakes. This horse was shaken by his races on the hard ground during the summer, and he has given Porter a deal of trouble and anxiety. He did not look so well as at Sandown, and he seemed to run his race in a very spiritless manner. It would have been no great achievement, over his own distance, to give Childwick 25 lb. more than weight for age, and it is really too absurd and fatuous to read a lot of trumpeting twaddle about Childwick's victory having proved that he is worth the outrageous sum (6,000 gs.) which was paid for him as a yearling, this being his first success. The Houghton meeting twelve years ago was also fatal to Orme's grandsire, Bend Or, who ran nowhere in Foxhall's Cambridgshire, for which he started at 9 to 2 in a field of thirty-two!

That very unlucky horse, Orvieto, has been sold by Mr. Houldsworth to Mr. Burdett-Coutts for 5,000 gs., which is an exceedingly low price for an animal of his high breeding and excellent performances. Orvieto has never got over his race for the Ascot Cup, which also proved so disastrous to Marcion. He is to remain at Newmarket, and his fee will be 50 gs.

A largely-attended meeting of the Jockey Club was held on Wednesday after the races, and general surprise and disgust were expressed when it was found that a majority of the members had rejected Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's excellent and very much-needed proposal that in future all technical objections must be lodged before the race is run, except in cases where fraud is alleged. The Jockey Club is cursed with some members who are the most determined enemies to every species of salutary change. It is impossible to over-rate their obstinacy and intolerance, and their more intelligent colleagues must feel indignant and mortified at their bigoted hostility to improvement, nor are they the materials from which converts are made. Every change must be forced upon them from without, for they will alter nothing of their own free will, and they are so muddy-minded that they like to maintain all the minutest abuses which in course of time have clung to the turf, and they only succeed in connecting the name of the Jockey Club with every abuse and misdemeanour. The flagrant scandals which have frequently occurred in consequence of the present defective condition of the law on the subject of objections must be perfectly well known to every member of the Jockey Club who opposed Mr. de Rothschild's praiseworthy motion, but, as usual, they view the matter with stupid and hog-minded unconcern. The arguments in favour of the proposed change are so strong and so clear that it is impossible to conceive upon what grounds it was opposed, and the rejection of Mr. de Rothschild's motion must be deplored by all well-wishers of the turf, as the present laxity in the matter of objections simply facilitates the sinister operations of all kinds of knaves, and benefits only the vermin of the race-course.

There will be racing next week at Leicester and at Liverpool, and large fields may be expected at both meetings, but hardly any of the sport will be of general interest.

Sixteen three-year-olds have been left in for the Liverpool St. Leger, a stake with £600 added, and I should fancy that Son of a Gun is sure to win.

The Great Lancashire Breeders' Produce Stakes of £2,900 has thirty-five two-year-olds left in, and on each of these animals there is an entrance of £40 to be paid, whereas those which declared forfeit on March 26 had only £20 to pay. It is a vastly fortunate circumstance for the managers of the meeting that Delphos did not make his début at Lincoln or at Liverpool, for if he had done so the chances are that there would have been a general clear out from this stake. Delphos has a penalty of 10 lb., which, however, is got rid of by means of a breeding allowance of 10 lb., so the race seems an absolute certainty for him. Galloping Dick and Bullingdon, having both the worst of the weights with Delphos, are not likely to start, unless Mr. Baird sends his rogue to the post just on the off chance. Match Box, having to give Delphos 10 lb., will certainly be an absentee, and neither Wherwell nor Priestholme can have any chance of defeating Mr. Blake's speedy colt.

The Liverpool Cup cannot be discussed until after the acceptances have been published, and I strongly advise backers not to meddle with this always dangerous race until the day of running arrives.

The recent death of a young fellow while playing hockey has aroused a good deal of attention to the dangers of the game. The ball is a cricket ball painted white, and the weight of the club is limited. But, for all that, there is in the game a good deal of danger which is of a cold-blooded and gratuitous description. The rough-and-tumble of football, whether it be Association or Rugby, necessarily implies a certain degree of danger, without which there would be no football at all. But in hockey there is no charging and very little hustling, and the danger arises from the implements. The clubs are quite strong enough to drive the ball with tremendous force. It would be considered an act of folly for a man to drive a ball to the off at cricket right amongst a crowd of fifteen or twenty men, and yet this is what the back at hockey is continually doing. It is true the club may not be raised above the shoulders, but a sweeping stroke has been invented to circumvent this restriction. As the game is now played by men, the ball travels with such force as to create an element of danger, which should not be permitted in a first-class game. A few years ago Mr. Shearman, who was President of the O.U.A.C., and played forward at Rugby football for his University, advocated lighter clubs and balls for hockey, which he was then playing, but his motion was lost in Committee. This was when the game was in its infancy; but now that his views about the unnecessary dangers of the game have been more than realised, it is imperative that a change should be made.

Last week the City Swimming Association organised a most successful meeting at the Whitechapel Baths. The object was to enforce on the minds of the Corporation of the City of London the need for a swimming bath in the City. The Lord Mayor was present. The plans of a proper bath to be erected on the river at Blackfriars were said to be at the Guildhall. I wonder how long they will stay there. Considering the few opportunities there are for physical recreation in the City, it is disgraceful that the task has not been undertaken before. When the bath is built it is to be hoped it will not be on the plan of the ordinary swimming bath, which compels spectators to choose between being suffocated by the gas in a crowded gallery or being drenched when standing on the edge of the bath in front of the dressing-boxes. While the plans are at the Guildhall it would be as well to have them examined by some of those persons who really understand what is wanted.

The cloud no bigger than a man's, or rather a working man's, hand has arisen in the world of golf. The City of Newcastle Golf Club held an open handicap recently. The Newcastle United Workmen's Club sent in the name of one of its number, and the Secretary received a letter to say that the entry had been laid before the Committee, and, "Mr. ——, being a member of a working man's golf club, is ineligible to play in the open handicap on Saturday." A bigger piece of snobbery it would be hard to conceive. Why did not the Committee advertise "No working men admitted?" Committees generally reserve the right to refuse an entry, but, like a jury, they should never give reasons for their verdict. If the working man is an amateur, I can see no reason for his exclusion. I have never heard of such class distinctions before, except in rowing, where the case is entirely different. If working men amateurs are to be treated differently, let some rules based on sound reasons be made. At present I am trying to find some reasons. Untroubled by these questions, ninety-nine players turned out on Saturday at Wimbledon for the first day of the Club's autumn meeting.

On Saturday there were practically no first-class Rugby football matches in the Metropolis. As "gates" are as of much importance to amateur as professional teams, I should have thought that club secretaries would make better arrangements. Oxford made a fine fight with the Scottish, and I hear that the University forwards are a very fast lot. The slow, heavy forward is a thing of the past. It is said that a Rugby Cup will be started by Middlesex. With cup, club, and county matches the game will be overdone, and then there will be as much trouble in the South as in the North about professionalism. It is a pity, considering the hold the Association game has on the Army, that the Army team made such a poor display against the Corinthians, who turned up with a splendid team, and against their forwards the Army halves and backs were useless.

MAMMON.

RUDD, RHODES, & CO., PHILANTHROPISTS (LIMITED).

LAST Friday Mr. Rudd, in addressing the shareholders of the Consolidated Gold Fields of South Africa Company, defended Mr. Rhodes, and did not defend me. He said that, compared to Mr Rhodes, I am no more "than a pariah to a mastiff," and that Mr. Rhodes is not the money-grubber that I seek to make him out. The comparison is rather ornamental rhetoric than argument. As for the latter statement, what I assert—have always asserted—is that Mr. Rhodes is a Company Promoter, and that as a Company Promoter he has made a vast fortune out of the moneys subscribed by investors, who have no reason to thank him for having depleted their pockets. Mr. Rudd and Mr. Rhodes are the joint Managing Directors of this Gold Fields Company. Will Mr. Rudd favour me with the amount that he and his partner have gained—either in shares or cash—by their promotion and connection with this Company, together with their contract as Directors or Founders, and what cash has been paid by them to entitle them to these profits? The public will then have an opportunity to form its own judgment as to the mode of procedure of Mr. Rhodes in Company-mongering, and whether this patriot is really working for himself or for his country. From what has been done in one Company by these Siamese twins, we may form a reasonable estimate of what has been done in others. I always distrust a man who takes to business and who explains that he is actuated by higher motives than by a desire to make money. But when this plea is urged in favour of a Company-promoter, who has made and is making hundreds of thousands by promotion, and subsequent manipulation of shares, I do indeed smile.

As for the Chartered Company itself, I have more than once explained how it was brought into existence, but the facts disclose so wondrous a scheme of financing that I make no apology for repeating them. Messrs. Rhodes, Rudd, and Beit obtained a mining concession from Lobengula. This mining concession may have cost a few thousand pounds, but the concessionaries sold it to a Company, called the Concessions Company, for £4,000,000, which means that they themselves became this Company, and divided this paper capital amongst themselves and others with whom they were associated. Mr. Rhodes then obtained a Royal Charter, on the ground of having the concession. But this Charter was given, not to the Concessions Company, but to a sub-Company which undertook all costs involved in the Charter on condition of receiving one-half of net profits, the other half going to the Concessions Company—i.e., to Rhodes, Rudd, and Beit. The sub-Company is what is now known as the Chartered Company. It has a capital of one million. It began by issuing £250,000 of £1 shares. These were taken in the main by the triumvirate and by Companies in which they had an interest, with the proviso that for each £1 share taken two should be allotted in case of any further issue of share capital. Soon afterwards 500,000 shares were issued, on which 3s. was paid. These shares were in many cases sold for 50s. and 60s. to the investing public. What the profits therefore of the gang may have been by selling shares of the Concessions Company, and these 500,000 shares of the Chartered Company at an enormous premium, may approximately be estimated. Lobengula has stated that the original concession was obtained from him by fraud, and in the last Blue Book on Mashonaland which is published, there is a letter from the Colonial Office, in which it is asserted that, when the Charter was granted, the division of spoils between the Concessions Company and the Chartered Company was concealed.

Mr. Rudd has further given his views upon current events in South Africa in an "interview" which is published in the Daily Chronicle. The war, he opines, is a philanthropic undertaking. Speaking of the Matabele, he says that their great evil is want of work. "It is the old story," observes the philanthropist Rudd, "of Satan finding mischief for idle hands to do." His panacea for this is simple. "Let them work in the mines." The mines happen to be theirs, but they are to be deprived of them, and their future connection with them is to be limited to working in them, in order that benefactors of the Rudd kidney may have their reward for civilising these unpractical savages. Judging, however, by experience, Rudd, Rhodes, and Co. will not even incur the risk of working these mines. Having seized them, they will be sold to sub-Company-promoters. If these minor jackals pay £5,000, they will issue a prospectus in which will appear the paragraph:—The vendors have fixed the price of the property at £100,000, and there will be another contract (the obligation to publish all contracts being waived) by which it will be agreed that half net profits are to go to Rudd, Rhodes, & Co. This is how things have been managed in Mashonaland. I do not wonder that the Company is burning with the desire to extend the field of their beneficent action to Matabeleland.

Wondrous, indeed, is the state of mind of a Company-promoter. He really honestly seems to believe that the world is his oyster, and that it has been brought into existence in order to afford him scope for Company-promoting. Other men's goods he deems property misplaced, and considers that he has a natural right to juggle himself into its possession. If men are idle, they are to be made to toil and work for him. So clear is his opinion as to his "rights," that murder, robbery, and treachery become justifiable if they be necessary in order to enable him to carry out the mission for which Providence has placed him on this planet. That he should believe all this himself is strange, stranger still is it that he should expect others to believe him when he prates about his philanthropy, and still more strange is it that he should actually find fools who believe him. Rhodes and Rudd would gain were they to get hold of Matabeleland. But whether the change of régime, even supposing that Satan rules there now, will be a benefit to the Matabeles is by no means clear. Companies have no souls to be saved, nor other portions of the human organism to be kicked. And I can conceive no rule more detestable than that of a Company of speculators over a subject race.

In the course of the interview Mr. Rudd tells us that there is some good in Lobengula, and he gives an instance. The monarch once did not get his beer as soon as he wished, so he cut the nose of the man off who was the cause of delay. And, as Mr. Rudd observes, if Lobengula had not cut this nose off there would always have been delays in getting his beer. And certainly between massacring the Matabeles and cutting their noses off, there is a certain similarity of treatment.

These atrocities do not surprise me. What would have surprised me would have been that they should not have taken place. We have a Company, shady in its finances amongst Companies, existing alone in order to acquire gold-reefs and sell them to investors at home. The military head of the Company is a man who has been denounced as a murderer by the Under-Secretary of the Colonies; the forces of the Company consist of men attracted by the promise of sharing in the spoil when certain Matabeles are "wiped out." Who can have a doubt how, under such conditions, a war is carried on? If any one has such doubt, he has only to consult history.

I am glad to see that the Daily Chronicle is publishing a series of articles showing what this Chartered Company is. They enter into all details, and give chapter and verse for all. I recommend their perusal to any man who has at heart the honour of the country, and who is not prepared to allow our good name to be disgraced by the proceedings of a gang of greedy, blood-stained adventurers, which equal in wickedness anything that was ever done by the Spaniards in Cuba and Central America.

I take the following from an article on the situation in the Pretoria Weekly News of October 7, which has just come to hand. It would appear, moreover, that it is admitted in South Africa that the Chartered Company has been kept going since January last by a monthly payment of £3,500 from the De Beers Diamond Company. Of course, Mr. Rhodes, as a Director of the De Beers Company, has no more right to make this payment than to give the monthly sum to me. If not repaid, it is likely that the shareholders of the Company will take this view of the transaction; hence the absolute necessity of conquering something which may enable the Chartered Company to place more capital over here, in order to repay the De Beers Company:—

> Lobengula, the King of the Matabele, was lord of Matabele and Mashonaland, and, like savage kings all over the world, had the power of life and death over his people and vassals. The Chartered Company obtained from him the right to dig for buried gold in Mashonaland, and paid him £100 per month for the privilege. The Company also gave him rifles, musical boxes, a silver elephant, and so on. The King guaranteed that the Company should dig for the gold free from molestation. During the years the Company has been exploiting its mineral rights Lobengula has faithfully kept his part of the bargain. No white man in Mashonaland has been molested. The Mashonas, who were still his vassals, he has raided every year as usual without protest from the Company until last August. The right to raise tribute from these Mashonas, and to punish them in his own fashion if they neglected or refused to pay the tax he imposed, was one of the rights he retained. Nowhere in the concession will any resignation on the part of Lobengula to his sovereign rights over the Mashonas be found. In August Lobengula sent an impi to collect tribute from Mashonas round about Victoria. Relying presumably on the proximity of the whites, they refused, and were punished without mercy, and in characteristically brutal fashion. Some of these Mashonas were working for the settlers, and some were killed. Dr. Jameson sent for the indunas, and told them that they had no right to cross the border, no right to kill the Mashonas, and that if they did not leave the country within an hour, according to Mr. Davis, and within two hours, according to Mr. Wightman, he would drive them out. As an actual fact, they had the right to cross the border and to kill the Mashonas, dreadful as it appears to our susceptibilities. The border was thirty miles away, as reference to the map will prove. The Matabele left for the border quickly, evidently determined to cross as speedily as possible. Given short grace, they were pursued, though they appear to have made no resistance, and were shot down like rabbits. The remainder got across the border, and since then no Matabele have entered Mashonaland. The Europeans at Buluwayo have been treated with humanity. The convoys entering Mashonaland from the Transvaal and Bechuanaland have been unmolested. Travellers between Tuli, Victoria, Charter, Salisbury, Hartley Hills and Umtati have never once been attacked. Large numbers of Matabele have been watching the border for many weeks, but there has never been the slightest evidence of an intended attack on the Europeans. It is the opinion of men who know the Matabele that if they are left alone they will never enter Mashonaland again. The above are the facts that are not, we believe, denied by the Chartered Company.

No European can have any sympathy with a savage who treats the Mashonas as does Lobengula, but at the same time we contend that the Imperial Government, in allowing the Chartered Company to attack Buluwayo, is sanctioning an act of gross injustice in order that a number of influential and powerful English speculators may make money. It must be always remembered that the war now being entered upon has nothing to do with England. It is a mere buccaneering sally after loot and land engineered by a private Company.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

My dear Ben,—At last there is a rift in the clouds which have been overhanging the Stock Markets. The repeal of the mischievous Sherman Silver Bill has at last been accomplished, and the business community in the United States breathes freely once again. The auspicious event has been heralded by an advance in American Railroad securities, thus fully confirming my predictions, and, I am glad to think, materially benefiting all those who have followed my advice. At one time a regular boom was in progress, but a healthy reaction has since come about, the rise having been a little too fast and furious. A few other troublesome matters remain to be cleared away, if confidence is to be generally restored. The disastrous coal strikes in the Midlands and the ratification by Congress of the arrangements concerning the Argentine Debt concluded with the Rothschild Committee are important questions, the settlement of which appears to be approaching. A minor trouble—that of the Industrial and General Trust—is unsettling the holders of Trust stocks generally, and it is much to be hoped that some reasonable solution will be found, which may place the Company on a sound basis and under able management. When all these events come to pass—provided that no fresh accident spoil the fun—we may look for a substantial increase in dealings on the Stock Exchange and a sharp advance in values in many directions.

Home Rails.

This department is smarting under the heavy blow which the coal strikes have struck it through heavy decreases in mineral and general goods traffic. Prices of the "Heavy" division at last gave way when it was found that some real stock had come out; but it was again to some extent "Bear" pressure, which forced the decline of from 1 to 3 points, Midlands suffering most. A slight recovery has since taken place on fresh indications of an early termination of the coal war. It would be premature after recent disappointments to make sure that a favourable result will be reached in the negotiations now being opened, and I must therefore put the case hypothetically. If the coal strikes were to come to an end very shortly a rally in the stocks of the "Heavy" lines would no doubt ensue, as there would be the prospect of a certain proportion of the loss in coal traffic being recovered before the end of the year. It is true that shareholders will in any case have to face a severe decline in dividends for the current half-year, but they might look upon this as a temporary evil not likely to recur for some time to come. A recovery in prices would, therefore, be probable, if the struggle in the Midlands were to come to an end now, while, on the other hand, any prolongation of the same might lead to a fresh decline. North Eastern, which are unaffected by the strike, have remained steady, and will, no doubt, join in any upward movement of the rest of the list. Minor spasms have taken place in Sheffield Deferred and Great Eastern, but in these instances, too, a recovery is in progress for the same reasons. Great Northern stocks have suffered severely, this line being greatly affected by the coal trouble. On the other hand, Brighton "A" have fluctuated considerably, being depressed at one time to 142⅝, but my anticipation that the unwieldy "short" account would tell at the settlement has been fully borne out. Instead of enjoying a walk-over, as happened at the mid-October account, the ursine operators had finally to pay up to 1⅛ backwardation, and so little stock was there in the market that a good many "names were over" at the last, and the discomfited "Bears" had to go to the men who were taking up stock to obtain postponement of delivery. The fact is that investors are reducing the amount of stock which is available for gambling purposes to vanishing point. Thus I am told that a transfer for £5,000 stock went into thirty-three names. Such small amounts of stock are, of course, invariably locked up, and very rarely come into the market again. The actual dividend outlook is bad enough in all conscience, but here, too, the coal strike will govern the position. If it should terminate soon, the goods traffic of the Brighton line will pick up materially, while the passenger traffic has already commenced to show increases. The loud-voiced jobber in the Brighton Market and the other "Bears," who have been selling "Berthas" so lustily, may therefore find themselves confronted with a position which will make it impossible for them to get in at anything like the present price. The shop, by the way, have been quietly covering of late whenever an opportunity offered, and it is chiefly Tom, Dick, and Harry from all the other departments of the House, and a number of operators in the country who have acted on the general tip to "sell yourself some 'Berthas.'". Dover "A" are in a somewhat similar position, although they have not been picked up by investors to any extent. The market is in an oversold condition, and any favourable development would cause a sharp advance in prices. But traffics will have to improve. The Scotch stocks have eased off slightly in sympathy with the rest of the market, and may be expected to follow any upward movement.

Advance in Yankee Rails.

It is a source of sincere gratification to me that my forecast of events in the Yankee market has been so completely borne out by events. It has been a weary period of waiting, but unconditional repeal, which I have all along advocated and predicted, is now an accomplished fact. A further important advance has taken place in all the leading American Railroad stocks, large dealings accompanying the first reports of repeal being assured. It will be useful at this juncture to give the comparison of prices with the lowest point reached this year during the height of the crisis on July 31, and with the highest and lowest quotation in 1892.

	Highest in 1892.	Lowest in 1892.	July 31, 1893.	Sept. 4, 1893.	Oct. 30, 1893.
Atchison	47⅞	33¼	13	21⅛	22⅜
Do. Second Mort. "A" bonds	69⅞	54½	32	45¼	43
Atlantic Firsts	40½	28⅝	18⅜	24	20
Canadian Pacific	97½	87½	70	78½	76½
Central Pacific	36⅝	28¼	18¼	22⅛	21⅛
Denver	19⅜	15⅝	9½	11	10½
Do. Preferred	56½	46½	28	31	29½
Erie	35⅝	23⅞	9¼	15⅝	14⅞
Do. Second Mort. bonds	112⅝	103⅜	64	76	70½
Louisville	87⅞	66⅜	51⅜	57	53
Milwaukee	86¼	77⅛	49½	62⅜	69
Mis., Kan., and Texas	21	14	9½	12¼	13¼
Norfolk Preferred	57½	38⅜	19¼	24¼	23½
Nor. Pac. Preferred	74⅜	46¼	20⅛	24⅞	25
New York Centrals	122⅜	111	90½	106	107
Ohio and Mississippi	24½	19⅛	12⅜	16⅞	17⅛
Ontario	23¼	18	12⅝	15½	17½
Readings	32½	20	6	9⅛	11⅛
Do. First Income bonds	81½	70¼	24	34	37
Union Pacific	51⅝	37⅛	17⅛	24⅛	19⅛
Wabash Preferred	34½	23⅛	12½	17⅛	17⅛
Do. "B" Debentures	51⅜	35⅞	20½	28⅛	27½

It will be seen that quotations have in many cases reached again the recent highest point of September 4, while my favourite Milwaukees, and a good many other stocks, show a further substantial advance. The rise since July 31 in fact reaches nearly 20 in Milwaukees, and 11 in Atchison Second Mortgage "A" bonds, while some of the low priced stocks have benefited to the extent of from 2 to 5. As many of my readers have invested at the lower range of prices, their purchases stand now at a very handsome profit, while those who had bought at higher prices will thank me for having prevented them from selling out in a panic and at the bottom. That is what, unfortunately, a good many have done who have listened to the advice of the City Editor of the Standard and of other pessimistic scribes. The few cantankerous correspondents who used to pester me with abusive epistles, because, forsooth, matters did not come right at once, will have to finally take a back seat, and perhaps these gentry will now devote their attention to the bilious writers who urged them to get rid of their stocks at the bottom. Take the case of a wealthy reader of TRUTH, who has been unfortunate enough to take the advice of a weekly contemporary, which shall be nameless. He writes complaining bitterly that he was induced to act in this suicidal fashion by the view persistently urged in its columns that the "sky was falling in" in the United States. Returning from a trip to the States, where he had laid in a stock of cheap securities, including Milwaukees and Atchison, he unfortunately listened to the hysterical nonsense of the journal in question, and sold almost at the bottom, while, if he had held these stocks for a few months, he would now have a profit extending to five figures to rejoice over. I am glad to hear, however, that he took the advice given in TRUTH in time to benefit considerably from the present upward movement. Traffic returns have of late shown a marked improvement. In the case of the Milwaukee line a weekly increase of 88,000 dols. is shown, and the September statement showing a gross decrease of 233,536 dols. works out to 4,634 dols. net increase. The last weekly Atchison decrease was only 50,000 dols., while it had recently been five times that amount. The Louisville decreases are also diminishing. I hope that my readers who sold Louisville at 56 and 58 a few months ago, have also taken my advice to buy again, so repeatedly tendered to them during the last few weeks, when the stock dropped to 45-47. As I stated then, the new stock to be authorised will not be issued for the present, and the acquisition of the Chesapeake and Ohio South-Western has been abandoned. The traffic outlook is also more satisfactory, and I have no doubt that Louisville will now move up with the rest of the market. Atchison Second Mortgage "A" bonds deserve special attention, as the position of the Atchison Company is now completely assured. There should also be a fair prospect of the reorganisation of the lines at present in the Receiver's hands, especially the Northern Pacific, now under the control of a more respectable group, Erie and Reading. Reactions after the very sharp rise are, of course, very probable, but if the Repeal Bill be followed by wise financial legislation, confidence will be still further restored and business be stimulated. The scare in Erie, by the way, is absurd, as the passing of the Second Mortgage interests, which has been utilised by the "Bears," had been fully anticipated. With regard to the Baltimore and Ohio South-Western Railroad and the Ohio and Mississippi Railway, advices have now been received that at the meetings of stock-holders held in Cincinnati, the consolidation was voted unanimously. A considerable demand for high-class American Railroad Bonds is now also springing up and those who wish to benefit by the present very moderate level of prices will have to hurry up. Undoubtedly one of the best opportunities ever offered to acquire a high yielding security of this kind is the purchase of Atchison Guarantee Fund Notes, to which the following paragraph is devoted.

Atchison Guarantee Fund Notes.

The official announcement that the whole of the 9,000,000 dols. of Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund Notes of the Atchison Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad Company, which were originally issued in Boston in 1888, and expire on November 1, 1893, have been renewed for five years until November 1, 1898, has caused a sharp advance in all Atchison securities, the shares having risen 4 to 23, the Second Mortgage "A" bonds 5 to 15, the Four per Cent. General Mortgage Gold bonds 4½ to 7⅝. I never doubted that the renewal would be accomplished, and I was enabled to state this positively and on the best information during the recent scare. Nor was it surprising that these Notes should be taken up by bankers and investors, who rightly see in them one of the best gilt-edged securities in the London and New York markets. The particulars of this security are fully set out under "A Selection of Investments," No. 20, and it will be seen that they stand as a first charge ahead of 300 million dollars capital. At their present price of 97 ex November 1st Coupon, they yield, reckoning the profit on exchange and on redemption in five years at "par" in New York (103 London), 7⅜ per cent. per annum. Compare this with Philadelphia and Reading Five per Cent. extended bonds at 113½ (formerly carrying 7 per cent.), which are only ahead of 150 million dollars capital, or Northern Pacific First Six per Cent. bonds at 110, the line being actually in the hands of a receiver. It requires but little intelligence for any investor to see that the present is an exceptional opportunity to acquire so fine a security at so moderate a price. Bankers, Assurance Companies, and investors will soon compete for these notes at a much higher price, especially as advices concerning the Atchison Company are favourable, both as regards its financial position, and the traffic outlook.

A Selection of Investments.

The table of "well-secured stocks which have never defaulted," which I published a fortnight ago, has proved so popular with my readers, that I repeat it to-day with modifications. Not that the securities which I have replaced by others are undesirable, but in the case of small private Trusts to be made by investors, the new selection will, I think, prove more useful. Nearly all the stocks mentioned a fortnight ago have improved on investment purchases, but not to such an extent that the yield is at all materially interfered with. There is, on the contrary, a very considerable margin for a rise.

Well Secured Stocks, which have never Defaulted:—

	—	Per cent.	—	Highest in 1892.	Lowest in 1892.	Present price.	Yield per cent. per annum. about
1	Antofagasta (Chili) Railway	4	Debenture Stock	96¾	92½	95	£4 4s.
2	Do. do.	—	Ordinary	119½	110	105	5 14
3	Bank of New Zealand Estates	5½	Debentures.....	109½	102½	107	5 3
4	Canadian Pacific Railway..	5	First Mortgage Debenture Bds., 1915	118¾	113	115	4 7
5	Chili, 1893	4½	Bonds..	—	—	73½	6 3
6	Debenture Corporation	4	Debenture Stock	—	—	101	4 1
7	De Beers Consolidated Mines	5½	Second Debentures ..	104	89	103½	5 6
8	Gordon Hotels Company ..	4	Perpet. Deben. Stock	119½	109½	123	3 13
9	Ind, Coope, & Co.	4½	First Mor. Deb. Stock	116½	110	116	3 18
10	Illinois Central Railroad ..	4	Cairo Bridge Gold Bonds	102¾	99½	102	4 2
11	Law Debenture Corporation	4	Debenture Stock	102	99	103	3 18
12	Nitrate Railway	5	First Mortgage Debentures.....	98¾	90	96	5 5
13	A. & F. Pears, Limited	5	Debenture Stock	108	102	107	4 13
14	River Plate Trust, Loan, &c.	4	Do. do. ..	93¾	78	93	4 7
15	Southwark and Vauxhall Water	6	Ordinary Stock	153	133	157	3 17
16	Trustees, Executors, and Securities Insurance Corpn.	4	First Mort. Debentures	101¾	98½	95	*4 4
17	United Railways of Havana	5	First Mortgage Bonds	101½	94	93	5 8
18	United States Debenture Corporation.....	4½	Debenture Stock	100	82½	90	4 19
19	Western of Buenos Ayres (irredeemable until June, 1925).....	5	Mortgage Bonds	109¾	97	110	4 11
20	Atchison Topeka and Santa Fé	6	Five years Guarantee Fund Notes	—	—	97	†7 7

* The actual yield, including gain on redemption, is considerably greater, as the Debentures were issued on April 1, 1892, with the proviso that holders should have the option to call in the money in three years, viz., April 1, 1895, at 101½, while the Corporation reserves the right of paying them off at any time at 103, at which they would in fact be payable at the end of six years. Reckoning this contingency, the yield is £8. 10s. per cent. per annum.

† These Notes are redeemable in five years at the par in dollars (103 in London), and, therefore, the gain on redemption is included in the yield.

1. Secured by first charge on the Railway, a Chilian Government guarantee until 1907, a Bolivian Government guarantee until 1912, and a guarantee by the Huanchaca Company up to December, 1903. Total issued, £850,000, with £2,200,000 Ordinary behind it.

2. Six per cent. guaranteed by Huanchaca Company until 1904, with half profits above the guarantee. The traffic returns registered for the first eight months of this year show an increase of more than 50 per cent. upon last year.

3. These bonds, amounting to £1,500,000 only, are secured by a First Mortgage on the Estates, &c., taken over from the Bank of New Zealand, valued at the time at £3,107,993. They stood in the Bank books originally at over 4¼ millions.

4. Secured by a First Mortgage on properties representing an expenditure of 100,000,000 dols. Total amount, 34,998,663 dols.

5. These bonds are issued in payment of the claims of the Peruvian bondholders on Chili, and are considerably cheaper than other Chilian issues.

6. Secured by a Trust Deed giving it a general charge on all assets of the Corporation, including the uncalled capital. The borrowing powers of the Company are limited to the amount of the subscribed capital.

7. These debentures rank as a second charge on the Company's property; £3,948,955 in Ordinary shares behind it.

8. Amount £800,000 only. Security, freehold property estimated at £750,000, and leaseholds, in respect of which there is a sinking fund, £1,200,000, and the general assets of the Company.

9. Secured by a first mortgage of freehold, and small part leasehold, premises, and land at Romford and Burton-on-Trent, and of 271 freehold and leasehold houses, and by a floating charge on all the property of the Company, including uncalled capital.

10. Secured by deposit with Trustees of 3,000,000 dols. Chicago, St. Louis, and New Orleans Five per Cent. First Mortgage Cairo Bridge bonds, 1950. The Illinois Central Company has also conveyed to Trustees its interest in the Cairo Bridge.

11. This stock forms a first charge on the undertaking, and is secured on the uncalled capital by trust deed. Amount limited to two-thirds of uncalled capital.

12. Secured by First Mortgage on Railways. Yearly drawings at 105. Share capital £2,204,850.

13. Total amount £200,000, secured by mortgage of the Company's property to trustees. Share capital £610,000.

14. Secured by trust deed. Amount limited to amount of uncalled subscribed capital.

15. Ordinary stock entitled to maximum dividends of 10 per cent.

16. Amount of issue £500,000, secured by mortgage to trustees of Winchester House, and on £1,400,000 uncalled capital; also by a first floating charge on other assets of the Corporation.

17. Secured by first mortgage. Net revenue of the Company last year was over £240,000, whilst the charge at present for the service of these bonds is £80,000 per annum.

18. Secured by a mortgage to trustees of uncalled capital, and floating charge on all properties of the Company. Amount limited to uncalled capital.

19. The loan was authorised by law, May 28, 1888, and constitutes a mortgage on all the then existing assets of the Railway Board of the Province of Buenos Ayres, and all the lines of the Buenos Ayres Western Railway, subject to the loans of 1882 and 1885.

20. These bonds are a mortgage on the main line, and are further secured by the deposit in trust with the Union Trust Company of New York of a similar amount of General Mortgage Four per Cent. Gold bonds. The notes are practically the only lien free from the control of the trustees of the General Fours, and therefore rank virtually ahead of all outstanding obligations of the Company.

The profit on redemption on Trustee and Executor Debentures referred to in the footnote should, of course, be specially borne in mind. The position of the Antofagasta Company is fully explained elsewhere. Canadian Pacific Debentures have obtained additional solidity by the successful issue of Preference stock. Ind, Coope, & Co. and Gordon Hotels Debenture stocks are, of course, gilt-edged securities and so is Southwark and Vauxhall Waterworks stock, although future possible interference of the County Council must be, of course, borne in mind.

Foreigners and South Americans.

Italians have again declined, being quoted but little above 79, a movement which readers of TRUTH have been led to expect for some time. The position has been aggravated by the ill-advised controversy between the present Minister of Finance, Signor Giolitti, and his predecessor, the Marquis di Rudini, concerning Italian finances. Unfortunately half measures only are at present contemplated for dealing with a very grave question. But the state of affairs in Italy is, in fact, so thoroughly rotten, that even if heroic steps were proposed by the Government, it would probably not be possible to carry them out. Spanish are suffering from the unfavourable outlook at Melilla, the little war threatening to become a serious affair. Greeks have, on the whole, been well maintained, present prices being, however, still very low. Argentine Government stocks have recovered part of a moderate decline which was caused by reports that the Rothschild settlement is meeting with opposition in Congress, while it was subsequently announced that both President Saënz Peña and his Minister of Finance, Dr. José Terry, were insisting on the necessity of ratifying the arrangement. All friends of Argentina will hope that Congress will fall in with these views. The Minister of Finance has now also stated that he intends to submit a scheme of settlement with respect to the Railway guarantees to the Directors of the guaranteed Railways. These negotiations will, as I have already stated, be carried on through Messrs. J. S. Morgan & Co. The funds for the payment of the November coupon on the Uruguayan bonds are now in hand, but the latter are still hanging fire, chiefly owing to sales by a syndicate which bought lower down and is realising its profit. A rise of five points, however, has taken place in Colombians on the improved outlook for a settlement of the Debt. The certainty that the purchases of silver will cease in the United States has depressed Mexican Sixes somewhat, but the effect of this event has, apparently, already been discounted, and the fact that the Government is remitting funds towards the next coupon monthly to Messrs. Bleichroder & Co. is a guarantee of their firm intention to keep faith with the bondholders. Perus are also easier, partly on some political ferment in the Republic. As regards Brazil, the position looks quite hopeless at present, and it is surprising that no more severe fall has taken place in the prices of the bonds.

Antofagasta.

The circumstance that I have included the securities of the Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Railway Company in my list of well-secured investments has brought me a number of inquiries respecting the position of this line, which I herewith answer collectively. The Company was formed in 1888, and acquired from the Compañia Huanchaca de Bolivia the concessions granted by the Government of Chili and Bolivia for railways from the port of Antofagasta (Chili) to Oruro in Bolivia, a distance of 574 miles, including the concession for waterworks. The amount of capital stock is £2,200,000, and the Four per Cent. Perpetual Debenture stock issued amounts to £850,000. This Debenture stock is secured by a first charge on the railway, a Chilian Government guarantee until 1907, a Bolivian Government guarantee until 1912, and a guarantee by the Huanchaca Company up to December 31, 1903. This is, therefore, as I have stated, a thoroughly gilt-edged security, comparing favourably with Debentures of the same class, and yielding at the present price of 95 over £4. 4s. per cent. per annum on the investment. On the capital stock six per cent. is guaranteed by the Huanchaca Company until 1904, but such has been the progress made by the railway that, for the year 1892, this Company had to pay only £2,432 under their guarantee, the rest having been provided by the earnings. It is well known that exchange has ruled very low in Chili during the year 1892, and the average this year will, no doubt, work out still lower. On the other hand, traffics are going up by leaps and bounds, and the further extension to Oruro, which has been opened, is not only doing well, but is carrying a larger proportion of passengers than the older line. During the first eight months of the present year a traffic increase of 50 per cent. is shown over the corresponding period of 1892. As the capital stock participates as to one half with the Huanchaca Company until 1904 in the surplus profits above the guarantee, it will be seen that, with any improvement in business and a rise in the Chilian exchange, holders may look for a further substantial increase in their dividend beyond 6 per cent., and in the meantime the 6 per cent. is fully secured to them. At the present price of 105 the yield is about £5. 14s. per cent. per annum on the investment, and, considering the chance of future profits, it would appear that it would not be out of the way for this stock to stand at 120, at which it would yield 5 per cent., with the additional prospect of surplus profits. In fact, so well has the stock been appreciated in the past, when its future was not nearly so well assured as at present, that it touched 126¾ in 1890 and 120 in 1891, and moved between 110 and 119½ in 1892. It may also be mentioned, that the Company is now supplying the town of Antofagasta with water, and that mains through the principal streets are being laid down to supply the houses. The railway and works belong to the Company in perpetuity, there being no option of Government purchase.

"Toilet Lanoline" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d. and 1s.; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depôt, 67, Holborn-viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

The Kaffir Circus.

There has been very little life in the market for South African Gold Mining shares, and with comparatively small fluctuations. Jubilee, Simmer and Jack, Chimes, and Crown Reefs are from ⅛ to ¼ lower, while Rietfontein have recovered to 3. There is now some prospect of an improvement if the Randt crushings for October should show well. Some rumours are to the effect that it will be a record output, but it is dangerous to prophesy on such a subject. In the Kaffir Circus the talk is still very warlike, and news of a "big battle" and "great slaughter of the Matabele" is most anxiously and impatiently being awaited by the bloodthirsty jobbers. At Friday's meeting of the Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa, Mr. C. D. Rudd, the Managing Director, indulged in a great deal of tall talk about the Chartered Company, Cecil Rhodes, and the Empire, and he certainly gave full rein to his imagination in playfully suggesting that Moses Moss would "some day, perhaps in December, 1899, write to Benjamin Boss that the Matabele Primrose and the Mashonaland Glencairn are the finest gold properties anywhere." I do not, of course, know what I shall write in the year 1899—but I do know that many of my readers have made money in the Witwatersrand New Primrose (which I recommended from 15s. upwards, and which have since touched 5½) and in the Witwatersrand Glencairn, which I mentioned to my readers first when the shares stood below 10s. Nor do I doubt for one moment that there is gold in Matabeleland. On the contrary, that is exactly why the warriors of the Chartered Company are at present marching against Lobengula. Chartered shares have again fluctuated with the war news, but there is no doubt that we shall be able to gather the drift of any important announcement to be made long before it reaches the public from the operations of the initiated. Buffelsdoorn shares are steady at 1⅛-1¼, and a good deal of interest is manifested in the coming announcement of the October output. The report of the Afrikander Gold Mining Company for the period ended June 30, 1893, deals with what really is past history. It announces the utilisation of the value of the small quantity of gold won in the course of opening up the mine, viz., £2,935, for the reduction of the cost of the work and the acquisition of twenty-six valuable deep-level claims on the Rietkull Mine. Since June 30 the increasing monthly returns of gold already reported have been obtained, and at the meeting of shareholders on the 8th inst. some further important information will no doubt be available. There is again a great deal of talk about a coming rise in New Jagersfontein Diamond shares. Qui vivra verra. The New Primrose report for the year ending June 30 last, which has just come to hand, is cheerful reading. The net profit was £69,556, and dividends of 42½ per cent. were paid. The amount of ore in sight is stated at 150,900 tons, besides which there are 130,000 tons above the present levels which are practically developed and can be attacked at any moment. The mine, as a producer, now takes the second place on the Randt. Land shares have been depressed in sympathy with the Chartered intermezzo. The Secretary of the New Clewer Estate and Gold Mining Company sends me a long report by Mr. J. A. Chalmers, A.R.S.M., this mine having been mentioned in "My Letter-box," with the remark that no information was available here with respect to it. I really cannot spare space for publishing even part of this lengthy report, but if any of my readers are interested in it I shall be pleased to forward it to them.

Miscellaneous Mines.

Dealings in Indian Mines have been few and far between, Mysore Gold reacting ¼, while a few of the smaller shares scored slight improvements. There are also rumours of a coming reconstruction of some of the smaller Companies, which may or may not be true. Amongst Australian Mining shares, Craven's Caledonia and Day Dawn P. C. have hardened, and there has also been an improvment in Wentworth Priority to ¾, the Ordinary being quoted 7s. 3d. Aladdins have been a firm market rising to 1¾—⅞ in anticipation of advices of a favourable crushing coming to hand this week. From the Kilkivan Mines a cablegram has been received to the effect that the Mine Manager has finished sinking the shaft, which is now 195 ft. deep, and has started cross cutting and expects to strike the reef in ten weeks from October 13, which would be at about the end of the year. When that happens, the shares will no doubt rise to a higher level. Mail advices from Melbourne report moderate activity. There was a good deal of inquiry for Mount Morgans (Q) up to 30s. On the Ballarat market Black House United and Egerton Extended shares have been heavily dealt in, the former on the report that the lode had been struck in the cross cut. The Bendigo share market is reported as lifeless, a few transactions in New Prince of Wales and Garden Gully United only being reported. The news is but little better from Sydney, where Broken Hill Proprietary were quoted 2⅜, Block Ten, 21s. 6d. Amongst American Mines, dealings have been few and far between. American Belle, Don Pedro, and De Lamar are a trifle lower, and Linares are just a little better. St. John del Rey are again down 1s. The Macate has come to the front this week, the partly-paid shares with 1s. liability being quoted 2s. to 2s. 6d. The capital of the Company has been reduced to £20,000 in the reconstruction, and there seem to be sufficient funds in the treasury. If the statement that actual returns will come to hand within a month should prove correct, it will soon be seen what the Mine may be worth. In answer to my remarks of September 28, I have received a letter from Messrs. Lee & Davies, of 206, Gresham House, E.C., who inform me that they are the London agents of the Atlantic Cable Consolidated Mining Company. Not long since, an attempt was made to create a market in London for these shares at 7s. I should like to ask Messrs. Lee & Davies what was the local price at that period? I also want to know what have been the results of the operations at the Mine up to the present, because I cannot hear of any information having been made public.

My Letter Box.

I am again obliged to remind my readers that I can only reply to communications which are accompanied by the names and addresses of the writers, not, of course, for publication, but as a token of good faith. All anonymous letters will be consigned to the wastepaper basket. In several cases I have traced such missives as emanating from shady outside brokers, who have either sold "Bears" of mining or other shares or who have been exposed in Truth. Some delay must necessarily occur in answering questions which entail special inquiries. My correspondents will also greatly simplify my task by reading my weekly letters carefully through, as these frequently contain remarks on the very subjects on which information is sought. I again repeat that I can accept no fee for replies in "My Letter Box," and that I cannot undertake to answer by letter. I must absolutely refuse to execute any orders for stocks and shares, or to act as an intermediary in any way whatever. The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Old Soldier.—Events are proving already that my advice to you to sell the Italians and hold the Mexican Sixes was right. You should hold the Central Produce Market of Buenos Ayres bonds. No later information is available than that communicated to you by Messrs. Morton, Rose, & Co., and with the improvement in the country, payment of interest may possibly be resumed eventually. J. W. B.—Western Australia has as yet only commenced to borrow, and unless the Colony goes very fast ahead with fresh loans. I see no reason for your selling out. It is not, however, advisable to put all your eggs into one basket, and I recommend to you the study of the list of securities published under "A Selection of Investments." Your experience with respect to the outside brokers in question is not that generally made. The letter in question on New Zealand finance appears to me unreasonably pessimistic. Conistcr.—The repeal of the Silver Bill in the States would affect the price of silver unfavourably, but its influence in the Mexican position seems to be fully discounted. Hold the bonds, but it is not advisable to put all your eggs into one basket. There are many other securities equally cheap and promising.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Rector, Cornwall.—If you get a fair chance to sell these shares, you should do so. Orlando.—I do not like the system of this Life Assurance Office. N. S. & Co., Manchester.—A second-rate bank, but respectable. I should, personally, prefer one of the first-class banks. Ferndale.—1. Yes, it is a good insurance office. 2. Fairly so, but you had better obtain the terms of several other high-class offices. Deva.—The price of United States Debenture Corporation Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Debenture stock is 90, but it is worth more, and should be held. No reason to sell the Australian Government stock in question. W. E. N., Kensington.—I have repeatedly warned my readers to have nothing to do with those very active syndicate touts, Harvey, MacDonald, & Co., of Dublin. Buoy.—Have nothing to do with this concern and generally distrust all outside touts of this order. Crowborough.—You do not send your name and address, in token of good faith.

Home Rails.

D. C. S.—If you are prepared to disregard intermediate fluctuations, Brighton "A" may be bought for investment to a moderate amount.

American and Foreign Rails.

Constant Reader, Torquay.—With the present improved outlook in the United States, Erie Second Mortgage bonds should certainly be held, especially on the renewed decline. Some arrangement for the resumption of interest will, no doubt, eventually be made. St. Leonards-on-Sea.—Any respectable stockbroker will buy the Antofagasta, &c., stocks for you, but you should buy at once, as the market is rising. I cannot, as a matter of principle, recommend individual stockbrokers. See to-day's list, "A Schedule of Investments." Can.—You should hold Canadian Pacifics now for a recovery, which is probable. Constant Reader, Winchester.—The phrase undoubtedly applies to the year 1893, and the statement just published that the Argentine Minister of Finance will call a meeting of Directors of Argentine Guaranteed Railways fully confirms this. T. C.—You will be quite right to hold Atchison Second Mortgage "A" bonds. They are secured on the line, and have full foreclosure powers. But the investment of the £6,000 which are coming to you and your sisters you will do well to spread over a number of the good stocks, of which a list is given under "A Selection of Investments." These are all well secured, and the Atchison Guarantee Fund notes, as well as the Antofagasta Debentures and Capital stock, should suit you more particularly. H., Herts.—You did quite right to sell Louisville at 54 at the time, but you ought to have bought again when they dropped to 45, in accordance with my advice so repeatedly given. You ought to have bought Nos. 1, 2, and 3 without waiting for the rise which has since taken place. I have, as you know, a very favourable opinion of Atchison. C.—New York Central (1) and Illinois Central (2) are good permanent investments. The Bank, No. 3, is apparently doing well, but such Bank investments after all are not gilt edged. Bell Rock.—Certainly hold Texas "B"; with the improvement in the States their turn will come again. Carlisle.—1 and 2. The preference is due to Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. Mortgage Bonds at 110, which are not redeemable until 1925. The Six per Cent. Debentures at 112 are redeemable already in 1902, so that you must reckon the loss on redemption off the yield. 3. A fair investment. 4. Hold; the Company is likely to come round. 5. These bonds are safe of their interest for the present, and should be held. 6. U.S. Railroad bonds are likely to improve now that prospects in the States are better, and you should hold on a while. 7. Not gilt edged. Ajax Ohio shares should be held for a marked rise; their prospects are as good as those of any other American stock. Certainly hold New Primrose. D. O., Avis, Inquirer, Manchester, and E. R. S.—The desired particulars of the Antofagasta Company will be found in to-day's letter. J. W. B., Aldershot.—They might be worth locking up to a small amount. A. L. B.—No, there is no liability attached to Atchison Second Mortgage "A" and "B" Bonds, and they are a good purchase.

Mining Shares.

Phidias.—I am afraid that I cannot advise you with respect to the Sefovi Gold Mining Pioneer Company unless I have the whole prospectus before me. It looks in the face of it absurd that the only advantage to shareholders in the Pioneer Company should be the preference in the allotment of shares in the African (Sefovi) Gold Mining Corporation. A. M.—You should hold both these Mining shares. The paper in question has absolutely no authority. W. S. S.—The amount was given to me as the probable future monthly profit of the Glencairn Mine, but it remains to be seen if it will be borne out by results. With reference to the Copper Company, it seems to me too soon to judge of possible success after the reconstruction. Manchester.—Yes, both are promising cheap shares. Agnus.—1. If your interest is small, you might risk joining the reconstruction. 2. Otherwise you will no doubt lose your interest in the concern. 3. Make your claim both here and in South Africa. Yes, Simmer & Jack, Geldenhuis, Durban Roodeport, and New Primrose (1—4) would make a good Trust. Hold all the South African shares mentioned for recovery, which is probable. Hold the American Rails. Twice Sold.—After the result of the meeting just held, and with the information supplied, I should think it would be advisable to join the reconstruction. Tine.—Hold the Diamond Mining shares on the chance of a recovery. Belgrave.—South-East Mysores have recently advanced, but I think you may risk holding on, as late advices show the Company has a good lode, and that the average of six assays is 13 dwts. of gold. Miner. The South-African Mining shares Nos. 1—5 should be worth holding for the present; but sell Nos. 1, 2, and 5 when an improvement sets in. Hold Nos. 6 and 7. Transvaal Gold (3) should be held. Sell Baretts (9). Sell the Balaghat Mysore (10) and Nine Reefs (11). Reconstruction rumours are afloat. Goldfields of Mysore (12) should be held. Mozambique are a good purchase; but the shares are held in big blocks, and occasional heavy sales are keeping the price down temporarily. Nitrate Rails are promising, and a dividend of 20 per cent. is assured. A Constant Reader, Lancashire.—1. If you hold Montana don't buy more; if you do not hold, be content to look on. Hold Grand Trunks for a moderate recovery, then sell. Vacuus Viator.—I suppose no harm would be done by joining the Spitzkop reconstruction to a moderate extent, but look for a favourable opportunity, after the reconstruction has been affected, to get out. Loughtonian.—1. Same reply as regards Spitzkop. 2. If the North-East Bultfontein is reconstructed, shareholders must be prepared to face a very heavy assessment. 3. Orita may be regarded as a fair venture at present price. Sell Palmarejo (4) and Emma (5) for what you can get. Hold Nos. 6 and 7. The latter (Kapanga) has just been reconstructed, and should be worth holding to a moderate extent. Hold Nos. 8-10. Scrutator.—Certainly hold Paarl Central and Golden Gates (Charters Towers). Glencairns will not get a dividend before the next year has well commenced, but when the cyanide works are completed, returns will gently improve. In spite of the low price of Pahangs, it seems prudent to get out.

Industrial Companies.

C. B.—You must be aware that this Company has been exceptionally unfortunate in suffering from the beer war and the disastrous crisis in the United States. Now that matters are looking up in the States, dividend prospects are brightening, and with patience you will again obtain a fair return. Anxious, Mayfair.—You should hold the Brewery shares in question. I am told that prospects are improving. Naval.—I think you will do well to defer investment in electric-light Companies for some time. You will find more promising stocks mentioned in my letter. A.—The question is if the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company will get more cables to lay again. Its business had fallen off. Write to the Secretary for information. Reg.—The reply appeared in last week's issue. G. H. W., St. Helens.—This Company has apparently gone into liquidation a long time ago. Have you never received any notice? K. H. C.—I do not know anything about the German Company, but there seems a prospect of the French Company pulling right. E. J. R.—I think you can do better from the list of securities published to-day under "A Selection of Investments." Vero.—There seems to be no option but to hold Hotchkiss Prefs. a little longer. Write to the Secretary of the Railway Company for information. Magister.—No, I do not like this concern. I cannot reply by letter.

Mixed Investments.

J. H. B.—1. Ohio and Mississippi shares should be held for a substantial improvement. 2. Hold Paccha and Jaz Pampa, but do not buy any more just now. F. W. H. P.—All the stocks you hold are suitable for permanent investment. I am sorry you lost money by the wretched Balfour group. You will be able to select what you require from the new list published to-day under "A Selection of Investments." None of these are tainted by the Balfour brush. Evolution.—1. The South African shares are not exactly such as I would recommend, as they are very speculative. 2. The Northern Pacific was in Receivers' hands, but control has now passed into the hands of a more respectable group, and a reorganisation on sound lines will, no doubt, be carried out, when these bonds will be taken care of. Barum.—Of the four investments first mentioned, I do not like Nos. 2 and 4 at all, while No. 1 is a fair investment. I have no special view on No. 3. All your South American stocks, Nos. 1-2 and 4-8, should be held for a recovery. Buenos Ayres Water Works and Costa Rica "B" are the most promising. No reason to sell Greek Monopoly now. A. P. C.—1. No; I do not advise purchase of the shares after the decision concerning the licence. 2. I should prefer dealing with members of the Stock Exchange. H. R. J.—My letter will give you all the necessary information. I cannot recommend individual stock-brokers. I do not care much for the Bread Company. Piccadilly.—No reason to sell Nos. 1-3. I do not like the Trust No. 4 much, but I fancy that it is advisable to hold for the present. The mine No. 5 is a very doubtful concern. You ought to have sold your Mexican Railway Second Prefs. and bought the Firsts, as I have repeatedly advised. I should prefer a member of the Stock Exchange. A. M., Peckham. 1. A fair investment, but the business has fallen off. 2. Hold Perus. 3. No reason to sell. 4. I am inclined to think that there is some foundation for the reconstruction rumours; therefore sell. 5. Hold Honduras bonds. C. E. K. All the firms Nos. 1-4 are outside brokers. I should prefer members of the Stock Exchange. Yes, the South African shares Nos. 1-4 are likely to go better, but it is impossible to say when. I do not like British Chartered of South Africa (5) as you must be aware. Mozambique and Glencairns are promising. Constant Subscriber.—As I have to reply to a fifty-barrelled inquiry this week, I really must leave your sixty-barrelled inquiry, which arrived later, until next week. These orders are so very large! M. H. The American Railroad bonds, Nos. 1 to 8, should be held. I do not know what is meant by Nos. 9 to 10, and must ask you for further particulars. Where did you buy them? Hold Santa Fe and Reconquista (11) for an improvement, which may eventually come about. Where did you buy No. 12? Hold Nos. 13 and 14. It was a mistake to buy inferior bonds like St. Joseph and Grand Island, which are involved in the Union Pacific receivership, but now there is no option but to hold. Certainly hold Cedulas Nos. 16 and 17. No reason to sell No. 18. I do not like No. 19, but this is not the time to sell. Your investments, Nos. 20-25, are also of that class, and it is a pity you went so far afield for them. Nos. 26 and 27 (Entre Rios Preference and Ordinary) are improving and will go much better. No. 28 is a good bond. Cornwall Waterworks (29) are not dealt in here. The American Railroad bonds Nos. 30 and 31 are not quoted here, but I believe they are all right, and so are Nos. 32-35. New York Central shares (36) are first-rate. No. 37 is not dealt in here. No option but to hold No. 38. The American bonds Nos. 39-40 are not dealt in here. Illinois Central shares (41) are a good investment. No. 42 is not a desirable investment, but this is not the time to sell. No. 43 is, of course, gilt-edged. No. 44, same as 21. Why did you go in more heavily? No option but to hold the Buenos Ayres Tramway shares (45). No reason to sell Assam Bengal (46) or Bengal and North-Western (47). Hold also the Chilian Five per Cent Loan (48). I have no means of finding out anything about No. 49, which seems to be a local concern. No. 50 is not doing well. You have a heavy stake in U.S. Railroad bonds, apparently selected somewhat haphazard, but all these should be held for a substantial improvement now that the outlook has become much clearer in the States. You could, however, have made a better selection from my occasional lists, and I recommend to you my list of to-day.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

After the Repeal of the Sherman Act.

The price of silver has dropped 1⅛d. during the week in anticipation of the repeal of the Silver Bill in the States, and it remains now to be seen how the white metal will behave when the blow has actually fallen. The final stoppage of the American purchases will, however, at all events cause all such mines to be shut up which can only be worked at a loss at present prices. An issue of India Council Sterling Bills to the amount of £2,000,000 is now actually announced, the Council having been unable to scrape sufficient money together in the absence of any substantial demand for bills on India. It is a pity that this step, which I had recommended all along, was not taken some time ago, instead of being put off to the eleventh hour, when it can have no supporting effect upon the rupee.

Various Investments.

There has been less demand for Colonial Government stocks of late, and in the Colonies themselves hardly anything is doing in them. A sale of £10,000 of Victorian Treasury bonds, 4½ per cent., due 1898, at 101, is reported from Melbourne as the largest transaction that has taken place there for some time. I suggested last week an amalgamation of Trust Companies, and now a proposal, which seems worth examining, is made to amalgamate the Trustees and Executors, United States Debenture, and Industrial and General Trust Companies. The Grand Trunk meeting has come and gone, and has not helped the stocks much. The chief source of the recent weakness was, however, a Glasgow failure of some magnitude, which threw some £50,000 Trunks on the market. Now that these are absorbed the market may be steadier, especially if the traffic increases should outlast the World's Fair. It is stated that the Canadian Pacific Preference stock issue has been well taken up by the public. Whether this be so or not, it was all underwritten, and may be considered as placed. The Ordinary stock is also firmer at 96½. There is nothing fresh in the Mexican Railway report but the statement that the Ordinary stockholders will get ½ per cent. out of arrears. The back went off to ¼ on the Second Preference stock, and the price has fallen to 40, and so the happy dream of Mackusick & Co. of big profits is coming to an end. The only Mexican Railway stock worth holding is the First Preference. Mr. E. Heys Jones, solicitor, has favoured me with the following communication in reply to the question of "B. V." with regard to the appointment of Directors of a Limited Company, asked in last week's issue:—

> In reply to "B. V.'s" letter, I should like to point out that there is nothing illegal about appointing a Director for a time certain, and the Articles of Association unquestionably govern the appointment. As "B. V." has taken his shares subject to the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, he is, of course, bound by them, and he should not have consented to become a member without first inspecting them. His remedy now is, unless he can induce them to do it of their own accord, to requisition the Directors to call two extraordinary general meetings for the purpose of passing resolutions to alter the Articles of Association in the way required.

Harvey, MacDonald, & Co., of 20, Great Brunswick street, City of Dublin, are indefatigable with invitations to their "Stock Fund" deals, which are scattered broadcast over the United Kingdom and bristle with impudent assertions. Is it necessary to warn my readers not to have anything to do with these among other Syndicate touts, such as Duncan, Short, & Co., of 39, Lombard-street, who rival the Dublin touts in the impudence of their circulars? I have received a copy of the second edition of "Railway Accounts and Finance," by J. Alfred Fisher, General Manager of the United Asbestos Company (London: Bemrose & Co.), which is a very handy vade mecum for all those who have to do with railway accounts, being an exposition of the principle and practice of railway accounting in all its branches. Mr. Fisher was formerly for many years connected with one of our leading railways, and his long and valuable experience has enabled him to compile a most useful work.—Your affectionate uncle,

MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

GUY FAWKES "GUYED."

IT was the morning of the Fifth of Novemoer, and an autumnal fog settled gently down upon the classic precincts of Farrar's Inn. It was not a London "peculiar;" indeed, Harry Bertram could see distinctly across the old quadrangle; but it was moderately opaque and eminently disagreeable, thereby symbolising Harry's own gloomy thoughts. Farrar's Inn, as all the world knows, is one of the old Legal Inns which has escaped demolition. It lies north of Cursitor-street, and consists of a quadrangle, and beyond a pretty garden, wherein are a fountain and a sun-dial.

The property is held by a self-elective body of twelve called "antients" who dine together once a term in the quaint old Hall, and drink to the pious memory of Nicholas Farrar, master-mariner and founder. As these antients are negotiating the sale of the inn to an enterprising builder with a view to distribution of the purchase-money, they have good reason to cherish the memory of that founder. But the true dignity of "Farrar's" lies neither in its unpretentious architecture, nor in its prescient antients, but in the personality of William Cox, the porter. He is a portly man and tall, with grey beard and the gait of an Emperor. By reason of his greatness he wears a scarlet waistcoat and a gold band round his tall hat, and his oak stick is the terror of the little boys who would fain play cock-shy at the sun-dial. His manner is that of the trusty servant who, from long and faithful service, has become indispensable to his employers. And even the oldest antients assume the deportment of Agag in the Scriptures, and "approach him delicately." His duty is to preserve the sanctity of the precincts and stop the intrusion of the evildoer. He guards the lodge of Farrar's Inn as did Horatius Cocles the bridge in the brave days of old. Thus is he beloved by all the antients and by the other tenants of the Inn, with one single exception. If you had looked round the quadrangle on this particular morning you would have noticed that the "oaks," or outer doors, were all open; the simple inner door, frequently ajar, invited the approach of the hesitating client or the faithful friend.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Pure & wholesome, assists digestion.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Guaranteed to be free from alum.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. It has the largest sale in the world.

There was, however, one "oak" which had for some weeks been continuously shut. It was that of the ground-floor rooms on the left of No. 3 staircase, and the name inscribed thereon was "Henry Bertram." Moreover, never did the tenant of those rooms espy the self-complacent Cox stalking majestically in the quadrangle, but he execrated him as a low scoundrel who had betrayed a sacred trust, and was amenable to the surreptitious bribe.

The reason of Harry Bertram's self-incarceration and his detestation of Cox may be briefly explained. He was a young law student, who, having to "read in Chambers," took rooms in Farrar's Inn. It was a convenient situation near the Temple, and cheap; moreover, immediately above him on the same staircase there already lived an old Oxford chum, by name Charley Crofton. Bertram was the only son of a wealthy retired manufacturer in the North, and had always been brought up as the heir to a comfortable property; and, as he was inordinately fond of innocent pleasure in every phase, he did not confine his expenses to the modest allowance of £200 a year which his father gave him. Thus, before very long he had laid up a very nice little store of bills. Suddenly his father, who had long been in delicate health, died, and Harry, despite his filial grief, foresaw freedom from his financial difficulties. On looking, however, into his father's affairs, he discovered, to his consternation, that that gentleman had for the last ten years been secretly speculating. Most of his ventures were of the wild-cat order, and, to be brief, the estate was only enough to cover the liabilities. At once Harry's creditors swooped down upon him; bills and county-court summonses strewed his table like the leaves in Vallombrosa. His position was, indeed, pitiful. Like the gentleman in the parable, he could not dig; and, even had he been undeterred by shame from begging, the eleemosynary tenner would have not gone far amidst the importunate cohort. He went and interviewed all the creditors personally, and implored them to wait until he was "called," which would be in six months, when he would be in a position to earn some money. Some, considering he was not altogether responsible for the position, treated him with consideration; others threatened him with proceedings; but the most remorseless of all were Travers & Blake, the fashionable tailors in Conduit-street whom Harry had for two years employed. Little did he know that under that title he was really dealing with old Emanuel Isaacs, whose son Jacob, Harry had, when at College, "pilled" for the Boniface Wine Club, and gloried in the act. It was now the turn of the child of Israel, whose paternal heartstrings had been wrung by his son's discomfiture. His bill amounted to £140 odd; nothing on account would Mr. Isaacs accept. Every farthing of the bill must be paid and at once, or else an action in the High Courts would be instituted. As Harry could as easily have discharged the National Debt, and as he had now learnt the identity of the firm, he had simply to await events. He had not to wait long. Returning one day to his rooms he heard quickening footsteps down Cursitor-street. Glancing over his shoulder he saw a youth with a pronounced nose, bearing a slip of paper, approaching him with nimble step. Harry realised the situation and fled. He just got into Farrar's Inn as the burly Cox stopped the perspiring pursuer. Of course Harry knew full well that the slip of paper was a writ in the High Court. But what could he do? He had to live somewhere, and the rent of his chambers would run for the next six months. He had no ready money. He could not get away; still less could he pay the debt. He might, however, evade service, pending some unforeseen solution. He accordingly wrote pathetic letters to all his relations, including an aunt, a sister of his father's, who lived at Dinan, and whose existence he had only lately remembered. For some days he took his exercise in the little garden. Here at least in the sanctuary of the Inn he was fain to hope that he was safe. Alas for human hopes!

One day as he emerged once again into the quadrangle, he saw at the other end of the passage a young man pensively waiting. It was the hero with the nose. The truth was as clear as the noonday sun. Cox the incorruptible had been suborned by the Semitic gold. Harry did the only possible thing. As the youth approached him he smote the nose, and so shrewd was the blow that his enemy went down. From that hour poor Bertram was practically a prisoner. Any one of the working men who day by day walked into the garden by courtesy of the antients, might be "writters" in disguise; and other creditors, for all he knew, might have followed the example of Isaacs. Twice had he seen his former enemy in earnest conference with the Porter. So he simply "sported his oak," and occasionally took the air at midnight when the Lodge was locked. Indeed, he would have long since been starved out, had it not been for the loyal assistance of his old College chum Charley Crofton. Their bedrooms looked out upon a lane, the level of which was much lower than that of the Inn. Thus Harry could open his window without fear of assault. From the upper window Charley, three times a day, let down a basket containing simple viands, which Harry took in. As the latter had happily replenished the cupboard which did service for a wine cellar before the crash came, he was in no immediate fear of capitulation, but the confinement was rapidly beginning to tell upon his naturally buoyant spirits.

On this particular Fifth of November he felt particularly gloomy. The fog depressed him, and that very morning he had received a letter from the aunt at Dinan saying she would gladly help him in his necessity, but she would first like to make his acquaintance, lest haply he was a youth of evil proclivities upon whom kindness would be thrown away. The journey to Dinan was not more than £2 or £3, and she felt sure he was not so pressed but what he could easily run across the Channel for the inside of a week. As Harry's present resources were under half-a-sovereign, and as the effort might result in the myrmidons of old Isaacs being successful, the invitation only intensified his despondency.

He sat over the fire moodily smoking, when he heard a peculiar knock at the oak. It was Charley Crofton's signal. He opened the outer door cautiously, and his friend, a stalwart youth of ruddy countenance, pleasant to look upon, slipped in, and the door closed with a snap.

Harry handed his chum his aunt's letter, pointed with his finger to the suggested visit, and gave a hollow laugh.

"A fiver would do it, that, and a clear run. If I had only that old scoundrel Cox by himself I'd——." He paused: the aposiopesis was suggestive.

He returned to his own chair and sat glaring into the embers of the fire.

Suddenly there was a sound of altercation in the quadrangle. Voices ran high; that of the immaculate Cox piercing the dense atmosphere like a fog-horn. Charley rushed to the window. "By Jove, Harry, here's a game. Here two chaps are baiting Cox; they've brought a Guy Fawkes into the Inn to collect coppers and won't go out. Old Cox is just dancing with rage. Ha, ha! come and look at him."

Only too delighted to see his enemy's discomfiture, Harry Bertram also went and looked out. Certainly the spectacle was sufficiently diverting. Two sturdy varlets, having successfully run the gauntlet of the Lodge, had carried into the Inn a Guy Fawkes of the usual type.

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

There was the mask with fine mustachios, the cocked hat, the huddled, stuffed figure tied to the chair, the long arms hanging perpendicularly down, the pendulous fingers of the white cotton gloves. To one arm was attached by an old bootlace the conventional lantern. It was a noble Guy, and had taken time and patience to create. Its bearers had commenced a round of the quadrangle, chanting that mysterious carol commencing "Guy Fawkes, Guy, hit him in the eye," and rapping at the ground floor windows to excite attention and extract the dole of appreciation. Around them were a troop of little boys who, for the nonce, derided the Porter's stick.

Then appeared Cox, and a lively argument apparently commenced, the Guy bearers making mock of authority. In vain did the Porter, like the eye of Hamlet's father, threaten and command; they continued to carry their burden round the square, picking up a few coppers. They had well nigh gone round the quadrangle, and were approaching the window of No. 3, when Cox adjourned hastily to the lodge, and posting the Under-Porter at the entrance, called lustily for the police. The men started, saw they were done, and in dire extremity rapped at Harry's window, where they saw two friendly faces laughing.

"For Gawd's sake, Governor, take our Guy in. It's wuth a thick un, not to mention what we hope to make out of it. You can let it down to us into Potter's-lane. We can get past that slip of a boy before the coppers come. But we can't abear to lose the Guy. Will yer, Gov'nor?"

"Ra ther," said Harry, only too ready to wipe out the debt he owed Cox. "Here, Charley, open the oak. Bring it in, and put it down there. Now, if you chaps get a stout rope and throw it up to us from Potter's-lane, say in ten minutes time, we'll let it down to you. Now cut for your lives."

The men darted out—dodged the under-porter, and disappeared.

The oak closed again, and Harry and his friend stood gazing at the Guy Faux which, still attached to the chair, was placed in the middle of the sitting-room.

"Deuced good Guy, Harry," said Charley Crofton admiringly. "Regular creation, so well filled out, too: Wonder what he's stuffed with. Hand me that single-stick, Harry, and I'll dust him a bit and find out."

"No, stow that Mister," said the Guy with alacrity, as, springing airily from the chair, its bonds mysteriously loosened, it whipped the mask from a most impudent face, produced a slip of paper, which was duly presented to the astonished Harry, at the suit of one Emanuel Isaacs.

The whole scene, in short, had been a most elaborately rehearsed effect, planned together by old Isaacs and Cox, who, like most of us, had his price. The writ had at last been served.

Harry sank into his chair utterly dumbfoundered, and Charley Crofton would fain have commenced the suggested game of rap-rascal had not Harry motioned to him to desist. The evil had been done—no good could come of assault.

There was an uncomfortable silence which was broken by the gentleman whose histrionic skill had so materially contributed to success.

"Very sorry, guv'nor, but I've honly done my dooty; and I should like to drink your good 'ealth in summat short, if I might make so bold."

Harry looked up in sheer amazement at the rascal's impudence. The face before him was not comely, a slight visual discrepancy violated the true canons of beauty. Nor was the harmony of the face improved by a broken nose and a swollen left ear. In short Harry read "The Fancy" in every line of the repellent countenance.

"Well," said Bertram, "you've got a fair average cheek, and no mistake. But I suppose if you hadn't writted me someone else would. So here's the whisky-bottle, help yourself, and now tell us how the plant was planned."

The unwelcome guest filled himself a "four-finger" corker, and having "looked towards 'em," told the story with much zest.

After listening for some time, Crofton interrupted him and said, "Now tell us what they gave you for the job. But first have some more whisky."

Mr. Noakes, for that was the "Writter's" name, mixed himself another corker, and continued with increased fluency.

"Two thick 'uns down, and the two jossers are a going to call for me to night about five, when it's a bit darker and carry me back, because you see I can't well walk back in these 'ere togs. Then they're to give me a fiver when I get 'ome. Pretty good, eh? Yer see, old Master Isaacs said he didn't want you to pay his bill, he wanted to get you writted, because you had blued all your money, and hadn't no friends to 'elp you and couldn't get out of the country, and if he does, sez he, I'll keep him there a perishing hexile. Them wos 'is worry words. Oh, he did speak narsty of you. Well 'ere's my best respects to you."

"Charley," cried Harry, with animation, "there's a couple of bottles of fizz in the cupboard, relics of past glory—get 'em out, like a good chap, and the brandy bottle. Here, Mr. Noakes, don't try any more of that whisky, it's poor stuff for a hero. Drink a glass of champagne with Crofton and myself, and tell us all about your past experiences in the 'writting' line. I shan't go out till after lunch, and now that the worst is over let us be as jolly as we can."

Mr. Noakes shook his bullet head. He'd done himself too well already, and the room was close, but the pop of the cork was too much for him, so he took the foaming tumbler with his customary formula.

It struck him it was mighty strong "silvertop," and no mistake.

* * * * *

As the clock in the Inn struck five, the two emissaries of Isaac's walked into the now opened oak. In the dusk they saw the Guy Fawkes sitting in his chair. The room otherwise was entirely empty.

"And 'ow did he take it?" said one, as the lay figure adjusted his mask and assumed the attitude of necessary limpness.

"Like a reg'lar nob," he replied, with a raucous laugh. "A bloomin' *vis*count couldn't have behaved nobler; stood me a drink, and then said as it didn't matter a blow wot 'appened now; he and 'is pal 'is a-gone out to dine and the theayter, so now look slippy, and take me back 'ome, and for Gawd's sake don't stop in the court, for if the neighbours knew I was a process-server, well, 'even 'elp me."

They lifted him up and carried him swiftly through the crowded streets. Guys were all over the town, and he excited no special comment.

They traversed the court quickly, opened the door of his house, and just before they entered the man who had spoken before said:—

"'Ere's the fiver, my lad, and the old Guv'nor's so pleased that he's a-coming down this evening to 'ear you tell all about it, so you keep in, and you'll probably get another quid or two."

They dumped him down into the little parlour and left him with the five pound note in his hand.

His wife came out of the inner room.

"'Ullo, Alf, take horf that ridiculous marsk, and 'ave summat to eat."

"'Ere, you 'old yer jaw, and go out and get me a pint of four 'arf. Step it sharp."

Mrs. Noakes may have favoured Mrs. Mona Caird's views as to the moral equality of the sexes, but her brief matrimonial experience had taught her that the argument did not apply to mere physical prowess. She had already felt on many occasions the weight of her good man's fist, so, with a smile at the muffled voice, she snatched up a jug and, without waiting to see her husband doff his vizor, stepped it quickly to the "Spotted Dog."

When she returned after some seven or eight minutes, her husband had gone out. The mask, cocked hat, and suit were thrown higgledy-piggledy on the floor of the bedroom. No one in the court had noticed him go out, but then the court was dimly lighted, and the atmosphere like cotton wool. It struck her as curious that her husband should not have waited for the liquor, but then with the two "thick 'uns" in his pocket and the neighbourhood aglow with innumerable pubs., it was conceivable that even this brief delay had irked his restless soul.

ULSTERS, OVERCOATS, and CAPES are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

But he did not return that evening, and when old Isaacs called to listen to the story of the stratagem (assuredly the most ingenious and successful since the taking of Troy), the historian was still away. Old Isaacs was disappointed, and showed Mrs. Noakes the two extra sovereigns he had intended to bestow upon her husband had he been in. Now he was reluctantly compelled to keep them. Still, he felt happy; it was a good day's work—his first-born was avenged.

He felt less happy when, next morning, he received the following letter, bearing a Folkestone postmark. It was written in pencil, evidently in the train:—

DEAR MR. ISAACS,—Pray accept my most hearty thanks for having afforded me an opportunity of escaping from my various creditors in an impenetrable disguise. I am also grateful for the loan of £5, which alone enabled me to reach a foreign shore. This sum, I have every reason to believe, I shall be able to return with your debt and legal costs within a few days.—With love to the virtuous Cox, I am, yours most gratefully,

HENRY BERTRAM.

P.S.—As I left Noakes in my bedroom blind drunk, with no clothes but a shirt, I think you had better go and look after him. You see the difference of weight just enabled me to wear a tweed suit under the Guy's customary sables, and cram a Homburg into my pocket.

Miss Bertram, pleased with her nephew's alacrity in accepting the invitation, paid his debts with promptitude.

His creditors were uniformly elated with one exception. Needless to say, that exception was Emanuel Isaacs, who, for once in his life, cursed the colour of his own money.

ART NOTES.

A GOOD many years ago there was a music-hall song in vogue the refrain of which, if I remember rightly, ran thus:—

I fancy I've seen them before,
I know that I've seen them before;
These things that I see
Seem familiar to me,
I'm certain I've seen them before!

It was these lines that I found myself instinctively humming as I walked round the rooms of the Royal Society of British Artists last week. A vague feeling that I had already seen this and that picture deepened into a positive conviction as I passed. "The old familiar faces" were not "all gone," as they are in Charles Lamb's well-known poem. In Suffolk-street it seemed rather that they had all come back again. There were the same well-remembered and gnarled old mariners toying with their flaxen-haired grand-daughters; the same modelesque country lasses darning stockings at conventional cottage doors; the same stiff lovers in Georgian costumes leaning over the backs of Early English settees; the same impossible rustics spelling out the contents of the newspaper; the same mischievous white terriers frightening the same tabby cats. The fact is the R.B.A.'s are most of them only too content to repeat themselves; and it may be assumed that they find it profitable to do so. But the result is certainly not exhilarating.

Take, for instance, the South-west Gallery, which, from its contents, might well be called "The Christmas Chromories." From this room it seems to me that coloured supplements of the approved "Puss and Poodle" description might be supplied till further orders. On one side we have little Susie presenting her grandpa with a sprat (!), whilst close at hand is naughty little Bobby firing at his sister with a toy pistol. Not far off either is little Lizzie crying "Here I am!" to the little lamb, and little "Jessie-Pessie" claiming right of way from the little piggie-wiggies! Little Tryphœna eating the raspberries, little Charlie sailing his magnetic ducks in a sponge bath, little Jane Annie giving her kitten milk, and little this, that, and the other playing with their "big doggies"—these are only some of the nursery idylls presented on the walls. Really it is a most grateful relief to turn from such puerilities to the more original and daring flights of such exhibitors as Mr. Rupert Bunny, Mr. Machell, and Mr. F. Cayley Robinson.

Mr. Rupert Bunny is startling enough in all conscience. His picture, "The Intruders," in the South-east Gallery with its screaming scarlets and blues and greens, has very much the effect amongst its surroundings of a bull in a china-shop. It is a picture which no one is likely to pass. It positively shouts for notice. The question is, does it deserve it? My answer must be a qualified one. The notion of the picture is decidedly good. Two adventurous young fishermen, wading into a bay from their primeval galley to set their nets, are arrested by the sudden apparition of a hideous merman and his dripping spouse who rise from behind a boulder in the foreground. The figures of the fishy pair are painted with striking effect. There is a gruesome clamminess about their clinging weed-like hair, and a general air of uncanniness about them which is most convincing. Very effective, too, is the way in which the galley and one of the fishermen are bathed in glaring sunlight whilst the other fisherman and the merfolks are in deep shadow. But I am not at all sure that this effect is a legitimate one. The shadow is presumably cast by a cliff not seen in the picture, but if this be so, how is it one looks in vain for the dividing line upon the surface of the sea between the sunshine and the gloom?

Mr. Cayley Robinson has left the Sea of Galilee this year; and, I think, with advantage. His "In a Wood so Green" is a frankly decorative piece of work which need, at any rate, arouse no active antagonism. And there is an indefinable atmosphere of poesy in his "Susanne," a young girl sitting dreamily at her spinet, with its old-world brass candlesticks, and the grey church-tower seen through the window, which is full of charm. "Susanne" is like a sonnet of Miss Rosetti's or Jean Ingelow's put on canvas. Perhaps, Mr. Machell's picture is more welcome because it is so very different from the average R.B.A. exhibits by which it is surrounded, than for any intrinsic merits of its own. The mud-tinted Venus, vis-à-vis to a Paris, who looks as though he had eaten his golden apple, and that it had sorely disagreed with him, is not a goddess one can readily admire. For the rest, Mr. Hans Hansen, Mr. Sherwood Hunter, Mr. Carlton Smith, Mr. Adam Proctor, and others, send some notable contributions which help to temper with oases of interest, what I am again compelled to allude to as a sandy desert of mediocrity.

MUSIC.

NEW ITALIAN OPERAS.

LEONCAVALLO'S "I Medici" is announced for production at the Dal Verme, Milan, on Friday, and Cowen's "Signa," at the same theatre, for some day next week, and altogether between now and Lent it is conjectured that between seventy and eighty new operas will be produced in Italy. It may pretty safely be prophesied that, with due exceptions, there will be no difficulty in dividing them off into two distinct classes, one following Wagner and the other Mascagni. It does not also need the peculiar gifts claimed by "Zadkiel" or "Old Moore" to foretell that of at least ninety per cent. of the list nothing more will be heard. The present Italian season, however, is so far of importance in that it shows a swift development of the publisher-impresario idea. The idea has, of course, been tried before, by Cramer's in London, by Escudier in Paris, and by others, but Signor Sonzogno has organised and carried it out in a far greater extent than had hitherto been attempted. Indeed, until a comparatively recent date, the policy of Italian music publishers lay directly in the opposite direction. Ricordi's, for example, held the rights in all Verdi's later works, but they preferred to licence other entrepreneurs to produce them, merely reserving to themselves so much as fees and a general right of choosing the chief members of the cast. Sonzogno, however, speculates on his own account. Last year he had the Pergola, at Florence, and a Milan theatre, and now I understand he has taken the Dal Verme, at Milan, the Fondo, Naples, and other opera houses, besides organising a travelling operatic troupe which will visit Vienna and Berlin, and will also come to London if it receives any encouragement. He also has erected a small iron theatre in the grounds which surround his private house, in order that during the holidays he may give new operas a private trial upon its tiny stage. He proposes to bring out twenty operas, of which nearly a dozen will be new to Italy, such as Giordano's "Regina Diaz," Auteri's "Gabriella," Mascagni's "Ratcliff," besides "Piccolo Haydn," "Festa à Marina," and other works which have already been successfully tried. He does not ask for any subvention, and he will place the operas on the stage in as adequate a manner as can be expected in Italy, where audiences are nowadays not too particular, his chief reason being to give his publications a hearing. The plan is not a new one, but it has never before been carried out in so thorough-going a fashion. Of course, such an enterprise could only be possible in Italy, where the public are opera-goers by nature and training, and where, moreover, the opera-houses are graded, the prices rising and falling according to the character and attractiveness of the entertainment provided. In Italy, too, the people do not always expect to hear vocal "stars," and are quite content to listen even to unknown artists if the performance be good of its kind and cheap. In England it is all the other way. The London opera-goer rather looks down at anything but guinea stalls, and demands the most expensive artists in the world. Moreover, the opera-going class in London is so very small that experiments with it might be dangerous. In Italy, however, where admission to an opera-house often costs less than a quarter the sum charged in London; where the total salary list is not a third of the amount Sir Augustus Harris pays to a single artist, and also where people go to the opera every night, a plucky enterprise such as that of Sonzogno, who, besides being an impresario and music-publisher, is also proprietor of the Secolo, the leading newspaper of Milan, stands every chance. The English public should, however, be warned against accepting as gospel all the roseate reports which they will, within the next few weeks, doubtless receive from Italy concerning the new works and their performance. Although there are, of course, many good men amongst them, Italian musical critics, as a body, have no very enviable reputation, while even the opinions of English writers who have gone over as "specials" to Italy, have before now proved wholly untrustworthy. No better example of this can be adduced than that of "I Rantzau," concerning which some columns of gush were telegraphed to the London papers last spring. The truth is that unless they have very level heads indeed—and the more experienced critics can rarely be spared from their London duties to go for a week or two at a stretch to Southern Europe—their judgment is apt to be swept away before Italian enthusiasm. The composer in Italy is never allowed to conduct the first performance, because he is wanted almost every ten minutes to be dragged on the stage to bow to applause; a quarter of a hundred recalls in the course of the evening accounting for only a very moderate success. Nobody is better aware of these facts than Sir A. Harris, and it is in order that he may judge for himself that he is now at Milan to hear one or two of the leading novelties which he proposes to produce next year. Among those novelties will, I understand, be "I Medici," "Signa," Mascagni's "Ratcliff" and "Roma," and perhaps "Piccolo Haydn" from Milan, and Bruneau's new opera, "L'Attaque du Moulin" (based on Zola's story), and Gounod's first opera, "Sapho," from Paris. While he is in Italy I should not be surprised if he also picked up some excellent vocal talent at a moderate rate, and I should prefer to believe his well-balanced opinion concerning these artists and the works, rather than the eulogies of any one of the "extra specials" who have gone over to Italy to "do" the novelties for the London papers.

M. Paderewski gave his only London recital this season on Tuesday, and St. James's Hall had been sold out more than a week in advance. There were, I believe, rather fewer guinea seats than before, but the receipts must, nevertheless, have been over £1,000. The British public have ever run after a "star," but M. Paderewski is also, of course, a very extraordinary pianist, the finest all-round player, perhaps, we have had since the retirement of Rubinstein; and, moreover, his business is very cleverly managed, particularly in the matter of limiting the number of his performances. The great pianist's hair is also a never-ending subject of delight to large numbers of his lady admirers, and the question of its shortness or its "heavenly length"—a point mainly determined by the almanack, or, at any rate, by the distance of time which has elapsed since he paid his annual visit to the barber—is always a matter of lively speculation. M. Paderewski, however, now intends to devote more time to composition than heretofore, and besides the Polish Fantasie which he has already introduced at the Norwich Festival, and will this month play at the London Symphony Concerts, he will, on December 11, produce at the Popular Concerts, six of the songs he has written to lines by Adam Mickiewicz. His new Polish opera is also well in hand.

Madame Patti is likewise a never-ending source of copy to the paragraphists, particularly on the other side of the water. The New York Herald has recently come out with some astonishing revelations concerning La Diva. At the outset we are told that Madame Patti gets up at eight or half-past, "dallies awhile in her silver bath-tub"—that "silver bath-tub" is a delicious invention—and sings scales. She reads the letters "which her courier George brings from Penwyllt," drives, and then rehearses with M. Nicolini in the drawing-room. This more or less veracious chronicler of La Diva's doings does not appear to have a ghost of an idea that Patti is a great walker. After rehearsals, it seems, comes dinner, where, as the writer declares, the great artist delights "to introduce new dreams of her milliners and dressmakers in London, Paris, and Vienna." Here I think our friend gives himself away for a mere male, as if the term milliner be employed in its usual sense he would seem to indicate that Madame Patti dines in her bonnet. However, we are told that La Diva's ideals of womanhood are Mrs. Cleveland and the Princess of Wales, which is, doubtless, very true, and, last of all, that every fresh tune in the great orchestrion in the billiard-room costs £20, and that there "must be at least five dozen of them, from the 'Valkyre'"—marvellous tune the "Walkyre"—"to 'Yankee Doodle.'" According to this authority, also, Madame Patti gave even more than £20 for one of her parrots, which "screeches 'Pretty Patti!' and swears in Portuguese from morning till night."

Mr. Manns on Saturday gave a turn to a prominent provincial musician, and produced at the Crystal Palace a new overture entitled "Youth," by Dr. Hiles, of Manchester. Dr. Hiles is, of course, a sound musician, but he hardly seems to be an inspired one. Miss Janotha, who since she last appeared here has been kicked out of a gig and has got well again, played Beethoven's Concerto in G. At the Popular Concerts Mr. Borwick has reappeared, but the programmes have been limited to familiar works. The members of the Musical Guild—ex-students of the Royal College of Music—have also started their new season at far-away Kensington Town-hall.

A "command" performance of Auber's "Fra Diavolo" in English will be given at Balmoral on Monday week by the Carl Rosa artists, headed by Miss de Lussan. There is still a talk of doing "Utopia, Limited," at Windsor

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is, 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER. Restores the colour. Renews the growth. Arrests the fall. Cleanses the scalp.

before Christmas, and if it come off it will probably be on December 16, but it may after all be postponed till the new year. Signor Tosti is, I learn, writing an operetta for drawing-room performance by some of the Royal amateurs at Osborne.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—My converse is to be mostly of cookery this week, for we have spent hours at the Cookery and Food Exhibition at the Portman Rooms, and found so much to interest us that we are quite sorry it is closed. The "pretties" were all in the large first room, where Madame Tussaud's kings and queens used to reign in that silence that seems so odd when such realistic counterfeits of the human form are present in numbers. A lovely little tea-table was the first thing to catch our eyes. It was decorated with drooping trails of smilax, and with pink heather and smilax placed in and out between the plates. The cups and saucers were white and silver, and a big silver bowl in the centre of the round table was filled with pink heather, chrysanthemums of the same tone of colour, and asparagus-tops. An interesting table was laid "for an artisan" by Mrs. Grace Johnson, who is such an adept in Indian cookery. It was intended to show that economy and refinement could be combined, but much of the latter effect was due to the snowy cloth and the brightness of the glass and plate. Where is the time for this to come from in the busy life of an artisan's wife? And whence the pennies for the frequent washing of the table-cloth? Quite a novel exhibit was that sent by Mr. Tong, chef of the steamship Ormuz, of the Orient Line. It was a saloon table laid for lunch and set out with very tempting-looking dishes, all of which had been prepared on board the vessel in the London Docks. Osler's dinner-table was quite lovely, with its exquisite lamps and plates of Worcester china, the former furnished with deep Mandarin yellow shades. The flowers were carnations in pale pink and deep red, the latter being used in the centre only on a large but slenderly-constructed triple arch. A smaller one at either end of the table completed the set. Another very pretty thing was a large swan, beautifully modelled in ice, and bearing on its back an ice pudding made in the form of a number of different fruits. The ice was clear as crystal.

The classes in which professional cooks of both sexes competed for prizes were seventeen in number, and included dishes of fish, hors d'œuvres, soups (clear and thick), hot and cold entrées of meat and poultry, second-course dishes, salads, entremets, and ornamental work of various kinds. Mr. Searcy's basket of petits fours looked very tempting, and we immediately awarded it a prize. Whether it really got one or not, I do not know. In the Ladies' Competition, open to pupils of recognised schools of cookery, there were some nice-looking things, among them curried pheasant, devilled almonds, pine-apple cream, and a vegetable curry. Quite a new feature was the Housewife Section, in which, so far as we could make out, any private person could join. Among them was a set of dishes sent by Mrs. Whyte, of Commercial-street, Dundee, two Scotch haggises being on the list, the first we had ever seen. They do not look at all tempting things, but we heard that the jury pronounced favourably upon them. They made us think of that lovely thing in Punch, where a guest enters, and, as he is taking off his overcoat, smells the haggis, and says: "Eh! but I'll be bad the morn!" The "velvet steak" on this table was of most attractive appearance.

The Army Cookery appeared to be the most popular item in the whole show, crowds surrounding the soldiers while they prepared the food. There was a Navy Section this year, too, but we could not find it. At one corner of the great room the new system of messing in the Army was most clearly explained by the soldier-man in charge of the exhibit. He told us how the vast sum of over £20,000 a year has been economised in dripping alone by our home battalions, and showed us how the fat, when rendered down, is poured into a vessel containing a small quantity of water, the dripping forming a solid mass upon the surface. He also showed us the fat in varied layers as deposited for convenience' sake by the careless cook of every-day life. We could not help remarking that we knew that cook! Who does not? We bought the sixpenny pamphlet, detailing the mode in which the stock-pot and the dripping-pan contribute to the abundance and variety of the soldiers' messing, and at the same time save his pocket. We found in it many hints that are useful to the ordinary housekeeper, and the whole book should be of the greatest value to the managers of large institutions, as it contains minute directions for the following out of the system, including the threefold boiling of bones and the precautions taken to prevent these from remaining more than a certain length of time in the stock-pot. There are also recipes for making brawn and gravy in large quantities.

By the way, the allowance of dish-cloths and cleaning-rags appears rather inadequate to the ordinary lay mind, being only two of each per company. I wonder how long the cloths are expected to last?

Baroness Burdett-Coutts was present on the opening day, and was dressed in black silk with a dark wine-red velvet yoke to her mantle, and a little boa of ermine round her neck. I saw her husband direct her attention to the Scotch haggis. It is difficult for the uninitiated to imagine how anything that looks so unappetising can possibly elicit the enthusiasm entertained for it in the Land o' Cakes. Miss Mary Hooper, a great authority on culinary matters, was one of the jury, and told us that Sir Walter Scott had put it on record that a perfect haggis ought to spurt up to the ceiling when the knife is stuck into it. But what a dreadfully untidy sort of food that would be! Fancy one's dining-room after a few dinners at which the great Scottish national dish had been enjoyed in full perfection. What would it look like?

We went to the Arts and Crafts Exhibition the other day and admired some of the lovely needlework there. One of Miss May Morris's designs forms a part of a bed-hanging for an old Manor house and is set to some beautiful lines by her father, beginning

> The wind's on the wold,
> And the night is cold.

There were many things that we should have liked to possess, among them a piano back embroidered with flowers and leaves in a very graceful pattern. We also wanted to take home with us a lady's work cabinet in oak stained green, the structure being well devised for both ornament and use. A case of beautiful ecclesiastical needlework is exhibited by Miss Bessie Huggett and her pupils, and a very fine portière (No. 166 in the catalogue) is worked by these clever ladies. Mr. Walter Crane's designs for a set of dessert d'oyleys, to be called "Flora's Retinue" were interesting. A curious exhibit is a sack-cloth curtain stencilled in oil colour. A rose-water dish in hammered silver would have made you covet your neighbour's goods, had you seen it. The designs for glass make one want to re-read the old legends of St. George, St. Oswald, Aucassin, and Nicholete. Of these and other ambitious works I shall hold my peace, not feeling competent to explain why a few of them disagreed with us so very distinctly, as they certainly did. An alabaster chimney-piece sounds beautiful, does it not? It probably would look beautiful if placed among harmonious surroundings, and not dabbed down in an irrelevant corner; but nothing on earth could make one other chimney-piece appear even tolerable to our thinking.

HUNTING SEASON, 1893-4.—Busvine's new designs and materials for this year include several special novelties in Riding Habits, Coats for Walking and Driving, Walking Jackets, Gowns, &c. Can be seen at 4, Brook street, or will be sent by return of post.—JOHN BUSVINE, by special appointments to the Princess of Wales, the Empress of Germany, the Empress of Austria, &c., &c.

RIDING HABITS.—A speciality in Riding Habits. Has been declared the best, without exception, by all ladies who have seen it. Quite new. Patented. Made only by G. S. WOLMERSHAUSEN & Co., LTD., 16, Gt. Marlborough-street, Regent-street, London, W.

It looks partly lead, partly tin, but may quite possibly possess occult beauties that we are incapable of perceiving.

We enjoyed the South Gallery best of all, with its studies for book illustrations, those by Rossetti for "The Queen's Page," Tennyson's poems, and "The Prince's Progress," and others, being first on the list. The cases of books with lovely bindings would make a longing bibliophile most painfully envious. But it is futile to write of these things. To be really enjoyed they must be seen and gloated over. We could scarcely tear ourselves away from this fascinating room.

I see that a West end Tea and Shopping Club for Ladies is about to be established in Regent-street, or somewhere close to that central thoroughfare. It is under the patronage of Lady Georgina Douglas, the Hons. Helen and Mary Henniker, Lady De Conrad, Lady Wm. Lennox, and the Hon. Mrs. Armytage. The Club house is to be "cosy and artistic," with reading and tea rooms, reception and dressing rooms. Cold luncheons and light refreshments are to be supplied at moderate prices, and the surroundings are to be "luxurious and congenial." And the subscription for all this? Only 5s. a year, Amy! There is to be a guinea entrance-fee, but this will be remitted in the case of the first 500 members. They will be known as "original members," who will elect the Committee. All profits are to be expended upon the Club, adding to its advantages, and opening branches in other shopping centres. Members from the country are promised full and reliable information, as well as good advice about advertised articles and general matters relating to shopping.

This is quite a quantity for one's money, is it not? There is no doubt but that the low subscription will attract an enormous number of members, both in town and country, and there will be plenty of funds. The success of the scheme will depend entirely on the management of the Club. Application for membership must be made to Mr. G. T. Oliver, The Cottage, Elm-place, South Kensington.

There is to be a grand bazaar in the early days of December at the Kensington Town-hall, in aid of the funds for the Children's Free Breakfasts and the Winter Dinners for the Poor. It is under very distinguished patronage, several Royal Princesses heading the list, which contains the names of seven Duchesses, eleven Marchionesses, forty Countesses, and eight Viscountesses—an imposing array of lordly names. The bazaar held last year was so successful that 150 poor children had free breakfasts daily for a period of five months, and a great number of free dinners as well. There were also many Christmas dinners given out of the fund, and sacks of coal for the sick. Mrs. Henry Meyer, of 12, Elm Park-gardens, will be glad to receive any contributions towards this excellent cause.

You want to know something about evening dresses, you say. You will be glad to hear that they are going to be very pretty indeed this winter. The fashion of having sleeves of different colour and material from the dress itself is still to continue. I saw a lovely gown in the palest possible water-green satin, with blush-pink velvet sleeves. The skirt was bordered with pink velvet, beaded with a narrow band of jet, and the bodice had a shaped ornament of jet, wide in front and narrowing towards the arms, where it was continued in a line round the top of the pink velvet sleeves. These were gathered into a band of the jet, top, the white arms showing prettily through the openwork. Butterfly sleeves, made of accordion-pleated silk or gauze or silk muslin, will be largely used. Silk basques and sleeves to match will be added to dresses of light material. Paniers will be arranged in a similar fashion. I have seen a sweet gown for dinner or evening wear made of pale heliotrope velvet, bordered along the shoulders and sleeves with bands of ermine. Fancy a white brocade trimmed with sable fur and black lace! What would have been thought of the combination by our grandmothers? But one may wear anything now. I saw a gown the other day composed of olive cloth, and trimmed with sable and black lace. That would not long ago have been considered terribly unorthodox.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

DEAREST MADGE. Whatever else life may be in these days, we take care that it shall not be monotonous. How infinitely varied are our occupations, and what an overwhelming number of them we manage to crowd, not only into each month and week, but into each day! The worst of it is we leave ourselves so little time in which to enjoy the variety, that we might just as well be doing the self same thing over and over again. We are in such a dreadful hurry about everything; so much so, that we have practically no present, but are always, minds and bodies alike, rushing on to what is next to come. And yet, by a subtle mockery, we are categorically placed amongst the "leisure" classes. As if leisure is not the last thing in the world of which we may claim possession! The last thing also for which we would care to advance a claim. In the high pressure life now in vogue, is not leisure the most incorrect thing possible for the "leisure" classes to possess? No wonder if we groan as we rush along, "Is life worth living?" Though, of course, we have no time to wait for a reply.

Last week I felt very much inclined to answer the question for myself with an emphatic "No." In an evil hour I went up to town on a shopping, &c., excursion with that child of the century, Edith ——. What a time we had; all one prolonged rush from start to finish! After the fuss of catching the early train our bodies had some enforced rest while we were in the railway carriage; but not our minds. Very far from it, indeed. Throughout the whole journey we worked hard at the almost insoluble problem of fitting the proposed day's work into the day. How to dovetail into one another visits to the dressmaker, milliner, dentist, &c., luncheon with one friend and tea with another, the purchase of a wedding present, the selection of wall-paper, of lamp shades, of an afternoon tea set, of plates to match a dinner-service, and so on. A dowdy suggestion on my part that there might not be time for doing so much was swept contemptuously aside. The strangest thing of all is that Edith did accomplish the work. She bought a jacket and a hat—to be sure she sent them back next day, selecting different ones, her first choice had been so hurried; she chose a wall paper (it did not turn out to be the right colour) and plates (unfortunately they did not match). It was all right with the tea service and lamp shades, however, which I had selected while she was with the dentist, or the tailor, or the bootmaker, or perhaps all three together. We also bought the wedding present, and faithfully carried out our programme of having luncheon and tea with different friends. Oh, these hurried meals, snatched against time—can anything be more dreadful? What an appalling draught—for all the simplicity of its ingredients—a cup of hot tea can be when consumed, say, in forty seconds, with one's eyes on one's bracelet watch all the time! And then the agonising attempt to maintain conversation, under the circumstances. There is always so much to say and to hear when there is not quite time for it.

Dublin is filling again, the shutters disappearing from the windows, and the normal inhabitants replacing the tourists in the streets. The tall policemen pacing the pathways wear a more imposing aspect than ever after their late tug-of-war successes. By the way, is there not something Titanic, and suggestive of the "large utterance of the Early Gods," in these trials of strength between gigantic Irishmen and Scotchmen? I suppose you have often seen a tug-of-war? The sight has always had a great fascination for me, the display of physical force is so impressive to the weak. There is not as yet, I think a feminine tug-of-war team, as there are cricket elevens, &c., but no doubt it will come soon. Our vaulting ambition has no limits, even in the world of athletics, which cannot be overleaped in these times. Lord Houghton returned last week to the Viceregal Lodge, which is not a particularly lively place at this season. He resumed, at once, his Viceregal duties, giving a dinner party for Mr. Asquith, at which the Lord Chancellor and various other officials were entertained to meet the Home Secretary. Lord Houghton also dined with the Chief Secretary, and on Friday evening attended the conversazione of the Royal University, accompanied by a Viceregal suite. Lord Morris, who has been staying in Dublin, presided at the conferring of degrees at the University, instead of Lord Dufferin, who is the Chancellor, and of Lord Emly who is next in rank. The number of women students who distinguished themselves and got degrees of different kinds was very large. Apart from the more solid advantages, is there not something very attractive in having letters after one's name? It just gives one the little bit of advantage over the general run of one's neighbours, that is, after all, each one's aim in life, more or less. This cannot be called feminine vanity, since men have not only so largely indulged in it, but monopolised until lately the indulgence therein, to our exclusion. Lord and Lady Wolseley and their daughter have returned to Dublin, and are established again at Kilmainham for the coming season. Lady West Ridgeway is at the Under Secretary' Lodge, though whether or not Sir J. West Ridgeway still holds his post as Under Secretary seems doubtful. Things have got somewhat mixed on the subject, a way they not unfrequently fall into in Dublin Castle. Was there ever a more strange and wonderful institution in all its branches? Does not its persistent existence in itself sufficiently account for the persistency of the Irish Question?

The most beautiful of Winter Garments are those of Nature's own production—FURS. For an elegant fit, genuine and best furs, go to NICHOLAY'S, Manufacturing Furriers, 170, Oxford-street, London. Seal Jackets re-made to fashionable shapes. Moderate prices.

MESSRS. REDFERN beg to announce that the models of Gowns, Coats, Mantles, &c., designed and prepared for autumn and early winter wear, are now ready, and display the combined ideas of the latest London and Paris Houses.—27, New Bond-street, W.

Dublin, you must know, is not supposed to be a "marrying" place. Several marriages, however, are enlivening this dull season. An interesting marriage takes place this week, when the eldest daughter of the popular Lord Justice FitzGibbon marries Colonel Shone, R.E. It is a tradition of the Irish Bench that its daughters long have maintained, and still ably maintain, the tradition of Celtic beauty. The bride-elect is a charming example of the truth of both these traditions.—Yours ever,

CLARE.

Are you beginning to get tired of roast pheasant? If so, try this way of stewing the birds:—

Truss the pheasants as for roasting. Stuff the craws with a rich veal forcemeat, without disarranging the head and neck; then lard the birds down each side of the breast with strips of lemon peel and fat bacon. Roll a lump of butter the size of a pigeon's egg in pepper, salt, and mace, then put one into each body of the pheasants. Secure the ends safely. Put the birds into a stewing-pan with a quart of good hot gravy, a wineglassful of Madeira, a tablespoonful of mushroom catsup, the juice of a lemon, one pounded anchovy, and one sprig of fresh sweet marjoram. Cover the pan closely and let all stew for forty minutes. Take the birds from the gravy and thicken it with a dessertspoonful of cornflour and ordinary flour mixed. Let it boil for a moment, then it pour over the birds. Garnish the dish with artichoke bottoms, which have been boiled and cut into quarters, and the yolks of four hard-boiled eggs cut in halves, with little tufts of parsley placed between.

This is a delicious savoury:—

With a tin cutter, cut rounds of bread about the size of a crownpiece, and a quarter of an inch thick; fry them in a little hot butter or lard, and drain them. Place a thick slice of tomato on each round of bread, and on the top of that a thick layer of grated Parmesan cheese, mixed with a very small quantity of cream. Bake them in a moderate oven until they are brown, and serve them on a napkin.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

MARIANI WINE

This inimitable COCA WINE is an aid to intellectual exertion, and is indispensable to brain-workers and others who suffer from Debility, Exhaustion, Mental Depression, Dyspepsia, Sleeplessness, Voice Fatigue; also to promote Convalescence. Written Testimonials from over 2,000 Physicians. "A powerful rejuvenator and renovator of the vital forces." Sold by Chemists, Grocers, and Stores, or delivered free by Importers, WILCOX & CO., 239, Oxford-street, London. 4s. per bottle, or 45s. dozen.

MOURNING FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR.

Messrs. JAY'S

Large and well-assorted STOCK includes a choice and varied selection of COSTUMES, MANTLES, and MILLINERY, suitable for any degree of Mourning, and ready for IMMEDIATE WEAR. Orders to special instructions are executed in a few hours, and Ladies are Waited Upon in any part of the country without any extra charge whatever.

JAY'S,
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

EXSHAW'S No. 1 BRANDY,

66/- per dozen.

SUPPLIED DIRECT TO THE PUBLIC.

CHAMPAGNES.

JULES CHAMPION & CO.'s (in All Sizes), 68/- Per Doz.

Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1884 (in Bottles only) 105/- per doz. Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1889 (in all sizes) 84/- per doz. Lebeau & Co. Vintage 1889, 54/- per doz.

POWELL, TURNER, & CO.,
28, KING STREET, ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

CHUBB'S 128, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, LONDON, E.C.

FIRE RESISTING. JEWEL THIEF RESISTING.

WEST END BRANCH—
68, ST. JAMES'S STREET, PALL MALL, S.W. SAFES.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.

THE VIENNESE STRING BAND WILL PLAY DURING

3/6 DINNERS, 6 to 8.30. SEPARATE TABLES. NO CHARGE FOR ATTENDANCE. 5/-

JOHANNIS

KING OF NATURAL TABLE WATERS.

Promotes Digestion. Prolongs Life.
Prevents Gout and Rheumatism.

SPRINGS: Zollhaus, Germany.

LONDON OFFICES: 25, Regent Street, Waterloo Place.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.
300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

LADIES' HOSIERY.

Ladies requiring stockings for comfort, elasticity, and wear-resisting qualities should ask for the Patent TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE, which are undoubtedly the best produced. They are made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

Each pair is stamped with the Registered trade mark, "MUSA DYE," and "PATENT TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE, No. 20,778" on sole of foot.

To be obtained of all the best Hosiers and Outfitters in the United Kingdom.

Ladies experiencing any difficulty in obtaining these goods are requested to write to the patentees, who will forward them the address of the nearest vendor. This will ensure their having the genuine article.

Wholesale only of the Patentees:
DEBENHAM & FREEBODY,
Fletcher Gate, Nottingham.

A CABLEGRAM has just been received at MELLIN'S FOOD WORKS, PECKHAM, S.E., from the American Agents, stating that

MELLIN'S FOOD

For INFANTS & INVALIDS

HAS BEEN AWARDED

HIGHEST HONOURS

VIZ.,

THE MEDAL & DIPLOMA

AT THE

Chicago Exhibition.

(The Original Firm, Established 1810.)

MAPPIN BROTHERS'

"Queen's" Cutlery.
(PROTECTED).

By Her Majesty's Special Warrant.

"Queen's" Cutlery is the finest in the World, has stood the test of over 80 years, supplied to the public by the actual manufacturers, direct from Queen's Works, Sheffield.

Mappin Brothers' Trade Mark Corporate Manufacture Plate and Cutlery.

Only London Show Rooms: 220, REGENT STREET, W.; AND 66, CHEAPSIDE, E.C. (Next Sir John Bennett's.)

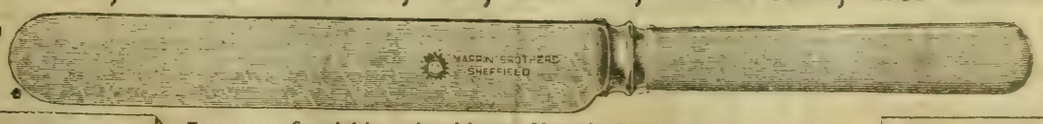
'Queen's' Plate.



SPOONS AND FORKS.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST-FREE to any part of the World.

Everyone furnishing should see Mappin Brothers' goods before deciding elsewhere.
Inspection invited at the London Show-Rooms.

SELECTIONS of Goods forwarded to the Country on APPROVAL.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW NOVELS.

VASHTI AND ESTHER, the "Story of Society To-day," which has lately been appearing in "The World," will be ready, revised and enlarged, in 2 vols., at every Library, on Nov. 8.

WOMAN AND THE MAN, the New Novel by ROBERT BUCHANAN, Author of "God and the Man," will be ready in 2 vols. at every Library, on Nov. 2.

Outlaw and Lawmaker.

By Mrs. CAMBELL PRAED. 3 vols., at every Library.

To His own Master.

By ALAN ST. AUBYN, Author of "The Old Maid's Sweetheart," &c. 3 vols. at all Libraries.

"A more honest, kindly, affectionate fellow than the Rev. Stephen Dashwood never fretted his hour upon the real or imaginary stage of life. . . . . The book is brilliantly written."—Daily Telegraph.

A Wasted Crime.

By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat," &c. 2 vols. [At every Library.

"A narrative tragedy which, in virtue of the strength and finish of its portraiture, the delicate precision of its literary workmanship, and the inevitableness of its dramatic movement, takes a high place, not only among the novels of the year, but among the achievements of the admirable writer from whom it comes."—Daily Chronicle.

The Woman of the Iron Bracelets.

By FRANK BARRETT, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c. 3 vols. [At all Libraries.

"This is a very exciting and readable novel. . . The interest is well sustained from the first page to the last. . . The minor characters are well drawn, the dialogue is always brisk, and there is not a word of padding in the whole book. Altogether, this is a novel which can be safely taken up by all who enjoy a lively story vividly told."—Westminster Gazette.

The Rebel Queen.

By WALTER BESANT, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." 3 vols. [At every Library.

"'The Rebel Queen' is a remarkable work. It is fascinating as a fiction—indeed, we do not think the author has previously displayed so brilliantly his rare gift of imagination—and it is instructive and suggestive as a study in sociology to an extent which is not to be taken in at a first reading." World.

The Gun-Runner:

A ROMANCE OF ZULULAND. By BERTRAM MITFORD.

Second Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"Mr Mitford's new story comes with particular opportuneness at a moment when a possible war in South Africa is everywhere discussed. It is an intensely exciting story. The author writes from a fulness of experience."—Review of Reviews.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

WITNESS TO THE DEED. By G. MANVILLE FENN.
"A thrilling and engrossing story, the interest of which never flags for a moment." Daily Telegraph.

HEATHER AND SNOW. By GEORGE MAC DONALD.
"A book that no one, having once taken up, will lay down."—Spectator.

TIME'S REVENGES. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.
"Mr. Christie Murray at his best, and that can be very good indeed. In plot, construction, and character-drawing admirable."—World.

ROPES OF SAND. By R. E. FRANCILLON.
"Powerful, original, and fascinating. . . Every character delineated by a master hand."—Daily Telegraph.

A TRYING PATIENT, &c. By JAMES PAYN.
"Altogether good to read. Stories that cannot fail to charm."—Saturday Review.

GEOFFORY HAMILTON. By EDWARD H. COOPER.
"Clever and real. . . . Wonderfully acute knowledge of human nature."—Manchester Courier.

LADY VERNER'S FLIGHT. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.
"Very pleasant reading."—Spectator.

DR. PASCAL. By E. ZOLA. With Portrait.
"A beautiful and most touching love story."—Vanity Fair.

THE DREAM. By E. ZOLA.

THE DOWNFALL. By E. ZOLA.

Peg Woffington: and Christie Johnstone.

By CHARLES READE. Uniform with the Sixpenny Edition of "It is Never too Late to Mend." Medium 8vo, picture cover, 6d.; cloth 1s.

Emile Zola.

A BIOGRAPHICAL AND CRITICAL STUDY. By E. H. SHERARD. With Portraits, Illustrations, and Facsimile Letter. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s. [Immediately.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE BRIGHTON ROAD."

From Paddington to Penzance:

THE RECORD OF A SUMMER TOUR. By CHARLES G. HARPER. With 105 Illustrations by the Author. Demy 8vo, Irish linen, 16s. [Immediately.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Letters to Marco.

Being Letters written by H. S. MARKS, R.A. By GEORGE D. LESLIE, R.A. With Illustrations by the Author. Extra crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

Marion Darche: a Story without Comment.

By F. MARION CRAWFORD. 2 vols., globe 8vo, 12s.

Miss Stuart's Legacy.

By Mrs. F. A. STEEL. 3 vols., crown 8vo, 31s. 6d.

MACMILLAN'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.

NEW VOLUME.

Helen Treveryan.

By Sir MORTIMER DURAND, K.C.I.E., Indian Civil Service. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

OBSERVER.—"'Helen Treveryan' is a most interesting book, and deserves to be widely read."

SCOTSMAN.—"The story is bright and interesting. Indian life and scenery and Anglo Indian types are described with life-like sincerity and a convincing air of first-hand knowledge. The whole is interesting and thoroughly readable."

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 409. NOVEMBER, Price 1s.

CONTENTS.

1. PERLYCROSS. By R. D. BLACKMORE. Chapters XIX.-XX.
2. THE APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE. By C. B. ROYLANCE-KENT.
3. A CHAPTER IN AMERICAN HISTORY. By A. G. BRADLEY.
4. THE EARLY LIFE OF SAMUEL PEPYS. By C. H. FIRTH.
5. DEER-STALKING.
6. THE BLUE DRYAD.
7. AN EPISODE IN THE LIFE OF THOMAS BECKET. By the Rev. Canon VENABLES.
8. A WINTER'S EXPERIMENT. By H. V. TOYNBEE.
9. A SON OF THE SOIL. By Miss BRAMSTON.
10. SOME THOUGHTS ON ROUSSEAU.

MACMILLAN & CO., LONDON.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NEW WORKS.

NOW READY.

THE DUKE OF SOMERSET, being the Letters and Memoirs of Edward Seymour, K.G. Edited and arranged by Lady GUENDOLEN RAMSDEN and W. H. MALLOCK, Author of "In an Enchanted Island," &c. In 1 vol., demy 8vo, 16s.

NOW READY.

A HISTORY OF THE POST OFFICE, from its Establishment down to 1836. By HERBERT JOYCE, C.B., one of the Secretaries to the General Post Office. In 1 vol., demy 8vo, 16s.

NOW READY.

LADY BLESSINGTON, being the Conversations of Lord Byron and the Countess of Blessington. With a contemporary Sketch and Memoir of Lady Blessington. A New Edition with Notes. With 8 Portraits. In 1 vol., demy 8vo, 16s.

NOW READY.

A HISTORY OF ENGLISH DRESS – Saxon, Plantagenet, Tudor, Stuart, and Modern. By GEORGIANA HILL, Author of "Mundus Muliebris." In 2 vols., demy 8vo, with numerous Illustrations on Steel, 30s.

NOW READY.

INDIAN MEMORIES. By EDITH CUTHELL, and Captain W. S. BURRELL. In 1 vol., crown 8vo, 6s.

NOW READY.

A LOTOS-EATER in CAPRI. By Dr. ALAN WALTERS, Author of "Palms and Pearls; or, Scenes in Ceylon." With Illustrations and a Map. In 1 vol., large crown 8vo, 10s. 6d.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

THE UNITED SERVICE MAGAZINE.

SIXTY-FIFTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.—NOVEMBER, 1893.

Suppression of Rebellion in the North-West Territories of Canada, 1885. Gen. Sir FRED. MIDDLETON.
The Universal Postal Union. C. J. WILLDEY.
Training and Equipment of the Mounted Soldier. "A.P."
The Re-Partition of Africa. EDWARD BOND.
The Volunteer Movement under Pitt. Lieut. A. L. MORANT, H.A.C.
A Recruiting Ground for the Navy. Commander The Hon. H. N. SHORE, R.N. (Retired).
France and Siam. A Retrospect. Major-Gen. A. R. MACMAHON.
The Training and Organisation of a Company of Infantry. Bt.-Major Hon. A. HARDINGE, Royal Scots Fusiliers.
The Blood Tax in France and Germany. Lieut.-Col. J. ADYE, R.A.
Present Development of the United States Navy. H. LAWRENCE SWINBURNE.

TWO SHILLINGS MONTHLY.

OFFICES—15, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.
And at all Railway Stations and Booksellers.

WILLIAM BLACK'S New Three-Volume Novel, "The HANDSOME HUMES," is now ready at all Libraries.

CLARK RUSSELL'S NEW THREE-Volume Novel, "The EMIGRANT SHIP," is also now ready, and can be had at all Libraries.

HENRY M. STANLEY'S New Work entitled "MY DARK COMPANIONS and their STRANGE STORIES," is ready to-day at all Booksellers' and the Libraries, with over 60 Illustrations by Walter W. Buckley, 1 vol. small demy 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

LONDON:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd.
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

Messrs. WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' PUBLICATIONS.

This Day is Published.

A JOURNEY THROUGH THE YEMEN, and some General Remarks upon that Country. By WALTER B. HARRIS, F.R.G.S. Author of "The Land of an African Sultan: Travels in Morocco," &c. With 3 Map and numerous Illustrations by FORESTIER and WALLACE from Sketches and Photographs by the Author. Demy 8vo, 16s.

 The principal object of this book is to throw more light than is already the case upon a country of which scarcely anything is known, and almost nothing has been written. ... Owing to the author's experience of travel, and his knowledge of the Arabic language, he has been able to add to the personal account of his journey a mass of notes concerning the country, its history, and its inhabitants, while the whole book is profusely illustrated from sketches and photographs taken during the journey.

NEW WORK BY "A SON OF THE MARSHES."

This Day is Published.

WITH THE WOODLANDERS AND BY THE TIDE. By "A SON OF THE MARSHES," Author of "On Surrey Hills," "Within an Hour of London Town," "Annals of a Fishing Village," "Forest Tithes," &c. Edited by J. A. OWEN. Crown 8vo, 6s.

This Day is Published.

THE ZAMBESI BASIN AND NYASSALAND. By Daniel J. RANKIN, F.R.S.G.S., M.R.A.S. With Three Maps and 10 Full Page Illustrations. Post 8vo, 10s. 6d.

"One of the most entertaining books we have come across for many a day about the Dark Continent."—Daily Chronicle.

"Imparts much valuable authentic aud novel information concerning regions which must sooner or later play an important part in the future development of Africa."—Times.

STRAY SPORT. By J. Moray Brown, Author of "Shikar Sketches," "Powder, Spur, and Spear," "The Days when we went Hog-Hunting," &c. 2 vols, post 8vo. With 50 Illustrations. 21s.

"Not only are the charms of tiger-hunting and pig-sticking in the far East detailed with all an enthusiast's zest—and, be it said, with a good deal of literary skill as well—but sport at home, on moor and fen, loch and river, is ably and pleasantly described."—St. James's Budget.

ROUND THE BLACK MAN'S GARDEN. By Zelie COLVILE, F.R.G.S. With 2 Maps and 52 Illustrations from Drawings by the Author and from Photographs. Demy 8vo, 16s.

"One of the most interesting and charmingly told traveller's tales that we have had the good fortune to come across."—Queen.

"The charm of her book consists in the graceful narrative of the scenes, sights, and events she witnessed.'—Morning Post.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

NEW NOVELS.

Margaret Drummond, Millionaire.

By SOPHIE F. F. VELLER, Author of "James Hepburn, Free Church Minister," "Angus Graeme, Gamekeeper," &c. 3 vols. Crown 8vo. Price 31s. 6d.

"A very thorough and earnest piece of work."—Daily Chronicle.

The Curb of Honour.

By M. BETHAM-EDWARDS, author of "Kitty," "Dr. Jacob," &c. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"A well-told story."—Glasgow Herald.

Paul Romer. A Novel.

By C. Y. HARGREAVES. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"We could welcome more such stories, interesting and thoughtful, and written in the sure and refined English of a thorough gentleman."—Literary World.

NEW EDITIONS.

A Tangled Web

By LADY LINDSAY. Price 6s.

One Virtue: a Fiction.

By CHARLES T. C. JAMES. Price 6s.

The Last Touches.

By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD. Price 3s. 6d.

Kenilworth.

Vol. 12 of the Dryburgh Edition of the Waverley Novels, containing 10 Page Illustrations by H. M. Paget. Crown 8vo. Price 5s.

"When complete, this will be the best popular edition in existence."—Christian World.

"This edition appears to improve as it goes on."—Athenæum.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, W.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

Now Ready, in 3 vols. At all Libraries.

MARIE CORELLI'S NEW WORK.

BARABBAS:

A Dream of the World's Tragedy.

"The idea is a daring one."—Truth.

"The voluptuous charms and fiendish cruelty of the heartless wanton (Judith Iscariot) are rendered with such luxuriance of Corellian rhetoric that there is really something to wonder at."—Daily Chronicle.

"The subject is treated with great reverence, and the expansion of the Scripture narrative is marked by vivid imaginative force. . . . . Told with much intensity and with opulence of imaginative power."—Birmingham Daily Post.

"Marie Corelli is a writer as picturesque as prolific."—Baron de Bookworms in Punch

"Her narrative is vivid. To some readers it may convey a more intense conception of the incidents it describes than they have ever drawn for themselves from the more brief and restrained descriptions of the Evangelists."—North British Daily Mail.

CHEAP JACK ZITA.—By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "Mehalah," "In the Roar of the Sea," &c. 3 vols., crown 8vo. A Romance of the Fen District in 1815. [Ready.

THE STAR-GAZERS.—By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of "Eli's Children," &c. 3 vols., crown 8vo. [Ready.

A WOMAN OF FORTY. — By ESME STUART, Author of "Muriel's Marriage," &c. 2 vols., crown 8vo. [Ready.

MRS. FALCHION.—By GILBERT PARKER, Author of "Pierre and his People." New Edition, in 1 vol., 6s.

Mr. Parker's second book has received a warm welcome. The Athenæum called it "a splendid study of character"; the Pall Mall Gazette spoke of the writing as "but little behind anything that has been done by any writer of our time"; the St. James's called it "a very striking and admirable novel"; and the Westminster Gazette applied to it the epithet of "distinguished." [Ready.

HIS GRACE. — By W. E. NORRIS, Author of "The Rogue," &c. Third and cheaper edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

An edition in one volume of a novel which in its two-volume form quickly ran through two editions.

METHUEN & CO., 18, Bury-street, W.C.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 8d.

London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

A FRIEND OF THE QUEEN.

(MARIE ANTOINETTE—COUNT FERSEN).

Translated from the French of PAUL GAULOT by Mrs. CASHEL HOEY. In 2 vols., 8vo, with Portraits, 24s.

MEMOIRS.

By CHARLES GODFREY LELAND (Hans Breitmann).

In 2 vols., demy 8vo, with 2 Portraits, 32s.

The Times.—"From first to last a very entertaining book, full of good stories, strange adventures, curious experiences, and not inconsiderable achievements, instinct with the strong personality of the writer, and not unpleasantly tinged with the egotism that belongs to a strong personality."

ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON:

A Study of His Life and Work.

By ARTHUR WAUGH, B.A., Oxon.

With twenty Illustrations from Photographs specially taken for this Work, and five Portraits. Third Edition, revised. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, or uncut, 6s.

MRS. HUNGERFORD'S NEW NOVEL.

THE HOYDEN.

By the Author of "Molly Bawn." In 3 vols.

"A clever, sprightly story . . . fresh, sunshiny, and delightful."—Scotsman.

A Comedy of Masks.

By ERNEST DOWSON and ARTHUR MOORE. In 3 vols.

"For bright, incisive, and convincing delineations of character this remarkable book is entitled to rank on an equal footing with some of the cleverest works of fiction produced during the past decade."—Daily Telegraph.

The Countess Radna.

By W. E. NORRIS. THIRD EDITION. In 3 vols.

"In style, skill in construction, and general 'go,' it is worth a dozen ordinary novels, and justifies the place its author has obtained among living masters of fiction."—Speaker.

The Heavenly Twins.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "Ideala," &c. FOURTH THOUSAND. In 3 vols.

"Everybody ought to read it, for it is an inexhaustible source of refreshing and highly stimulating entertainment."—Daily Telegraph.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

THE NEW REVIEW.

NOW READY. PRICE ONE SHILLING. NOVEMBER, 1893.

EDITED BY ARCHIBALD GROVE.

No. 54.

STUDY IN CHARACTER: Marshal MACMAHON.
THE ARMENIAN AGITATION: A REPLY TO Mr. STEVENSON, M.P. By SAMUEL LEFFENDI.
THE ADVERTISEMENT NUISANCE.
I. By W. E. H. LECKY.
II. By WALTER BESANT.
III. By LADY JEUNE.
IV. By W. B. RICHMOND, A.R.A.
V. By JULIAN STURGIS.
WILLIAM COBBETT (conclusion). By LESLIE STEPHEN.
IN DEFENCE OF CLASSICAL STUDY. By PROFESSOR JEBB.
AN IDEALIST. By the Author of "Mademoiselle Ixe."
OUR SPORTING ZADKIELS. By the REV. J. W. HORSLEY.
FURTHER GLEANINGS FROM THE PAPYRI. By PROFESSOR MAHAFFY.
BRITISH ART IN THE NATIONAL GALLERY. By S. J. VICCARS.
PARISH COUNCILS AND ALLOTMENTS. By BOLTON KING.
WOMAN'S SPHERE IN ART. By PROFESSOR FERRERO.

LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO., London and New York.

F. V. WHITE & CO.'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

I.

By John Strange Winter.—THE SOUL OF THE BISHOP. 2vols. [At all Libraries.

II.

By B. M. Croker.—A THIRD PERSON. 2 vols. [At all Libraries.

III.

By Mrs. Edward Kennard.—THE HUNTING GIRL. 3 vols. [At all Libraries.

IV.

By Mrs. Alexander.—FOUND WANTING. 3 vols [At all Libraries.

V. and VI.

By Hume Nisbet.—THE HAUNTED STATION, and other Stories. With Illustrations by the author. Cloth, 2s. 6d. [At all Booksellers and Bookstalls.

AND

THE HAMPSTEAD MYSTERY. By Florence Marryat. 3 vols. [Immediately.

F. V. WHITE & CO., 31, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

SECOND EDITION.

The Woman at Home.

NOVEMBER. PRICE 6d.

A New Illustrated Magazine for Women. Profusely Illustrated.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD.
A Page of Confessions. See the WOMAN AT HOME.

LADY CHARLES BERESFORD. An Illustrated Interview by RAYMOND BLATHWAYT. See the WOMAN AT HOME.

A SHADOWED LIFE.
By ANNIE S. SWAN. Illustrated. See the WOMAN AT HOME.

THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT.
By Dr. WILLIAM WRIGHT. Illustrated. See the WOMAN AT HOME.

LOVE OF NAOMI.
By "Q." Illustrated. See the WOMAN AT HOME.

100,000 COPIES of No. 1. (First Edition) were disposed of, and the Second Edition is now sold out.

A THIRD EDITION will be ready immediately.

London: HODDER & STOUGHTON, 27, Paternoster-row.

— THE —

FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

November.

To Your Tents, Oh Israel! By the Fabian Society.
Mr. Rudyard Kipling's Verse. By the late Francis Adams.
The Lock-out in the Coal Trade. By Vaughan Nash.
The Ice Age and its Work. Part I. By A. R. Wallace, F.R.S.
Delhi in Sumatra. By R. W. Egerton Eastwick.
Is Money a Mere Commodity? By William Smart.
How to Save Egypt (with Map). By Cope Whitehouse.
Carl Wilhelm Scheele. By Professor Thorpe, F.R.S.
The Psychology of Labour and Capital. By Robert Wallace, M.P.
The Ireland of To-Day. Part I. By X.
The British East Africa Company. By General Sir A. B. Kemball, K.C.B.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY,

FOUNDED IN 1842. LIMITED.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE (either New or Second-hand) of the BEST ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from One Guinea upwards. LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for books exchangeable by the Library Messengers) from Two Guineas per annum. COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from Two Guineas per annum. N.B. Two or three friends may unite in One Subscription, and thus lessen the cost of carriage. LIBRARY LISTS GRATIS.

TOWN AND VILLAGE CLUBS SUPPLIED ON LIBERAL TERMS,

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books Gratis and post free.

SALE DEPARTMENT.

All the Leading Books of Past Seasons are on Sale, second-hand, at greatly Reduced Prices. LISTS GRATIS AND POST FREE.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON;
241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; and 48, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Mansion House End).

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE BATTLE OF DORKING."
At all the Libraries, in Three Vols., post 8vo.

The Lesters;

OR, A CAPITALIST'S LABOUR.
By General Sir GEORGE CHESNEY, K.C.B., M.P.
Author of "The Battle of Dorking," "The Dilemma," "The Private Secretary," &c.

Abridged Edition of the late Mr. J. A. Symonds' "Renaissance in Italy."
Ready this day, with a Steel Engraving of a recent Portrait of Mr. Symonds, demy 8vo, 12s 6d.

A SHORT HISTORY of the RENAISSANCE in ITALY. Taken from the work of JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS. By Lieutenant-Colonel ALFRED PEARSON.

Ready this day, crown 8vo, 8s. 6d.

VOLTAIRE'S VISIT to ENGLAND, 1726-1729. By ARCHIBALD BALLANTYNE.

Ready this day, crown 8vo, 6s.

ALL the YEAR with NATURE. By P. ANDERSON GRAHAM.

THE POCKET EDITION OF W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.
In a new Style of Binding.
The Volumes of this Edition are now supplied, elegantly bound in cloth, with gilt top, as follows:

THE NOVELS. Thirteen Volumes in gold-lettered cloth case, 21s.

THE MISCELLANIES. Fourteen Volumes in gold-lettered cloth case, 21s.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

STORIES BY POPULAR AUTHORS.

Now ready, crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

A Dozen all Told.

A SERIES OF STORIES BY
W. E. NORRIS, F. W. ROBINSON, G. A. HENTY, G. R. SIMS, WILLIAM WESTALL, F. BOYLE, MRS. ALEXANDER, MONA CAIRD, HELEN MATHERS, FLORENCE MARRYAT, JOHN STRANGE WINTER, AND ADELINE SERGEANT.
With twelve Illustrations by twelve well-known Artists.

London: BLACKIE & SON, LIMITED, Old Bailey.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

NOVEMBER, 1893.

England and France in Asia. By SIR LEPEL GRIFFIN, K.C.S.I.
What Next? By JOHN E. REDMOND, M.P.
Employers' Liability. By A. D. PROVAND, M.P.
Darwinism and Swimming: a Theory. By Dr. LOUIS ROBINSON.
Victor Hugo: "Toute la Lyre." By ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.
Religion at the London School Board. By the Hon. E. LYULPH STANLEY.
Chats with Jane Clermont. By WILLIAM GRAHAM.
Our Disastrous Cathedral System. By the Rev. W. E. DICKSON (Precentor of Ely).
Archangel Leslie of Scotland: a Sequel. By T. G. LAW.
The Coal Crisis and the Paralysis of British Industry. By I. STEPHEN JEANS.
"Russud:" an Indian Grievance. By the Hon. ODAY PERTAP SING, C.S.I. (Rajah of Bhinga).
The Selection of Army Officers. By W. BAPTISTE SCOONES.
Christianity and Roman Paganism. By Professor ST. GEORGE MIVART.
Orpheus in Hades. By the Right Hon. LORD DE TABLEY.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LTD.

Sixth Edition, Sixteenth Thousand, Crown 8vo, paper cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

FOODS for the FAT:

HOW TO CURE CORPULENCE.
By Dr. YORKE DAVIES, Licentiate Royal College Physicians, London.
"I strongly recommend it to fat people."—Lady's Pictorial.
"The fattest will rise up and call the doctor blessed."—World.
London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

PINE × WOOL × PRODUCTS — TRADE MARK — L&L Lairitz

LAIRITZ'S

CELEBRATED

Established 1853. Awarded 18 Medals and Diplomas. For the Relief and Cure of GOUT, RHEUMATISM, COLDS, &c.
Wadding in packets, Knee-Caps, Inside Soles, Oil, EXTRACT FOR BATH, Lozenges. Of all the LEADING CHEMISTS everywhere. Flannels, Underclothing, Knitting Yarn. Sold by all leading Drapers and Hosiers.
Wholesale Depot for Fabrics only: WELCH, MARGETSON & Co., 16, Cheapside, London.
Caution.—Observe the Tree Trade Mark with Signature on each piece.

PINE WOOL.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

The New River
The choicest home investment of the or any other age.
An entire Freehold Advowson
In this grand ecclesiastic County,
Conferring for a week at the Board
Yielding a present income of over £300 a year.
With early reversion to £1,000 a year
On the falling in of leases upon the [illegible]

MESSRS. EDWIN FOX & BOUSFIELD will SELL, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 15th, at TWO o'clock precisely, the above most important and [illegible] unique FREEHOLD ESTATE. Descriptive particulars of Messrs. FARQUHARSON & WILLIAMS, solicitors, 5, Bank buildings, E.C.; Messrs. LAY & CO., solicitors, 10, Norfolk-street, W.C.; and of Messrs. EDWIN FOX & BOUSFIELD, 29, Gresham-street, Bank, London, E.C.

BERKELEY SQUARE, W.—By order of her Grace the Duke of Sutherland. The long Ground Lease (nearly 100 years) of a newly built Mansion in this aristocratic position.

MESSRS. TROLLOPE are instructed to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, E.C., on THURSDAY, NOV. 16th, at TWO o'clock precisely (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by private contract), the very special modern MANSION, No. 22, Berkeley-square, containing on the upper floors 11 bed and dressing rooms fitted bath and a bath room, six handsome reception rooms on the ground and first floors, principal and secondary staircases, and exceptionally light and complete domestic offices in the basement. The premises are beautifully decorated, fitted electric light, and all modern appliances for convenience and comfort, while great attention has been paid to the drainage and sanitary arrangements. Held from Lord Fitzhardinge on lease for an unexpired term of 67 years at a low ground rent. Possession will be given on completion of the purchase.
Particulars of Messrs. R. S. TAYLOR, SON, & HUMBERT, Solicitors, No. 4, Field court, Gray's-inn, W.C.; and, with orders to view, of Messrs. GEORGE TROLLOPE & SONS, 7, Hobart-place, Eaton-square; West Halkin-street, Belgrave-square; and 15, Parliament-street, Westminster, S.W.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES.—Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

CROMWELL HOUSES, South Kensington, facing the grounds of the Natural History Museum.

MESSRS. J. A. LUMLEY & CO. are favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, E.C., on TUESDAY, the 14th NOVEMBER next (unless previously disposed of by private treaty), the handsome detached Long-leasehold RESIDENCE, No. 5, Cromwell-houses, with private garden at the back, stabling and loose-box for six horses. There are 14 bed and dressing rooms, two bathrooms, splendid reception and entertaining room, &c. Held for an unexpired term of 62 years at a ground rent of £150 per annum. May be viewed by cards to be obtained of the Auctioneers.—Particulars and conditions of sale to be had at the Mart; of Messrs. PAINE, SON, & POLLOCK, Solicitors, 14, St. Helen's-place, E.C.; and at the Auctioneers' Offices, 35, St. James-street (corner of Jermyn-street), Piccadilly.

ALDRIDGE'S.—Annual Sale.—Forty HORSES, the property of Mr. B. Chennel, of the White Hart, Newmarket, will be SOLD at Aldridge's, on WEDNESDAY next, NOV. 8. These horses are mostly 5 and 6 years old; have been regularly used throughout the race meetings at Newmarket, and have given every satisfaction in their work. Amongst them are good Hunters, well-matched Pairs, single harness Horses and Hacks. Catalogues forwarded.
They can be seen at Newmarket prior to sale. On view, Aldridge's, Nov. 6.
W. and S. FREEMAN.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c.—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000. Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1886.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISE TO THE WEST INDIES.
The Steamship "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, 3,000 h.p. will leave London on the 22nd November, for a 66 days' Cruise, visiting Madeira, Teneriffe, Barbadoes Trinidad, Grenada, St. Lucia, Martinique, St. Kitts, Santa Cruz, Jamaica, Cuba, Nassau, St. Michael's, Lisbon.
The "GARONNE" is fitted with Electric Light, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Baths, &c. First-class Cuisine.
Managers { F. Green & Co. / Anderson, Anderson, & Co. } Head Offices, Fenchurch-avenue, London.
For particulars apply to the latter firm, at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, E.C.; or to the West-end Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, London, S.W.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

CANCER WARDS at the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL, Mortimer-street, W.—The WEEKLY BOARD make an URGENT APPEAL for FUNDS in Aid of these Wards. There are 34 beds set apart for patients suffering from this terrible malady. They are admitted without letters of recommendation. Everything that human skill and kindness can suggest is provided, and sufferers are permitted to remain until relieved by art or released by death. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts & Co.
F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.—The long-continued prevalence of scarlet fever is causing a heavy strain on the resources of this Hospital. The benevolent are earnestly asked for HELP. Annual subscribers of a Guinea and upwards for more than a year, as well as donors of Ten Guineas or more in one sum, are Governors, and are entitled to free treatment for their domestic servants. Sufferers residing outside the metropolitan area can only be received into the Hospital from the families of Governors.
Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital, MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott, Dimsdale, & Co., 50, Cornhill.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM for IDIOTS.
Nearly 600 afflicted cases are receiving special care and education.
FUNDS urgently REQUIRED.
Special provision is made for the reception of Private Cases on payment.
H. GERARD HOARE, Esq., J.P., Treasurer.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Cheques or Postal Orders may be crossed Messrs. Hoare, Bankers, 37, Fleet-street, E.C.
Offices, 36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BOURNEMOUTH. — NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table-d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HÔTEL METROPOLE.—On the East Cliff, facing the sea, three minutes' from East Station. The largest, and most magnificent Hotel in Bournemouth. Now open to receive visitors. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.
GEORGE ALEXANDER, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 12s. to 15s. per day.
According to position of rooms selected.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Leas. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 789.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

PORT OROTAVA, Teneriffe.—HOTEL MARTIANEZ (late GRAND).—First-class, standing in a beautiful garden. Shady verandahs, large public and private rooms. Billiards, tennis. Good cooking, good wines, excellent spring water.
Manager, J. R. EGGER.

PORTRUSH (Giant's Causeway), co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL. Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner, from 6 to 8 p.m. French cuisine. Charges very moderate. The HOTEL is UNDER RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA. — ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL.—First and leading hotel in St. Leonards. Unequalled position, detached, faces sea, due south. Modern improvements, passenger lift, electric light in every room, handsomely furnished. Home comforts. Terms moderate. —Address, MANAGER.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA. — The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

TUNBRIDGE WELLS. — WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.

TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.
NO SUPPERS.
TELEPHONE No. 3,507.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn and Lincoln's Inn Fields. A high-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, happily situated, having all modern conveniences and a moderate tariff. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d., at separate tables.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Write for tariff.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.

(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).
Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

LARGEST, BEST APPOINTED, AND MOST COMFORTABLE HOTEL IN CHANNEL ISLES, AND THE FINEST SITUATION IN JERSEY.
Directly overlooking the Channel. South aspect. Magnificent Public Rooms, all facing sea. Swimming Bath, Hot and Cold Seawater Baths. Tennis Courts, &c. TABLE D'HÔTE DINNER at 7 p.m. (separate tables) "best in Jersey." Reduced Winter Terms on application.
Telegrams—"Grand, Jersey." SYDNEY ROGERS Manager & Secretary.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL, 180 Apartments, Patronised by H. R. H. the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, K.T. Extensive Structural Alterations and Decorative Repairs have been carried out and 30 NEW BEDROOMS ADDED SINCE OCTOBER, 1891. The entire system of drainage has been re-modelled and re-constructed, and the most improved sanitary appliances fitted to all Bath-rooms, &c. The Hotel stands in its own private gardens of 2½ acres, faces the sea, and is only five minutes' from the Harbour in the lower part of the town and Shorncliffe New West End Station, and is most convenient for Continental travellers.—For tariff charges, &c., please address the Proprietor.
N.B.—During the winter months visitors are received en pension at the rate of 12s. per day.

ALBANY HOTEL (ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

HOTEL CONTINENTAL,
CAIRO.

THIS FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL, newly built, and handsomely furnished, is situated in the finest and healthiest part of the Ismailieh quarter, close to the English and Catholic Churches. Perfect English Sanitary Arrangements. Two large Verandahs; Drawing and Ladies' Saloons; Reading, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms; and 24 Private Suites with separate staircase to each. Terms moderate. Excellent cuisine. Hydraulic Lifts.

Honoured by a prolonged stay of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge and H.I.H. Princess Victoria of Prussia.

Electric Light Throughout.

PROPRIETORS:
GEORGE NUNGOVICH, also Proprietor of the Hotel d'Angleterre.
LUIGI STEINSCHNEIDER, late Manager of Shepheard's Hotel.

HOTEL d'ANGLETERRE

This first-class hotel has just been rebuilt.
GEORGE NUNGOVICH, Proprietor.
A. AULICH, Manager.

EASTBOURNE.—CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the Grand Parade. Pleasant sea and land views. Patronised by many of the Royal families of Europe. Appreciated for its first-class appointments and homely comforts. Elegant public rooms, convenient family suites, &c. Passenger lift. Table d'hôte. Moderate charges.
G. LOWMAN, Manager.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS, by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools, is NOW OPEN at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket (next the Theatre.) Admission, including Catalogue 1s.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL. SHEPHERD'S WINTER EXHIBITION includes works by Sir J. Reynolds, T. Gainsborough, G. Romney, Constable, Crome, Stark, Vincent, Cotman, Moreland, Wilson, Shayer, Muller, Bristow, &c. Shepherd's Gallery, 27, King street, St. James's.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated. Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. WILSON BOWYER.

NIAGARA FALLS in WINTER.
Finest and Most Realistic Sight in London.
NIAGARA FALLS, St. James's Park Station.
DAILY, 1s. to 10 p.m. Admission 1s. Children 6d.
Tickets, including admission, all Dist. and Met. Ry. Stations.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station, in connection with all railways. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations. New Portrait Models of the late CH. GOUNOD, the late MARSHAL MAC MAHON, H.M. the EMPEROR of GERMANY, and H.M. the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA. Magnificent Group containing Portraits of T.R.H. the DUKE and DUCHESS of YORK. The ROYAL TIGER HUNT. Political Celebrities; Cabinet Ministers. Music all day. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open 9 till 10.

ELOCUTION, EXTEMPORE SPEAKING, ORATORY.—Professor HAYSACK, whose Pupils are among the first clergymen, doctors, barristers, solicitors, public personages, and nobility, GIVES INSTRUCTION. Voice strengthened, defects corrected.—70, Talbot-road, Bayswater.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., In all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

HOTELS.

ILFRACOMBE.

Warmest Sea-side Winter Resort in England.

ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. The principal Hotel in Ilfracombe.

First-class return tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. Railway, from 1st November to 14th March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance at the ILFRACOMBE HOTEL, £5 5s. each. Available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Ask for Hotel Tickets, available by all trains.

MADEIRA.—REID'S HOTELS, Santa Clara, Miles's Carmo Hortas, New Hotel. First-class, in finest situations. Large gardens. Tennis courts. Billiards. Sea bathing. Modern sanitation. All steamers met. Pamphlet free.—PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, London, E.C.

OATLANDS PARK HOTEL, Walton-on-Thames, 17 miles from London (Waterloo Station)—Most comfortable and homely winter residence, warmed throughout. South aspect. Boarding terms, 10s. 6d. to 12s. per day. Capital stabling.—Postal address, Weybridge.

WHERE TO SPEND THE WINTER.

HEALTH and PLEASURE RESORT.—GRAND HOTEL BELVEDERE, Davos Platz, Switzerland, 5,200 feet above sea-level. Drainage (latest sanitary inventions) just completed by well-known firm, George Kent, Chelsea, London, and his English workmen. Indoor and outdoor amusements. Assembly-Hall. Perfectly appointed Stage. Band, Skating, Tobogganing, Curling, Snow-Shoeing, Sleighing, &c. Only thirty hours' from London. Moderate Prices.—For particulars apply H. MOSER, Manager.

THE RUNNACLEAVE, ILFRACOMBE.—Highest average Winter Temperature in England. South aspect. 120 Beautifully-appointed rooms, thoroughly warmed by hot-water apparatus; theatre in constant use; yacht, tennis, billiards, photographic dark room, and indoor skating rink free of charge. Moderate tariff.

BOURNEMOUTH.—MANOR ROAD.—ONE or TWO SUITES of ROOMS TO BE LET privately in a well-appointed house, standing in its own grounds among the pines, with good sea view. Electric light. Stabling. Sitting Rooms from Three Guineas, and Bedrooms from a Guinea-and-a-half per week, inclusive terms.—Address, DUNCAIRN, Manor-road, Bournemouth.

AMUSEMENTS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE ROYAL. Sole Lessee and Manager, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS. Every Evening, at 7.30, A LIFE OF PLEASURE by Sir Augustus Harris and Henry Pettitt. For full particulars see Daily Papers. Box-office open from 10 a.m., all day.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Mr TREE, sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, Henry Arthur Jones' New Play,
THE TEMPTER
Mr. Tree, Messrs. Fred Terry, F. Everill, Ender Mellish, O. W. Ansell, Chas. Allan, Holman Clark, Revelle, Lewis Waller, Fulton, Cowie, &c., Miss Julia Neilson, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Mrs. E. H. Brooke, and Mrs. Tree.
MATINÉE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.15.
Seats may now be booked two months in advance. Box-office (Mr. Leverton) open daily 10 till 5.—HAYMARKET THEATRE.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8, an entirely New Burlesque, in Three Acts, entitled DON JUAN, by James T. Tanner. Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Music by Meyer Lutz. With full Gaiety Company, including Miss Millie Hilton, Miss Cissie Loftus, Miss Louise Montague, Miss Maria Davis, Miss Topsy Linden, Miss Katie Seymour, and Miss Sylvia Grey. Mr. Edmund Payne, Mr. George Mudie, Mr. Willie Warde, Mr. E. W. Royce, and Mr. Arthur Roberts.—Box-office open 10 to 6 daily. Doors open 7.40.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers. A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, B. Harding, J. Carter, H. Russell, and Arthur Williams; Mesdames Mary Rorke, Alma Stanley, and Agnes Thomas.—Box-office 10 to 6. Doors open at 7.30.

GARRICK THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. JOHN HARE.—This Theatre will Re-open To-morrow, THURSDAY, November 2, with DIPLOMACY. Doors open 7.30, commence at 8 p.m. Box-office (Mr. E. Candler) open daily 10 to 5.—Acting Manager, Mr. C. G. COMPTON.

COURT THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—Every Evening, at 9, a Three Act Farce, entitled THE OTHER FELLOW, by Fred Horner. Preceded at 8.15 by HIS LAST CHANCE. Doors open at 7.45. Box-office now open. Matinée Saturday Next, at 3 o'clock. Doors open 2.30.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE, Coventry-street, W. EVERY EVENING, at 8.30, an entirely New and Original Musical Comedy, words by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank, Music by Sydney Jones, entitled A GAIETY GIRL. Messrs. C. Hayden Coffin, Eric Lewis, Bradfield, Kaye, Bantock, D'Orsay, Porteous, Rimma, and Harry Monkhouse; Mmes. Decima Moore, Juliette Nesville, Cutler, Studholme, Pounds, Phelps, Maud Hobson, Massey, Selwick, Robinson, and Lottie Venne. Preceded at 7.45 by SIXES. Doors open 7.30. Box-office open 10 to 6. Prices as usual. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY (doors open 7.45), Every Evening (at 8.45), THE ORIENT EXPRESS, F. C. Burnand's New Comedy. Preceded, at 8.15, by THE RING OF POLYCRATES. Miss Ada Rehan, Mrs. Gilbert, Isabel Irving, James Lewis, Arthur Bourchier, George Clarke, Herbert Gresham, Allan Aynesworth, &c. "Fresh, original, and mirthful."—Globe. "Received with shouts of laughter."—Daily Graphic. "Not often has a piece started in a brisker or merrier fashion."Daily News. Matinées Saturday, at 2 (both Plays).—Box-office daily, 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries.

LYRIC THEATRE.—Mr. HORACE SEDGER, Sole Lessee and Manager.—LITTLE CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, by Geo. R. Sims and Cecil Raleigh, Music by Ivan Caryll. EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, with the following cast: Mr. E. J. Lonnen, Messrs Harry Parker, Furneaux Cook, Henry Wright, George Tate, Rowland Carse; Mesdames Maud Holland, Eva Moore, Alice Lethbridge, Adelaide Newton, Alice Gilbert, Maud Leicester, Eva Greville, and Miss May Yohé. Increased Orchestra and Chorus, conducted by the Composer. Doors open 7.45. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.30.

TOOLE'S THEATRE.—J. K. LAING'S SEASON.—On Monday Next, November 6, will be produced a Farcical Comedy, by the late Fred Leslie and Arthur Shirley, entitled MRS. OTHELLO. Miss Fanny Brough, Mr. Charles Glenney, Miss Cicely Richards, Mr. Julian Cross, &c.—Seats at all Libraries. Box-office now open.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.15, MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine, Templar Saxe, and Charles Danby; Misses Jennie McNulty, Agnes Hewitt, Maggie Roberts, and Lettie Lind. Preceded, at 7.45, by Rex Harley, the inimitable Mimic of Popular Actors. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.30.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.45, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled FIDELIA. At 10.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Two GRAND BALLETS.—At 8, KATRINA, and at 10, THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. Grand Varieties. The new entrance from Leicester-street is now open. Doors open at 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.

PALACE THEATRE.—SCARAMOUCHE, Pantomime Ballet, at 10.40,—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Albert Chevalier, Fannie Leslie, Lucy Clarke, Brothers Griffiths, Alice Leamar, Harry Randall, Nellie Navette, Herbert Campbell, Billie Barlow; Brown, Newland, and Leclerq; Leo Stormont, Harry Pleon, Marie Tyler, Jennie Valmore, Ada Blanche, J. W. Rowley, Sam Redfern, Harry Freeman, Eugene Stratton, Charles Ross, Tom Bass, G. Robey, Fred Mason, Arthur Rigby, Sells and Young.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

TRELOAR'S SPECIAL PRICES FOR FOREIGN FLOOR RUGS AND BRITISH CARPETS.

FINE DECCAN RUGS, 8/9 each.
Average size about 6 ft. by 3 ft. 9 in.
Or Carriage Paid to any Railway Station in England, 9/6.

KURD RUGS, 5/9 each.
Average size, 5 ft. by 3 ft.
Or Carriage Paid to any Railway Station in England, 6/6.

KURDESTAN CARPETS,
Average size, 9 ft. by 4 ft. 6 in. 21/- each.
Carriage Paid to any Railway Station in England, 22/6.

TAPESTRY CARPET, 1/9 per yard.

BRUSSELS CARPET, 2/1 per yard.

WILTON AND AXMINSTER CARPETS.
REDUCED IN PRICE.

TRELOAR & SONS LUDGATE HILL LONDON, E.C.
Catalogues of Carpets and Coloured Drawings free on application.

You Want a Typewriter.

TRADE MARK.

REGISTERED.

Does it not strike you that a machine invented by one of the first mechanical geniuses of the day,
That in two years has obtained an unprecedented sale,
That has been adopted by one Emperor, one King, several Princes and Princesses, and 20,000 ordinary users,
That has obtained the highest awards wherever exhibited,
That has gained Five Gold Medals,
That has even found its way into the Vatican at Rome,
That has received hundreds of testimonials,
That has found profitable occupation for thousands of operators,
That has been adopted by the principal Railway Co.'s, Chief Engineering Firms, Technical and other Schools,
That is the easiest to learn, does the best work, and
Has no filthy ink ribbon,

Contractors to

Her Majesty's Government,
The Colonial Governments,
The Indian Government,
The French Government,
and others.

Is the Typewriter you Want?

THE YŌST IS ALL THIS AND MORE.

Full Particulars from—
YŌST TYPEWRITER COMPANY, Limited, 40, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.
BRANCH ADDRESSES: MANCHESTER: 3, Deansgate. BIRMINGHAM: 73, Temple-row. LIVERPOOL: 67A, Lord-street. GLASGOW: 112, St. Vincent-street. BELFAST: 9, Rosemary-street LEEDS: 21, New Station-street. PARIS: 36, Boulevard des Italiens.

£100 WORTH OF SOLID FUN FOR 1/-

"Funny Little Chaps."

Eight Separate 1s. TOYS in neat box, and all material complete, for One Shilling. Be first in the field to get this

CHRISTMAS NOVELTY.

Of all Toy and Fancy Goods Dealers, and of the Sole Makers,

THE J. L. YOUNG MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LIMITED,
67, 68, & 69, FORE STREET, LONDON, E.C.,
Post-free, 1s. 3d.

21/- 21/-

THE "CHELSEA DINNER SERVICE.

Groups of Flowers in Electric Blue on Ivory Ground.

21s

"Cottage Set, as pattern (50 pieces) . . . £1 1 0

Full Set for 12 persons (108 pieces) . . . £3 3 0

If for the country, 1s 3d. and 2s. 6d. extra for package.

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, AND TEA SERVICES.

ALFRED B. PEARCE,
39, Ludgate-hill, London.
Established 1796.

TO ENSURE THE GREATEST COMFORT
WEAR THE NEW PATENT

"EIDEX"

COMBINATION

By Royal Letters Patent.

FOR LADIES & CHILDREN.

No. 14016.

The demand for Combination Garments generally has considerably increased during the last few years, but the one weak point in this otherwise most sensible garment was the difficulty in securing an efficient wrap at the back.

This has now been overcome by means of an extra covering inside at the back only, which is an improvement of the utmost practical utility. Ladies will immediately apprehend and appreciate the greatly enhanced comfort to be obtained by wearing the "EIDEX" COMBINATION.

Prices: From 6/11 Pure Wool from 9/11 Ribbed do. from 5/6

NOTE.—The Dog's Head Trade Mark is Attached to Every Garment.

To be had of all Ladies' Outfitters, and Wholesale only of

STAPLEY & SMITH, London Wall, London, E.C.

CAMEO
CIGARETTES

A PHOTOGRAPH IN EVERY PACKET.

A SEPARATE MOUTHPIECE FOR EACH CIGARETTE.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

STATHAM'S WATERPROOFS.

Chesterfield Coat 21/-

Regulation (Cape all round) 30/-

CARRIAGE PAID.

Any size up to 52 inches long. Larger sizes, 1/- extra for every two inches.

Best make, thoroughly Waterproof, and adapted for any climate.

Book of Patterns of all kinds of Tweed, Cashmere, and other Waterproof Cloths post free for 6 stamps (returnable).

H. STATHAM & CO.,
11, CORPORATION STREET, MANCHESTER.

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.

BAHADUR

SCOTTADIE

115 & 115A REGENT STREET
LONDON W

For –
Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Maids.
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns.

Telegraphic Address—Scott Adie London

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

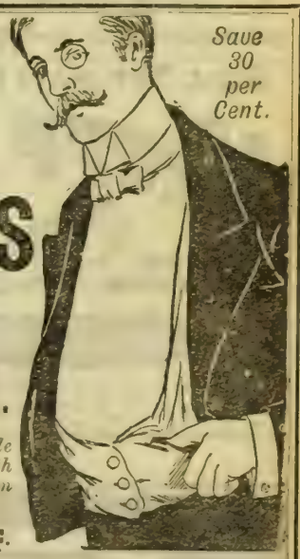
PURE IRISH

LINEN SHIRTS



Save 30 per Cent.

Tailor-Made
Direct from Ireland.

Made of the most durable Long Cloth, and fitted with the finest Linen Ireland can produce.

MADE TO MEASURE.

FIT AND STYLE GUARANTEED IN THE LATEST FASHION.

Half-a-dozen Pure Irish bespoke Shirts, securely packed, delivered free to any address in the Kingdom for 33/-, 39/-, or 45/-. Foreign Postage Extra.

Sample Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 5/6, 6/6, or 7/6.

Dress Shirts with fine Irish Linen Fittings, Six for 39/-, delivered free. A Sample Dress Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 6/6.

Old Shirts re-fitted with New Irish Linen Fronts, Cuffs, and Neck-bands for 2/3 and 2/9 each. Returned Carriage Free. Coloured Shirts, best quality. French Cambric 30/-, Oxford Cloth 33/- per half-dozen. Patterns Free. Four-fold Irish Linen Collars, best quality, 7/6 per dozen. General Catalogue post free.

For Measure, send size of Collar, Chest, and Height, or an old shirt.

TAAFFE & COLDWELL,
Army Shirt Tailors, 81, Grafton St., Dublin.

WOODS' PATENT GALVANISED STEEL WIRE MATTRESSES & BEDSTEADS.

Carriage Paid, and Liberal Cash Discount allowed.

Guaranteed for Five Years.

EXHIBITED CARRYING ONE TON

At LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and other EXHIBITIONS.

SHOW ROOMS:
128, BOLD ST., LIVERPOOL.

Catalogues and Prices free on application to the

LONGFORD WIRE, IRON & STEEL CO., LTD
WARRINGTON.

Please mention this Paper.

ESTABLISHED 1818.
Ten Prize Medals.

PETER F. HEERING'S
COPENHAGEN
CHERRY BRANDY.

Sold by all Wine Merchants, and at all Bars and Hotels.

THE WINDOW

Is the most important thing to be considered in the decoration of a house. The eye naturally turns to the opening by which light enters the room; and in the ideal home the view from that opening, and everything that serves to frame it, should be attractive. The most beautiful thing to be seen through a window is a garden of flowers, but nine-tenths of human habitations in civilised countries are so placed that their windows overlook scenes very different—sometimes dreary streets, stables, and chimney pots. Glacier Window Decoration will add beauty to the window, it is not costly, and no alteration of sashes is required. It is the only effective and reliable substitute for stained glass.

Hundreds of specimens can be seen, and all information can be had at

THE GLACIER DEPÔTS,
153, Piccadilly, W., and 56, Queen Victoria St., E.C.

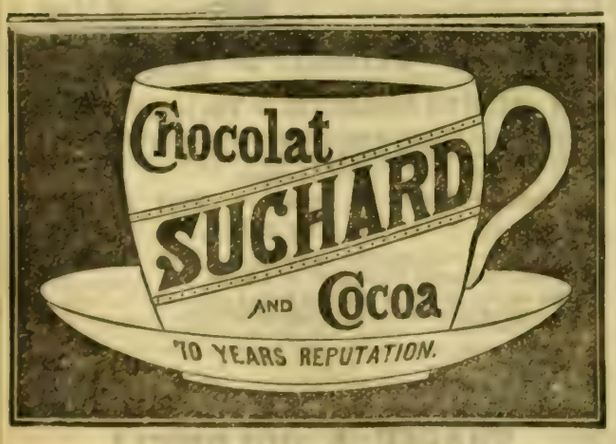
REAL GERMAN HOLLOW GROUND

KROPP RAZOR

NEVER REQUIRE GRINDING.

Black Handle .. 5/6 | A Pair, Ivory Handles, in Rus. Leather Case, 21/- | Duplex Strop 7/6
Ivory Handle .. 7/6 | Kropp's Strop Paste, 6d

From all Dealers. — Wholesale of COLNE, GARRETT, & CO., LONDON, W.



HIGHEST AWARD, CHICAGO EXHIBITION, 1893

AN ALWAYS ACCEPTABLE PRESENT
An Original Case of MÜLHENS'

CASE OF SIX BOTTLES 12/6

GENUINE NO. 4711 BRAND OF

EAU DE COLOGNE

THE PUREST & STRONGEST, YET MOST DELICATE EVER PRODUCED.

THE WORLD says: "Anyone desirous of getting a thoroughly genuine Cologne, cannot do better than send for a bottle of the '4711' Double Extract. Once having used it, repetition is a foregone conclusion."

Large selection of Choicest Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, &c. Quintuple Concentrated Extracts, made from Fresh Flowers gathered at Grasse.

Of All dealers in Perfumes, or at the LONDON BRANCH:
62, NEW BOND ST., W.
(ONE DOOR FROM BROOK STREET.)
Price Lists on application to Mr. C. REUTER, Manager. And at COLOGNE, NEW YORK, VIENNA, RIGA, and ODESSA.

JEWSBURY & BROWN'S

Oriental Tooth Paste

White, Sound Teeth, Healthy Gums to Old Age.

CAUTION.—The only genuine is JEWSBURY & BROWN'S.

Pots 1/6 and 2/6. All Chemists.

60 YEARS IN USE.

FOR

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS &c.

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

Cigars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder for Burning and Inhalation, Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. Of Chemists everywhere.

PUREST IN ENGLAND.

BOURNE TABLE WATERS

SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

R. M. MILLS & CO.,
BOURNE,
LINCOLNSHIRE.

Analysis, &c., on Application.

West-End Agent, D. WHEATLEY, 16A, North Audley-st., W.
City Agents, ALEX. D. RAE & CO. (late Hardy & Co.), Chemists, 23, Fenchurch-street, and 6, Railway-place, E.C.;
And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

SUN LIFE OFFICE

FOR BUSINESS FACILITIES

LARGE CASH BONUSES

AND SPEEDY SETTLEMENTS.

ESTD. 1810.

Apply for NEW PROSPECTUS at the Chief Office, 63, THREADNEEDLE STREET, E.C.

HARRIS C. L. SAUNDERS, General Manager.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to DVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than eir own principals.
Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the ock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.
List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers ay be obtained on application to
FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

ONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without eliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. rms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

MESSRS. H. HALFORD & CO., Stock and Share Brokers, 2, Royal Exchange Avenue, London, E.C. Daily CLOSING Price List d marked report on application. Speculative accounts opened on terms to ascertained. Special business in "Options" at CLOSE MARKET PRICES. o "DISTANCES."

UYERS and SELLERS of quoted and unquoted Commercial, Industrial, and Mining Securities should communicate with
THE COMMERCIAL STOCK and SHARE CORPORATION, Limited, Stock and Share Dealers, 10, Throgmorton-venue, London, E.C. Telegraphic Address: "UNQUOTED, LONDON." All lining Shares dealt in at close current quotations. Advances made on Stocks d Shares at moderate rates. Send for List, giving numerous quotations not blished by any other firm, post free.

REVERSIONS.—The Reversion Mortgage Trust purchase reversions and life incomes, or lend thereon at 4 per cent. per annum. o charge made unless business results.—Apply to Messrs. FELDMAN, 34, ew Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London. Solicitors' and Estate Agents' ttention particularly requested.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.

o. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
[ESTABLISHED 1867.]
ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,
From £30 to £5,000,
o Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their
NOTE OF HAND ALONE.
ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.
lso upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, ife Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without ortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so ng as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.
NO SURETIES REQUIRED.
Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
IRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

TOO FAT. Dr. GORDON'S Elegant Pills cure STOUTNESS, apidly and certainly. State height, weight, and send 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., or 11s. to DR. GORDON, 24, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?
PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, hronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derange-ent and biliousness, it has been pronounced by medical men of high authority s most efficacious.
"I use the Aerated Pitkeathly largely, and value it."—Dr. MATTHEWS UNCAN.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
ondon: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.
Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited,
No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.
General Accidents. | Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accident.
C. HARDING, Manager.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.
(FIRE.)

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.
EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.
Invested Funds, £16,000,000.
The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST COMPANY INSURING AGAINST
ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS
[AT HOME, OR IN THE STREETS, AT WORK, OR AT PLAY.]
THE RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY,
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. Secs. { W. D. MASSY. A. VIAN.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, £1,600,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, secretary.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.
JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

pears' soap

By Permission of the Proprietors of "PUNCH."

"Two years ago I used your Soap, since when I have used no other."

Punch, April 26th, 1884.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" DOLL SHOW AT THE ALBERT HALL.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

'T will be remembered that a new system of awarding the Prizes in connection with the TRUTH Doll Show was adopted last year. It had previously been the practice to give one series of Prizes only, and this plan had naturally led to some difficulty in classification, nd, in order to prevent any recurrence of this, it was decided to divide the Dolls, for the purpose of judging their relative merits, into ree distinct classes. This plan worked so satisfactorily that it is proposed to again adopt it this year. There will therefore, in nnection with the next Show, be three series of Prizes—the first for single Dolls, dressed with exceptional taste and skill and novelty design; the second for the more striking groups of Dolls; and the third for those larger collections of Dolls, containing fifty and wards, in the dressing of which any special qualities, such as neatness, variety, durability, &c., may have been exhibited. Thus ere will be three First Prizes awarded, probably of equal value, one for the best exhibit in each class, together with numerous other rizes of smaller value, the exact number and worth of which must necessarily depend on the size to which the Show attains. It is ill a little too early to state specifically of what these Prizes will consist. From the letters so far received, however, it would seem at intending competitors are, almost without exception, in favour of last year's plan being repeated; and, unless there should be an nexpected change in the tone of the further letters which may reach me, steps will be shortly taken to act on this almost unanimous nsensus of opinion. It may also be said that the TRUTH Brooches, of which upwards of 100 were distributed last year, proved very pular; and it will not be difficult, I think, to design for the coming Show a memento which will prove equally acceptable and propriate.

As readers of this journal will have seen, the coming Show is to be held at the Royal Albert Hall, at Kensington Gore; the thorities having most generously consented to again place this commodious building at the disposal of TRUTH. Seeing, then, hat a very large space will be available for exhibition, it is to be hoped that the readers of TRUTH, and their friends, will unite making a special effort to fill it worthily. Several thousands of Dolls have already been sent out, and all the very large ones ve been applied for, but there are still many hundreds remaining, which have to be dressed between this and the middle of cember. The Dolls are two sizes, medium and small, and parcels of them will be sent off at once to any ladies who may form me as to their wishes. There is practically no limit to the number of small Dolls which can be sent to one applicant.

THE HOME-MADE TOYS.

It will not be forgotten, it is hoped, that the Annual TRUTH Show consists of Home-made Toys, as well as of Home-dressed olls. The former have always been a most prominent and interesting feature at successive Exhibitions; and it is trusted that ere will be no falling off in this respect this year. The Home-made Toys may be of any kind—dolls' houses, model toys, ovable and mechanical toys, &c., &c. Scrap-books are also in great request at the Children's Hospitals. Prizes will be given, usual, for the best of the Home-made Toys.

It will be necessary, too, in order to complete the Christmas distribution on its usual lines to purchase about 25,000 new Toys; d donations in aid of the TRUTH Toy Fund for carrying out this object will be gratefully received. A large sum is needed; d, unfortunately, the balance from last year's account is a heavy debit one. Something more on this subject will be seen on the first ge of this number.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 765.—HOW TO INDUCE HUSBANDS TO ACCOMPANY THEIR WIVES TO GARDEN PARTIES, "AT HOMES," &c.

ALMAVIVA (real name and address will be given next week) £2 2 0

TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 766.

The Prize in this Competition will be divided between BLACKHEATHEN and ANDEVILLE.

PRIZE DEFINITIONS OF RUGBY AND ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

Rugby: More kicks than halfpence. Association: More halfpence than cks.—Blackheathen.

At Rugby Union, hands you use,
You use your head at t'other game;
But whatsoever code you choose
You'll find that it is tout le maim.
Mandeville.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 767.

In this Competition the Prize has been taken by BOBUS for the following ecdote of "Football":—

PRIZE ANECDOTE: FOOTBALL BY DIPPETY.

A few years since it was my good fortune to "assist" (in the French nse) at a football match between rival "townlands" in the West of Ireland. eedless to say, the rules were Rugby unwatered—indeed, a long way over- oof. The game went on fairly well for a while, when suddenly a terrific rsonal encounter took place between two players of opposite sides, causing simultaneous rush of spectators and performers to the scene of conflict. en the "reveree," as he was termed, made his way through the crowd, d exclaimed in a stentorian voice, "No crowdin'—make a ring. Let the ya foight it out in paice an' quietness. After that the game will be thumed. The dippeties is prisent." In due time the "incident was closed" one of the belligerents being rendered hors de combat, and the game was ished by "dippety." I then learned that, as few football matches could reasonably expected to conclude in that part of her Majesty's dominions thout an interruption of the kind referred to, it was the custom to have a serve of "deputies" at hand to continue the game, and this they call playin' it out by dippety."—Bobus.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 771.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week to the competitor who succeeds

IN ANSWERING MOST CORRECTLY THE FIRST THIRTY-SIX OF THE ORIGINAL TOPICAL CONUNDRUMS PRINTED BELOW.

The most correct answers will be deemed those which most nearly approach the ones originally sent in with the conundrums by their authors. But some marks will be allowed for any answers which may be considered to furnish appropriate replies to the given riddles. All lists of answers must reach me by the morning of Monday, November 13, at the latest.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

MOONLIGHTER.—I am unable to trace any answer of yours to Puzzle No. 764.

JACKO.—Such a Puzzle as you suggest was given in TRUTH some years ago Many thanks, however, for your note.

R. D.—You sent your answer to this office in error.

MOLLY.—With much pleasure.

O. P. Q.—You sent a charade instead of a riddle.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 768.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ORIGINAL TOPICAL CONUNDRUMS.

1. What is the greatest blow the country has ceived lately?—Cash.
2. What are the worst-paying crops for the rmers at this time of year?—Cash.
3. Why was Brazil ripe for revolution?—Cash.
4. What is the difference between Lobengula and e coal strike?—Cash.
5. What did the Home Rule Bill die of?—Albion.
6. Describe the difference between the latest Albion from Paris and the Home Rule Bill.—Parissima.
7. When is there no difference between going to the sea and going to Toulouse?—Infelix.
8. What is the difference between a collier and a cobra?—Infelix.
9. Why is the Home Secretary's berth like one's tongue?—Almaviva.
10. Why does Lobengula deserve the wrath of the gods?—Girouette.
11. What form of musical composition should the recent coal strike most resemble?—Alice J. Wood.
12. Why is the retention of the Irish Members in the House of Commons a danger to one of the Heavenly bodies?—Baritone.
13. Why is the prospect of Home Rule a cheering one for the Irish landlords?—Baritone.
14. Why will the Home Rule Bill extinguish Ireland?—Baritone.
15. Why is it a mistake to say Home Rule is dead?—Baritone.
16. What is the difference between the Irish people and their leaders?—Baritone.

17. What is the difference between Mr. Labouchere and Mr. Gladstone in regard to the House of Lords?—Baritone.

18. Why is Mr. Gladstone like a refractory pauper?—Baritone.

19. Why is a man opening oysters like the British attacking the Matabeles?—Ba Rone.

20. (By an Irishman.) What is the difference between our soldiers attack on the Matabeles and an oyster enter?—Baritone.

21. What is the most necessary qualification in order to be a skilful golfer?—Justinian.

22. What is the most appropriate advertisement for the Haymarket Theatre at the present time?—Idler.

23. How do we know that Father Ignatius ought not to be called Pugnacious, as suggested, for his behaviour at the Church Congress?—Nep.

24. In what way did Father Ignatius's conduct resemble a great battle?—Nep.

25. What new geometrical proposition would be most appropriate for the Chairman of the Church Congress to study?—Nep.

26. Why ought Lord Thring to have been consulted about Lord Lansdowne's successor?—Lunatic.

27. Why is it clear that Home Rule is not dead and buried?—Lunatic.

28. Why was the last division on Home Rule like Mr. Balfour's pince-nez?—Lunatic.

29. Why is Home Rule like a hawser?—Lunatic.

30. Why does a Hindoo object to the closure?—Lunatic.

31. When is a miner like a clock?—Lunatic.

32. Why are the Duke and Duchess of York likely to have fine weather when they please?—Isinglass.

33. What is the difference between Lord Salisbury and flirtation?—Isinglass.

34. Why is Oscar Wilde like a fashionable perfumer?—Isinglass.

35. In what different lights do M. Zola and any one of his books appear in England?—Cæsar's Corner.

36. What is the blow that falls most heavily on the public just now?—Cæsar's Corner.

37. Why did the Golf Club of St. Andrew's purchase the renowned links near that place?—Cæsar's Corner.

38. Give in a single word the scene and the cause of the South African shindy.—Rabelais.

39. What is the most egotistical piece recently placed on the London stage?—Rabelais.

40. Why does the suggestion respecting Birmingham at the Church Congress remind you of the fate of Sodom?—Esperanza.

41. Why should the visit of the Russian fleet to Toulon be less happy than that of the French fleet to Cronstadt?—Esperanza.

42. Why must the present action of Lobengula be considered very reprehensible?—Excelsior.

43. In what respect does the Lord Mayor Elect differ from one of his predecessors?—Excelsior.

44. Why is Mr. Gladstone like a man who is seldom warm over a fire?—Jo.

45. Why is the Chicago Exhibition like a lady's fashionable sleeve?—Jo.

46. Why is the Duke of Edinburgh like a P.P.C. or P.D.A. card?—Jo.

47. If the coal strikes increase during the winter how can we prove it will be warm for England? And in what state will the people thereof be?—Jo.

48. Why may we conclude that Members of Parliament are more amiable during their present vacation?—Jo.

49. What answer did Sambo make when asked to describe what was like a man with a beam in his eye?—Jo.

50. What is the remarkable point of resemblance between a boomerang and a Colonial Bishop?—J. McGrigor Allan.

51. What is the remarkable point of difference between a boomerang and a Colonial Bishop?—J. McGrigor Allan.

52. Why is the tail of the Queen's celebrated white collie like Comte de Lesseps?—Chiripa.

53. What nation will be most to blame if we are worsted in the war with Lobengula?—Chiripa.

54. Why are the prospects of our forces in Mashonaland like the Comedy Theatre?—Chiripa.

55. Why was it brave of the miners to strike?—Gyp.

56. Why are the Houses of Parliament like public houses?—Felixicus.

57. Why should Mrs. Alexander's latest work be longer remembered than that of Mrs. Jocelyn?—Felixicus.

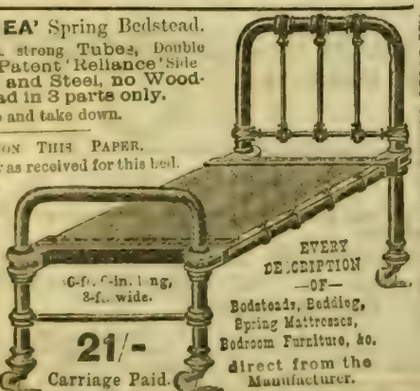
58. Why is "Sowing the Wind" under a stigma and the manager of the Comedy likely to benefit thereby?—Felixicus.

59. Why are the letters "A" and "C" like the World's Fair at Chicago?—Felixicus.

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES: Londonderry Wallsend, 38s.; Pittington Wallsend, 37s.; Primrose, 30s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 35s. per ton. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

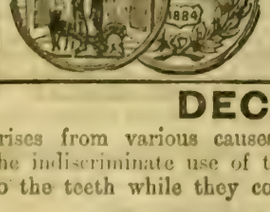
GRANT'S
MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY
FIRST-PRIZE MEDALS at LONDON, MELBOURNE, and CALCUTTA
Is the most delicious Liqueur in the World.
Have you ever tasted it?
It is very strengthening for the weak and aged, and most comforting in damp and chilly weather. Nice with lemonade or soda water.
Sold by Wine Merchants and at Restaurants.

The 'NEW GUINEA' Spring Bedstead.
Pillars 1-in. Sides 1¼-in. strong Tubes, Double Woven Wire Mattress, Patent 'Reliance' Side Fastenings. All Iron and Steel, no Wood-work. Bedstead in 3 parts only.
Easy to fix up and take down.
PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.
Orders executed same day as received for this bed.
To be had only direct from—
CHARLES RILEY,
Freeman-street,
BIRMINGHAM.
Illustrated Price Lists Post Free.



21/-
Carriage Paid.
EVERY DESCRIPTION —OF— Bedsteads, Bedding, Spring Mattresses, Bedroom Furniture, &c. direct from the Manufacturer.
ALL GOODS GUARANTEED FOR 5 YEARS.

THREE GOLD MEDALS
The Y & N Exquisite Model. Perfect Comfort. Guaranteed Wear.
Patent Diagonal Seam Corset
Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil; also in the New Sanitary Woollen Cloth. 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.
CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped "Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam No. 116," in oval on the lining.
Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.



HOT MINERAL BATHS OF BATH

Daily yield 507,600 gallons F. at 120
FOUNDED BY THE ROMANS IN THE 1ST CENTURY.
ΑΡΙΣΤΟΝ ΜΕΝ ΥΔΩΡ.
BATHERS DURING 1890—97,299.
These Baths are unrivalled in Europe for luxury and extent, and contain all that modern improvement can provide for the comfort and relief of the invalid or the enjoyment of those in health.
Reclining, Deep, and Swimming Baths. Thermal Vapour Baths, for Painful conditions of Joints, &c. Douche, Inhalation, Aspiration, Pulverisation, &c. and Ear, Eye, Throat, &c. The Aix les Bains Massage System and Doucheur and Doucheuses.
The Medical profession sends patients who suffer from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Dyspepsia, Eczema, and other skin affections.
Letters to the General Manager will receive every attention.

WESTWARD TO THE FAR EAST.
JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALASIA.—Varied, picturesque, and fastest route is via Vancouver.
CANADA AND UNITED STATES.—Through tickets to all points; luxurious dining cars, sleeping cars, mountain hotels.
ROUND THE WORLD.—By arrangement with the P. & O. Company, and all Atlantic Lines via Japan or Australia, price £125.
FREE FARMS. With Cash Bonus to Settlers in the North-West.—For berth and descriptive pamphlets, apply PASSENGER DEPARTMENT, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, King William-street, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 106 Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL
AN EXCELLENT MEDIUM MILD INDIAN CIGAR.
A most delightful weed. Sample four or five 1s., or free by return post 12 stamps.
BEWLAY'S 49, STRAND, W.C.; 74, STRAND (EAST INDIA HOUSE); & 143, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.
Tobacconist to the Royal Family. Estab. 1780. Descriptive Price List post free.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON
Very agreeable to take.
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,
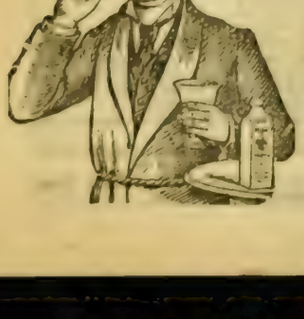
HÆMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.
Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.
E. GRILLON,
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.



DECAY OF THE TEETH
arises from various causes, but principally it may be attributed to early neglect or the indiscriminate use of tooth powders and pastes, which give a momentary whiteness to the teeth while they corrode the enamel. The timely use of that delicate aromatic tooth-wash,
FRAGRANT
SOZODONT
will speedily arrest the progress of decay, harden the gums, and impart a delightful fragrance to the breath. The formula of Sozodont includes only botanic ingredients, and it contains only the purest and most salutary of these.

"VINOLIA" SOAP

DOES NOT FLOAT,

BECAUSE IT CONTAINS NO AIR.

IT IS PURE SOAP ALONE—REFINED.

"VINOLIA" SOAP—Premier, 4d.; Floral, 6d.; Balsamic, 8d.; Toilet (Otto), 10d.; and Vestal, 2s. 6d.

"VINOLIA" CREAM (for Itching, Face Spots, &c.), 1s. 1½d., 1s. 9d., 3s. 6d., and 6s. per box.

"VINOLIA" POWDER (for Redness, Roughness, &c.), 1s., 1s. 9d., 3s. 6d., and 6s. per box, in White, Pink, and Cream Tints.

BLONDEAU et CIE. Ryland-road, London, N.W.

American Depot:—73-77, WATTS STREET, NEW YORK.

IN EVERY HOME.

LIPTON'S DELICIOUS TEAS

ave reached a pinnacle of success never before attained by any other teas in the world, and their increasing popularity IN EVERY HOME is the surest test of their appreciation by the public.

IF YOU WISH TO ENJOY A CUP OF TEA THAT EXCELS ALL OTHERS

Drink only Lipton's Teas.

THE MOST POPULAR OF THE AGE.

DIRECT FROM THE TEA GARDENS.

NO MIDDLEMEN'S PROFITS TO PAY.

NOTE THE PRICES.

RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT.

Inparalleled Success. 1/- and 1/4 per lb. Enormous Demand.

THE FINEST TEA THE WORLD CAN PRODUCE.

lo Higher Price. At 1/7 per lb. No Higher Price.

OVER ONE MILLION PACKETS SOLD WEEKLY IN GREAT BRITAIN ALONE.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Delivered carriage paid for an extra 1d. per lb. to any address in Great Britain on orders of 5 lbs. and upwards. Samples sent free on application.

LIPTON, Tea and Coffee Planter, CEYLON. The Largest Tea, Coffee, and Provision Dealer in the World.

le Proprietor of the following celebrated Tea and Coffee Estates in Ceylon:—Dambatenne, Laymastotte, Monerakande, Mahadambatenne, Mousakelle, Pooprassie, Hanagalla, and Gigranella, which cover Thousands of Acres of the best TEA and COFFEE LAND in CEYLON.

Ceylon Tea and Coffee Shipping Warehouses:—Maddema Mills, Cinnamon Gardens, Colombo. Ceylon Offices:—Upper Chatham-street, Colombo.

Indian Tea Shipping Warehouses and Export Stores:—Hare-street, Strand, Calcutta. Indian Offices:—Dalhousie-square, Calcutta.

ENERAL OFFICES: BATH STREET, CITY ROAD, LONDON, E.C. Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

CARPETS
CARPETS
CARPETS
UNDER our FEET
UNDER our FEET

MAPLE & CO
LIMITED
TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD
LONDON W
THE LARGEST AND MOST CONVENIENT
Furnishing Establishment
IN THE WORLD
ESTABLISHED FIFTY YEARS

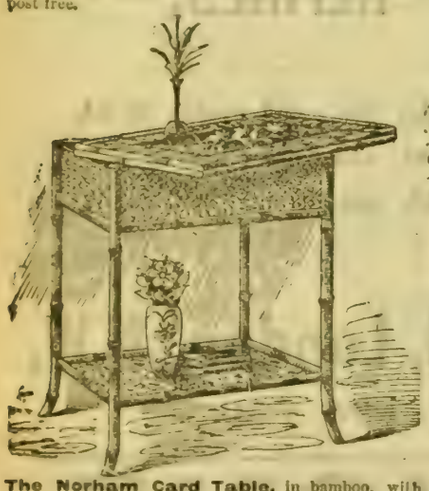
DECORATIONS
DECORATIONS
DECORATIONS
ABOUT OUR HOMES
ABOUT OUR HOMES

A handy little book, full of information about Carpets and Floor-Coverings of every description, post-free on application.

Containing much interesting matter about Decorations, Decorative Materials, and Sanitary Work, post-free on application.

SMOKING ROOM FURNITURE

MAPLE & CO. have always on show a very large selection of quaint, artistic, and inexpensive novelties in wicker, rush, and bamboo chairs, tables, bookcases, cabinets, writing tables, &c., suitable for smoking or bachelors' rooms, at most moderate prices. Catalogue of Wicker Furniture post free.



The Norham Card Table, in bamboo, with lac pierced top; lined cloth; well for cards or papers, and undertray; top measures 24 by 14 in.; if open, 28 by 24 in.; 30 in. high .. .. £1 9s. 6d.

THE BUXTON DRAWING ROOM SUITE, in Walnut or Mahogany, consisting of a comfortable couch, two easy, and six occasional chairs, well upholstered in fashionable tapestry or velvet, £13 15s.

EASY CHAIRS
LUXURIOUS EASY CHAIRS

MAPLE & CO. enjoy a world-wide celebrity for really comfortable Chairs, especially for luxuriously soft Easy Chairs, Club Chairs, and Lounges. These are made in Maple & Co.'s own factories from specially selected materials by first-class upholsterers. Customers can pass from the Showrooms to the factories and see the various processes of manufacture.

SCREENS ARTISTIC SCREENS

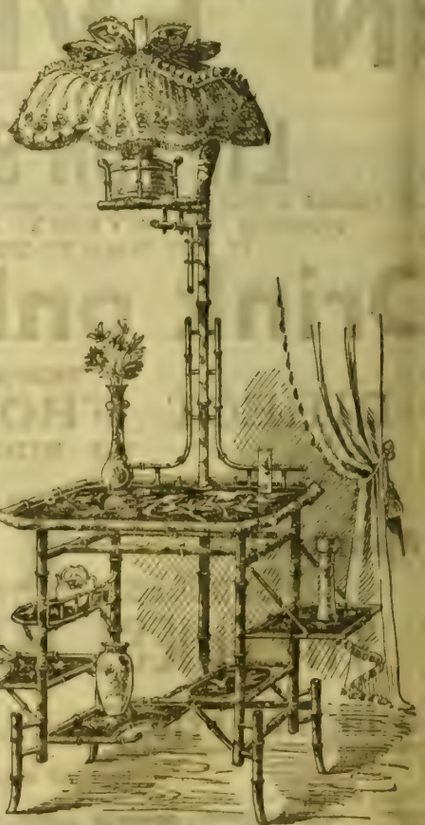
MAPLE & CO. have an immense assortment of Hand-painted and Embroidered Japanese Folding Screens, affording many novel and artistic effects quite different from the usual type, and at exceptionally moderate prices; also numerous new productions in richly-carved and gilt Louis Quinze and other varieties. The finest selection of screens in London. Catalogue of Screens post free.



TEN THOUSAND
BEDSTEADS
IN STOCK
From 9s 9d to 150 guineas

Illustrated Catalogues Post Free

BLACK and BRASS BEDSTEAD with PATENT DOUBLE-WOVEN WIRE SPRING MATTRESS complete

3ft 38s 3ft 6in 42s 4ft 49s 6d 4ft 6in 52s 6d

THE MUTSU TABLE LAMP, forming a lady's writing or work table, with lamp combined. The table is in strong bamboo with lacquered trays, with shelves and brackets for ornaments, papers, or books. The upper part is fitted with strong brass container, patent safety-action duplex burner, and chimney complete; the extreme height, 5 ft. 6 in. Table, lamp, and chimney, £2 9s. 6d.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOGERS, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 880. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, November 9, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

I AM very pleased to be able to announce that, in addition to lending his influence to secure the use of the Albert Hall for the Truth Toy Show, Duke Alfred of Coburg has very kindly forwarded from Germany a handsome box of toys as a contribution to the Show and the subsequent distribution.

Her Majesty is to leave Balmoral after luncheon on Friday week, the 17th, for Windsor Castle, where her Majesty will arrive about half-past eight on Saturday morning. The Royal train is to travel direct from Ballater to Windsor, and there will be no stoppage at Perth for dinner, as the Queen intends to dine in her day saloon.

The Prince and Princess of Wales have a party staying with them this week at Sandringham, where there will be a series of "shoots" during the winter. The next party is to be invited from the 27th until December 2.

The Queen caused Duke Alfred of Saxe-Coburg to be received as a Sovereign Prince when he arrived at Balmoral last Thursday, and Princess Beatrice and her husband were despatched to meet him at Ballater station, while the Royal tenants and estate servants assembled at the eastern entrance of the Balmoral domain and gave him a Highland welcome. Duke Alfred will in future take precedence of the Prince of Wales unless the Queen orders otherwise.

Duke Alfred is to stay in England until the 1st or 2nd of December, and he will spend a week at Sandringham with the Prince and Princess of Wales. He is to visit the Queen at Windsor at the end of the month, and will be present at the performance of "Faust" which is to take place at the Castle, in the Waterloo Chamber, on the 30th. The Duke will spend the week after next in the neighbourhood of Plymouth, and he is to shoot with Lord Mount-Edgcumbe at Mount Edgcumbe, with Lord Morley at Saltram, and with Mr. Cory at Langdon, and very likely with Lord St. Germans at Port Eliot.

The Duchess of Albany and her children, who have been residing at Claremont for several months, will go to Windsor Castle on the 20th on a visit to the Queen. The Duchess is going to Cannes about the middle of January, and she is to stay there until after Easter.

The Duke and Duchess of Teck, who have been entertaining the Duke and Duchess of York at Richmond, will probably be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James at West Dean Park, near Chichester, for a few days in the course of the winter, and they are also expected to visit Lord and Lady Ancaster, either at Grimsthorpe Castle, Lincolnshire, or at Normanton Park, Rutlandshire; and M. and Madame de Falbe at Luton Hoo Park, Bedfordshire.

Within three days of the death of Sir Christopher Teesdale, there were upwards of a hundred applicants for his place as Master of the Ceremonies, which is in the gift of the Queen, and worth about £700 a year. The Master of the Ceremonies is the introducer and conductor of the Diplomatic Corps, and he has to attend all Court functions at which the Ambassadors and Foreign Ministers are present. The duties of the post are certainly not onerous, and the Master has the assistance of a Deputy Master, and also of a Marshal of the Ceremonies, who draw nearly £500 a year, and whose places, being perfect sinecures, will certainly be abolished when next the Civil List comes to be resettled.

I hear that the Queen will probably appoint Colonel John Clerk to the vacant office of Master of the Ceremonies. Colonel Clerk is at present Treasurer of the Household of Princess Beatrice, and also an extra-Equerry to the Queen.

There was a paragraph in last week's Truth respecting the appointment of the son of Lady Seymour to be a Page of Honour to the Queen, in which some allusion was made to the widow of the late Master of the Ceremonies having had to evacuate the apartments in Kensington Palace in which he had resided, although he had spent £2,000 on them. A friend of the late Sir Francis Seymour tells me that this sum is in excess of what was expended by him on them, and that the Queen has granted a pension of £300 per annum to the widow during her lifetime from the Privy Purse to enable her to rent apartments herself. It is only right that this should be known. Sir Francis Seymour was an old servant of the Queen, and in view of this pension and the present appointment of the son, these services have, I think, been fully recognised by her Majesty.

We heard last year a good deal about the tame stags that furnish sport to her Majesty's Buckhounds and to the gentlemen of the neighbourhood of Windsor, who like to enjoy their "sport" at the cost of the taxpayer, regarding the chase as a little exhilarating exercise, combined with gentle and pleasant excitement. I see that a stag had its first day of pleasure last Thursday. This favoured animal swam the Thames twice, and finally leapt the iron railings of the Provost of Eton's lodge in his anxiety to make the most of his "constitutional." Most persons would suppose that the hunted animal did this because he was under the impression that only by running, swimming, and leaping the wall he would avoid being torn to pieces by the pursuing dogs. But then most persons are not Windsor "sportsmen."

Lord Houghton is having a quiet time at the Viceregal Lodge, which at this season is one of the most secluded, or it might even be said dreary, of official residences. Neither magnificence nor special comfort of the more homely kind are characteristics of the suburban residence of the Irish Viceroys. Like too many cooks with the broth, too many masters have not agreed with the Viceregal Lodge. Originally a ranger's lodge, it was bought by the Government in 1782 from Mr. Clements, its builder, and made the Viceroy's residence. Lord Hardwicke, the Duke of Richmond, and Lord Whitworth are amongst the Viceroys who built the principal additions to it, each according to his own taste, and with no regard for that of his predecessors.

For all its want of homely comfort, one Lord Lieutenant of comparatively recent times acquired such a home feeling after several years' residence in the Viceregal Lodge that he bequeathed to the family of a friend a pretty cottage with several acres, standing within the precincts of the Viceregal demesne. The most curious thing in connection with the matter—that is, if anything of the jobbing kind can cause surprise regarding Dublin Castle—is, that the various Governments allowed the bequest to stand for a great number of years.

Of late years Irish Under-Secretaries have increased the difficulties and peculiarities of the Castle Government of Ireland. The appointment is a permanent one, therefore promotion to another place is the only way of disposing of an Under-Secretary whose views are at variance with his Chief's. Following the precedent of the Conservatives with regard to Sir Robert Hamilton, Sir J. West-Ridgeway has been appointed Governor in the Isle of Man. It might seem a simpler and more sensible way of avoiding difficulties to make the Under-Secretary change with the Chief. Such an arrangement, however, would hardly be in accord with the traditions of Dublin Castle. There is a subtle irony, under the circumstances of the case, in making Sir J. West-Ridgeway Governor of an island which possesses Home Rule.

Large parties will be entertained next week for Derby races by the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire at Chatsworth, Lord and Lady Harrington at Elvaston Castle, Lord and Lady Burton at Rangemore, and by Mr. Gretton at Doveridge Hall, Lord Waterpark's place, which he has taken for a term.

Lord Iveagh, having given up all idea of purchasing the Savernake Estate, is now thinking, so I hear, of buying Wimpole Hall, Lord Hardwicke's well-known place in Cambridgeshire. Wimpole is a magnificent house, with fine gardens, and a very large and richly wooded park. The whole estate has been in the market for several years past.

Last week a gentleman was interred at Hendreville, in France, whose name was connected with a transaction which has become historical. He was the son of the Thistlewood of the Cato-street conspiracy, and was eighty-five years old. He had long resided in France, where he had lived through most of his life, quiet, liberal in his opinions, and respected. The grandson of the Thistlewood of the Cato-street conspiracy is a French citizen, and resides, I believe, in Paris.

Alexander Robertson, who was well known all over Scotland as "Dundonnachie," was a man of very great, but grievously misdirected, abilities. Of humble origin, Robertson flourished for several years as a "merchant" at Perth, and he was doing so well that he was in a fair way to make a fortune, when in 1857 a quarrel with the late Duke of Athole caused him to begin an agitation for the abolition of the Dunkeld Bridge tolls, which were payable to his Grace. Robertson was strongly supported in this movement, and the matter was brought before the House of Commons by the late Mr. Barker, and was ultimately carried to the Court of Sessions, with a result which fairly justified the agitation; for it turned out that "the great Dukes" (as they were called in Perthshire) had been monstrously over-paid. In the meantime, however, Robertson's business had dwindled away from neglect, and he was involved in heavy legal expenses, while, as a climax to his misfortunes, he was convicted of the offence which is known in Scotland as "murmuring a Judge" (i.e., contempt of Court), and was sentenced to a short term of imprisonment. This calamity unsettled his mind, and consummated his ruin. He spent the remainder of his life in a turbid whirlpool of legal proceedings and political or social agitations, and was constantly before the Scotch Courts. His great object was to get his conviction quashed.

Robertson, when in his prime, was an eloquent platform speaker and a forcible writer, and if he had never concerned himself with the Dunkeld Bridge grievance (or even if he had conducted the agitation with more discretion), he would probably have found his way into Parliament. He had the courage to profess and to advocate the most advanced Radical principles at a time when they were exceedingly unfashionable, and in a district where all the influence was on the Tory side, so that a really "Liberal" tradesman or farmer was then regarded as a social outcast.

For AMUSEMENTS, see page 1011.
For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 1010 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1009.

Mr. Charles Hope, whose death was announced last week, was a son of the fourth Earl of Hopetoun and a great uncle of the present Peer. He was Tory member for West Lothian for several years, resigning his seat in 1845, on being appointed by Sir Robert Peel to the Government of the Isle of Man, a post which he held with much popular acceptance for more than fifteen years. In 1885 Mr. Hope succeeded to the large estates of his brother-in-law, the last Earl of Selkirk, and he had since lived at St. Mary's Isle, the beautiful family place in Kirkcudbrightshire. His wife, Lady Isabella Hope (née Douglas) died last summer. Mr. Hope was a generous and considerate landlord, and took a hearty interest in the welfare of his tenants and neighbours.

The St. James's Gazette announces that, if the Tories had been in power, either the Duke of Leeds or Lord Hardwicke would have been appointed to the Lord Lieutenancy of Cambridgeshire. This is quite incorrect. The Duke of Leeds has a small estate in the county, but he has shut up his place, which is to be let for a term of years. Lord Hardwicke has only a nominal connection with Cambridgeshire, as for many years his family seat has been closed, and all the Yorke property is in the market. If the Tories had been in power the new Lord Lieutenant would have been either Lord Ellesmere or Mr. Adeane, of Babraham.

The Duke of Buccleuch is the object of much vituperation among the Unionist wirepullers at present, as he has managed to exasperate a number of his tenants in Roxburghshire, just at a time when his eldest son, Lord Dalkeith, is vigorously canvassing that county in the Tory interest. The inhabitants of Hawick are complaining that the water supply of their town is defective, and they propose to draw as much as is wanted from a neighbouring stream on the Buccleuch estate. The Town Council are willing to pay all the expenses of the new scheme, and they will even arrange to grant a free private supply for the Duke of Buccleuch, who, however, declares that he will not allow the water to be taken unless he is given two acres of land which belong to the town of Hawick, which is certainly a most exorbitant demand, and the local authorities are doing well to resist it. Then the leasehold tenants ("feuars") at Newcastleton are vigorously protesting against a variety of new fees which are being imposed upon them. The Duke of Buccleuch, having inherited the Scott, the Douglas (Queensberry), and the Montagu estates, is one of the largest and wealthiest landowners in Great Britain; but in his case certainly l'appetit vient en mangeant, for the effect of these vast possessions seems to be simply to make him the more greedy to increase his acres.

HÔTEL BURLINGTON, Boscombe, Bournemouth. Perfectly unique!!! Over 200 rooms, practically designed, sumptuously appointed, and fitted throughout with all the comforts of a well-arranged country mansion. Electric light. Passenger lift. Acres of matured grounds sloping to the Pier. Most moderate tariff, forwarded by Manager, or obtainable at the Burlington and Buckingham Palace Hotels, London. Bournemouth EAST Station.

The following advertisement from the Morning Post is amusing. No doubt there is a great opening in this direction for ladies of "great conversational powers"—"good appearance" is not so much wanted. I only hope it may fall to my lot to meet this gifted lady in some quarters which it is unnecessary to particularise:—

A lady, of good appearance and great conversational powers, moving in the best artistic and social circles, will be glad to give her assistance at parties.—Address, X. Y. Z., &c.

On Monday I received a long letter from Dr. Arthur Welsford, of Dover—why do so many long letters reach me on Monday?—in answer to what I said last week about patent medicines and advertising. It is a very interesting letter, and there is a good deal that I should like to add to it; but as the subject is far too big to deal with in the short time at my disposal, I must keep it for another week.

A chemist writes:—

Some weeks ago you wrote in TRUTH condemning the practice of counter prescribing by chemists. This week you excuse, if not advocate the use of "proprietary medicines," which is really prescribing by advertisement. Wherein has the latter the advantage?

I cannot accept the phrase "prescribing by advertisement." A chemist has precisely the same rights as an advertising proprietor of patent remedies. He can sell his own cough mixture, or his own liver pill to any customer who asks him for these articles. That is all the advertising Proprietor of similar articles does. By "prescribing" I understand that the customer or patient states his symptoms, while the prescriber diagnoses the complaint and provides the remedy. The mere selling an article to cure certain complaints is not "prescribing," so far as I understand it.

I have also received the following:—

SIR,—If you would kindly spare space for one more paragraph on "corpulency" in your paper TRUTH, I and several of my friends would very much like an answer to the following considerations, which you appear not to touch upon:—

1. Does the fact of reducing one's weight from, say, 14 st. to 12 st. by the abstention from starch, sugar, &c., as described in your articles, have any injurious effect upon one's health?

No.

2. If 12 st. is presumed by the person "operating" upon himself to be about his right weight, or, at all events, the weight he wishes to be—

(a) What will happen if he (when reduced from 14 st. to 12 st.) still continues the diet which has reduced him from 14 st. to 12st.?

If he eats fat, but no sugar, and very little starch, he will remain at 12 st.

(b) What will happen if, when reduced from 14 st. to 12 st., he then goes back to his original diet which kept him at 14 st., and threatened to make him even heavier?

He will go back to 14 st.

Dr. Andrew Wilson, editor of Health, sends me the following interesting letter respecting the cure of corpulence:—

I notice that my friend, Dr. Yorke Davies, writing in your last week's issue, says that where fat, starches, and sugars are eliminated from the dietary of the obese, reduction of weight is accomplished twice as quickly as when starch and sugar alone are omitted. Dr. Davies seems to think that fat increases or favours corpulence. I think he is wrong here, though I am writing not from personal experience so much as from the purely physiological standpoint. Fat is not only a necessary food (I can't see how any human being can exist without it), but has been found, when given in suitable proportions, to actually assist in the oxidation and using up of other foods, and, pari passu, to reduce corpulence. Ebstein's system of curing corpulence is founded upon this well-known power of fat as a "burner off" of what might prove to be food-excess or fat-excess. So that I regard any fat-cure or any dietary as certainly dangerous which omits fat from its list of elements, while the addition of fat to a dietary will often prevent obesity for the reason I have already given. No greater mistake is ever made by the public than in supposing that fat makes fat, or that the fat we eat is simply added as fat to our bodies. Fats are decomposed in the process of digestion, and their elements are re-combined in various and different ways to suit the wants of the bodily economy. Professor M. Foster says very aptly that nothing is more certain in the physiology of foods than that fat is formed in the body from that which is not fat. Starch and sugar will make fat; but so will beef and nitrogenous foods at large; or, to put it scientifically, proteids (that is, nitrogenous foods like albumen and the like) can be converted into fat under certain circumstances; and this brings us back to Dr. Davies' position quâ fat, which I think is founded on a misconception. Fat-reduction carried out minus fat in the food may be successful temporarily, only I hold that it is a dangerous proceeding, and one physiologically erroneous. By all means limit sugar and starch, but I advise no obese person to omit a certain proportion of fat from his food, because fat assists in the assimilation and usage-up of all other foods (and therefore favours reduction of body), and it is itself an essential constituent of the body, and as such is demanded in the daily food-supply of ordinary and obese persons alike.

BOURNEMOUTH.—"Royal Hotel." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Moderate charges. Tariff on application. Comparison invited. Electric light throughout. Only Hotel on "East Cliff."

I am glad to hear that Lord Lonsdale, the new Master of the Quorn Hunt, has strongly recommended the followers of his pack to buy all their provender from the farmers over whose land they ride. This admirable advice should be universally followed, and it may be hoped that other leading Masters will imitate Lord Lonsdale's excellent example. Whenever good provender can be obtained from the farmers of a hunt, then the members should make it a point of dealing with them.

The Chester Show of the Royal Agricultural Society has proved a great financial success, there being a clear surplus of nearly £2,400. This result is the more satisfactory because £800 more was given in prizes at Chester than at the Warwick Show last year.

It is evident that those old editions of the classics which formerly commanded such high prices are now quite out of favour with bibliophiles. The other day, at the sale of Mr. Moore's library, a copy of the Aldine first edition of Euripides (1503), which cost £11. 10s. at the Hamilton sale, realised only £4. Alsop's famous edition of Æsop's "Fabularum," Oxford (1698), brought considerably less than half the amount which it had cost only a few years ago. There was a similar fall in the value of the Cambridge (1768) edition of Demosthenes. All these books were fine copies, in admirable condition, and they all came out of the Beckford library.

"Lowell's Letters," discreetly edited by Mr. Charles Eliot Norton (Osgood, McIlvaine, & Co.), is the biography of the season, and the secret of its charm lies in its unaffected and even undress revelation of a man who could afford to show himself as he was absolutely. "I love above all other reading," he writes in one of them, "the early letters of men of genius. In that struggling, hoping, confident time the world has not slipped in with its odious consciousness, its vulgar claim of confidantship between them and their inspiration." But no more in the later than in the earlier letters of Lowell himself can you detect the fear or hope, or even the consciousness of a printer's devil waiting at his elbow while he wrote. But then such a man as Mr. Leslie Stephen pictures in the Appendix — as sympathetic and powerful a piece of portrait-painting as ever was done — could afford to tell the truth and shame the printer's devil. He could afford also to throw this pleasant stone at the septuagenarian reminiscences falling fast as snowflakes from the Press—that the Scythians must have slain and eaten their old people to escape their autobiographies, which they would find more indigestible than themselves—since his own later letters are even more charming in their childlikeness than his earlier outpourings to his confidants. He was a child to the last, as he confesses in that anecdote of himself which he forges for "The Universal Eavesdropper":—

> Passing along the Edgware-road with a friend two years ago, their eyes were attracted by a sign with this inscription, "Hospital for Incurable Children." Turning to his companion with that genial smile for which he is remarkable, Lowell said quietly, "There's where they'll send me one of these days."

Beware of taking a house next door to, or opposite to, an artist. Mr. Ussher has a school in the Finchley-road, and Mr. Briton Riviere, R.A., is his next-door neighbour. Mr. Ussher erected in his garden a modest board measuring 2 ft. 6 in. by 1 ft. 9 in., notifying the passer-by of the existence of his school. His artistic neighbour found this erection an intolerable blot on the landscape of Finchley-road, and addressed him thus:—

> Flaxley, 82, Finchley-road, N.W., October 11, 1893.
>
> Mr. Briton Riviere presents his compliments to the Master of the High School, and begs to protest against the large board that has been put up in the corner of the garden in front of his house.
>
> Some years ago, when the Eyre Estate allowed No. 97 to be used as a school, Mr. Riviere, as the neighbour most nearly affected, was asked to give his permission for the change, and, being assured that nothing detrimental to his property would be done, and that the school would be carried on like a private residence, he did so.
>
> The erection of this large and obtrusive board is in the most conspicuous position possible, just in front of his house, and, seen from his windows, entirely changes the quiet and unobtrusive manner in which the school has been worked for many years, and is likely to lower the value of his property, upon which he has spent largely. Mr. Riviere was on the point of writing to the Eyre Estate Manager, but thought it more neighbourly to apply in the first place to the Master himself. Had the board been placed down the hill at the end of the garden Mr. Riviere would have made no protest.

Mr. Ussher tried a conciliatory reply, but the R.A. was inexorable. The board, he writes in a further letter, "is most conspicuously silhouetted in the centre of the view from my windows," and he suggests that it should be moved round to the kitchen entry, or placed somewhere else "so as to be seen only edgeways from my windows." An offer to lower the board behind a post is of no avail, and the board is referred to the agent of the estate, who decides in favour of Mr. Riviere. Never can I sufficiently thank Providence that I am no artist. How can life be worth living to a man who finds his peace of mind destroyed because a board in the garden of a neighbour, measuring 2 ft. 6 in. by 1 ft. 9 in., is "conspicuously silhouetted" across one of his windows?

C.O.M. Whisky.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—Andrews & Co., Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

Silver Damascus Twist Bangle.—A quaint armlet of excellent Eastern design and finish. Its flexibility renders it perfectly safe, whilst it can be altered to suit any wrist, without losing shape. Price 10s. 6d.—Liberty & Co., Art Jewellers, Regent-street, W.

With reference to my remarks on the refusal of the London County Council to allow the Palace of Varieties a promenade and to permit liquor to be sold in the auditorium, while the Empire and the Alhambra have a full licence, I have received a number of communications endorsing my view, and insisting on the injustice of the whole thing. One correspondent opines that it is by no means clear that the decision of the Council represents the opinion of the full body of members, as there were many absentees, and protests against the Council punishing an absolutely innocent establishment for some sins, or supposed sins, that they imagine arise at similar places of entertainment, but concerning which not an atom of evidence has ever been brought forward.

My correspondent argues that the Council, by their action appear to say that the "Palace" is highly respectable as a consequence of the restrictions, but he reminds members of the Council of the following facts :—

At the Palace there are no bars on the auditorium level, but downstairs there are ample facilities for hole-and-corner drinking, assignations, and all the other dreadful things that a section of the County Council imagines are the be-all and end-all of a Variety Theatre. The Directors wished to remove some of the downstairs bars to the auditorium level, but the Council have refused permission, and by so doing have perpetuated a state of things more likely to lead to abuses than a "bar" in full sight of the public. And, further, are the members of the Council quite sure that in restricting the Palace licence they are not sowing the seed for a crop of evils? The place has to be filled—the Council by handicapping the Palace in competition with five immediate neighbours, compel the management to seek other attractions to those that their neighbours can offer their patrons; let us hope the attractions will always be wholesome.

The latter hope I certainly echo, and I really cannot blame the shareholders in the Palace Theatre Company if they express, as many do, the intention to oppose at the next licensing sessions the granting of licences to every West-end Music Hall and Variety Theatre except on the same terms as that of the "Palace." If the Council wish to level up it should be a levelling up all round

Why a woman is paid less than a man for the same work I never have discovered. What does a waiter get? I suppose above 10s. per week. But the waitresses in the Aërated Bread Company receive 8s. per week, rising to 10s., a cup of coffee, a slice of bread, and an apron; and for this they have to work each day twelve hours. The Company is paying its shareholders a dividend of 40 per cent., and the Board of Directors divides above £5,000 per annum amongst themselves. Last week, when a shareholder suggested that the waitresses should be a little better paid, he was howled down by his brother-shareholders. With this object-lesson before them, is it wonderful that the working-classes are realising that the division of profits between capital and labour is often rather too much to the advantage of the former? How is a girl to dress herself neatly and live on 8s. per week? Twelve hours per day spent in running about attending devourers of bread and drinkers of tea is far too long a day's work. And to this probably in most cases is added a long walk morning and evening, when coming and going to the bread-shop. It may be said that seamstresses get less. So much the worse for the seamstresses, and more shame to those who employ them. But this is no excuse for the hideous greed of the shareholders of the Aerated Bread Company, and for their sweating their employees, notwithstanding the huge profits that go into their own pockets.

I have received the following letter, together with the balance-sheet, of the London and Provincial Domestic Servants' Union, and a copy of the domestic servants' petition to Parliament. I am sure I wish the Union every prosperity, though I must say that I do not quite perceive the necessity for such a body, for I am under the impression that, as between themselves and their employers, the servants are now the masters of the situation. If, however, the Union would make it its business to supply capable servants of good character to all who want them, there is a great future before it. As for the petition, it asks Parliament to make it compulsory upon all employers to give their servants a true character in writing upon leaving their employ. Here again I was under the impression that this compulsion existed already. So are many other employers. It would be well that all doubt as to what the existing law is should be removed before this petition is presented :—

November 1, 1893.

DEAR SIR,—The humble position I occupy in life gives me the great privilege of reading your paper.

I write to inform you Marmaduke is altogether wrong in your current issue in stating that the latest addition to open-air lecturers in Hyde Park is an unemployed butler.

As a matter of fact, the meeting referred to is none other than one of those held twice and three times every Sunday by the Servants' Union through the summers of '92 and '93. The speakers on nearly every occasion are men and women who have held their present situations for some years, who have experience and a thorough knowledge of their subject.

These facts are well known to the Press generally, whose well-known (to us) mis-statements, ridicule, and contempt for us will have no effect on our future actions. I trouble you with balance-sheet for 1892, also duplicate copy of petition to Parliament, being numerously signed by servants, which I have no doubt you will hear more of in the near future. Thanking you in anticipation of acknowledging this correction in your next issue, I am, yours respectfully, A LOVER OF TRUTH.

The Rev. Arthur Shadwell, whose death was announced last week, was a son of the well-known Vice-Chancellor who three times refused a peerage, and who was as distinguished as an oarsman and a swimmer as he was for his knowledge of law. Mr. Shadwell was a renowned athlete both at Eton and at Oxford, and for several years coached the University boat, which he steered to victory in the famous seven-oared race at Henley in 1843. He was a thoroughly scientific coxswain. Mr. Shadwell was also a most accomplished classical scholar and an enthusiastic archæologist. During the last fourteen years of his life he held the living of Little Ilford, Essex, which is worth about £350 a year, and in the gift of Hertford College, Oxford.

The sudden and unexpected death of Mr. Haskins, of St. John's, has caused great and widespread sorrow at Cambridge. He was an admirable scholar and one of the most efficient lecturers in the University. Mr. Haskins was very popular, and he was a "strong" man, being saturated with shrewd common-sense, and having very decided and independent views of his own on University affairs, nor was he backward in expressing his opinions whenever he deemed it expedient to put himself forward Canon Johnson, who died the other day, was the son of Cowper's "Johnnie of Norfolk," and he possessed many of the poet's works in the original manuscript. He was beneficed in Norfolk for nearly fifty years, and was one of the most popular and influential ecclesiastics in the Diocese of Norwich.

A correspondent writes:—

It is rather amusing to those who know Ely to see the aged Precentor of the Cathedral, Mr. Dickson, posing as the censor of our Cathedral system. The Ely Canons, whatever may be thought of them as musicians, are all men of mark and ability, and have filled or are still filling posts which are no sinecures. The Dean has well earned his present leisure by his past work. On the other hand, the Minor Canons do little but perform the services, which are kept up at an annual expense of some £2,000, and on ordinary days usually draw a congregation of about half-a-dozen persons. The singing is very poor, that of the men especially, and there is a very general impression that there will be no improvement until Mr. Dickson allows himself to enter that retirement to which his years entitle him.

The Oxford Tories have been direfully defeated at the elections to the Hebdomadal Council, their most startling reverse being the failure of Canon Ince, the Regius Professor of Divinity, who lost the seat which he had held for about twenty-five years. The old school of rigid Tories, who for a long time carried all before them at Oxford are now quite out of favour in the University, and these elections are a pleasant and an encouraging surprise to all who support a liberal movement in education and enlightened and tolerant views on theological subjects.

A very strong feeling has been excited in North Warwickshire through the Bishop of Worcester having presented the Rev. Eric Farrar to the living of St. Thomas', Coventry. It is thought that one of the many curates who have been working hard for years in the diocese should have been selected for this preferment. Mr. Farrar has no claim whatever upon the diocese of Worcester, and his being pitchforked into one of the Bishop's livings is a flagrant piece of jobbery. This, in fact, has been as good as admitted, on the Bishop's own authority, in the Coventry Herald, which states that the Bishop desires it to be known that the appointment is "an acknowledgment of the debt he owes to Archdeacon Farrar" (Mr. Farrar's father) "as one of his chaplains, and of the help he received from him at the recent Church Congress and on other occasions"—a candid confession in all conscience. Mr. Farrar has been for some time one of the curates of St. Margaret's, Westminster, and if he deserves preferment he ought to have received it in the diocese of London, or from the Dean and Chapter of the Abbey.

The Bishop of Newcastle is to be the special preacher at St. Paul's Cathedral next Sunday evening.

The superfine villa folk who worship at St. James's, Croydon, are said to have been shocked into leaving the church, because their Vicar, denouncing the horrors of religious persecution in the "good old days," exclaimed in a burst of simple eloquence, "I say, damn those days!" Apparently these poor Church people have such a horror (possibly with good reason) of being damned in the future that they cannot bear the sound of the word, even as applied to the past. It is related of Bishop Phillpotts, of Exeter, that he was once present at a church where a mild-mannered cleric was reading the exhortation which warns unworthy communicants that they eat and drink their own damnation. The cleric toned the word down to "condemnation." The Bishop rose from his seat, and in stentorian tones ejaculated "Damnation!" and then sat down again. What would they have said to him at Croydon?

The Chaplain at Meerut sends me the following. As to the "grammatical antecedent of 'it,'" I do not feel qualified to speak dogmatically. That nine people out of ten, however, would have interpreted the prayer as I did, I feel no doubt. I would point out to the Chaplain the danger of offering up supplications which are so liable to be misunderstood:—

DEAR SIR,—You lately endorsed a correspondent's criticism of the wording of a prayer used at the dedication of an organ at the Garrison Church, Meerut. Allow me to give it in full:—

"O Lord, Who hast commanded us to offer unto Thee of Thine own gifts, according to the purpose of our hearts, and Who dost abundantly requite them from Thine eternal bounty: Accept the offering of this organ now made unto Thee by Thy servants, and grant that it may be stored up in Thine eternal treasures: Who livest and reignest with the Father and the Holy Spirit, ever one God, world without end. Amen."

You ask how can an organ be stored up in the "eternal treasures"? I would, however, point out that the grammatical antecedent of "it" (in the sentence referred to) is not the word "organ," but the phrase "the offering of this organ," a fact which entirely removes the material sense put upon the prayer by your informant.

The prayer is not original, but was used about a year ago at an organ-opening at a well-known English Church.—Yours faithfully,

Meerut, October 18, 1893. J. I. B. COCKIN.

It will probably be news to most of my readers—it was to me when my attention was the other day called to the fact—that the Queen is the Senior Prebendary Cursal of St. David's Cathedral. Her Majesty has never, to my knowledge, performed any ecclesiastical functions in the Cathedral, so it may be taken, I suppose, that the office is a sinecure. The Queen is, however, the titular Head of the Church of England, and the Church of Wales (so its defenders protest) is an integral portion of the Church of England. How then can the Queen, if Head of the Church, also hold a subordinate office in the Church? It is as though her Majesty were to be one of her own Ladies-in-Waiting, or the Colonel of a regiment one of his own non-commissioned officers. Out of respect for the Crown we ought, I think, to officially sever the Church of Wales from that of England, so that her Majesty may enjoy her Prebendary Cursalship without doing violence to the Constitution.

The Rev. Benjamin Gibbons, Vicar of Lower Mitton, Stourport, has managed to eclipse all displays of insolent officiousness on the part of the clergy which have hitherto come under my notice. It appears that a young woman of his parish loved a youth of the neighbourhood not wisely but too well. Both the youth and the damsel were minors. On discovering the state of affairs, the parents of the girl proposed to hush up the scandal. The Vicar seems to have come to them and pressed that a marriage should take place. The parents strenuously objected. The father says he considered that the youth was not in a position to marry, and that nothing but misery to both parties could result from marriage under such circumstances. Whether he was wise or not, does not matter; he clearly had the right to decide. On learning his decision, the Reverend Gibbons proceeded on his own responsibility to publish the banns of the parties at the Sunday morning service. He says that he desired to "assist" the father. The truth obviously is that he hoped to force his hand by making public the scandal, which the father desired to hush up.

PFUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. PFUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

MAJOR HOWE & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

No one will deny, I imagine, that this was a cruel and mischievous, as well as an arrogant and impudent thing to do. The law apparently provides no remedy. The Bishop, when appealed to, defends the mischief-making cleric, under the plea that he acted for the best, and backs him up by pressing the father to allow the marriage, now that the facts have been made public. "Counsel's opinion" has been taken by the father, and the response is that proceedings may be taken under the Clergy Discipline Act, but that the Bishop's consent is necessary — which, under the circumstances, seems to mean that no proceedings can be taken at all. The truth evidently is that the framers of our laws, both spiritual and temporal, never foresaw the possibility of a clergyman taking upon himself to publish banns in order to gain his own clerical ends. Now that the possibility has been demonstrated, this defect in the law should be amended. It must not be assumed that there is any length of officious folly to which some clergymen will not go.

The Rev. J. W. Rhodes, Vicar of St. Chad's, Everton, Liverpool, has brought himself into unenviable notoriety by a correspondence in which he has just engaged with Dr. Whitford, President of the Everton Liberal Association. It appears that this Tory parson accepted two guineas for the hire of the St. Chad's schoolroom for a Liberal meeting. When the time for the meeting arrived, however, the door was locked, and the room in darkness. After considerable delay the caretaker was discovered, and although it had been understood that the charge of two guineas was inclusive, he was paid a gratuity of five shillings which he demanded. Even then it was not without some difficulty that the man was induced to light up the room. Mr. Rhodes now admits that he exacted the "high fee" of two guineas because he disapproved of the use of the room by "Radical Church Robbers," and that he advised the caretaker to secure his gratuity before allowing the "robbers" to hold their meeting:

> I told the caretaker a high fee had been charged (writes the reverend gentleman), and I feared an attempt would be made to escape without payment of his fee, and that he must secure it himself, for I was almost certain that would be robbery of God's people of the endowments left to them; perhaps overnight would try a gentle experiment on a church caretaker.

No doubt the Vicar of St. Chad's lays the flattering unction to his soul that he has advanced the cause of the Church and Toryism by this fatuous exhibition of meanness and spitefulness (to say nothing of rapacity) towards political opponents. Such are the aberrations of the Tory-clerical mind.

A Duke to the Rescue!

[Nothing could well be more comical than the Duke of Portland's inimitable declaration at Troon that attacks upon the Church of Scotland are regarded with disfavour "by the Duchess and myself."—Daily News.]

O Church-disestablishers, cease
  Your attacks on the Kirk's domination!
O pestilent Radicals, peace!
  Enough of your low agitation!
Accursèd be every one who
  This topic prohibited touches,
For such the disfavour will rue
  Of their Graces the Duke and the Duchess!

It is true the State Kirk has been found
  A bone of persistent dissension;
That Scotchmen on all sides abound
  Who yearn for an Act's intervention;
Nay, even the Kirk might—who knows?—
  Be glad to throw down its State crutches,
But hush!—who would dare to oppose
  Their Graces the Duke and the Duchess?

All Scotland, of course, will be dumb,
  Disestablishment lose its sweet savour;
Dr. Cameron also succumb
  At this hint of the Ducal disfavour.
'Gainst most things he's ready to fight,
  But this altogether too much is—
To do e'en the slightest despite
  To the wish of a Duke and a Duchess!

Or perhaps—for there's something in man
  That resents all attempts at dictation—
The Duke's and the Duchess's ban
  Will but hasten the wished consummation.
And the Church up in Scotland will cease
  To be held in the State's choking clutches,
All the sooner because its release
  Is opposed by the Duke and the Duchess!

In the Stratford-on-Avon Parish Magazine an answer is given to the question recently asked in TRUTH, Why 7s. 6d. should be charged for the use of the church bier without a pall, while 3s. is charged for it with a pall? It is said that the question was asked "in a somewhat irregular manner, and through a singular medium." It seems to me that the question asked in TRUTH should have been answered in TRUTH, and that it is the answer which is given in an irregular manner, and through a singular medium. However, the answer is satisfactory enough. The Vicar explains that it is the poorer people who generally require the bier and the pall, those who are better off preferring to decorate the coffin with flowers. The differentiation of the tariff is, therefore, for the benefit of the poor. It is a pity that previous references to Stratford Church and parish in TRUTH cannot be answered so easily and so satisfactorily.

EIDERDON PURE WOOLLEN FABRICS, in various weights and colourings, for Dressing Gowns, Smoking Jackets, Ladies' three-quarter Capes, Dresses, and Underskirts; also the new Ballylareen Duffle Frieze for Ulster Coats, Inverness Capes, and all descriptions of Winter Wraps where "warmth without weight" is the desideratum. The Eiderdon Rug. Samples of Boyd & Company's productions, with "The Book of the Ulster," illustrated, and forms for self-measurement, may be obtained, post free, on application to the Sole Proprietors and Makers, BOYD & CO., 77, Royal-avenue, Belfast.

"VERREY'S" RESTAURANT, Regent-street, corner of Hanover-street. The oldest and most select French Restaurant in London. Ladies' luncheons at moderate prices a specialty. Dinners à la carte.

Intense indignation is being expressed at Leeds at an attempt by the persecution agency styling itself the "Lord's Day Observance Society," to stop, by means of its threatening letters, the lectures delivered under the auspices of the Leeds Sunday Lecture Society. I entirely share the sentiments expressed on this subject, and it is to me an incomprehensible thing that Englishmen who desire to spend their Sundays in the manner which commends itself to their religious and conscientious views, should submit to be threatened and terrorised by a small knot of fanatical busybodies, armed with a musty statute which no modern Parliament would look at. It is absurd to speak of freedom of conscience as existing in this country so long as it is open to A to get B, C, D . . . Z fined and imprisoned for doing something on Sunday which does not square with A's religious views.

At the same time, the Leeds people should remember that it is easy enough to checkmate these pestilent bigots. Plenty of Sunday entertainments take place in London under their very noses. Their Act only applies where money is taken at the doors. All that is necessary, therefore, is to make admission free and charge for seats and programmes.

Apropos to my remark on "ladies" in the Bible, a correspondent writes:—

> In the fifth chapter of Judges women are called ladies. I believe, however, that it is the only place in the Bible in which this is the case.

The passage referred to is the Song of Deborah, and the "ladies" are the "wise ladies" of the mother of Sisera. My correspondent is wrong, however, as to these being the only "ladies" in the Bible. In the Book of Esther (i. 18), Memucan, discoursing on the effects of Queen Vashti's contumacy towards her lord and master, anticipates that all "the ladies of Persia and Media" will be following her example. The word "lady" is also put by the translator into the mouth of the Prophet Isaiah, and the Apostle John (in his Second Epistle). But so far as I know, there is no mention of a gentleman in the Bible.

I have been asked to mention that the Strolling Players will give a performance of Mr. Pinero's "Dandy Dick" at St. George's Hall, on Thursday next (November 16) in aid of the funds of the training-ship Cornwall. Further particulars and tickets may be obtained of the Secretary of the training-ship, Mr. Walter Millachip, 6, Mincing-lane.

The Irish Distressed Ladies' Fund, the object of which, as stated by the Committee, is "the relief of ladies suffering through the non-payment of rent and land depression throughout Ireland," so far as I know fulfils the purpose of its existence in an unexceptionable manner. There is no doubt a good deal of distress owing to the causes specified, and I should be the last to grudge the aged and infirm ladies incapable of assisting themselves, who are referred to in the Committee's Report such help as the fund can give them.

There is one point, however, as to which I should be glad of a little more enlightenment than I can gather from the Report. In connection with the fund there is a Work Depot, which appears to be doing a considerable business in underlinen, hosiery, &c., as well as in "art and fancy work," in which ecclesiastical millinery figures prominently. Part of the Duchess of Fife's trousseau was, we are told, made by this Work Depot, and it is further stated that "the baby linen has been honoured by the constant patronage of the Princess Henry of Battenberg." The announcement of these interesting facts is, of course, a perfectly legitimate manner of inviting custom. In addition to this, however, orders are "earnestly solicited" on the ground that the clothing, &c., is "all made by poor ladies, in many cases dependant (sic) upon this work for their daily bread." Now, what I should like to know is the scale of pay received by the ladies whose poverty is thus used for touting purposes? As it is implied that it is chiefly on their account that orders are solicited, I should like to have the exact extent to which they are likely to be benefited by such orders made clear.

I happen to know of one case in which a lady almost entirely "dependent upon this work for her daily bread," received £1 for making a highly ornate priestly vestment, which it took her five weeks of hard work (seven hours a day) to complete. She calculated that she was paid at the rate of 1¼d. an hour. The work was of a kind requiring the greatest skill, besides being very fatiguing, and so well was it executed that it received the first prize at an Exhibition in Dublin, where the vestment was offered for sale for £30. As an encouragement, I suppose, of artistic workmanship, the Depot subsequently increased their rate of pay in the case of this lady to the comparatively liberal figure of 4d. per hour. If this is a fair specimen of the way in which the ladies in whose name the public is appealed to for orders are dealt with by the promoters of the Work Depot, that charitable body must be congratulated on its good fortune in having escaped the particular attention of the Sweating Committee. I see it is stated in the report that the amount paid to "lady workers" during the year 1891 (no more recent information seems to be vouchsafed) was £1,000. At the above rates of pay this must represent a margin of profit that would satisfy the most bloated capitalist.

It will surprise no one to hear that the Rev. Samuel Cotton, of Carogh Orphanage fame, regards the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children as a pernicious

WINTER VISITORS TO BOURNEMOUTH will find "The Imperial"—situated near the sea, amongst the pines, on the favourite East Cliff—one of the most complete residential establishments in the United Kingdom. Healthful position, luxuriously furnished, with appointments and cuisine of the highest order. Moderate tariff.—Apply, Manager.—W. H. DORÉ, Prop.

In preparation for the cold season, ladies and gentlemen should visit Ulster House, Conduit-st., W., where their orders for every kind of garment will have prompt and careful attention.

institution. Seeing that it was this Society which exposed the abominable treatment of the Carogh orphans, and succeeded in getting the Rev. Samuel six months' imprisonment and a fine of £400, no one will grudge him the mild satisfaction of hating the Society with all his heart. That is no reason, however, why Mr. Cotton should bother me (as he has just done) with charges against the officers of the Society. Still less does it justify him in attempting to manufacture a charge against them of negligence out of a case in which they were the prosecutors, or in trumping up against the Society an opinion expressed by the Bishop of Limerick a year and a half ago. It seems that Dr. Dwyer had the courage to assert that there was no need for such a Society in Limerick, and Mr. Cotton desires to extend this sentiment to the whole of Ireland. A more inopportune time for so doing could hardly be found than the present, when the memory of the Phelan case is still fresh all over the United Kingdom. The Phelans, it will be remembered, were convicted in England, after having been hunted out of Ireland by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

I should like to hear from the Society for the Protection of Birds, which I commended the other day to the notice of my lady readers, why the only birds' feathers the wearing of which they countenance are the plumes of the ostrich. A lady tells me that she has declined an invitation to join the Society because it does not protect the ostrich, and in justification of her decision she gives the following account of the plucking of ostriches on a feather farm. If the facts are accurate, I think that they fully prove her case :—

> The good ladies who belong to this society, and who condemn as "cruel" the simple mercy of death, should go to the ostrich farm near Cairo—I believe the largest there is—and hear from those in charge a description of the annual feather-gathering. The first year a bird is plucked, he can be easily caught and thrown by one man. The feathers are then wrenched, bleeding, from his tortured body, after which the marabout and down is torn off. After one experience the birds can only be caught with the utmost difficulty, and it takes six or eight men to throw an old bird. "It is very hard work, plucking," we are told, "the feathers are bedded so tight in the flesh." I asked if it would not do as well to clip off the feathers close, and was told that dealers will only buy those with the perfect quill. All the undressed feathers offered for sale on the farm had blood on the quills, and we were told that when the annual plucking takes place the shrieks of the birds can be heard to a great distance in the still desert air.
>
> If you can induce your lady readers to "bar" ostrich feathers, even if they indulge in a "wing" manufactured from the discarded plumage of a well-fed chicken, you will indeed add another to the many good turns you have already done to the cause of humanity.

I have received the following amounts towards this year's Toy Fund for providing the poor children in the London Hospitals, Workhouses, Workhouse Schools, and Infirmaries with toys at Christmas :—

J. P., £2; Isabella Arlosh, £5; A. L., £1. 1s.; L. P., £2; Marie Joshua, £2. 2s.; B. L. Ronald, £2. 2s.; J. P. M., £2. 2s.; P. B., £2. 2s.; C. R. B. £5. 5s.; C. G. N., £2. 2s.; James Blyth, £5. 5s.; Norwood, 10s.; C. M. Y., 10s.; B., £5; Hereward, 2s. 6d.; M. W., £1. 1s.; L. O. S., £10. 10s.

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one-half West-end price.—PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion. Perfect fit guaranteed. Caution, the only address, other people are trading on our name.

A "Veteran" writes to me from the other side of the world to endorse the suggestion made in the article "Fuzzy-Wuzzy vice Atkins," in TRUTH of August 31. It would be possible, he considers, to garrison with Battalions of "Fuzzy-Wuzzies" Mauritius, Ceylon, Singapore, and Hong-Kong, and thus materially diminish the strain on the British Army, and effect a considerable saving of money, without any risk—provided always that British gunners were left to support the black troops. He proposes that three European officers should be allowed to each Company, and believes that such a force, suitably clothed, accoutred, and housed would be of great value to the Empire. So do I. I may add that now is the time to form it. The power of the Matabele, of which we have heard so much, has been broken. Lo Ben's warriors have got to be disposed of somehow. Instead of exterminating them, or driving them over the Zambesi, why not offer them the Queen's shilling?

The command of the Southern District, after having been vacant for a month, during which time it has been offered to nearly every eligible officer on the list, has at last been accepted by General Davis, who has really obtained the post because he is so fortunate as to possess considerable private means, which are indispensable. It is not satisfactory that a very important command should be hawked about in this sort of fashion, and left unfilled for a month simply because no officer could be induced to accept it.

During the winter months the Royal Engineers employed at Woolwich Arsenal work from 7 a.m. till 5 p.m., with a dinner-hour from one to two. Thus they do a continuous stretch of six hours upon a breakfast of a pint of tea and half a pound of bread, occasionally fortified by a "relish" provided at their own expense. It will, I think, be generally agreed that this is not a reasonable or wholesome state of things. In the summer the men start work at six, but get an hour's interval for breakfast. I would suggest that in winter, half an hour for breakfast should be allowed (say from 8.30 to 9), which would still leave an eight and a half hours' working day. Failing that, the dinner-hour should begin at twelve instead of one.

In answer to a question which I asked last week as to what check there is to prevent the pay of a man who has deserted being subsequently drawn and pocketed by the Quartermaster-Sergeant and Pay-Sergeant, an anonymous "Retired Paymaster" answers that the man's absence would be discovered and entered in the Regimental Orders at the next parade of his Company, and would so reach the Paymaster. If this is the only check, I can understand the fraud being perpetrated, as I am told it is perpetrated.

The Bodmin Depot case has evidently awakened a good deal of interest in the Army, for I have received letters in regard to it from all parts of the world, and more particularly India. The burden of all these communications is that, with Wilson's case before them, men will henceforth be more shy than ever of reporting irregularities on the part of their seniors, and that military life will in consequence be made more hateful than ever to those at whose expense such irregularities are practised. The nature of some of these irregularities I have already explained. A Regimental Officer writing from India hints at others:—

> The practices that have been exposed at Bodmin bolster up an elaborate system of corruption, the worst sufferer by which is the private soldier. If such things go unpunished in the comparatively open and healthy atmosphere of a Depot, what is to be expected within the four walls of those close preserves, the Commissariat Stores? In the interest of the whole Service, the whole subject should be patiently threshed out.

I have to thank various military correspondents who are continuing to enlighten me as to the existence of Depots where none of the N.C.O.'s have exceeded the regulation tour of Depot service. It is highly gratifying to find that there really are some Depots where the Regulations on this point are observed; but as this seems rather a negative kind of virtue, I do not see any reason for chronicling the names of all these virtuous establishments. The fact, however, that some conform to the Regulations only makes it the more necessary that others —e.g., Beverley—should be compelled to do so

---

A New Zealander tells me that in the artillery force and in the police of that Colony it is a common thing for a senior N.C.O. or an officer to receive notice that his services will be dispensed with at a certain date, and for him then to be offered the alternative of remaining in the service and retaining his rank, but at a reduced rate of pay. As there is no pension, the man usually accepts the latter alternative. If this be an accurate statement of the case, New Zealand can give even Whitehall a lesson in pettifogging parsimony. The idea seems to be that, instead of being pensioned off, a man is retained in the service at a reduced salary; but a more clumsy and unfair substitute for superannuation can hardly be imagined.

I have been asked by several ladies connected with the nursing profession to give publicity to the following confidential circular recently issued from Simla. It certainly appears to merit all the publicity that can be given to it:—

> Army Head-quarters, India, Medical Division,
> Simla, September 13, 1893.
> [Confidential.]
> To the Lady Superintendent, Indian Nursing Service, > .....Circle.
>
> DEAR MISS ——, — An instance having recently occurred of a lady nurse taking part in station theatricals, it appears to the Commander in Chief in India expedient that his views on the subject of recreation for members of the Indian Nursing Service should be communicated to them.
>
> His Excellency is aware that the life in public of lady nurses in India is observed with much interest by a very highly influential section of Home Society which earnestly desires the success of the Indian Nursing Service, and he is anxious the impression should not arise or exist that the lady nurses have not taken up with serious purpose the important avocation they perform.
>
> Recreation is undoubtedly essential to the health of mind and body, particularly in India, which places so much climatic stress upon the European constitution. Gymkhana and race meetings, garden parties and At Homes, for instance, provide cheerful relaxation, and do not tax those energies which nursing duty calls into play. But dances and other night entertainments are scarcely compatible with sedulous personal care of the sick, and appearances on the stage bring nursing sisters into very undesirable public prominence.
>
> Sir George White feels sure the lady nurses will defer to his opinion, and allow him to dispense with the issue of formal orders restricting latitude in recreative pursuits.—Believe me, yours sincerely,
> A. F. BRADSHAW,
> Surgeon-Major-General, Principal Medical Officer, India.

A more foolish document than this was never penned. The vocation of hospital nurses is either a quasi-religious one, which renders it improper for them to take part in public entertainments of any kind; or a lay profession in which they have a right to participate in all amusements which are open to other ladies. The distinction which the Commander-in-Chief and the Principal Medical Officer attempt to set up between day and night entertainments is simply childish in its absurdity. According to this novel code of ethics, it is wrong for a lady nurse to go out to dinner, but right for her to attend a race-meeting; right for her to skip about at a lawn-tennis party, but wrong for her to dance a quadrille in the evening. And, apparently, an afternoon dance would be lawful, while tennis, if it could be played in the evening by electric light, would be forbidden. "Appearances on the stage" are forbidden, whether in the morning or the evening. The nurse must not even act at a matinée. But why? "Publicity," says the P.M.O., "is undesirable for nursing sisters." Why more for them than for other sisters?

The most wonderful thing in the circular, however, is his Excellency's anxiety lest an impression should arise in "a very influential circle of Home Society" that the nurses have not taken up their duties "with serious purpose." Are we to understand from this, although dancing and theatricals are usual amusements among all classes, and although Princes and Princesses think nothing of performing before the Queen, "a very influential circle" considers that these amusements are incompatible with a serious purpose in life? If so, more arrant humbug was never uttered. I expect, however, that this impressive reference to influential circles at home is just the same undiluted nonsense as the rest of the circular. If Sir George White or Surgeon-Major-General Bradshaw desires to convert the Indian Nursing Service into a religious order, let them do the thing openly and thoroughly, and with due regard to the rights and vested interests of those ladies who have entered the Service supposing it to be something very different. Either that, or the circular should be withdrawn at once.

In calling attention a few weeks back to the case of Mrs. Chick, Matron of the Widows' Home at Poona, I find that I made a mistake in describing the lady as the widow of Captain Chick of the Madras Cavalry. The Captain Chick here referred to was Mrs. Chick's son. Her husband, who, as I stated, volunteered at the time of the Mutiny, was Mr. Henry Dodd Chick, formerly editor of the Central Star. Mr. Chick was actively engaged, and received the Lucknow medal and clasp. His wife and children were with him all through the siege of Lucknow, when they lost one of their children, and the whole of their property. Mrs. Chick is now in her sixty-seventh year, and will be absolutely destitute when she gives up her present position. Seeing how strongly she has been recommended, it seems a most extraordinary and discreditable thing that neither the Indian nor the English Government should be able or willing to help her.

HOUSE DRAINAGE.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

A copy has been forwarded to me, by the Committee of the Indian Association, of the protest, which the Association has addressed to the Indian Government, against the decision to compensate the Government servants for their loss on exchange owing to the fall of the rupee. I have already strongly expressed the opinion that the Government has no business to relieve its servants at the cost of the ratepayers of a loss for which neither Government nor ratepayers are responsible. As the Association most forcibly point out, if the rupee had risen in value the suggestion that the Government had a right to appropriate its servants' profits on the exchange would have been indignantly scouted. The reasoning which applies in the one case applies equally in the other. However, now that the principle has been established that if the rupee falls Government servants ought not to lose, let it be equally understood in future that if the rupee should hereafter rise, Government servants are not to benefit. It is, I fear, too late now to say more.

There are, however, two points in the Indian Association's memorial which ought still to be carried out. In the first place, the compensation given ought to be allowed solely on the amount actually remitted to England, for which purpose it is absolutely necessary that all remittances on which compensation is allowed should be made through Government. In the second place, those Indian servants of the Government who have sent their children or other relatives to England for educational purposes, ought to be allowed the same privilege in regard to remitting as their English colleagues. There is no equitable principle on which any distinction can be drawn between the two cases.

I would suggest, while this matter is before the Government and the public, the Viceroy's privilege of remitting to Europe, at an artificial rate of exchange (as to the existence of which there seems to be no serious question), should be abolished, or at least placed on the same footing as the privilege now to be conceded to other Anglo-Indian officials. A Viceroy is usually a wealthy nobleman, with several houses and estates in England. He is under no obligation to remit part of his official salary home in order to maintain his children, and he is the very last man in the Empire to whom a special privilege should have been conceded in regard to remittances. This is probably the reason why he is the only man in the Empire to whom the privilege has been conceded.

That the Admiralty have reviewed the findings of the Victoria Court-Martial, and have not hesitated to supplement them with their own views in regard to the responsibility for the collision, seems to me a matter for satisfaction. As to the new instructions given with regard to watertight doors, they are a matter for experts, but it will be a relief to most civilians to hear that more precautions are henceforth to be taken to have the doors shut when occasion is likely to arise, and also that in the opinion of experts the Victoria would have floated if all her doors had been shut.

Now that the scheme for the application of the Victoria Relief Fund is issued, I would ask why the survivors of the crew of the ill-fated ship have been overlooked. Many of these men, as I have already mentioned, besides undergoing great hardships and privations on their way home, have lost a great part of their worldly effects, in some cases all. The Admiralty provision for such cases is utterly inadequate. One man—an Artilleryman—writing to me a week or two ago, states that he had lost kit and underclothing to the value of over £15, besides all the cash and other personal effects that he had in the world. All he has received in return is a bare uniform, value about £6.

If the Fund were insufficient for the widows and orphans, the survivors of the ship's company might have been legitimately overlooked; but, so far from this being the case, there is a probability of a surplus, and provision is made for applying it for the general benefit of widows and orphans of men in the Navy. I doubt whether the subscribers to the Fund will generally approve of this method of dealing with the money while actual sufferers by the loss of the Victoria are left unrelieved; and I would suggest that those of them who disapprove should signify their disapproval in some unmistakable manner.

By a Customs regulation which is enforced at Southampton Docks, and probably at other docks, all work is prohibited during the hours of Divine service on Sunday mornings. This precious ordinance was presumably devised to ensure the better observance of the Lord's Day and the attendance of the dock labourers at church. As might be expected, and as a local paper shows, it does nothing of the kind. For example, when the coaling of a ship is suspended from 10.30 till 12.30 on a Sunday morning, the men pass this period of compulsory idleness in loitering about and drinking the beer which they thoughtfully provide for the occasion; and very often when the time comes for resuming work they go off to the opening public-houses, and there remain for another two hours. The regulation, in fact, simply causes the coalies to drink more beer, and to finish their work later than they would otherwise do, and I fail to see how even the most earnest Sabbatarian can object to its revocation.

The appointment of Captain Noel to be Junior Sea Lord of the Admiralty is very satisfactory, because he is a first-rate sailor and a thoroughly practical man. It is said that some time ago Captain Noel, who has recently been employed in the Mediterranean, refused to obey an order which was signalled by Sir Michael Culme-Seymour, because he considered that by doing so he would incur a serious risk.

I have been requested to call the attention of the new Lord of the Admiralty to the long-standing grievances of Naval Instructors, and I am very happy to comply with the request. To save Captain Noel the necessity of turning back to all the old numbers of TRUTH in which this matter has been referred to, I may mention that these grievances relate to (1) the compulsory provision of a uniform, practically in breach of their agreement on entering the Service; (2) the want of a proper system of retirement; (3) the stoppage of tuition money on the Britannia; and (4) the capricious and unfair distribution of appointments. The last point is, to my thinking, the most serious. During the present year, after all that has been said on this subject, three Naval Instructors of ten years' service and under have been sent to shore appointments, while there are men who have from twenty to thirty years' seniority serving at sea, and apparently doomed to serve there for the rest of their days.

Why not cultivate your hair? Encourage it and strengthen it, or, if your hair is grey or white, the natural colour can be restored by a few applications of Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer.

Does the late Sir Arthur Blackwood write letters regarding Postal matters from the other world? To judge by the date of the following letter such would appear to be the case. Now, however, that his successor has been appointed, we may, perhaps, be allowed to entertain the hope that his troubled spirit will rest in peace:—

[80A] General Post Office, London,
October 31, 1893.

SIR,—In reply to your letters of the 30th inst. respecting James Rostron and Mrs. Cook, I beg leave to acquaint you that the nomination to the situation of Sub-Postmaster at Droylsden rests with the Lords of the Treasury, to whom your communications will be forwarded when the vacancy is reported.
—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, S. A. BLACKWOOD.

There is a serious Post Office scandal at Bristol, where a sub-postmaster has absconded, and his defalcations are believed to amount to nearly £4,000. It seems that he had filled up a great number of money-order forms for the largest possible amounts in fictitious names, and he cashed them at various London offices before leaving the country. The whole system of the Post Office administration must be scandalously defective if a functionary can so easily commit such extensive frauds, and then disappear with his plunder.

An extraordinary statement has been published at Dudley regarding the alleged interference of the Mayor (Alderman Claughton) in the late municipal election contest. Mr. A. G. Wright came forward as a Liberal candidate for Castle Ward in opposition to two Conservatives; but, at the last moment, to the surprise and disappointment of the Liberal party, he withdrew. It has since been asserted that the Mayor "used the strongest persuasions" to secure this result, that Mr. Wright, in reply, "mentioned the matter of expenses," and that another letter was then "received from the Priory guaranteeing Mr. Wright's expenses up to £10." Alderman Claughton, it should be explained, is agent to Lord Dudley, and his offices are at the Priory. As a Mayor is supposed to hold himself aloof from party struggles, these statements in the local Press certainly seem to call for some notice from his Worship. Hitherto, however, no explanation or denial has been forthcoming.

A violent epidemic of typhus fever has been raging in and around Lismore (co. Waterford), and from what I hear of the precautions taken to prevent the spread of infection, there is every probability of a further development of the epidemic. In one instance a girl died at a general shop. A day or two after her death, and while four other members of the family were still down with the fever, the shop was re-opened. The clothes from the bed on which the girl died were sent by the servant to her family, who lived about four miles away, in a district which the epidemic had not reached. In a few days two members of the servant's family were stricken with fever. In another case there was an outbreak near Ballyduff, a little distance from Lismore. Two women died. The clothes of one of them were removed by her mother to her own house, and in a few days five inmates of the mother's house were attacked with fever. At the beginning of last week there were ninety or a hundred cases of typhus under treatment in the hospital and the town. Who can wonder?

There was a long discussion at the Bristol Town Council last week on certain proceedings of the Chief Constable and the Watch Committee which have given considerable dissatisfaction to the police force and also to many citizens. It seems that in December last a young man of twenty-two was appointed an Inspector, and in May he was promoted to the rank of Chief Inspector. On both occasions older and more experienced men were, for some occult reason, passed over. To accentuate the discontent which this promotion created, the Chief Constable recently formulated a scheme under which five Inspectors were to do night duty for ten months each year, whilst the favoured young man was exempted from both night and Sunday duty. When the aggrieved officers sent a memorial to the Watch Committee, the Chief Constable described their conduct as highly impertinent; and when they attended for an interview with the Committee he ordered them away. Instead of insisting upon hearing the men themselves, the Committee at a subsequent meeting accepted the assurance of the Chief Constable that his subordinates had become perfectly satisfied and no longer desired an interview. The Committee took this course out of consideration for the "feelings" of the Chief Constable, who thought he would be humiliated if the matter were carried further. But the right of members of the force to have free access to the Committee for the statement of their grievances is surely more important than the "feelings" of a Chief Constable—especially if it be true, as Mr. Swaish bluntly told the Council, that "his management of the men is autocratic, if not despotic."

I understand that an inquiry is pending by the Local Government Board into two rival street-improvement schemes at Dover, and it is to be hoped that the inquiry will be a vigilant and searching one, for there is not a borough in the kingdom more honeycombed by corruption and jobbery than Dover. One of these schemes is promoted by the Corporation, the other by certain independent citizens. On behalf of the latter, it is claimed that its cost will be about one fourth of that of the Corporation scheme, and that it will clear away some of the worst slum property in the town, and open a fine modern thoroughfare to a rapidly-increasing district. From the manner in which some of the members of the Corporation are fighting this matter, it may be conjectured that they are actuated by other motives than pure and disinterested affection for their own scheme.

OVALINE TOILET SOAP, made with Yolk of Egg, is a wonderful discovery for the skin and hair. As a Shaving Soap it has no equal. Price, 8d. per tablet, 2s. per box.—52, King-st., Regent-st., London.

SHIRTS FOR EVENING WEAR, with Pique and Fancy Fronts. Dressing Gowns and Jackets. At-home Dinner Jackets.—SAMPSON & Co., 268, 270, Oxford-street, W.

A gentleman, who was visiting Dover last week, gives me the following account of his experience during the municipal election :—

> From what I saw of the municipal elections, which were supposed to be fought on the streets question, I should think Dover deserves the distinction of being about the most rotten and corrupt borough in England. The votes of the intelligent classes of the ratepayers were literally swamped by means of open beerhouses, general treating, and the most flagrant bribery. In all my experience of elections, Parliamentary and Municipal—and I have seen a great many in different places—I can honestly say that I never saw anything so demoralising and so disgraceful as the condition of Dover on Wednesday last immediately dusk set in. . . . .
>
> I sincerely trust that the Treasury will hear something of the matter, and that steps may be taken by the more decent-minded citizens (if there are any) to put a stop to the state of things which I witnessed, and which, I was told, is the normal state of Dover at election times.

Perhaps the foregoing statement may throw some light on the following Magisterial aberration reported from Dover. The cases are so striking that I think it right to give them a little "pillory" all to themselves :—

> Dover. Before the Mayor (Sir William Crundell) and five other Magistrates. A retired tradesman, 78 years of age, charged with striking an agent of Sir W. Crundell's party at the polling-booth. Fined £2, and ordered to pay costs amounting to £3 more.
>
> Dover. Before the same Bench. A jobmaster charged with assaulting an agent of the anti-Crundell party, and cutting the top out of his hat. Fined 5s., and ordered to pay 3s. for the hat. Total penalties and costs under £1.

The Times has opened its columns to a discussion on street cabs. I am for hansoms, although I think that they might be improved by more glass being put in the sides, by some arrangement that enables the fare to open or close wholly or partially the front window, and by a sort of speaking-tube establishing communication with the driver. I see no reason, however, why we should not also have the French victoria plying in the streets. Many probably would prefer them to hansoms, as being more easy of ingress or egress, and more open. I am glad to see, therefore, that Messrs. Hooper are devoting themselves to the discovery of a plan which would allow either a closed or open carriage to be placed on the same frame. I am not, however, certain that the public would not prefer the victorias in winter as well as in summer, for, with a proper arrangement of the hood, wind and rain are excluded.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.—Patterns are now ready, & will be sent post free, of these new & fashionable Cards for Christmas (specially printed). A most complete collection, comprising many striking novelties.—PARKINS & GOTTO, Court Stationers, Oxford-st., Londn.

The following poser is addressed to me from Scotland for answer in the columns of TRUTH :—

> I have good reason to suppose I am entitled to part of a large sum of money in Chancery, but I am far too poor to pay for legal assistance. Not knowing the name of the title or cause, how can I find out about this property? . . . . The money in question has, I believe, been in the Court of Chancery for many years. I wrote to the Paymaster General about it, but the reply stated that nothing could be done unless I were able to give the name of the cause or title.

How my correspondent expects me to assist him after the Paymaster-General has given him this explanation, I do not know. I would recommend him to apply to the Editor of Borderland, for his problem is just one of those which can only be solved by the aid of intelligence denied to ordinary mortals.

I am glad to see that Mr. Justice Grantham spoke strongly at Manchester Assizes on the desirability of introducing "corporal punishment" for offences against women. His lordship pointed to a most significant circumstance—namely, that all other offences against the person have decreased in number, while assaults on women alone have increased. Readers of the TRUTH "Pillory," who note the way in which such offences are usually dealt with by magistrates, will not be surprised to hear this. "If men were brutal enough," said Sir William Grantham, "to inflict pain on women, they should be made to suffer pain themselves." I entirely concur, but I would add to "women" children of tender years regardless of sex. The cat is the most suitable and rational punishment, not only for the wife-beater but for the Phelans and Montagus, the Girl-Floggers, and the Girl-Floggers' employers.

Another excellent assize speech was that of Sir Henry Hawkins to the Grand Jury at Devizes, where his lordship impressed upon West-country Justices what he has so frequently preached in other parts of the kingdom, that when Assizes occur before Quarter-Sessions, prisoners should be committed for trial at the former instead of the latter court. Sir Henry found a new and powerful argument for this course, by pointing out that if more minor offences were sent to the Judges, Magistrates both in Quarter and Petty Sessions, would get some precedents, which they seem to badly need, in regard to the appropriate measure of punishment in such cases.

In one case at Devizes, Sir Henry Hawkins had before him a married woman, who had been committed on a charge of concealing the birth of her child, and had already been in prison over three months. As the Judge remarked, a month's imprisonment would have been excessive for the offence; yet this unfortunate woman had been imprisoned for three times that period before she came to trial—merely because she was too poor and friendless to obtain bail. There could not be a better instance of the rule which Sir Henry Hawkins is incessantly pressing upon Justices – that prisoners should always be released on their own recognizances when there is a reasonable expectation that they will appear.

I have repeatedly pointed out the impropriety of parties interested in the liquor trade, on the one hand, or of teetotallers on the other, acting as licensing Justices. In Linlithgow my views are evidently endorsed by two members of the Bench. At the close of the Licensing Court last week, Provost Gilmour expressed the opinion that Bailie M'Alpine was not a competent judge with regard to public-houses because he was a teetotaller and would take licences all away. To this thrust the Bailie retorted by suggesting that drunkenness would be encouraged by the Provost, as he was the proprietor of two licensed premises. How can it be expected that the licensing laws will be satisfactorily administered by Magistrates like these? That extremists are unfitted for such duties was further shown at Canterbury on Thursday, when a J.P. refused to sign the necessary papers for the transfer of a licence and an extension of time, to which it is pretty certain he would not have objected if he had not happened to be a total abstainer.

From a bankruptcy case heard last week, it would seem that if any person desires for his own purposes to antedate a deed by two or three years, it is the easiest thing in life for him to put a stamp on the deed bearing the date he requires. In the case in question an attempt was made to defeat creditors by a mortgage deed which the Jury found to be fraudulent, it having been executed in March, 1893, whereas it bore date August, 1891, and an 1891 stamp. It was proved that about the date when the deed was concocted, a law stationer named Beckford had sold to a stranger an old 10s. stamp for the sum of 15s, and this was apparently the stamp on the fraudulent deed. Have the Inland Revenue authorities no means of checking such a traffic in old stamps as this? If not, they would do well to study Mr. Justice Vaughan Williams's remarks upon the advisability of amending their regulations.

The Mayor of Maidstone and four of his Magisterial colleagues lately delivered a sentence which, although it has been somewhat tardily brought under my notice, is really too monstrous to be passed over without comment. A woman named Orpin, who had been for a long time employed as cook at an hotel in the town, was charged with stealing a couple of mutton chops, two eggs, and some mushrooms. Her defence was that as she had eaten nothing at the hotel all day, she thought she was not doing any harm in sending her allowance of food to her home. No charge had ever been made against her before, and the prosecutor told the Bench he did not wish to press the case. It was clearly a case which should have been dealt with under the First Offenders Act. But these Maidstone Shallows are apparently as heedless of the law as they are destitute of common sense and compassion, for they committed the woman to gaol for a month without the option of a fine. I learn that the harshness of the sentence has convinced many Maidstone men that the borough should have a Stipendiary. My advice to them is to agitate until they get one appointed.

Justice is dispensed according to a truly Draconian code in the Straits Settlement. At the Malacca Assizes recently, W. van Huisen, clerk in the Marine Office, was convicted of embezzling three sums, amounting together to thirteen dollars. He was condemned by the Chief Justice to no less than nine years' "rigorous" imprisonment—three years on each count. In passing this terrible sentence, the Chief Justice dwelt upon the fact that the prisoner was a public servant guilty of a breach of trust. The principle that such offenders should receive exemplary punishment is right enough, but it should be applied in reason, and with a regard to the circumstances of the case, not in the simply ferocious style adopted at Malacca.

Last week I commented upon the eccentric legal procedure of the Channel Islands. Another instance of this has been disclosed in a case remitted from Alderney to a Court at Guernsey, where one Sebire was charged with aiding and abetting in the commission of the crime of forgery. It appeared that at a meeting in the island of Alderney delegates were appointed to sign a petition to the Queen respecting certain grievances, and it was Sebire's duty, when the document had been prepared, to obtain the signatures. It was in doing this that his so-called offence was committed. In the first place he allowed a woman to sign in the name of her husband, but the Procureur had to acknowledge that she did so with her husband's authority. In the second place Sebire asked a boy to sign for his grandfather, William Barker. The boy complied because he had frequently signed documents for his grandfather, who could neither read nor write, and because he had, moreover, heard him speak approvingly of the petition.

It is here that the peculiar Channel Island practice comes in. Prior to the proceedings at Guernsey, the Judge of Alderney interrogated Barker, senior, and secured from him the declaration that he had not authorised anybody to sign the petition on his behalf. It was on this declaration that the prosecution mainly relied. Its value may be guessed from the old man's statement that he made it because he was advised "that the Judge would be his friend, as the petition was of a bad nature;" but that he was previously "quite satisfied" with the petition, and would have signed it readily. Sebire is a man held in great respect in Alderney, and at the most it will be seen he had been guilty only of a technical offence and error of judgment. Nevertheless, her Majesty's Procureur demanded that he should be sentenced to one month's imprisonment, and the complaisant Lieutenant-Bailiff and his colleagues on the Bench committed him for that term. A correspondent furnishes me with an explanation of this shameful business. It is, he says, part and parcel of an attempt by the official ring to crush out all opposition to existing abuses; and it is expected that Sebire's conviction will make it possible to expel him from the Douzaine—of which he is a member—a consummation much desired by officials, because he is an "independent man."

At the Chester County Police-court on Saturday, Mr. Horace D. Trelawny, J.P., varied his duties as Chairman of the Bench by an unsuccessful appearance in the character of a prosecutor. Mr. Trelawny's gamekeeper, it seems, saw some girls gathering mushrooms, and one of them, named Shaw, picked up a piece of wood, but afterwards dropped it, and ran away. Will it be believed that upon this Shaw was, at the instance of Mr.

Trelawny, charged with stealing the piece of wood! His fellow Magistrates, I am glad to say, dismissed the case, the Chairman pro tem. adding that they "could not do more than that." It appears to me that the Bench would only have done their duty if they had administered a severe rebuke to Mr. H. D. Trelawny for bringing a girl into Court on such a ridiculous and trumpery charge. I regret also that it did not occur to the girl's advisers to make a counter-charge against the gamekeeper; for it transpired that he seized her basket, with the mushrooms it contained, and did not return it. Both Mr. Trelawny and his servant need teaching that they cannot deal in the same high-handed manner with trespassers in pursuit of fungi as with trespassers in pursuit of game.

Another extraordinary case, reflecting this time upon the police, came before Mr. Justice Hawkins at Wells. A young lad was charged with a criminal assault upon a girl of eight. It appeared that the prisoner turned the child and three others out of a grass field. No complaint was made by the mother of the children, no doctor was called in, but the children were taken by the police to the station and statements obtained from them (in one another's presence) by a Constable and Superintendent. On this the Superintendent swore an information, charging an offence which was not even suggested by the witnesses in the evidence. The statement obtained from the children was handed to the Magistrate who heard the charge, and used by him in examining the witnessess. A more outrageous series of proceedings can hardly be imagined. It is the duty of the county authorities to inquire whether the police were actuated by mere stupidity or by something worse, and to mete out punishment accordingly.

Should Magistrates smoke? I mean, of course, upon the Bench. At Penarth they evidently think so. The Western Mail last week had the following:—

> Yesterday morning, while occupying the chair on the Penarth Bench, Colonel Guthrie puffed dense volumes of smoke from a well-chosen cigar.

Some persons may think that, if the cigar was well chosen, the occasion was not. I scarcely know what to say. Personally, I always smoke when at work. On the other hand, no English Judge, so far as I know, has hitherto sat upon the Bench with a pipe in his mouth. If, however, our rural J.P.'s find that tobacco tends to brighten their wits or allay their prejudices and prepossessions, the interests of justice undoubtedly require that smoking should be encouraged. But there is another aspect of the case. If the Magistrate smokes may counsel and solicitors do the same? If so, may the prisoner (an innocent man until convicted) also smoke?

I understand that a petition has been forwarded to the Home Secretary for the remission of a sentence passed by two Justices at Amersham. It is decidedly a case for Mr. Asquith's intervention. John Lee, aged nineteen, was charged before Messrs. T. B. Grove and J. W. Garrett Pegg with having grubbed up a number of furze-stalks, valued at five shillings, in a certain wood. There had been no previous conviction or even charge of any kind against Lee, and his mother offered to pay the damage and begged the Bench to let her boy off with a fine. The Bench, however, were inexorable. In their eyes it was "a serious thing to go into a wood and do damage there," and they committed Lee to gaol for twenty-one days. I should like to know who Mr. T. B. Grove is, and how he ever came to be entrusted with powers which he is obviously unfitted to exercise. Perhaps somebody in the locality will tell me.

Another similar example of Justices' justice is reported from Midhurst, where two men named Mitchell and Collins were each sentenced to a month's hard labour for cutting and uprooting furze belonging to Lady Lanerton, at Redford Common. Since these cases were tried, the death of Lady Lanerton has been announced, and I am informed that the property in question has been inherited by Colonel Lascelles. If the statement of the Midhurst Times is correct, Colonel Lascelles was one of the Magistrates on the Bench when Collins and Mitchell were dealt with. He may not have been at that time legally disqualified from adjudicating, but most people will agree with me that he was morally.

A word to my provincial contemporaries. When Recorders and Magistrates write to me in reference to their appearance in the "Pillory," they almost invariably complain of shocking inaccuracies in the local newspaper reports of the cases. As I know perfectly well that the reporter is often burdened with blunders which are not his, I take these explanations with a very considerable grain of salt. Still, I fear it is true that inexperienced scribes sometimes cause misconception by placing too much reliance on opening statements for the prosecution. My fellow-editors should impress upon their young men that their duty is to give a fair account of the evidence on both sides, and not to accept as gospel an ex parte speech. This would advance the reputation of the local Press for accuracy—and it would also save me some trouble.

By the way, I occasionally get letters from Magistrates explaining that though they were on the Bench they disapproved of the decision for which they were pilloried. These gentlemen think it hard that they should suffer in public estimation for the sins of their colleagues. It does seem hard, but they have the remedy in their own hands. If a J.P. considers that an injustice is being perpetrated by his brethren, he is free to express his dissent. If he prefers, however, to keep silent in order to preserve an appearance of unanimity, he ought to be prepared to take his share of the opprobrium which the Bench incur.

Mr. J. G. Langham, Clerk to the Eastbourne Justices, has written pointing out a mistake in a paragraph published on October 26, to which my attention has also been drawn by another correspondent. In condemning the persecution of an old man who, after one charge against him had been dropped, was re-arrested and sent to prison for begging, I stated that the case occurred at Eastbourne. This was an error which I much regret. The case was heard, not at Eastbourne, but at Folkestone, and the discredit of the proceedings in question should have been cast, not on the Eastbourne, but on the Folkestone Bench.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. Two sentences in the High Court at Glasgow show that to the Scotch judicial mind a poor old creature who commits a house robbery is about four times as sinful as a burly brute who strikes and kicks a woman with such violence that she dies next day from his ill-usage. Most of the cases from Quarter Sessions and Petty Sessions in England and Wales are of a familiar type and speak plainly enough for themselves. I would, however, call special attention to those at Southampton, where the penalty imposed upon a woman for being drunk and using bad language is double that inflicted upon a man for seriously injuring a constable; to the reprehensible refusal of the Preston Bench to deal with a young woman under the First Offenders Act; and to the difference between the lenient treatment accorded to the game-preserver and gamekeeper convicted of abominable cruelty at Wetherby, and the drastic punishment almost invariably meted out to poachers:—

High Court of Justiciary, Glasgow. Before Lord Kincairney. Henry Woods, found guilty of culpable homicide. He knocked down, violently kicked, and otherwise ill-treated a woman named Rowley, who died from the injuries inflicted next day. Fifteen months.

High Court of Justiciary, Glasgow. Before Lord Young. Margaret Watt, an old woman, charged with stealing clothing and jewellery. Five years.

Liverpool County Quarter Sessions. Patrick Reardon, charged with maliciously wounding Annie Reardon. Bound over.

Liverpool County Quarter Sessions. Henry Lawrence, charged with stealing an overcoat. Twelve months.

Thomas Wall, charged with an aggravated assault upon his wife. Bound over.

Three young miners, charged with attempting to break into an office. Three months each.

Preston Police-court. Before Messrs. M. S. Maynard, W. B. Rideal, and T. Dodd. Michael Maloney, charged with assaulting Jane Gatridge. It was stated that he kicked her and "chucked her bodily into the street," bruising her face and bursting her nose. Fined 20s. and costs.

Preston Police-court. Before the same Justices. Lucy Wilcock, charged with stealing drapery goods. She ordered the goods in her father's name, and afterwards took the parcel from an errand-boy on his way to the father's house. It was found she had left home the day before, and had no authority to use her father's name. The Bench refused to deal with her under the First Offenders Act. One month.

Pontefract Police-court. Harry Knowles, charged with assaulting his wife. He "got her down and kicked her." Fined 10s. and costs, or fourteen days.

Southampton Police-court. Before Messrs. G. P. Perkins, T. P. Payne, J. P. Hine, and R. Chipperfield. Thomas Unwin, convicted of assaulting a constable by kicking him. The kick was in a dangerous part of the body, and the constable had been off duty and under medical treatment for nearly a fortnight. Fined 10s. and costs, or 14 days.

Southampton Police-court. Before Alderman Cooksey, Junior, Bailiff Dyer, Messrs. G. P. Perkins, J. E. Le Feuvre, R. Chipperfield, J. J. Burnell, M. Emanuel, and J. R. Smith. Ellen Finn, charged with being drunk and disorderly. She did not commit an assault, but used bad language. Fined 20s. and costs, or one month.

Bolton Police-court. James Birch charged with assaulting his wife. He struck her in the face, twisted her arm round her back, and left her lying insensible on the floor of the house. Fined 5s. and costs.

Bolton Police-court. Michael Cain charged with stealing 4 lb. of bacon from outside a shop. Fourteen days.

Trelleck Petty Sessions. Before Mr. G. G. Griffin, Rev. L. A. Rees, Messrs. R. H. Oakley and H. E. Sheppard. David Hill, farmer, convicted of assaulting Sarah Edwards and her son. He struck the son on the head and hit the woman in the mouth and knocked her down, threatening to break their necks. The Chairman said in his opinion Hill ought to go to gaol for a month. Fined £1 and costs and bound over.

Trelleck Petty Sessions. Before the same Magistrates. Herbert Thomas, charged with trespassing for game on the estate of the Duke of Beaufort. Fined £3 and costs.

Lawford's Gate Police-court. Before Captain Belfield, Messrs. J. Yalland, E. P. Willis, and J. C. Aiken. Alfred Hartnell charged with ill-treating and torturing a greyhound by starving it. The animal was in a frightful condition and was chained up in defendant's yard. In the yard was the carcass of another dog which apparently had been starved. Fined 20s. and costs.

Bristol Police-court. Before Messrs. A. Baker and W. W. Tribe. Daniel Joseph Tribe charged with stealing two small fish from a railway-truck. He said he was out of work and took the fish for his wife and children. Fourteen days.

Pwllheli County Magistrates' Court. Before Messrs. Owen Evans, B. T. Ellis, Edward Jones, and O. Ll. J. Evans. Joseph Shannon, farmer, charged with an aggravated assault on Jane Jones. He struck her several times with a padlock, and also hit her with his fist on her head, breast, and face. Fined 20s. and costs and bound over.

Cambridge Borough Police-court. Before Mr. J. Burford and Drs. Waraker and Kenny. William Wilson and John Marshall, charged with destroying their clothes at the workhouse. They said their clothes were in a very bad state. Two months each.

Wetherby Police-court. Mr. St. John Butler and his gamekeeper, Jonathan Bartle, charged with cruelty to a cat. The cruelty consisted in setting three dogs to worry the cat, which was ultimately killed. Fined £1 and costs.

Linton Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. E. P. Frost, E. Barker, and H. J. G. Rebow. William Law charged with poaching. Committed for two months in default of paying £5. 11s. 6d.

Grantham Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor, Dr. Jeans, Mr. S. Bentley Rudd, Dr. Wilson, and other Justices. Alfred Wilkinson, charged on a warrant with assaulting Fanny Ogden by striking her in the face and kicking her. Fined 1s. and 10s. costs.

Hanley Police-court. Before Messrs. T. Hampton and J. Lowe. Elizabeth Latham, aged fifteen, charged with stealing coal from a cart. Fourteen days.

Hartlepool Borough Petty Sessions. Thomas Nicholson, charged with assaulting a boy by hitting him a severe blow on the head with a hammer. The lad had to be taken to the hospital. Fined 20s. and costs.

Thrapston Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. P. Mitchell, A. Mackenzie, and J. Kidney. William Smart, charged with absconding from the workhouse. One month.

Eastbourne Police-court. Before Messrs. G. H. Lawrence and A. Mayhewe, Sir A. Dent, Colonel E. W. Shaw, and Ald. W. E. Morrison. George Lowe and George Taylor, charged with refusing to perform their task as casuals at Hailsham Workhouse. Each had 120 lb. of stone to pound, and they complained of having to do this after a breakfast of bread and cold water. They asked for hot water, which was refused. Seven days each.

Penrhyndeudraeth Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Jones and W. Lonson. Ellis Jones, charged with poaching. Fined £5 and 10s. 6d. costs.

A somewhat harsh course was adopted by Alderman Sir David Evans at the Guildhall the other day in the case of a girl named Parrott, between twelve and thirteen years of age. She had been found begging, and the Industrial School Committee recommended that she should be sent to an industrial school on the ground that she had "passed no standard." Inquiries by the police showed that though the child's father had been reduced to extreme poverty, owing to an accident, he bore an irreproachable character. The man made a pathetic appeal to the Magistrates not to send his daughter away as she helped to look after his other motherless children, and the girl herself begged that she might go home. In such painful circumstances it would surely have been more wise and merciful to have allowed her to remain with her father instead of committing her, as the Alderman did, to an industrial school.

Mr. M. Huggard, a well-known solicitor at Wexford, makes some serious allegations regarding the Taghmon Bench in a letter published in a local newspaper. Mr. Huggard was engaged in a case in which a "half-drunken" gamekeeper was said to have kept a number of people in a state of terror for several hours "by firing shots up and down the road, presenting his gun at people, firing over their heads," and swearing that he would shoot them. According to Mr. Huggard, Mr. Gibbon, J.P., the gamekeeper's employer, instead of retiring from the Bench altogether, took a seat where he was in full touch with all his brother Magistrates, and actually from this place instructed his solicitors, who appeared for the defendant. In the face of evidence which conclusively proved that the gamekeeper had been guilty of most outrageous conduct, the Bench simply contented themselves with binding him over. Contrasting this with previous decisions in the same Court, Mr. Huggard comes to the conclusion that "it is far more risky for a peasant to fire at a pheasant than for a gamekeeper to fire at a peasant." If what he says is true it certainly is.

I understand that in response to representations made to the Home Secretary and the Mayor of Leeds, the lottery of Father McAuliffe, to which attention was recently called in TRUTH has been suppressed. The matter was in this instance taken up by the Protestant Alliance. I think most people will agree that it is anything but desirable that the law should only be enforced as the result of the efforts made by one religious denomination to counteract the operations of another religious denomination. To me it is a matter of indifference whether lotteries are run by Catholics or Protestants, Churchmen or Dissenters. The law is made for all sects alike, and my view is that the law should enforce its own decrees of its own accord, and not allow itself to be used for sectarian purposes.

I am accused by a gentleman connected with Bournemouth of publishing what he terms "rot" in criticising last week the withdrawal of a summons under the Weights and Measures Act against a Bournemouth butcher. The local reports said that the Mayor ordered the summons to be withdrawn. I remarked that he had no right to do anything of the kind. This may be "rot," but it is true, as my correspondent admits. "The Mayor," he says, "could no more decide on the question than you could." Precisely. It seems, however, that the withdrawal was not ordered by the Mayor, but authorised by the Magistrate who issued the summons, "inquiry having elicited the fact that the butcher's offence was entirely unpremeditated and easily explained." If this be the true state of the case, the last state is worse than the first. What does it come to? A summons is granted at the instance of a public Inspector. Before the case comes into Court the Inspector makes "inquiries," which lead him to ask to have the summons withdrawn. These inquiries were either too early or too late. Either the Inspector made a mistake when he set the law in motion, or he did not. If he did, it is due to the victim that the mistake should be set right in Court, and the Inspector officially rebuked. I have no faith in private inquiries which lead a public prosecutor, after obtaining a summons, to conclude that the offence may be "easily explained." If that be "rot," it is "rot" which in the public interest I shall be pleased to repeat at every opportunity.

A lady who had been favoured with a specially pathetic appeal from Reuben May inquired of me the other day what answer she had better make to it. I suggested that she should request Reuben to forward her a statement of his receipts and expenditure for the last year or two, and tell him that on receiving this statement she would be happy to respond to his appeal. This she did. Three or four weeks have since elapsed, but, as might be expected, no more has been heard of Reuben. If everybody whose alms are solicited by this veteran impostor would take the same course as this lady, we should very soon hear the last of the Great Arthur-street Mission.

Would the lady who communicated with me a short time ago from Ballinamallard about a swindle by means of which money had been obtained from her, kindly communicate again, as I may be able to give her some information which will be of interest to her?

I wish that the authorities of all those towns engaged in lighting their streets with electricity could transport themselves to Milan for an evening. A town better lighted is not to be found. And how is this result brought about? Not by an excessive number of lamps but by hanging them from house to house, the lamp being precisely in the middle of the street. Thus the light is diffused equally, whilst there is the additional economy of no lamp-posts being required. By the Milan system a reduction of about one-third in the number of lamps on pillars is possible, with an increased amount of light.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals might with advantage give its attention to the treatment of cows and calves shipped to the western ports from Ireland. I hear from New Milford that the calves landed there are habitually muzzled so as to prevent them sucking, the object of this cruelty to both cow and calf being to make the cow appear in better condition. The Irish cattle trade, however, is not the only one, I fear, in which practices of this kind are systematically resorted to.

During the present inflated state of prices in the coal market, double shifts are being worked in many pits, with a view to the making of hay while the sun shines. It is pointed out in a provincial paper that in such cases little or no corresponding addition is made to the number of ponies in the pits, and, if that is really the case, it obviously implies that these unfortunate animals are most brutally overworked. The ordinary agencies for the protection of animals do not, unfortunately, reach the bottoms of coal mines; but Inspectors of Mines might have a word or two to say on the subject, if the Home Office would give them a timely hint.

GRATEFUL and COMFORTING for BREAKFAST and SUPPER is EPPS'S COCOA, made with boiling water or milk. Sold in packets labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

COACHING of highest excellence in West of Eng. at "Crawford's,' Wykeham Ho., Clifton, Glos., for ARMY EXAMS. (Univ. and Civ. Serv.). Five crowded years of success. No vacancies till Jan., '94.

What now? Are a hundred industries to be crippled, and are we to look on whilst the struggle between poor men who are determined to starve rather than yield, and rich men who are determined to risk their last pound rather than do so, drags through the winter? At the present price of coal, there is no question that the old wage might be given without a loss to the coalowners. But many of them chose to enter into silly contracts, which could only be carried out without loss by reducing the men's wages. Whenever they open their pits, they will have to fulfil these contracts. Therefore, they object to open them because, whatever the present price of coal may be, they will have to deliver it at their contract price. This is at the bottom of the obstinacy of the coalowners. Otherwise, they would all reopen without any reduction of wage, leaving the question of the wage in future to subsequent discussion.

I do not believe that coalowners were making excessive profits at the price of coal that ruled before the lock-out. The average selling price was 7s. at pit's mouth. Let us assume that of this 7s., 5s. went in wages to those working underground, and that the wage earned was, one man with another, 20s. per week: I think that it will not be asserted that, even if this was a bare living wage, it was a fair living wage. What increase, then, in the price of coal would be necessary in order to secure to the men a fair living wage? Taking this fair wage at 30s.; the increase would be 1s. 8d. per ton; and this, I think, the public would be ready to pay. That coal should be cheap is most desirable, but it should not be forced down to such a price that makes it impossible for the men employed in extracting it to be fairly paid.

The difficulty in securing a fair wage seems to me to be this: If all men employed in pits were to work five and a-half days per week, the amount of coal produced would not find a market. How comes this? A vast number of agricultural labourers found it difficult to get agricultural work, and therefore have become pit-men, for in this business they considered there was the most remunerative employment to be found for them. In 1886 there were 619,106 men employed; in 1892 there were 963,482. In order that the latter number should find work, the working days of the week were reduced, with a consequent reduction of wages. Now I do not think that the proposition can hold that, no matter how many men take to a particular trade, all must have a fair wage, even if, in order to effect this, each man is only to work three days in the week. Push this to its ultimate consequences, and we might arrive at the point that each man would get a fair weekly wage for working one day in the week. This would be impossible. It is evident, therefore, that there must come a moment when the system would inevitably break down.

This is why I advocate that coalowners should pay a weekly fair wage, whether the men are employed five and a-half days per week or two days. The result of this would be that pits in work would work five and a-half days, the men would get a fair wage, and those pits which, from this cause or the other could not carry on at a profit, would close. I am entirely with the men in their dispute, but I do not for this reason ask for impossibilities; and I say that to divide the wage-cake amongst any number of men who want a slice of it, and at the same time to maintain a fair wage, is an impossibility. One of two things would occur: Either the wage would, one way or another, practically be reduced below what is fair, or the demand for coal would go down and industries dependent upon its price would have to stop. I am no fanatical believer in all the theories of political economy, but I believe that two and two make four, and can neither make three nor five.

All this, however, could wait. The burning question of the moment is to re-open the pits. At present prices, as I have said, no reduction in wage is needed, and it really is a reflection upon our civilisation that the struggle between men and masters should drag on solely because the latter made foolish contracts. At what price did the Midland Company place its coal contracts? At seven shillings per ton, I am told. But the Midland must have known that this involved, either loss to the contractors, or reduction of the coal-winners' wage. At the same time, this wondrous Company, by raising the cost of transport for long distances, and reducing it for short distances, almost closed the London market to the Midlands. The Company is now paying fifteen shillings per ton for its coal, and its traffics are falling off. It has not, therefore, gained by its tactics. I would pass a short Act rescinding all contracts made with coalowners that can only be fulfilled at a loss if men's wages are not reduced, for these are sweating contracts.

To my thinking, this coal question is a convincing proof of the necessity of Home Rule all round. If ever there was a matter on which representatives of a country should at once legislate, it is this. But the matter is a most difficult one. Legislation ought not to be hasty; to be sound there would have to be discussion and deliberation. Can the Imperial Parliament undertake the task? No. Why? Because it has not time. If we had an Imperial Parliament limited in its attributes to Imperial matters, and a Local Legislature in England and in Scotland, these two latter would be forced to devote their time at once to this great question, on which the well-being of millions and our position as a nation in the world of industry depend. Am I quite wrong in saying that I am sick of our present Constitution? The wine of to-day cannot be put in this rotten old bottle. We require, not one new bottle, but many new bottles, and those who do not perceive this, or who, perceiving it, nevertheless fold their hands and say that all is well, will awaken one day, as Mirabeau told the theorising aristocrats and the smug middle-classes when the French Revolution might have been kept within sound limits, to the abyss that is opening beneath their feet.

I do not trouble myself with names. I care not whether a man calls himself a Liberal, or a Radical, or a Socialist. I regard them all as Democrats, and the Democratic faith is this: All law-makers elected by the people: so far as possible every British citizen an elector each locality paramount in matters that alone concern it; the Imperial Parliament master of all in Imperial matters; Government, both local and Imperial, carried on for the good of all: a recognition that this can only be done by treating social questions as involving the obligation of all to see that, so far as can be, a man ready to work shall be able to get a fair wage so long as he can work, and a pension from the collective wealth of the nation when, through age, he cannot. This, were I a candidate asking a constituency to elect me as its member, would be my profession of faith.

Since referring to the matter on the 12th ult., I have heard a good deal more about the British Hospitals at Constantinople and Smyrna, more especially the latter. A Liverpool correspondent has been good enough to compile for me a return of the dues paid during 1892 by the principal Liverpool lines trading to the Levant. The totals amount to over £500 at Smyrna and £400 at Constantinople. What benefits were received in return for this outrageous tax? As I have already stated, the total number of in-patients admitted at Smyrna last year was only sixty-two. I am assured that in seven years, ending 1891, only two cases from Liverpool steamers had been treated at this hospital. One of those was actually a Smyrniote labourer, and he was treated by a French doctor, the British doctor not being at hand at the moment. The Smyrna staff appears to consist of a doctor, matron, cook, and two nurses, and there is accommodation for over thirty patients; but during one fortnight at the beginning of the present year, as to which I have evidence, there were only two patients in the building. Will it be believed that, in this state of things, a project was on foot a short time ago for removing and rebuilding the hospital at a cost of £10,000! A significant feature of this scheme was the erection of a house for the doctor.

What has become of this scheme, I cannot say at the moment. The mere fact, however, of its even having been propounded shows the necessity for some inquiry into the management of the hospital. The plain fact is that the institution is absolutely unnecessary. It dates from the time when British trade at this port was carried on by small sailing ships, which sometimes made a stay of thirty or forty days. In such a case the dues bore a fair proportion to the tonnage. In the present day, when a steamer only stops a few hours, and the entire voyage from Liverpool to Constantinople, including stoppages, is usually completed in about seventeen days, it is quite an exceptional thing for any of the crew to require hospital treatment. At the worst there is no need of two British hospitals within a couple of days' sail of one another. If Lord Rosebery would just cast his eye at these facts, and at the remarkable circumstance, shown by the last return, that the expenses have increased nearly 100 per cent. in five years, while the patients have decreased about 25 per cent., he will, I think, agree with me that, instead of being rebuilt, the institution should be closed.

To the many warnings that I have given against agencies for planting "farm pupils" in Canada, I would add yet another against those whose scene of operations is Virginia. As between the two, the balance of advantage is, if anything, in favour of the Canadian agencies. For Canada, at least, this may be said—there are in that country genuine openings for profitable farming. In Virginia there are none. The country has some attractions and advantages of its own: but the prospect of obtaining a remunerative return from land investments there is not one of them; and those who are tempted to sink capital in that direction may rely upon it that they are being invited to help some one else out of a bad bargain.

In support of these remarks, I give the following evidence supplied by an Anglo-Virginian. The writer has been settled more than twenty years in the country, and has had plenty of experience of land over here, so that he knows what he is talking about, and may be taken as a fairly independent authority:—

> A practical farmer, with the capital necessary to purchase and stock a farm here, can make more money and be incomparably more comfortable on a rented farm in England—or even Ireland. The roads here are bad, the markets are poor and difficult of access. The average tenant-farmer in England usually has a few sovereigns in his pocket. It is unusual here for a landowning gentleman to have five dollars, or to have a friend within many miles in a position to lend him that amount. The truth is that there is no more hopeless and unremunerative business in the world than average farming in Virginia. This is due not only to want of capital among farmers, but to worn-out soil, the dishonest and unintelligent labour of the negro, the poor and distant markets, and certain adverse climatic conditions. In nearly a quarter of a century I cannot recall an instance of a gentleman immigrant having made farming pay. A few have been lucky enough to get rid of their farms to advantage, or have minimised their losses by importing pupils to share them. But as a body they lose their money and depart.
>
> The only persons to whom I would recommend Virginia are gentlemen with large families, limited but assured means, and country tastes. For them the country has many advantages. They are less troubled than in England by the ties of social life; the obloquy of poverty is lessened, and the pressure relaxed. But for a young fellow with no money, a hard-up governor, and gentlemanly tastes, to come here in search of a lucrative opening in life is, as we say in the Midlands, "too soft to laugh at."

Apropos of farm pupils, it may be remembered that in an article entitled "An Immaculate Farm Pupil Association," published on September 7, I put certain serious questions to Mr. Henry Howden, F.S.A., and his colleagues in the management of the "Anglo-Canadian Farm Pupil Association," of 46, High-street, Sheffield. The Association in question claims to have been exempted by the Canadian Government from the condemnation which has been officially passed upon all agencies of this character. The evidence which I published, also backed by official authority, strongly suggested that this claim of the Anglo-Canadian Association is a false representation. I invited Mr. Howden and his colleagues to explain, if they could, how the statement in question came to be put forward, and also to clear up one or two other points which require explanation if this Association is to be regarded as an honest concern. To this invitation I have received no reply whatever. Hitherto I have refrained from further reference to the matter, because, although Mr. Howden is at Sheffield, his most active colleague, the Rev. David Armstrong, D.D., is at Mooretown, Ontario. Time enough, however, has now elapsed for me to have heard from Dr. Armstrong, and unless either he or Mr. Howden speedily makes some attempt to answer the case against the Association, I shall form my own conclusions on what has already appeared. Having formed them, I shall also express them.

It was, I fear, in rather a weak moment that I admitted my ignorance of Dr. Hertzka and his proposed British Freeland Settlement in West Africa. For, as the result of my confession, I have been inundated with letters, and newspaper cuttings, and pamphlets dealing, and unfortunately dealing at great length, with the doctor and his proposed social experiment. To peruse all these communications was impossible, but I very pluckily tackled one of them, which professed to give a summary of what the British Freelanders call their "Social Gospel." It was not necessary, however, for me to finish even this one article; for when I read that the pioneers of the movement are to be armed with repeating rifles, revolvers, and American bowie knives, and that the aboriginal owners of the desiderated "Freeland" are to be attacked in case of any resistance on their part to their dispossession, with "a sharp fire from mortars and rocket batteries," why, I must confess that I cared to read no further. With any "social gospel" that has to be preached with repeating rifles and bowie knifes, I have not the slightest sympathy; whilst for the so-called "Freelanders" who propose to cement their brotherhood with mortars I feel something singularly akin to contempt.

If, as is assumed by those who favour the raid on the Matabele, it is the sacred mission of the British taxpayer to chastise and wipe out all powerful savage tribes which enslave or ill-treat other savage tribes, I would ask why do we overlook the state of things which has for a long time prevailed upon British territory in West Africa? On several occasions recently I have referred to the prevalence of slave-trading and slave-raiding in this Colony. Here, however, is a more impressive picture given to me by a gentleman thoroughly familiar with Sierra Leone. The italics are my own:—

> The fierce race which now darkens our frontier has never taken kindly to the monotony of a peaceful existence. They attempted not long ago to find a field for their plundering propensities in French territory, but the French, who certainly cannot be accused of indifference to the interests of their Colonies in Western Africa, promptly compelled them to move on.
>
> They now swarm on our frontier, and, encouraged by our apathy, have during the past sixteen months spread desolation over a vast tract of country. Towns which once were prosperous are now in ashes and their inhabitants in slavery. Yet the authorities have so far made no move. No accounts of the horrors that are being perpetrated have reached the public ear. The authorities, however, cannot plead ignorance of the actual state of affairs. Their own representative has verified the truth of the constant complaints that are being made. They are alarmed at the enormous increase of the slave trade. They know that at Kunitki, Koranko, Fulaba, and in the neighbourhood of Heremaconnah, British subjects are being plundered and sold into slavery and that a savage warfare is being waged on our frontier. But what answer do they make to the appeals from these unfortunate people for protection? They actually issue a proclamation and post it solemnly on a board outside the police barracks in Freetown. British rule has at last asserted itself and the terrified Sofas will now lay down their swords and begin to cultivate the arts of peace.

The tribes which commit the above-mentioned outrages and atrocities are not, like Lobengula's people, operating in a country which is theirs by right of conquest. They are raiding within the limits of one of the oldest British colonies. Why, then, is there no cry for "teaching a lesson" in this instance? The answer is simple: There is no gold in the region inhabited by these savages. They have not the misfortune to inhabit "the best country" in West Africa, and no "rich banket reef" is marked upon the map in the immediate vicinity of their head-quarters. As a consequence, no joint-stock Company proposes to exterminate them and acquire the property, no "chaplain" proclaims that a way must be made in this direction with bayonets and machine guns "for the spread of the glorious Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ," and no Bishop preaches a war of extermination.

It is indeed time that public attention was seriously directed to the slave traffic openly carried on in British territory upon the West African Coast. I have it from a gentleman occupying an official position there that not only is the slave trade as flourishing to-day as it was fifty or a hundred years ago, but that "the best slave market in the district" is held only about four miles from Freetown, on the opposite side of the river. The existence of this market, I am also told, is and has been for years known to the Government, but only the feeblest efforts have ever been made to suppress it. We spend annually enormous sums, and we are from time to time invited to embark on the most extravagant enterprises with a view of checking slavery in other parts of Africa. The Anti-Slavery Society has just been protesting to the Foreign Office because certain provisional regulations, made for an uncivilised "British Protectorate" on the East Coast, seem to imply a provisional recognition of the slavery which is a traditional social institution in that region. Surely some of the worthy people who are so much exercised in these directions can give their attention to what is going on in one of the oldest British Colonies under the very noses of British officials.

The event of last week in the House of Commons was the speech of Mr. G. Russell on Parish Councils. It is the first time in my recollection that a Government subordinate in one Department has risen from the Treasury Bench to take the conduct of a Bill brought in by the head of another Department out of his hands, and to explain that, although he sits on the Official Bench, all his sympathies are below the gangway, and that consequently he is addressing the House as a private member. This is a new departure; as to whether it be a sound one, opinions may differ. The question that now occupies men's minds is whether Mr. G. Russell will follow his sympathies or remain separated from them by the gangway.

The Duke of Argyll has been making another of the familiar speeches in which he proves to the satisfaction of himself and the Tory papers that Mr. Gladstone is unfit to be Prime Minister. The speech reads well, for the Duke is almost the best of our public speakers. So far, however, as I follow his argument, it is that as he suspects that he is himself suffering from senile decay, Mr. Gladstone must be in the same condition. I should be the last to quarrel with the premiss, but it is separated by an obvious gap from the conclusion.

The Duke also went on to recommend a perusal of a book of his own on Ireland. I am surprised that he did not take the opportunity of referring to his book on political economy, the argument of which, together with much of the matter, he has been accused of taking without leave from a previous work by Mr. Bain. It is hardly an accusation which a champion of the rights of property ought to ignore.

A correspondent (anonymous) sends me a paragraph from some newspaper (name of newspaper not given) in which it is stated that my complaints against the S.A. Chartered Company and denunciations of that true patriot Mr. Rhodes are the result of my having been "caught a 'Bear'" in the shares of the Company, and wishing to depreciate their price in order to "cover" this "Bear." I never bought nor sold a share in the concern in my life. In years gone by I used occasionally to go in for a speculation on the Stock Exchange, but I soon found that, what with commissions, &c., I was gambling with too heavy a percentage against me to make it a good business, and for many a long year I have never been either a "Bull" or a "Bear." Very likely gentlemen in the City, who can give their entire time to this sort of business, can make it pay. I am certain, however, that those who have other occupations which take up most of their time cannot do so.

As for these Chartered Company shares, they are valueless as an investment. The Company has spent all its capital, borrowed largely, and is now engaged in a war that involves a heavy expenditure. Assume that it is allowed to retain Matabeleland, the cost of administration, &c., there would exceed any profit derived from mining. I know that of late we have been told of the vast wealth of the "reefs" in that country. It seems, however, to be forgotten that, before going to Mashonaland the Company prospected these reefs, and decided to try its luck in Mashonaland because they did not appear to be rich. The raid into Matabeleland has for its object to get persons either to subscribe to a new issue of shares, or to lend money to the Company, on statements of the wealth of that country, although, in reality, gold, neither there nor in Mashonaland, exists in such paying quantities that sane human beings will engage in mining with an obligation to pay the royalty charged by the Company. In Matabeleland, as in Mashonaland, we shall, however, have persons getting hold of claims and selling them to fools at home to work them, with the strongest probability of more money going into the mine than will ever come out.

Mr. Rider Haggard also contributes letters to the Times lauding Mr. Rhodes and his gang as rather higher than angels, and those who dispute this as rather lower than devils. A reference to Blue Books shows that Mr. A. Haggard, of the "Austral Company," the brother, I think, of Mr. H. Rider Haggard, modified his unfavourable opinion of Mr. Rhodes when the Chartered Company bought up him and his Austral Company with shares of the Chartered Company or of the Concessions Company, I forget which. Fraternal affection, therefore, may be at the bottom of Mr. Rider Haggard's advocacy of the Chartered Company.

The Bishop of Derry, too, has favoured the world with letters in praise of the Chartered Company. I wondered why this estimable divine should have gone out of his way and out of his Diocese to do this. I am told that his daughter recently married the Postmaster at Fort Salisbury, one of Mr. Rhodes' employés and dependent for his future career upon the Company. Ex uno episcopo (I hope not) disce, &c.

We have seen plenty of indications these last few weeks of how the Missionaries and Mission Chaplains pander to the gold-hunger in South Africa. They seem, indeed, to be as badly bitten by it as anybody. The following extract from a letter I recently received from Johannesburg points in the same direction :—

> When Sir Hercules Robinson was booming the Chartered Company, garden parties used to be given, and there a well-known missionary used to hold forth on the gold wealth of Mashonaland and the Amandebele Country. Among other things he used to tell how from any river in the country rushes could be pulled, and how the dirt from these rushes, if shaken out and washed, would yield so much gold that several ounces per diem would be recovered in this way.
>
> Another of the reverend gentleman's stories used to be that as he was wandering along the banks of a streamlet in the Amandebele Country, musing upon the beauties of salvation, he suddenly came upon a number of Amandebele maidens frolicking in the water. Struck by the pastoral beauty of the scene, he paused and watched. He found that the nymphs were collecting nuggets of gold, which they put into baskets. Presently, weary of play, they came out of the water, and having selected the smallest nuggets, they threw the rest back into the stream, because the larger nuggets were the bulls and cows from which the calf, or smaller nuggets, were supposed to be bred.
>
> Many other stories were told, equally wild, but all meant to excite the imagination and stimulate the craze for the possession of this El Dorado.

The other day the Pall Mall Gazette published an interview with a South African gentleman, who descanted in equally glowing terms on the mineral wealth of Matabeleland, and this gentleman had also got a story from a missionary who had seen "a reef of simply marvellous richness" at Buluwayo itself. This godly man was evidently another of the same type.

Sir Hercules Robinson, who was Governor of the Cape when the Rudd concession was obtained from Lobengula, and who advised that it should be confirmed, writes a letter to the Times singing the praises of the South Africa Chartered Company, which he concludes by saying that his views are not influenced by any personal interests, as he has sold at a loss the few shares that he held in Mr. Rhodes' ventures. Sir Hercules figures amongst the shareholders of the Concessions Company as a holder of 2,500 shares, when that Company was brought into existence with a paper capital of four millions. Are we to understand that between what he paid (if he paid) for these shares and the price at which he sold them he was a pecuniary loser? Sir Hercules was also a shareholder in the De Beers Company, which is one of Mr. Rhodes' ventures, and he sold these shares. Did he lose money on this transaction?

We have had a good many communications in the newspapers from gentlemen puffing the Chartered Company of South Africa. In almost every case, all these gentlemen have been directly or indirectly interested in it financially. Mr. F. C. Selous has contributed "independent" puffs as a traveller, and a destroyer of lions or collector of butterflies (I forget which). It may, therefore, as well be known that in 1889 Mr Selous proposed to publish some articles proving conclusively that Mashonaland did not belong to Lobengula. Mr. Rhodes, hearing of this, paid him £2,000, and the two companions of his travels £700 each. The articles were not published, and Mr. Selous has become a strong adherent in the Press of the "rights" and virtues of the Company. Ex uno.

Sir Lepel Griffin has written an article in the Nineteenth Century entitled "England and France in Asia," which presumably sets forth the views of the school of Anglo-Indians to which he belongs. Sir Lepel starts with the proposition that "the hatred of France to the Germans is faint compared with that which they feel to England." They wish, he opines, to revenge not only Trafalgar and Waterloo, but Cressy and Agincourt. These hereditary foes have the extraordinary pretension to wish to have a share in the commerce of the East, and they have lately added to their iniquities by entering into an alliance with Russia, "the shadow of whose eclipse, sweeping across Persia and Central Asia until it has reached the frontiers of India and Afghanistan," Sir Lepel has sadly watched year after year. What, then, does the Anglo-Indian sage propose? That a new Asiatic Department should be created, with an Ex-Viceroy of India at its head, and four Under-Secretaries of State under him. This Department is to negotiate a defensive alliance between us and China. Fortified by the existence of an Asiatic Department, and by guaranteeing to China all her dominions, Sir Lepel thinks that we may perhaps hold our own in the East, provided that "apathy and the sordid exigencies of Party" are not allowed to darken our counsels, and that the English people will "vote a Navy sufficient for the varied requirements of this great Empire, with its sea-borne commerce equal to that of all other countries together," the Alpha and Omega of English politics being that "we must have an overwhelming Navy."

Unfortunately, however, or, as I should call it, fortunately, if this scheme were ever likely to reach the confines of practical politics, "the inherent suspicion of Europeans which inspires the Chinese Government and its obstructive and bigoted Tsung-li-Yamên, or Foreign Board, and on our side the apathy displayed towards the interests of England in the far East by the British Foreign Office, renders the task of giving effect to it difficult." That the Tsung-li-Yamên should object to our guaranteeing China against all her enemies does certainly seem foolish, although possibly the Chinese may have heard of the hen that accepted the offer of the fox to protect it against all comers. What, however, Sir Lepel would find more difficult to get over than the Tsung-li-Yamên would be the British electors, who would most expeditiously turn out of office any Ministry that concluded such an alliance.

All this wild imagining proceeds from the notion that, in some mysterious way, we are the vice-gerents of heaven in Asia, and that any European Power that seeks to extend its influence or commerce in that part of the world ought to be treated as an enemy to our divine mission. To enforce this view we should require, not only an "overwhelming navy," but an overwhelming army; and an overwhelming taxation. Within our own possessions in India we ought to be masters; outside them we have no more rights than any other European Power. These Powers would be, perhaps, wise not to meddle with what does not belong to them, but if they do annex territory, we certainly should be the very last to throw a stone at them.

SCRUTATOR.

BALDWIN, BORDERLAND, AND BALDERDASH.

The "Medium" Unmasks Himself.

"PROFESSOR" BALDWIN has not accepted the challenge which I addressed to him last week in the joint names of Mr. Maskelyne and myself. This does not surprise me. What Baldwin has done, however, surprises me greatly. In face of the report in Borderland of the séance which he gave, and of his own statements there reproduced as to his own powers and those of his wife, he has the hardihood to write me a long letter asserting that he has never performed as a spirit medium, or represented himself or his wife to be endowed with occult gifts of any kind. A great deal of his letter I do not feel under any obligation to publish, but that part of it which bears upon the Borderland article had better be given at once in his own words, in order that we may see (if possible) where we are. Mr. Baldwin's stationery, I may remark, is headed "The Butterfly Specialty Company: Spiritualism Exposed," and the Butterfly Company apparently comprises "Prof. S. S. Baldwin, the Spirit King;" "Clara Baldwin, Thought Reader;" and "Kate Russell, the Modern Witch of Endor." Such were the sources from which Mr. Stead's "Minister of religion" sought enlightenment respecting the Spirit World. Mr. Baldwin says:—

Cardiff, November 1, 1893.

Editor of "Truth,"—I believe that your sense of fairness will be such that you will willingly publish this letter as a reply to the five pages in last week's Truth wherein you denounce me as "The Latest Spiritualistic Fraud."

You are completely in error in every way. The extracts I enclose, including press notices, advertisements, &c., will show you that for twenty years I have been an open, avowed, and well-advertised exposer of spiritualism. The programme issued by me to my audiences contains these extracts:—

"The Programme

Presented by the Butterfly Coterie is one of great interest and merriment. No Company in Europe or America causes more hearty yet innocent mirth. . . . ."

"The portion of the entertainment presented by Professor and Mrs. Baldwin is mostly one of peculiar Escamoterie; duplicating the so-called supernatural manifestations of the most noted spiritual mediums; all this, however, is shown in the bright light, and in many cases explanations are given, demonstrating exactly the secret of the most mysterious phenomena."

"Somnomancy (i.e., sleep reading or dream portrayals), is a word self coined by Professor Baldwin to name the peculiar and strange results given by Mrs. Kittie Baldwin in their public entertainments. Professor Baldwin is an illusionist, or, as the French say, an escamoteur . . . ."

"SPECIAL EXPLANATION TO THE PUBLIC.

"Professor Baldwin wishes it distinctly understood that he does not claim that either himself or Mrs. Baldwin possesses any occult or supernatural power. . . .

"Professor Baldwin is an escamoteur and 'deceptionist,' who desires to produce an exciting, interesting, and bewildering entertainment, and all his talk must be understood as being to that effect, and must be taken cum grano salis.

"In the somnomancy Professor Baldwin does not claim that Mrs. Baldwin can answer all, or even any one question that may be thought of or written by people in the audience. . . .

"Professor Baldwin does not believe in the supernatural or occult. In his opinion the manifestations of the mediums, the sorcery of the vogii, and the mysticism of the Mahatmas are wonderful only because not generally understood. . . . ."

In the programme which is used every night there are ten paragraphs announcing my absolute disbelief in the supernatural or occult, my perfect disbelief in spiritualism, and my deliberate opinion that so-called spirit manifestations are produced by trickery, and are only wonderful because not understood. I can give you my printer's sworn certificate that the programmes containing these extracts are also used weekly by me as handbills, and that I have used between two and three hundred thousand of them in twelve months. You yourself are not more pronounced in your opinions as to spiritualistic work, nor do you give more or greater publicity to your disbelief than I do.

I also enclose this small "dodger" (or hand-bill) which is distributed nightly to my audiences. Note the displayed headline:—

"SPECIAL NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

"Professor Baldwin wishes his intending patrons to understand that, while his entertainment is most bewildering and enjoyable in all its phases, yet he distinctly disclaims the possession of any occult, supernatural, or super mundane power, or the use of any such forces, by either Mrs. Baldwin or himself. Professor Baldwin, like other performers, desires to make his entertainment as exciting and bewildering as possible, but it is only reasonable to suppose that his talk and 'patter' is (sic) part of the necessary skill used to make his entertainment an artistic success. The talk of Professor Baldwin, or any other illusionist, must never be taken seriously. It is the business of an illusionist to deceive, and the talk is part of the deception, &c., &c."

A number of other extracts from his handbills and advertisements are here given by the "Professor"; but what I have quoted are more than enough to prove his point. But all this merely bears upon the public performance of the "Butterfly Company," which was only casually mentioned in my last article. My remarks upon Baldwin were based upon the report of the séance with the Nonconformist Minister, and that only. What does Baldwin say as to that?—

Now as to Borderland. I am suffering from a chronic inflammation of, and hæmorrhage from, the bladder, and a few weeks ago it laid me up completely, as it has done several times this past year. I was ill and resting; my entertainments had concluded, and I had nothing to gain by any more local notoriety. A clergyman wrote earnestly requesting an interview. He did not say why he wished to see me. I replied that I was ill, and did not care to see callers, but as he desired so much to see me I would make an exception in his case. He called on me, and in the conversation I distinctly stated my disbelief in spiritualism. I went farther, and denied the existence entirely of spirits. I said I was a materialist. During the talk the name of Foster, the medium, was mentioned, and I said that I had received a number of séances from him. The clergyman expressed his great desire to see something of the sort, so I said, "I will try and give you a duplication of one of Foster's séances. I will not make any claim of any sort; you must assume the position of an investigator, you must doubt and distrust me, and take all precautions against deception. I will, for the time being at least, assume the character of a medium. I do not believe in spiritualism, but I will give you these experiments without making any claim, and you can call it what you please. I will give you as it were a replica of a spiritual séance, and you must not take my word for anything, but use solely your own judgment." Now, bear in mind that at the time these experiments were given I made no charge, my work in the town was over, and I did not then know that the results would be published in Borderland. It was a pain and a trouble to me, and I did not ask, nor did I get, even one penny. Like Mr. Maskelyne in his Daffy-down-dilly séances, I assumed to be a medium (first carefully stating my disbelief in spiritualism). The clergyman, at the conclusion of the experiments, said he intended to write to Mr. Stead as to what he had seen, and I saw no reason why he should not. He had written me asking for an interview. I did not seek him, and would much rather he had not called, for I needed the rest and leisure. When he did call, I treated him courteously, and politely expressed my disbelief in spiritual forces, and at his own request gave him a duplication of a spiritual séance. He had never seen a spiritual séance, and wanted to see what he could, and I tried my best to oblige him. I admit that if I had known it would have excited him, I would not have given it, for I really liked him, and only desired to gratify him.

One thing I can say, that whatever means were used, Mr. Maskelyne's explanations are not correct; that method is far too old and worn out. This is the true history of the séance. As showing that I did not claim to be a real or true spiritual medium, but only for the nonce assumed the character (after due and fair warning), I here quote from Borderland, page 142, lines 58 to 62, where Mr. Stead says:—"So far from there being any desire on the part of Professor Baldwin to convince my friend as to the reality of the spirit world, he does not seem to have any belief himself in its existence."

On page 144, lines 30 and 31, the clergyman says:—"He speaks as if he were a materialist, for he cannot conceive of the existence of a pure spirit without some sort of body." In lines 39 to 43, he says:—"Going into his history" (i.e., my own), "he said, 'I spent some years in America exposing the humbug attached to spiritualism, and received numerous letters from ministers of all denominations, including Henry Ward Beecher, thanking me for my exposures.'" So much for Borderland. Of course, I am not responsible for Mr. Stead's sensational heading to the article.

As the rest of the letter deals exclusively with the merits of Baldwin's show and Mr. Maskelyne's, with neither of which I am in the least degree concerned, I see no reason why I need trouble my readers with it. They will take for granted that Baldwin objects to my suggesting that his wife's performance is such as is frequently given "by professional entertainers," and that he very cordially reciprocates Mr. Maskelyne's opinion of himself as an illusionist. If, as he informs me, he intends shortly to bring his entertainment to London, the public will then have a sufficient opportunity of judging for themselves how far he is or is not right in his opinion both of his own show and Mr. Maskelyne's.

I had intended, as I mentioned last week, to give Mr. Maskelyne's explanation of Mrs. Baldwin's performance, which is attributed in Borderland to the possession of a mystic power denied to ordinary mortals. But, as I now understand that both the "Professor" and his wife emphatically disclaim the possession of any such power, and profess to perform nothing but "escamoterie" and "illusion," there is not the slightest reason for further discussing Baldwin's public entertainment. Even if Baldwin had not sent me his disclaimer, it would scarcely have been necessary for me to explain the performance at any great length. Since my last article, it has come to my notice that the clairvoyance part of the business has already been subjected to at least one exposure in the Press, and a very clever account of the whole modus operandi was published last June in a little Glasgow journal called Quiz. It would seem that at that time Baldwin did not lay quite so much stress on the purely natural character of the phenomena as he does at present, and the writer in Quiz states that he evidently desired to convey the impression that Mrs. Baldwin really was in a mesmerised condition when she gave her answers. However, after what Baldwin has said in his letter, it is not worth while to pursue this matter further.

Now let us come to the only matter with which I intend to deal, the "Report" on Baldwin and his wife, published in Borderland. Baldwin now seeks to convey that he did not pose to Mr. Stead's correspondent in any other character than that which he assumes in his programme and advertisements, above quoted. This contention I absolutely decline to accept. It is true that in the passages which he cites from Borderland Baldwin is spoken of as a materialist, who does not accept any spiritualistic explanation of the phenomena which he produces. But it is equally true that in passage after passage of the "Report" he is represented as claiming to be the medium of some mysterious force, which operates through his hands, and enables him to answer questions the nature of which he does not know; and the séance is put forward as an exhibition of the operation of this mysterious force, and nothing else. For instance, Mr. Stead's cleric thus reproduces the account which Baldwin gave of himself:—

SANITARY SURVEYS.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

> For two years he gave psychic séances in private in America, charging a fee for each interview. The bulk of his receipts were those which came from his own clients who consulted him dozens of times. Men of business used to come for advice on practical matters. The moment they entered he addressed them by name, and frequently answered their questions and told them all they wanted to know before they had spoken a single word.
>
> HIS SÉANCES.
>
> He then described to me the way in which his séances were usually conducted. "We sit opposite to each other at the table. I get my client to write his question to some dead friend, fold it up and throw it on to the table. Then I take a sheet of paper, and altogether apart from my own will my hand moves rapidly and writes an answer to it. Then in a positively miraculous way a brief answer is written, say, in one or two words, upon the question-paper itself as it lies folded and held in the hand of the man, and that often in the very handwriting of the dead person to whom the question was addressed."
>
> "All this," said the Professor, "is done by an inscrutable force. There is no chicanery about it and no trickery in it. What the force is I do not know. I believe it is a natural force, the properties of which we do not yet understand. It may be electricity, or magnetism, or something akin to it." I suggested that a force which gave a rational intelligible answer to a rational intelligible question, proposed by a rational intelligent being, must itself be something more than a mere mechanical force. It must be a rational intelligent being itself. To this he cordially agreed. . . .—(Borderland, p. 144.)

Again:—

> He gave me a séance without fee or reward of any kind, and for no earthly object except to satisfy my intellectual curiosity, and my yearning for a higher and deeper knowledge of this wonderful world in which we live, and the forces, the intelligences, and the powers amid which we dwell. I was also much struck by the shrewd, practical common-sense of the man; his contempt for the narrow bigotry of the men with shut minds, whether educated or uneducated, who can see nothing in these startling quasi-supernatural phenomena except trickery and chicanery, and the ebullitions of the mind of a crack-brained enthusiast.—(Ibid.)

This is the man who now writes to me (one of "the men with shut minds"):—

> You yourself are not more pronounced as to your opinions as to spiritualistic work, nor do you give more or greater publicity to your disbelief than I do.

Here, again, are some of the cleric's concluding observations on the séance:—

> There is no possibility of trickery, or chicanery, or deception of any kind here, so far as I can see; and I state upon my word of honour that there was absolutely no gammon and no collusion between us; nothing but perfect sanity and sobriety of judgment, and perfect integrity and sincerity of purpose throughout. . . . I have no theory on which to account for these remarkable phenomena. The "trick" hypothesis seems to me to be precluded by the conditions . . .—(Borderland, p. 148.)

All this shows clearly enough that the person supposed himself to be witnessing a manifestation of occult force of some kind. But not only did Baldwin deceive him on this point; he also deceived him in regard to Mrs. Baldwin's powers, Mrs. Baldwin aiding and abetting the deception. I would invite the reader first to cast his eye back to the profuse published accounts, quoted above, that the whole entertainment is more "escamoteric," or deception, and compare them with the following passages of the Borderland "Report," professedly a reproduction of Baldwin's statements to the reverend reporter:—

> "Mrs. Baldwin is mesmerised, and gets into a kind of dream state, in which she is in a kind of hyperæsthetic condition, and is able to take in impressions, vibrations, or whatever they are, which neither she nor anybody else would be able to do in their ordinary waking state. Whatever may be the physical disturbances which are set up in the æther (or whatever else it may be that surrounds her) when a thought passes through the mind, or an event takes place in time and space, she is often, but not always, able while in this state to get an impression of it, and so to read and interpret it. . . . . She, whilst in this state of trance, is not cognisant of anything except what I tell her, and if the place was on fire she would be burned to death if not carried out, or if I did not wake her. . . . . There are only three or four people in the world" (continued the Professor) "who have so much this inscrutable power which my wife has." . . . .

This is the individual who "wishes it distinctly understood that he does not claim that either himself or Mrs. Baldwin possesses any occult or supernatural power." I defy Baldwin, or his reporter, or his editor, to find any intelligible means of reconciling those statements put into his mouth in Borderland with those which he makes in his public announcements and in his letter to me. Will he repudiate the Borderland report? Will he deny that he told his clerical dupe that he answers questions by the prompting of "an inscrutable force," the nature of which he does not know, or that he told him that Mrs. Baldwin, when giving her oracular responses under the sheet, is in "a hyperæsthetic condition," in which she is able to read the future and the thoughts of her interrogators by "the disturbances set up in the æther which surrounds her"? If he wanted to take that line, it is too late. He cannot impeach the bona fides of his reporter, for in an interview with a Cardiff journalist upon the last TRUTH article he describes Mr. Stead's correspondent as "a gentleman and an honest man, if ever there was one in this world." If he desired to question the accuracy of the report, he should have done it long ago. In fact, if the shuffling explanation which he now gives was to be given at all, it should have been published on the appearance of the Borderland "Report" in the middle of last month, three weeks before my article on the subject. Baldwin is good enough to say that "if he had known it would have excited him (his clerical friend), he would not have given the séance at all." Was a more empty attempt at self-defence ever offered? He knew that this unfortunate gentleman supposed himself to have been in communication with his deceased tutor, father, and brothers. Even if he did not perceive at the time the effect that it had had upon his mind, he could see it plainly when he read the Borderland article. If, as he says, he "really liked him and only desired to gratify him," why did he not at once make it plain that the whole thing was a trick, and that the only spirit which had prompted him was that of the notorious swindler, Foster? No, no, Baldwin. It won't do. You may have been for twenty years exposing mediums, but it is only too plain that on this occasion you were tempted to play the medium yourself. The consequence is that instead of the exposer you are now the exposed.

Not only did Baldwin cruelly dupe this "honest man,

MINTON'S (Limited). MINTON'S CHINA.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

if ever there was one," but he appears to have even tried to bamboozle my acute and judicious friend, Mr. Stead. The "honest man's" Report is prefaced by a letter, which Baldwin seems to have himself addressed to the Editor of Borderland. In this letter he explains that he was formerly a professed medium, but got disgusted with the spiritualists because they are such an incredulous set, and impose such unreasonable tests. (That stroke is really a masterpiece on Baldwin's part.) He consequently became a showman, and made money; but (he continues):—

> I have also got a sort of "don't care a damn" feeling for the ordinary run of spiritual testings. Once in a while I run across an honest man whose whole soul is aglow with a desire to investigate, in order to do more good (like the Rev. Mr. A. here), then I take pains and time for pure courtesy's sake to show him what I can; to open the doors a little (and it is only a little I can open them), into soul-land . . . Still, some day I will see you and give you some tests, and I am sure you will believe, for you do know a little [illegible].

How does this reference to the Rev. Mr. A. agree with his present contention that the séance was understood on both sides to be "a mere replica of a spiritual séance"? Whether, when Mr. Stead compares these and other utterances of the ingenuous Baldwin with those which that individual has addressed to me, his whole soul will still be aglow for a peep through Baldwin's door into "soul-land," I cannot say. But should this proffered interview ever come off, I would strongly advise Mr. Stead first to fortify himself by a consultation with Mr. Maskelyne.

As the case now stands, I can remember no more ludicrous and ignominious fiasco than this in the whole history of spiritualism and the kindred arts. Observe what it comes to. A Nonconformist divine—doubtless a very learned and a very worthy man, but as ripe for deception as a bumpkin at a fair-goes to a travelling conjuror's show. He sees a mesmerised lady under a sheet perform a "clairvoyance" trick, which, to my knowledge, has been in one form or another an ordinary feature of conjurors' shows for the last half-century. He is told over and over again by the mesmerised lady and her husband that they make no claim to mysterious or occult powers, and that the whole business is mere trick and illusion. But this is more than his reverence can believe. He interviews three persons (apparently out of about fifty) whose questions have been answered by the mesmeric lady. He finds, he says, that "there was no trickery, no collusion, and no possibility of deception in the matter" (Borderland, p. 143). You see, he absolutely insists upon endowing the mesmeric lady and her spouse with the powers which they do everything in their power to repudiate. In this frame of mind he seeks them out in private life, and then they give way, and fool him to the top of his bent. Who can wonder? In their place, I am afraid I should have been tempted to do the same thing myself. They explain to him how Mrs. B.'s hyperæsthetic consciousness is affected when the surrounding æther is disturbed by some one thinking hard in the same apartment. Baldwin—to do him justice, only after considerable pressure—consents to call five departed spirits from the vasty deep with the aid of Foster's "thought-pellet" trick. The cleric is persuaded that he has taken "a step into the unseen universe." "A new world was opened to him." In order to make quite sure on this point, he consults Mr. Maskelyne. Mr. Maskelyne obligingly furnishes him with a complete explanation of Foster's trick, and of the clairvoyance business; but it is too late. "If I accept your explanation," says the infatuated gentleman, "I must regard Baldwin as an impostor—which is impossible;" so he goes off to Mr. Stead, in order that his marvellous experience may be published, for the enlightenment of all other seekers after truth, in the columns of Borderland. Mr. Stead, who, whatever his weaknesses, always has a wonderful eye for business, at once perceives the importance of the discovery. He himself communicates with Baldwin, and learns that that worthy is ready to give even him—the inspired of "Julia"—a glimpse into soul-land. Fortified by this, and "a mass of newspaper cuttings," Mr. Stead is able to certify, ex cathedrâ, that "there is no doubt that Professor Baldwin and his wife have wonderful gifts" (though, unfortunately, he has not had time to study them personally), and, with this impressive warranty, and a dig at "the men with shut minds," like Professors Huxley and Ray Lankester, the "Puzzling Problem" is propounded to a gaping public. The problem is no sooner propounded than it is answered in TRUTH, and, without more ado, Baldwin throws over his clerical and journalistic advertisers, and admits that the answer is the correct one.

Ought we to laugh at it? Well, the funny side of it is the most conspicuous, but it has a serious side, too. There is pathos enough in the figure of the poor "minister of religion" who finds in a showman's tricks the wherewithal to combat his "proneness to scepticism," and to revive "his early faith in God, immortality, duty, prayer." There is downright tragedy in the history of hundreds of other weak-headed fools whose lives have been ruined by tricks not a degree less clumsy or transparent. The truth is that the "borderland" in which Mr. Stead is groping, and into which he blithely invites thousands of readers to follow him, is nothing more than the neutral territory between sanity and madness, as well as the traditional hunting-ground of some of the most mischievous rogues and blackguards on the face of the earth. Few persons can travel there for long without losing either their wits or their purses. It seems to me the duty of every man who has influence with his fellow-creatures to warn them away. I warn them accordingly.

THE MAN LEIGH SAMPSON.

There is a man of the name of Leigh Sampson who paints pictures, and at one time and another attention has been called in TRUTH to the methods by which he endeavours to dispose of his paintings. For some time past little has been heard of him by the public, and I had hoped that he had seen the error of his ways. As I have recently learned, however, that he is still pursuing his former course, I think it right to let the public know what sort of man he is.

Very naturally, my former references to him did not meet with Sampson's approval. He vented his feelings by bringing out a publication called the Mongoose, which contained nothing but his own opinions about each paragraph and article in the current number of TRUTH. It seems that the public were not greedy to peruse Sampson's opinions about my opinions, and consequently the first number of the Mongoose was the last. I first heard of it in this way: I was sitting at Twickenham one Saturday night some few months ago, when, about 11 p.m., my servant brought me a letter, and said that a man was waiting for an answer outside. This was the letter:—

42, Waldemar Avenue, Fulham, S.W.
June 16, 1893.
Saturday night.

Mr. H. Labouchere, M.P.

Sir,—I cannot longer endure your attacks upon me. Although I have written and printed a paper, the Mongoose, I feel it is no satisfaction to my honour.

You give me a precedent for what I am about to so. Some ten to fifteen years ago, you challenged Edward Levy Lawson to fight you a duel. The coward refused. Now, sir, I challenge you, and I will fight you in this honourable way. The duel to take place in Belgium and to be fought with revolvers at thirty paces, six shots to be fired until one of us two is either dead or wounded beyond quick recovery.

My wife to second me—I have no other friend.

You can choose whom you like, and bring a doctor or not as you please.

You are a man of years, old enough to be my father, and if you choose to let Horace Voules fight me in place of you, well and good. I shall be glad—but I beg you, nay, entreat you to give me an answer speedily. I am going mad, and shall soon be insane unless you give me a chance to redeem my honour.

My life is of no value, I have been a pauper always, but still I have never dishonoured the name my dear father left me. I am here outside your house waiting your reply.—Your respectfully, L. SAMPSON.

I replied that I could not see the man, as he seemed to be a lunatic, and so he went away, after saying that if he did not receive an answer by Monday he should publish in all the newspapers of the country that I was a scoundrel.

The next day he called again and left the following letter:—

42, Waldemar Avenue, Fulham, S.W., London,
Sunday, June 18, 1893.

Mr. Henry Labouchere.

SIR,—Your butler last night said you had never heard of me. That is curious, considering that five times within the last fifteen months you have publicly ridiculed my efforts to gain a livelihood for myself, my mother, wife, and family, which includes ailing sisters and an unemployed brother.

I am the artist you have been so valiantly "exposing" in TRUTH!

Your ignorance of my journal, the Mongoose, can soon be ended, for here is a copy of the first and only number for you to read.

Need I add that, like all else I have done, it has failed to achieve success? I think you will admit, however, that I have at least tried to deserve it on this occasion. I wrote it with the whole of my heart.

My reason for challenging you to a duel is that you have by your attack upon me in your paper prevented me from selling my pictures and earning bread for the many I keep.

It is neither more nor less than a very cold-blooded attempt to murder me and mine by the slow process of starvation. You publicly advised, some six or seven weeks ago, that no one should buy my pictures, simply because I send out lithographed circulars asking permission to send down a work for inspection. Now, no one will buy of me. I enclose you also the last of my circulars, of which only one hundred were sent out. One out of that hundred reached you, and you, or one of your assistants, called it a piece of sublime audacity, and said I was unworthy of any patronage.

Is it a crime, then, to get bread for those I love?

Regarding your attack as a cold-blooded attempt to murder me, I have offered you the opportunity to show a little mercy for once in your life.

I wish to die quickly and honourably, considering your bullet a kinder friend than the Master of that workhouse to which you are driving me and mine. LEIGH SAMPSON.

I had not remembered the man's name when I received his letter, but on inquiry I learned why he was thirsting for my blood. Some of my readers may recollect the circumstances under which he has been referred to. He first came under my notice in connection with a picture which he painted representing the betrothal of the Duke of Clarence. Engravings of this were sent out in all directions by him on approval. The carriage on these parcels was not paid, and the parties who received this unsolicited compliment were not only expected to pay for it, but to pack the picture up and send it back if they did not want it. Complaints on the subject having appeared in various papers, TRUTH being one, Sampson called at this office and explained that the omission to pay the carriage was an oversight. This explanation I published at his request. Nevertheless, after a time he fell again into the same oversight, as will appear from the following letter which appeared in the Standard of May 26 in reference to him:—

"FOURPENCE TO PAY."

To the Editor of the "Standard."

SIR,—I advise your readers in London and in the neighbourhood if a parcel, apparently containing an engraving, reaches them by the London Parcels Delivery Company, with fourpence to pay, to give orders that the money be not paid, and to return the parcel to the Company.

A gentleman, who calls himself an artist, is occupying himself at the present moment with sending out appeals for subscribers to an engraving of a picture which he says he has recently painted. In order to accomplish his object he is good enough to enclose between two thick sheets of brown paper a reduced—and it is a very much reduced—engraving of the said picture. And, to protect himself from any unnecessary outlay, he sends it to you by the London Parcels Delivery Company without payment, the result being that when you have handed over your fourpence and opened the parcel, you find it contains what is not worth a farthing.

Would it not be as well for the London Parcels Delivery Company to exercise some discretion in cases of parcels of this description entrusted to their care in large numbers?—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, M. W.

May 25.

 We have received numerous complaints to the same effect.

Since then several correspondents have sent me lithographed appeals, in which Sampson solicits the purchase of his pictures as an act of charity to various destitute relatives who are dependent on him, and asking to be allowed to forward a picture on approval. As there seemed some discrepancy in the recital of facts on which this appeal was based, and as the man's method of procedure generally exposed him to suspicion, I cautioned those who received his circulars against regarding him as a deserving object of charity. As to the merits of his pictures, I do not know and have not said anything. This is the ground on which he thinks that I should endeavour to shoot him, and also give him an opportunity of shooting me—either personally or by deputy.

Finding that I had no desire to oblige him in this direction, he took a new line. A paragraph had appeared in TRUTH, giving some details of a local occurrence which a lady of my acquaintance had asked me to publish. To this lady Sampson addressed the following letter:—

42, Waldemar-avenue, Fulham, S.W., London,
June 20, 1892.

MY LADY,—I beg to respectfully enclose your Ladyship a copy of a journal I have designed and written, entitled The Mongoose.

It will be a critical dissection of TRUTH week by week.

Mr. Henry Labouchere has thought fit to occupy a position to which he is not entitled by his merits.

He aspires to be not only the Dictator of social life, but absolute Ruler of the Universe.

I enclose also a circular letter to send round asking people to subscribe, but I regret to say want of capital has prevented my paper succeeding.

As this man has thought fit to libel your relatives and friends (vide TRUTH, June 25, 1891), and also your esteemed husband (vide the number for July 23, 1891), I beg to ask you if you will assist me privately to establish my journal.

I have a caustic pen, my sympathies are with the Crown, and I hope to defend her Majesty (God bless her!) from the attacks of this bitter destroyer of the nation's peace.

I will follow him week after week and expose his practices in a royal fashion.

All who are slandered by TRUTH, and who can prove a good case, shall have the use of my columns in reply to this political monster and social fiend.

I may add quite frankly that I have a personal bone to pick with this Radical Diamond. He has taken me to task, and has heaped ridicule upon me.

My profession is that of an artist, and as I have been unable to sell my pictures in the ordinary channels, I have sent out lithographed circulars asking for patronage.

Thinking me defenceless, this disloyal man has insulted me. I have twice challenged him to a duel and twice he has refused!

He is a coward, my Lady, as well as a villain.

The only way I can bring him to book is by analysing his lies and filth.

I think that with God's help I can make him smart. My pen is strong—my heart fearless.

I will either crush him or he shall me.

I am trying to raise a few pounds to fight him with. I am in a position to offer my pictures only as security, but no risk will be attached to anybody but me.

If I can get money I will buy a printing-press and type.

I will take off my coat and write, and I will then help to compose my denunciation.

Will your Ladyship help me? And if so, my Lady, will you see me? I could then explain my plan.—I am, with respect, your Ladyship's very humble servant,

LEIGH SAMPSON.

This was followed by a second letter again urging a request for money. "I would not dare," he says, "to adddress your Ladyship but for the fact that I am exceedingly anxious to be the Editor of that Journal."

It was not only to this lady that he applied for assistance, as will be seen from the next letter. On July 1, the following curious composition was addressed by him to my colleague, whom he had desired to have the pleasure of shooting as my substitute:—

42, Waldemar-avenue, Fulham, S.W., July 1, 1893.

MR. VOULES.—Sir,—You hate me, and you may guess how I hate you.

You and Mr. L. are bent upon ruining me and degrading my mother and sisters; you will not fight, I cannot murder you, so you have me at your mercy (!!) (?)

The more so, as my little sprightly mongoose is dead of hunger. Believing its little new-born body was not quite cold, I sought wet-nurses in the people you have joyously libelled the past two years. They are a sad crew, they are milk-less.

One among them who, from his bulk and importance, coupled with the stings you have tried to implant about his person, I thought would have been but too glad to have placed his hot teat within my infant's mouth, was approached humbly enough by me a few hours ago. I innocently begged a drink, and he somewhat rudely knocked me down and placed his hoof about my stomach.

He has a logical mind, however, and in chastising me, he generously gave his reasons.

As I am a kicker too, I have answered him with a will, and at the present moment, I doubt not, he is sorry he meddled impudently with the womb which conceived my little mongoose.

He is a dear "old friend" of yours, Sir Somers Vine, and as you are fond of fun and interested in both of us, I send you his letter and my humble reply.

With an expression of undying hatred for the misery you have brought about my house,—I am, yours in reality,

LEIGH SAMPSON.

Enclosed was the letter—a perfectly courteous and inoffensive one—which Sir Somers Vine had written in answer to his appeal for funds, and Sampson's reply to the letter. Thus it will be seen that Sampson writes to a man whom he thinks likely to have a grudge against TRUTH, in the hope of obtaining from him money for his own use. The person thus addressed politely declines. Thereupon Sampson writes him an impudent letter, and further relieves his feelings by sending to TRUTH a copy of the correspondence. This throws, I think, interesting light on the man. I need not trouble my readers with this correspondence, but I think I can safely say that in cherishing the belief that Sir Somers Vine was writhing beneath his sarcasms, Sampson was deceiving himself.

The receipt of this and other letters of his at TRUTH Office threw an entirely new light upon Leigh Sampson. A remarkable similarity was observed between his handwriting and that of my unknown friend, who for some weeks during last summer was amusing himself at the expense of London tradesmen by ordering them to send me goods. I therefore handed over all his correspondence to the police. They shadowed him for some little time, but found out little more about him than that he spent a considerable time at public houses and a particular chemist's shop, and in going from one to the other. Whether he really is my "unknown friend" I cannot say for certain, but appearances point in that direction; and it is a remarkable fact that after he found himself being watched, no more tradesmen were annoyed in this way. The next I heard of him was through his addressing another of his Micawber-like epistles to the same lady mentioned above. This is the document:—

42, Waldemar-avenue, Fulham, London, S.W., August 15, 1893.

MY LADY,—I have the extreme happiness and honour to inform you that a gentleman of birth and of high position has seen and read my Mongoose, and I am to have his support (financial and moral) in bringing out my journal. He has been persistently libelled by the Wise Man of Northampton for the past two years, and has hailed with delight the prospect of seeing this exceedingly smart engineer hoisted with his own petard.

At the end of September we hope to commence publication. I am at present contracting with the printers, and I can only say that any items of fashionable intelligence with which you may favour me from time to time shall receive instant consideration.

Every honest man and woman who are bitten by this half-insane and half-malicious ground reptile shall have the use of my columns as an antidote.

Special articles on Art, Music, the Drama, and Literature will appear each week, and while I shall see a just criticism is never omitted from a tender feeling for the author or artist, yet if the elect of Northampton goes out of his way to ridicule any honest man's honest efforts to get fame and bread, I will, with God's help, crush the lie at its wretched birth.

He has had a free hand hitherto, be mine the duty to shackle his shafts with the weights of Justice and Humanity, two principles unknown to the writers of Carteret-street.

I should like to know that the very last picture I shall ever paint, in all probability, finds favour in your Ladyship's eyes? The price of £25 is not a high one.

I am no longer in need of appealing for patronage of my brush, for my pen is a sturdier weapon, and will, if I am not greatly mistaken, find me bread and bed without begging.

I hope for an early reply, and, with great respect, remain, my Lady, your Ladyship's very obedient servant,

LEIGH SAMPSON.

P.S.—I am under promise not to reveal my patron's name at present.—L. S.

Here, it will be noted, is an explicit statement that Sampson has obtained the capital for his contemplated publication, and is making arrangements for its production about the end of September. It is also definitely stated that he has laid aside his paint-brush for good, and on this plea he endeavours to induce a lady (whom he supposes to share his sentiments towards me) to pay £25 for "in all probability the very last picture he will ever paint." What truth is there in these representations? The end of September has come and gone; the end of October has followed it; but the Mongoose has not yet begun to delight and instruct the public. Apparently there is no immediate probability of its doing so, for a week or two back Sampson was once more at his old game, writing in the character of "a young Liverpool painter," and endeavouring to find a purchaser for his picture on the plea that he is the sole support of a large family.

In view of this last performance, I now give this recital of my experience of Sampson, in order that all to whom he may appeal, whether to provide cash to start a newspaper, or to purchase a picture for the sake of his large and destitute family, may see what character of man he is, and what value is to be attached to his statements. As regards the Mongoose, nothing would please me better than to see this journal on its legs, and going its weekly rounds, for it is obvious that anybody who is to understand the literary masterpieces of its editor, must previously expend sixpence on a copy of TRUTH. If any one with a grudge against me, editorially or personally, desires to revenge himself by such means, I should not wish to stand in his way. I cannot, however, go so far as to recommend it as an investment. As regards the merits of his pictures, I repeat I know nothing, and I make no pretensions to be a connoisseur of such productions; but as it is obvious, from what I have said, that the artist's statements are not to be relied upon, I recommend patrons of art to judge his works solely on their merits, and to pay no attention to what he says about his starving family, until they have verified the facts from other quarters. My first impression about Leigh Sampson was that he was a lunatic. But there is too much method in his madness for it to be genuine. That he suffers from occasional attacks of mental aberration no one who reads the above samples of his correspondence can doubt. But these attacks seem to be temporary, and they are probably due to transitory causes. He has apparently lived for some time by selling his pictures on the plea of charity. Finding that game somewhat impaired, he devised an ingenious scheme for getting money wherewith to annihilate TRUTH. Those who entrust him with their money have far more to fear from him than I.

"TOILET LANOLINE" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d. and 1s.; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depôt, 67, Holborn-viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

THE MAMMONITE MISSIONARY.

It is not without some reluctance that I undertake to relate the latest development of Missionary enterprise that has been brought under my notice. From a vivid recollection of former experiences I know that I shall get no thanks—not, at any rate, from the people who so lavishly furnish money for the conversion of the heathen. Such people cling with touching fondness to their own exalted ideal of the work and the workers. They refuse to see the other side of the shield; indeed, they bitterly resent any attempt to open their eyes. From time to time I have thought it desirable to point out instances in which Missionary work is more or less of a failure, or the Missionary himself something of a fraud. For this I have been furiously abused. All sorts of wicked motives have been ascribed to me. The revelation of some weak spot has been taken as an assault upon the whole system. The exposure of some erring or unfaithful members has been resented as an attack upon the whole body of Missionaries. No doubt I shall have to encounter similar treatment on the present occasion. However, my withers are not easily wrung. And the story which I have lately received from Bechuanaland throws a light upon Missionary labours in that part of the world which is really too precious to be lost.

In May last an inquiry was held by the Concessions Commission of the Bechuanaland Protectorate at Gaberones. Amongst the cases investigated was one in which the Rev. James Good, of Kanya, and a representative of the London Missionary Society, claimed a tract of land about thirty square miles in area, which had been given to him by Bathoen, Chief of the Bangwaketsi. Although a fairly copious report of the proceedings before the Commission was given in the Bechuanaland News, this claim by a missionary was not regarded as sufficiently uncommon to call for special notice, and was dismissed in a couple of lines. By the courtesy of a correspondent in Bechuanaland, however, I have been supplied with a copy of the official shorthand-writer's notes, and so I am enabled to present a trustworthy account of what transpired in reference to Mr. Good's claim. First of all, the grant from Bathoen was read. It was to the effect that the land in question, situated in the eastern part of his country on the Transvaal border, was given as a token of the Chief's friendship and appreciation of Mr. Good's services as teacher, political adviser, and helper of his late father, Gasitsiwe, in writing, &c.; that he (Bathoen) did it of his own accord, and with the consent of his tribe; and that the land was granted free from any tax or rental. Bathoen gave evidence confirming the statements in the document which he had signed. His father, Gasitsiwe, he explained, had made a verbal grant of the land, and, after his father's death, he himself thought it better to have a written document. "Are any of your own people, or people under you, living on that ground?" asked one of the Commissioners. "There are some," replied Bathoen; "they are Mr. Good's herds.' The only other witness was Mr. Good. After stating that he had resided for about twenty-three years at Kanya, among the Bangwaketsi, he proceeded :—

> The services I have rendered to the tribe and the chiefs I could explain plainly if you could only understand the helplessness of a native chief, especially surrounded by such people as we have in the Transvaal. Missionary work I have done. This is collateral work. In the early times we had a great deal to do with the Boers relating to cattle that came across the border. Also many more important matters; for instance, our quarrel with this tribe here (Ikenang). I had a lot of letters to write, and a great deal of trouble. Of course, I can say nothing about mission work. That has no connection with this. I wish it to be fully understood that I do not accept it for services rendered, because I consider that those services were invaluable to them. Gasitsiwe spoke to me about it for years, and I used to talk to him playfully about it. When he fell into intemperate habits, I said no more about it for two or three years, until Bathoen came into power, and then he opened the subject afresh. . . . . I looked upon it as a gift that a tribe or parish can properly give to their minister.

From Mr. Good's further statements, it appeared that he himself drew up the document which the Chief signed. But Bathoen, he asserted, thoroughly understood what he was doing when he gave the land, and he called his people together and had a huge "pitso," at which his action was acknowledged by acclamations. The ground, the Missionary added, had been recognised as "his place" for years, and he had been running his cattle on it. He had also "done a good lot of work there" with his own cattle and wagons. It would seem, however, that it was not exactly undisputed territory. "This is the piece of ground," said Mr. Good, "for which we strove with Kopani some years ago. The Chief told them they could graze their cattle anywhere round, but not on that piece of ground, because he had given that to his Missionary." Finally, it should be mentioned that, although Mr. Good looked upon his services to the Bangwaketsi as "invaluable" (an estimate in which other residents in the district do not concur), he modestly claimed only half the quantity of land originally assigned to him by the generous savage potentate.

I am curious to learn whether the subscribers to the London Missionary Society have been aware of the "collateral work" which Mr. Good combined with the propagation of the Gospel; also whether they have been acquainted with the handsome reward which he obtained for it. Perhaps other missionary societies might do well to ascertain whether any of their representatives are in the habit of undertaking duties which, as Mr. Good said in his own case, have no connection with their spiritual work. That many missionaries are animated by none but the highest motives, and give an undivided, whole-hearted devotion to their sacred calling, I can fully believe. I know of no man for whom I have a greater admiration than for Livingstone. But I am afraid it is true likewise that there are others who do not scruple to use their position as "labourers in the Lord's Vineyard" for their own personal aggrandisement. A gentleman who has lived in Bechuanaland and other parts of South Africa for some years assures me that he has met with several such cases. When a missionary has acquired a strong influence over a native chief he is naturally subjected to strong temptations which are not always resisted. In intercourse with the chiefs, traders find it to their advantage to have the missionary on their side; and my correspondent tells me that he retained one as interpreter, at £50 a year, merely in order that the reverend gentleman should not speak against him. Concessionaires have also been known to present considerable sums to clerics who backed up their applications to native chiefs. On the other hand, a certain missionary went to such lengths in his opposition to a concession in which his mediation had not been sought, that a quarrel broke out amongst the tribe and ended in the burning of the huts occupied by the Church converts.

These views of missionary work as it is seen at close quarters scarcely harmonise with the pictures drawn for the worthy but unsophisticated folks whose cash keeps it going. Annual reports and sermons and speeches tell with much unction of the heroism with which the missionary toils, of the hardships which he endures, and of the great blessings which flow from his ministrations. But, so far as I am aware, it never by any chance leaks out that he sometimes varies his sanctified efforts for the spread of the Gospel by playing an active part in tribal affairs, that he exerts his spiritual authority in the settlement of sordid questions of concession-mongering and trade, and that not infrequently he contrives to do a good stroke of business on his own account. To dispassionated observers, these things help to explain the meagreness of the religious results obtained from the prodigious expenditure in foreign missions. It is, however, for the zealots who provide the funds to decide whether this is the kind of evangelisation for which they pay. If they are satisfied, there is an end of the matter. Outsiders can only look on, wondering at their infatuation, and pitying the waste of money, which might be far better employed at home.

ULSTERS, OVERCOATS, and CAPES are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

NEW PLAYS AT PARIS.

SOCIETY is coming back to town. One of the signs is given in the opening of the Petits Salons. An exhibition of International Painters, at which but two foreigners exhibit, is going on at the Rue de Sèze. Sarah Bernhardt is busy rehearsing the leading part in "Les Rois" of M. Jules Lemaître, which will have been produced by the time this reaches you. "Le Fils Naturel" is being revived at the Odéon, although Zola having published so much since Dumas fils wrote it, it is thought by a public of students and their fair friends not to be up to date. A chrysanthemum exhibition is announced for this week. Chrysanthemums are now the favourite flower. They give, I know not why, an impression of poetic melancholy, and make one think of some lovely Princess transplanted to a foreign Court who pines to death from home-sickness. There is also in them the sadness of an autumn sunset. Chrysanthemums this season have taken the place of roses in the cemeteries. On le jour des morts they were most used for decorating tombs, because, no doubt, they best expressed the feelings of the decorators, and were cheaper than roses.

"Le Fils Naturel" is one of the very early works of Dumas fils. He wrote it at Ste. Adresse, in the house of Alphonse Karr. When it was lent to Dumas the furniture had been removed to Nice, where Karr set up as a flower-gardener. A stretcher-bed and a chair and a basin-stand were hired by the young author. In fine weather he wrote at a garden-table with the sea before him. In wet weather he wrote on his knee. He was too uncomfortable to feel lazy, and he never penned a drama which cost him less intellectual effort. He had for a neighbour Queen Christina, and fell in love with the eldest of her three Rianzarès daughters. He might as well have thought of leaping over the moon as of marrying her, even by an elopement—which was not an unexampled proceeding in the Spanish Royal family, two sisters of Don Francisco of Assisi having run away with their husbands. But the fugitive passion stirred him up, and made him feel more keenly than he perhaps otherwise should have done the personal hardships which entered into the subject of his drama. The beautiful Contessa was destined to be married to Prince de Bauffremont-Courtenay, who is descended in the same degree from St. Louis as the Bourbons, and is not classed as belonging to the House of France, owing to the carelessness of an ancestor.

The latest theatrical skit, "Mademoiselle Carabin," is a opéra-bouffe professing to be up to date. Carabin is Quartier Latin slang. A young surgeon, Mademoiselle Carabin is therefore a medical studentess. Her name is Olga, and, like so many other young ladies who walk the hospitals, she is a Russian. Of course, she is nice and interesting. This does not prevent Messieurs les Carabins from caballing against her. They want all the house-student scholarships themselves, and are resentful at so many having been won at competitive exams. by "Carabines." The ringleader is one Ferdinand.

But he repents and becomes Olga's devoted ally. He is rather the admiring comrade than the lover. But an étudiante, which is not the same thing as a Russian studentess, Mademoiselle Nini, suspects a tender and reciprocal passion. She is no believer in Platonism. How separate the friends? By throwing an apple of discord between them. Being cunning and plausible, she manages to get them by the ears, and the quarrel threatens to be eternal. But Ferdinand is taken ill with a dangerous and extremely infectious disease caught in his hospital studies. Nini deserts him, but Olga devotes herself to him as a fellow-student and a forgiving friend. Of course, his recovery leads to a proposal, which she accepts. This can hardly be said to be up to date, since the Russian officers were passive in the hands of French ladies, who smothered them with kisses, and asked them to dance. The libretto is by Carré, and the light, trifling, and refined music by Emile Pessard.

The late Princesse Marguerite de Nemours was one of the grandchildren of Louis Philippe who had a right to the title of Royal Highness, she being born while he was still on the Throne, on her mother's birthday, February 16, 1848. But it was an empty dignity, a Revolution sweeping all her family out of their Royal situation when she was eight days old. The Duchesse de Nemours had to be left at the Palais Royal by the Duc while he was getting the widow of his eldest brother and her children to a place of safety. On her arrival in England she had no change of raiment for her infant, and was indebted to her cousin, Queen Victoria, for the baby-clothes that were so badly needed. There never was a shyer couple than both the Duc and Duchesse de Nemours, although one might have thought that her radiant, though blonde, beauty would have given her assurance. The Princesse Marguerite in this respect was like both, but more nervously timid and more apt to shrink into herself than either. The sad, secluded life that she led at Claremont and Bushey Park did not correct this hereditary peculiarity. Her capacity for self-abnegation showed itself early in her devotion to Queen Marie Amélie, who called her Antigone. She was amiable and affectionate with those she liked, but could emerge from her shell with too few persons to be at all popular. Her position, as wife of Prince Ladislas Czartoryski, of Head Lady of the Polish settlements, was a trying one to a person of her shy disposition. Poles multiplied in Paris with the development of railways, and they all found their way to the Hôtel Lambert. The health of the Princess was never strong. A worse spot than the Ile St. Louis, where she resided, could not be found in Paris for one having a constitutional tendency to consumption. The Seine encircles it. The soil is saturated with river-sewage and the infiltrations from the surface that have been going on for over eighteen hundred years, the Iles de Saint Louis and de la Cité being the oldest inhabited districts of Paris. Microbes, owing to the damp river-air, must swarm in the old walls of the Hôtel Lambert. The house is lordly, and was in the eighteenth century the abode of the luxurious Farmer-General Lambert. But I should prefer to it a fifth floor in a high, dry, and new part of the town.

Princesse Marguerite was married in the parish church of Chantilly, twenty-one years ago. The Bishop of Orleans officiated, and all the children of Louis Philippe, and grandchildren (save the Belgian and Brazilian ones), attended. Prince Ladislas was twenty-two years older than his bride. He was the widower of one of Queen Christina's three beautiful daughters by her second husband, and the father of one son, who not long ago determined to enter a religious order. If the Princesse Marguerite had been ambitious and fond of society, her life might have been a brilliant one. The Poles longed for her to take up a position as their social leader, but, as nothing was more repugnant to her than to put herself forward, she could not make up her mind to do so. Eventually she entered the tierce order of St. Dominic. Her vow obliged her to dress with severe plainness, unless when her social position and the duties arising from it compelled her to do otherwise. She leaves two sons. Adam, the elder, is called after the old grandfather, who long headed the Polish settlement here, and most nobly and generously too, and who was brought up with Alexander I. The Princesse Marguerite was sent to a healthery at Kronberg on the Taunus plateau. The air proved too keen for her, and she rapidly declined. Two of her aunts, the Queen of the Belgians and the Duchess Alexander of Würtemberg, died of tuberculosis, a disease which also carried off the brother of Louis Philippe, whose tomb is in Henry VII.'s Chapel, Westminster. The Duc de Nemours was wrapped up in his two daughters; at his great age, seventy-nine, the death of the Princesse Marguerite must be a cruel bereavement.

Few of us are well up in Spanish art. Is this because Spain is not on the road to anywhere? I imagine that it is, the Spaniards being a most original people, and their paintings having an extraordinary savour of originality. Their masters did not paint better than the French, Italians, or Dutch, but they saw otherwise in painting, and had much to see that is only to be met with in Spain. It is not easy to make an artistic tour in that country, railways being so slow, inns so bad, and the climate so treacherous in its sudden changes from oven-heat to icy cold. But one can more than gather a notion of Spanish art and artists from a well-illustrated work just published by May and Motteroz. "La Peinture Espagnole," by Paul Lefort. The best book heretofore published on this subject is the late Sir William Stirling's "Annals of the Arts in Spain," in which he showed how they evolved from the earliest times almost to the date at which he took them up. Curiously enough, no Spaniard that I can think of, except Castelar, has taken up this subject except in a desultory and scrappy way. M. Paul Lefort has shown the patience of a Benedictine in making searches for materials for his work, in archives public and private, in collections, and in museums. A portrait by Sanchez Coëllo reveals to us where Queen Elizabeth got the idea of her monstrously big ruff and farthingale. This portrait was taken a short time previous to the marriage of Philip II. and Mary Tudor, and is of the triumphantly beautiful Doña Juana, Philip's sister, who married a King of Portugal. It was taken to England by Philip, and sold by Henrietta Maria, with many other treasures of the Crown, to a Dutch Jew. Baron Rothan picked it up at Hamburg, and it went back after the sale of his paintings to Madrid. Juana is dressed exactly in the style adopted later by Queen Elizabeth, who may have thought the loveliness of that Princess due to her ruff and other magnificent attire. The beauty is of a luscious character, and the softly-smiling lips are particularly so. A parallel work by Alphonse Gayet, on Arab art, is not less worthy of attention. But, as the children of the Prophet banish the image of the human being from their arts, M. Gayet's work is not a mine of interesting gossip. Its value is chiefly technical. But there could be no better handbook for the subjects with which it deals.

To Overcom Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Nerve Debility. Pepper's Tonic. Kept everywhere.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

I AM engaged, dear Lady Betty, upon a truly monumental work; it is no less a matter, indeed, than the "Anatomy of Hospitality."

Of recent years the world has undergone so considerable a change that it is now necessary to revise all our former prejudices and principles to adapt them to the purely commercial conditions of to-day. This is then my excuse for offering to you the following amended axioms from my proposed new work:—

1. All the world's a Stock Exchange.
2. All are not hospitable who entertain.
3. Give and you shall be received.
4. Your money or your wife.
5. All the guests at a "smart" dinner are good—good for something or good for nothing.
6. A man's house is his office—his office his home.
7. When the promoter comes in at the door, prosperity leaps out of the window.
8. What is speculation for the public is peculation for the broker.
9. A "green" guest makes a fat host.
10. Bad companions destroy good company.
11. All Rhodes leads to South Africa.
12. The nearer the City the farther from gold.
13. A Company well begun is half ended.
14. Put good things into your guests at night, and they will put into your [illegible] things" in the morning.
15. Ever[illegible]

[illegible] in the quarterlies creates sensation. [illegible]pens, the excitement is therefore intensified. A paper upon the "Peerage," which appears the current number of the Quarterly Review has attracted exceptional attention. It is a massacre of meretricious agnates. How are the mighty fallen! The finest names of modern England are laid low, and resuscitated as mere Wilkinses, Mullinses, and Smithsons! De Montorency flies from the field of fact. Pretensions that were carried back to the Conquest are snapped asunder at mere recent dates, and disclose no more serious original ancestors than a "farmer," a "clerk to a wine merchant," a "bank manager," a "purser," a "carpenter," and a "respectable draper at Nottingham." Old names seem to have been pilfered by new people, and the titles which their bearers held have been revived for the benefit of these upon payment of almost trifling sums. Bogus monuments have been erected to commemorate bogus ancestors, who still lie with their bogus toes turned upwards towards what must even be to them a bogus Heaven. Renulphus de FitzFiddlesticks is but the son of Fiddlesticks the valet, who flourished circa 1830! And the aristocracy of Great Britain is mainly an aristocracy of glorified plebeians made magnificent with secondhand ancestors, antecedents, pedigrees, and prejudices, which they have acquired either by fraud or by purchase!

An assertion that I made several years ago has in this manner been suddenly verified. The real fine families of Great Britain are mostly to be found amongst the old Catholics, such as the Mostyns, Radcliffes, Haggerstons, Scropes, Welds, Stourtons, Blounts, Bedingfelds, Throgmortons, Stapletons, Segraves, Frazers, and many others which it is unnecessary to mention now. These have weathered conquests, dynastic struggles, and religious persecutions, and, stripped of their former power and prestige, they have kept, in retirement, the great names that were entrusted to them, moderately unblemished.

But within my own memory has there arisen a new collateral to a glorious house. For obvious reasons, real names must be suppressed. There lived in a little county town a certain Stiggins, a very worthy tradesman. Stiggins had a son, and to this son a great lady in the neighbourhood became attached. The lady went to town for the season, and Stiggins, junior, shortly followed. Here he was known as Stewart Stiggins, which, in the course of time, changed into Stiggins Stewart, and ultimately again into Stewart—tout court—"One of the Stewarts, you know." Of course, both these names are merely taken at random.

* * * * *

It was Rustem Pasha himself, the Turkish Ambassador, who complained to Lord Rosebery of the affront offered to his Sovereign in the burlesque of "Don Juan" at the Gaiety Theatre. Rustem Pasha was present at one of the performances, and, his feelings being harrowed when he saw the Sultan figuring upon the stage as a species of opéra bouffe character, he placed the matter before Lord Rosebery on the following morning. Lord Rosebery rightly took instant steps to put a stop to it; for what should we think were our Sovereign represented upon the Parisian stage as being chased about by a street boy? The only privilege that we can claim to treat others as we would not be treated ourselves rests on the ground that our utter want of good taste is a byeword throughout the world.

* * * * *

M. Decrais, the newly-appointed French Ambassador in London, who some months ago was unable to present his credentials to the Queen, is expected to arrive in England between the 15th and 20th of the month. He will be received in audience immediately after her Majesty arrives at Windsor Castle from Balmoral.

The death of Sir Christopher Teesdale, the Master of the Ceremonies, and formerly Equerry to the Prince of Wales, will be regretted by many old and deeply attached friends. He was a man of sterling character, and probably the best adviser that the Prince ever had. For the last three years he had been suffering from an affection of the heart.

After a long and painful illness Lady Birch, the wife of Sir Arthur Birch, died on Saturday morning. During FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

he past summer, the late Lady Birch had been staying at Wimbledon, but it was found necessary at any risk to remove her to London some few weeks ago, so that more continued medical assistance might be within her reach. Her death will be mourned by many, for the late Lady Birch was kindness personified. In her passage through life she had gathered friends, and friends only.

* * * * *

The tenants of the Savernake Estate testified loyalty to their old masters by welcoming Lord Frederick and Lord Robert Brudenell-Bruce upon their return last week after the decision in the Royal Courts of Justice released Lord Iveagh from his short connection with Savernake. The bands of the neighbouring villages gathered together at Bedwyn Station, the church bells were kept ringing throughout the afternoon, and at night along a circle extending over twenty-five miles bonfires were set burning and fireworks were discharged.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

AN official report of the proceedings at the last meeting of the Jockey Club has been published, from which it appears that the reasons advanced by the opponents of Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's motion were in the greatest degree fatuous and absurd, and the rejection, by a majority of the members present, of this most salutary reform has unquestionably caused very general dissatisfaction. Objections, often of the most frivolous nature, have become scandalously common of late years, and it is notorious that they have very often been made solely for "sharping" purposes. Objections on the ground of qualification, or for any technical reasons whatever, should certainly be made before and not after a race, and the present system simply facilitates fraudulent practices. The reasons urged against the proposals of Mr. de Rothschild are such utter nonsense and rubbish that it would be paying them a most extravagant compliment to describe them as sophistical. It would be difficult to imagine anything more chimerical and wildly ridiculous than the notion that if such objections could be made only before a race then there would be an increased risk of horses not properly qualified being entered. The frequent and flagrant blunders which have taken place are due in a great measure to the stupid unconcern of officials of race meetings, whose faculties might very well be stimulated towards greater vigilance by a fine of £50 for every wrong entry accepted. Somehow or other plunging people always know when there is any screw loose about an entry, and it is the unwary who invariably suffer while the vermin of the turf are the winners, and as a matter of fact it has often happened that some of these vagabonds have managed matters so cleverly that they win both by the success of a horse and also by the same animal's disqualification. The favourite (for so it has usually been) would be backed "first past the post," and another animal without any such condition, and if the latter contrived to get second then those who were participating in the swindle would, of course, win all round, as they would draw their "first past the post" bets over the favourite, and then, on its being disqualified, they would win the money for which they had backed the horse which finished second. It may be hoped that next year Mr. de Rothschild will bring forward his motion again, and that the majority of the Club will by that time have recovered from the gush of imbecility by which they seem to have been overwhelmed at their recent meeting. Of course, all cases in which there was any allegation of fraud would be excepted from the operation of the proposed new rule.

It is generally admitted that Lord Durham's "Derby colt" Son o' Mine was very unlucky in his race at Kempton Park, when he was beaten by Match Box, and most good judges consider that he ought to have won cleverly. It is a curious fact that it is the success of Match Box in this race which has placed St. Simon at the top of the list of winning sires (£34,500), whereas if Son o' Mine had won then the Duke of Portland's horse would have stood at £29,500, and Isonomy, whose score is now £25,800, would have been credited with £30,800. Next to Isonomy comes Hampton with £18,457, and then, longo intervallo, come Ormonde and Melton, both being under £11,500, and their position is now of very little interest, inasmuch as the one horse has gone to America and the other to Italy. Whenever a sire either dies or is sold to go abroad, his stock are sure to distinguish themselves in an eminent degree, and I daresay that many superstitious people will be disposed to back Son o' Mine and Bullingdon for the great race of next year solely because the sire of the former is dead and the sire of the latter has left the country. As the leading favourites for the Derby are respectively sired by the three horses which head the list, it is highly probable that St. Simon, Isonomy, and Hampton will again occupy high positions twelve months hence. I would bet upon Isonomy to fill the first place at the end of 1894, for at present Isinglass looks like winning both the £10,000 stakes at Newmarket and also the Eclipse Stakes.

Castleblaney was the gross impostor of the Cambridgeshire, and it was supposed that the cracking pace had settled him, so that many people were intending to "get their money back" if he was started for the Derby Cup or for the Manchester Handicap. The horse, however, has been struck out of all his engagements, which certainly seems a most extraordinary course to pursue with him, unless he has gone amiss in some way. He was backed at Newmarket for many thousands of pounds, having been months in reserve for the Cambridgeshire, and he had received a most careful preparation, so that any one would have thought that after so much trouble had been taken, and so much time had been wasted, he would have been given another chance, for it must surely have been ascertained that he was at his best before he was backed at Newmarket, and now he is thrown up, and very likely when he is wanted next year it will be found that whatever form he ever had has finally departed.

The Princess of Wales's Stakes of £10,000 and the Jockey Club Stakes of £10,000, both of which races are to be run at Newmarket in 1896, failed to fill when they were originally advertised, but, having been reopened with slightly altered conditions, the stipulated number of entries has now been obtained. Of course, all the most highly-bred foals and yearlings have been engaged, but the notable and significant feature in the entries is the scanty patronage which has been accorded to these races by the public breeders, although they were tempted with a bait of £400 for the nominator of the winner of each stake, and of £200 for the nominator of the second.

Sir Tatton Sykes, who is certainly at the head of the public breeders, has engaged nothing, and Mr. J. S. Harrison has only three entries alto[illegible]r. This abstention is very satisfactory, because [illegible] probably lead managers of [illegible] ridiculous and gross[illegible]

[redacted]

[illegible]s the [illegible]

[illegible]n the Liverpool [illegible] tances, representing eleven st[illegible] there is an end to this handicap as an important betting race. The Cup has been gradually collapsing for several years past, its place having been taken by the Manchester November Handicap, which now excites a great deal more

THE DENSMORE.—The World's Greatest Typewriter. Now adopted in the highest and most experienced quarters. Guaranteed to give satisfaction.—51, Gracechurch-street, London, E.C.

CORNS.—Wasmuth's Corn-Rings (in the watch) remove pressure and corns painlessly in two or three days. 1s. 1½d., all Chemists. Wholesale, WARRICK BROS., Old Swan-lane, London, E.C.

general interest and very much heavier speculation. Prisoner is very much fancied at Newmarket, and he will probably start at very short odds, but I do not believe that Lord Cadogan's horse can give 8 lb. to Lord Penrhyn's Quastitum, who showed at Lincoln that he is now in good form, and I shall anticipate his success.

There will be racing next week at Derby on three days, and at Lewes on two days. There are sure to be very large fields at both meetings, and some excellent sport may be expected, but backers will do well to be exceedingly cautious in their speculations, as Derby, in particular, has usually proved a veritable Moscow campaign for them. The Duke of Devonshire's colours ought to be worth following whenever his horses are fancied, as several of them have been in reserve all the autumn for their Derby engagements, as their owner is very anxious to win some races at his "home" meeting.

In an article in the Nineteenth Century Mr. Scoones deals with the question of reform in the examinations for Army cadetships, especially with reference to Sandhurst. He pleads for the young "Achilles" who has stroked his school eight at Henley, or captained the football team, who has given his muscle for the honour of the school, and who finds himself in no better position than the puny stripling who has passed the medical examination. He proposes that marks should be given for athletic abilities by means of a riding and a gymnastic examination, oblivious of the fact that the football-player or oarsman is often comparatively useless as a gymnast. Then the stroke is by no means the strongest man in the eight, and of these strokes at Henley there are generally only two, Rugby and Eton. On this score the loss to the Army is not very great. Nor is a boy sent to school to spend his muscle on its honours. If he has not sense enough to see that to get on in the world he must work, he will not be of much use in the Army or anywhere else. Wellington, unfortunately, said that Waterloo was won in the playing fields of Eton. This was rather hard lines on Blücher. And this remark has been the text on which complaints like those of Mr. Scoones have always been based. It has been my lot to meet a good many captains and presidents of school, college, and University football, rowing, cricket, and athletic clubs. They are either the best performers or the senior men in the crew or team. But they are no more born leaders of men than a Senior Wrangler or a crossing-sweeper. In fact, the boy or man who has the capacity to make his men work well and who looks after all the details of a club properly is the exception rather than the rule. And the exception will, as a rule, be found to be the youth who can pass examinations with credit to himself. As good an example of the average want of intelligence amongst these Achilles of the past can be found in the ridiculous rules as to training which were prevalent until a recent date. Now, it is on behalf of this very average intelligence that Mr. Scoones is fighting. He says that the public demands the cream of the public schools for the Army. But until the public assents to an increased income-tax, it will have to put up with the skimmed milk. The brilliant scholar does not trouble the Army Examiners. The boy who is good at scholarship and sports knows that he will do much better for himself by teaching than by taking a commission. When he is at the University he will make as much in the Long Vacation by teaching as the new-fledged Subaltern draws a year by pay, and after his degree is taken he is certain of a good position in a public school. If, however, he should be ambitious of military fame, he will work well enough to take a good place in the examination either at Woolwich or Sandhurst. I certainly agree with Mr. Scoones that as the difference in marks under the present system is often very small between the last successful candidate and those who follow him, physique should be of some importance. Even under the present system the remedy does not appear difficult. Instead of placing candidates according to the marks they obtain, let them be classed, and let those who attain a certain standard be admitted as at present, and then, as to the others, some would be too bad, whether Achilles or not, to be admitted under any circumstances, and from the rest those who had the better physique could be selected. Of course, parents would say that this would be another hardship, but there is no need for them to offer their weaklings to the nation. I am quite sure that neither the mental nor physical efficiency of the Army would be increased by giving candidates marks for riding straight across country or tying themselves into a knot on the horizontal bar.

The match between Blackheath and London Scottish was almost international in character. The wet weather was against the Scottish, who had to rely on their outsides, so that a draw of a try each was satisfactory. Innumerable clubs were last Saturday competing for the Association Cup in the qualifying rounds, and as the clubs have as much chance of winning it as they have of flying, I suppose that they enter to make a gate. At Cambridge athletics are in full swing, and Fitzherbert, a Charterhouse freshman, has done so well in the sprints that I hope he will not spoil himself by running a mile. Lutyens is quite good enough for that race. Both Universities are rowing their fours to-day. At Cambridge I expect First will beat Third Trinity, the holders, and the Hall will make a good fight. In fact, outside these three clubs there are no oarsmen at Cambridge. Oxford has plenty of material, and has secured the pick of this year's Eton and Radley eights. Magdalen should win the fours, but New will press them hard.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—Although the clouds which have been overhanging the Stock Markets may be said to have a silver lining in consequence of the repeal of the silver purchase enactment in the United States, it cannot be said that they show any signs of dispersing, so as to allow the sun of prosperity to shine again. The conference between the coal-owners and the miners' representatives has not resulted in any agreement, and although the proposal of the former is to be submitted to the men, there does not appear to be much hope of a satisfactory settlement. That would mean a continuation of the disastrous strikes and of industrial depression, apart from great hardship to the poorer classes. No progress has, moreover, been made with the ratification by Congress of the settlement of the Argentine National Debt concluded by the Rothschild Committee, and the trouble with the Trust Companies is more in evidence than ever. The struggle in Brazil, too, appears to be indefinitely prolonged. Thus, with the exception of a distinct improvement in the position in the States, and of a more settled outlook in the Money Market, few hopeful signs present themselves as yet.

Home Rails and the Coal Strikes.

The coal strikes altogether govern the position of the Home Railway market. If the negotiations which have been going on during the week had resulted in the termination of the disastrous struggle, there might have been a rally in the leading stocks. This prospect appears now to be fading into the dim and distant future, and it remains but to consider what will be the strike bill which the railways may have to pay. For the seventeen weeks ended October 29 the total gross traffic in the U.K. was £2,091,601, out of which close upon £1,800,000 was in goods. The lines which have suffered most are, as I have repeatedly explained, the Midland, with £677,800 decrease, the North-Western with £387,600, the Great Northern with £216,000, the Sheffield with £191,000, the Great Western with £184,000, the Great Eastern with £131,000 decrease. Granted that considerable savings have been effected in working expenses, it is evident that dividends for the current year will be severely cut down. Amongst the above-mentioned lines only the Great Western is now escaping the heavy decreases owing to the settlement of the strikes in South Wales. The leakage of traffic on the other lines continues, although on a smaller scale than when the strikes were at their height. It must be for shareholders to decide, if they will persevere in the policy hitherto adopted by them of considering the present an exceptional trouble to be disregarded in view of the certainty that with the end of the strikes traffics will recover again; or if they will, should no agreement now be reached, part with some of their holdings. I offer no opinion on this point, but it is as well that shareholders should understand that they will have to face, owing to the losses of traffic so far made, a diminution in the half-yearly dividends at the rate of from 1½ to 3 per cent. per annum. Hitherto the "Bear" operators in the "Heavies" have been fools for their pains, as the market is almost bare hardly any real stock having been dislodged. The Southern passenger lines suffer from the same cause in their mineral traffic, and the coal war therefore affects them too. As I have pointed out repeatedly, the unfavourable position from the point of view of dividends of Brighton "A" is counteracted by the huge "Bear" account in this stock. The Brighton line, not being so largely dependent upon goods traffic, is, moreover, likely to recover more quickly from the injurious effects of the disorganisation of the industries of the country, and if there is good excuse for sticking to the stocks of the Heavy brigade to yield only, say, 3 per cent. per annum on the present price, in the hope of getting 3¾ to 4 per cent. next year, there should be even more reason for holding Brighton "A" to return only 4 per cent. on present value (with the hope of getting 5 per cent. in 1894). The South-Eastern and Chatham Companies are in a similar position, but the outlook for Dover "A" is not encouraging, as they have less to lose.

The Yankee Market after Repeal.

As usual, when an event has been looked for for some time, and speculative purchases have been made in anticipation, the passing of the Repeal Bill has induced realisations and a reaction has occurred from the top prices touched. But a substantial advance remains all the same from the low level of August last, while present values being still moderate seem to be perfectly safe for investors, provided they discriminate in the selection. For the "Bears," of whom there are many on this side, including most of the jobbers, to say that prices are too high in comparison with former years, is a very cool performance, considering that prices are now still on a lower level than at any previous time since July, 1885, with the exception of July and August last. The following statement of the highest and lowest average closing prices, since 1885, from an American contemporary, disposes of that pretence:—

	High.	Low.		High.	Low.
1886 ...	73	55½	1890 ...	74⅜	54½
1887 ...	72¼	58⅞	1891 ...	68⅜	57⅛
1888 ...	66⅞	56⅜	1892 ...	71⅛	64⅛
1889 ...	70⅜	62½	1893 ...	68¼	44⅛

The average at present is about 53, showing a rise of 9⅛ from the bottom price on July 31, but at no previous time this year before July, and at no time in seven years previous to this year was the average as low as now. Some stocks, such as Milwaukees and other of my favourites, have, of course, risen a good deal more than 9 points, owing to special circumstances. It may be that the Milwaukee traffics will not quite keep up their recent increases after the close of the World's Fair, but if, on the other hand, the October statement were anything like so favourable as the September statement from the point of view of working expenses, the position would be very promising. As regards the general outlook, there is no doubt that trade in the United States, freed from the silver bugbear, will gradually expand again. The financial position is greatly improved, the New York Banks are in a strong position, commercial bills are again saleable, and money is available for the moving of the crops. The fact that part of the stock of silver accumulated by the Treasury is now being coined into dollars is favourable, as it will increase the amount of silver in circulation and bring gold back to the Treasury. The U.S. Government can at any moment make an issue of short-dated bills, in case it should have to replenish its resources, but it is not considered necessary to issue a large gold loan. The latter point is important, as bearing on the London Money Market; for, although moderate gradual shipments of gold to the United States are probable, it is not likely to be threatened with a sudden large demand which might have caused a serious dislocation of business. The most welcome sign of a general improvement in the country would be the early reconstruction of the roads which were forced into the Receiver's hands—viz., the Northern Pacific, Erie, Reading, and Union Pacific. It will, perhaps, take some time and a good deal of trouble to terminate the Union Pacific receivership, as it is complicated by the claims of the Government. On the other hand, the Northern Pacific is now under the control of an influential group, who are determined to place it on a sound basis for the future, and to prevent the dishonesty and robbery of the past. Powerful interests are also at work with respect to the Reading and Erie Companies, and a successful reorganisation would, therefore, mean an advance in the prices of these securities, especially of Erie and Reading shares and of Reading First Income bonds. The interest on Erie Second Mortgage Bonds will, no doubt, have to be scaled down, but holders will be compensated in some other way, and there appears to be no reason to sell these at present price. Other stocks which are likely to improve are Louisville (to which special reference is made below), Denver and Denver Prefs., Norfolk Prefs., Ohio and Mississippi, Ontario, and more especially Atchison "A" and "B" bonds. I speak of investment, not of speculation, and I feel convinced that any one taking up such securities will in, say, three months have as big a profit as those of my readers who bought at the bottom of the market at the end of July, are now enjoying. Those operating in Yankee stocks should, however, always bear in mind the maxim, to buy on reactions and when the market is flat, and to sell when the market is strong. The decline in Denver Prefs. has gone quite far enough. The blow of silver repeal has fallen—there should now be a recovery if traffics at all respond to the improvement in the general outlook. Dealings have been slack in Canadian Pacifics, the usual operators in this stock having their hands full. I should like to know how the new Preference issue was placed? No official statement having been vouchsafed, the inference is that the underwriters have had to take more than they liked. The Grand Trunk September statement showing a large increase in the working expenses, was a disagreeable surprise for the market, but it seems to explain the recent dulness of these stocks, in the face of splendid traffic increases, as insiders, no doubt, knew what was coming.

Atchison.

Holders of Atchison securities cannot do better than altogether disregard the periodical "Bear" raids which are made on their property. Keene headed the most recent of these attacks, and the old dodge of making sales through London brokers in order to affect the market in New York and Boston was revived. This attempt will fail as that failed which was engineered some three weeks ago when the Ursino contingent endeavoured to create the impression that the Atchison would follow the Union Pacific into a Receivership. As I stated last week, the whole of the Atchison Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund Notes have been renewed, and there is a steady demand for this high-class investment stock, yielding about 7⅛ per cent. per annum at 97, which will no doubt eventually raise the price to at least par in New York or 103 in London. The only interest payment of the Company which fell due on November 1 was that on these notes. There is no December interest to pay, and the next liabilities, which are due on January 1, have practically been provided for. The "Bears" of Atchison securities, who are numerous, have been assisted by some forced selling from Amsterdam, where the passing of the interest on certain Union Pacific bonds, largely held there, has dislodged some stock, but that tap appears now to have dried up. According to a recent statement made by President Reinhart, the road in the month of July—its worst month—cleared all its fixed charges (including the interest on the Second Mortgage "A" and "B" bonds). In August it cleared these with 81,000 dols. surplus; in September it showed gross earnings of 4,057,000 dols. Its net earnings for the month of September, 1892, were 1,958,000 dols. Its fixed charges per month this year, including everything, are 1,227,000 dols. Its savings in wages alone, without counting savings in other directions, in the month of September this year, were 381,000 dols. It should, therefore, largely increase its surplus in September. In October, finally, the decreases were much smaller than in September, and, with the return of confidence now in progress, increases will, no doubt, soon take the place of past decreases. The President also stated that the floating debt had been largely reduced in the last two months, and that the balance was well held. I am, therefore, inclined to agree with Mr. Reinhart's statement that "there was no reason whatever for any apprehension on the part of stockholders of the Atchison Company, or of the holders of Atchison Company's bonded obligations, either direct or indirect," and that the "Bears" of Atchison's will be badly caught one of these days.

Kinahan's LL Whisky.—"The Cream of Old Irish Whiskies." Kinahan's LL Whisky. Gold Medal Paris Exhibition, 1878. Kinahan's Glenisle Whisky. The Finest Scotch Whisky sold.

The Louisville Deal.

A sharp decline in Louisville shares, which followed the announcement made from New York that the Chesapeke and Ohio South-Western had, after all, been acquired by the Louisville and Nashville Directors, showed how unpopular this step was with the conservative interests here. It was, however, found subsequently that the strong remonstrances from this side had at least had the effect that the Louisville shared the purchase with the Illinois Central, and that it will not entail the marketing of any Ordinary stock, the property being paid for in ten-year 6 per cent. notes. Thereupon the influential houses here, who were at first piqued at the disregard by the Louisville Board of their advice, elected to faire bonne mine à mauvais jeu. They took into consideration the change which had taken place in the financial position since the scheme was first mooted two months ago, as what was then very inopportune could not be said to be so any longer. Then again, the bulk of the Huntington interest in the Road consisting of 10,000,000 dols. of Ordinary and Preferred stock and of 3,865,000 dols. of Second Mortgage bonds, is acquired at a moderate figure—viz., 4,500,000 dols., that financial magnate being at present in great straits. As the line duplicates the Louisville line from Memphis to Louisville, the acquisition will in reality give full control to the Louisville Board over the whole district; and the fact that it cements the alliance which has been growing up of late with the important Illinois Central system, is also a favourable point. Under these circumstances it remains but for the Louisville to show a recovery in traffics to justify a considerable rise on the present price. The return just issued still shows a considerable decrease, but the September statement, showing a net decrease of only 24,000 dols. against a gross decrease of 420,000 dols. was at all events extremely favourable

Foreigners and South Americans.

Spanish and Italian were in a state of collapse at one time in the week partly on the very doubtful financial outlook in these countries and partly on difficulties in the coulisse at the Paris settlement. The war in Morocco is also affecting Spanish credit, and the decision come to by the Latin Conference as to the return of Italian small silver coins is found to be less favourable than had been reported. Although prices have since recovered to some extent, the future of both stocks is still very doubtful, and readers of Truth who have followed my advice, tendered long ago, to sell out, may be well satisfied. Hungarians are down half a point, but Greeks have improved. Affairs do not look very hopeful for the moment in the South American market. Matters in Brazil are going from bad to worse, and those interested in the securities of the country are viewing with alarm the heavy outlay which is being incurred by President Peixoto for purchases of ships and war material. I expressed my surprise last week that Brazilians had not fallen more heavily, and my statement was followed almost immediately by a drop of 3 points in the bonds of 1889. Argentine Government stocks were firm at one time, but they close weaker on a fresh rise in the gold premium and the inexplicable delay in the ratification of the Rothschild settlement. Until this is officially announced there is no hope of any lasting improvement in this market. Chilians are better, although the exchange remains very low. Costa Rica bonds have again given way in sympathy with the rest of the market. Mexican Government stocks on the other hand have improved again on the further monthly remittance which has been received in Berlin towards the January interest. Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Six per Cent. Capital stock, to which I directed attention last week as a well-secured investment, yielding a return of £5. 14s. per cent. per annum, have been largely dealt in at 106, and looks like going better.

A Doubtful Canadian Railway.

In February, 1889, there was offered in London by the Steniacke Valley and Lansdowne Railway Company £50,000 of Six per Cent. Sterling bonds at 97. It was stated that the Company would receive cash subsidies from the Canadian Government and the Government of the Province of Nova Scotia to the amount of 160,000 dols., which subsidy was to be assigned to trustees as a guarantee for interest on the bonds for a period of seven years. The trustees for the bondholders are two of the Directors of the Trustees and Executors, &c., Corporation. According to Government returns the share capital subscribed was 81,340 dols., of which only 8,134 dols. was paid up, but as far as is known the line, twelve miles in length, is not yet in operation. Interest is in default on these bonds, and absolutely no information can be obtained here. Several of my correspondents have applied to the former offices of the Company, Tower Chambers, Finsbury-pavement, but Mr. Watts, who acted as Secretary, has declined to have anything further to do with the Company, and he states that he has never been paid for his services. A Mr. G. W. Mackay appears to have been a Director, and the offices are at Halifax, Nova Scotia. The Trustees for the bondholders were, at the time of issue, Lord Claud Hamilton and Mr. J. D. Pender, Directors of the Trustees and Executors Corporation. Absolutely no communication has been made to the bondholders on this side of the reason of the default, and thus my warning to readers of Truth to give these small Canadian Railways, several of which have turned out swindles, a wide berth, is again illustrated. But matters cannot be left where they are. If the Trustees are not able to obtain any information, the bondholders should unite in self-protection. It is disgraceful that investors should be swindled out of their money in this impudent fashion. Will one of the Halifax readers of Truth throw some light upon the matter and name the persons who are connected with this monstrous piece of financing?

The Kaffir Circus.

The votaries of the Chartered fetish in the Kaffir Circus have been in a state of elation ever since the news of the victory over the Matabele, and of the capture of Buluwayo came to hand. Yet they are not quite happy, for the shares have not risen above 27s.-28s., and they had fully made up their mind that the first "great battle" would put them over 30s. Perhaps the view that it is not yet certain that the Company will be allowed to annex Matabeleland and that there is "many a slip, &c.," may tend to moderate their ardour. In the best of cases, a new issue of stock or a reconstruction on Rhodesian lines will have to be faced. Amongst other land Companies, Oceana have been fairly steady, but Transvaal Lands are down on the proceedings at the meeting of shareholders. The view expressed by Mr. Charles Bell that the Company had not been formed with the intention of carrying on amateur farming operations, seemed to prevail amongst those present, and a poll will be taken on the point next week. In Witwatersrand Gold Mining shares dulness reigned supreme, and the changes have mostly been adverse, the only important movement being a fall of ⅜ in City and Suburban. The position of the substantial properties is, however, very favourable, and holders should keep tight hold of their shares, which may at any time make a start, especially as the weak spots in Johannesburg have now been eliminated. It remains to be seen how the October crushings will turn out, although some of these are distinctly favourable. The output of the Crown Reef of 8,104 oz. against 7,508 oz. in September is, for instance, very satisfactory, and so is that of the Glencairn of 2,151 oz. against 2,143 oz. in September. The crushing of the Afrikander Mine for last month will no doubt be announced at Wednesday's meeting. The shares are quoted at 1⅜. The Buffelsdoorn output for October is also looked for with interest, the shares standing at 1 to 1⅛. South Simmer and Jack have been in demand for the Cape at 20s., with an upward tendency. This is, as I have already stated, a very valuable deep-level Mine, the shares in which will double and treble their value when the shaft gets down on the reef. The total number of claims owned by this Company is sixty-eight, which work out to only £2,200 per claim on the capital value of £150,000; while the Geldenhuis Deep, with 200 claims and a capital of £350,000, working out at the present price of 2, to £700,000, averages £3,500 per claim. Again the other Deep-level Company known on this side, the Village Main Reef, with a capital of £132,000 (at 3¼, £429,000), and eighty-seven claims, averages £4,930 per claim. At no very distant period these Companies will probably work into the position of such older Randt Mines as Salisbury (capital value averaging £24,000 per claim), Langlaagte Estate (£22,000 per claim), Jubilee (£23,000 per claim), or Crown Reef (£14,000 per claim). This comparison will show the margin of rise existing in the case of the South Simmer and Jack. With reference to the Graskop Company, I learn that letters have come to hand from the Chairman who has visited the property and is thoroughly satisfied with prospects. The Board have cabled instructions to the manager to commence crushing at once. The "Bull" tip in New Jagersfontein Diamond shares has not yet come off. On the contrary, the October profit turns out to be only £16,650 against £25,680 in September. The shareholders of the St. Augustine Diamond Mine have passed a resolution to wind up. It seems to me that this was the only course open to them after the account given of the property by Captain Gilbert, the manager. The shares are now unsaleable at any figure; but, surely, none of my friends can be holders after all the repeated warnings I have given them. The history of this ruinous concern will forcibly remind students of German of the old ditty, "Oh, Du lieber Augustin."

Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer. Restores the colour. Renews the growth. Arrests the fall. Cleanses he scalp.

Indian, Australian, and American Mines.

Prices of Indian Mines have given way on offers of a moderate amount of shares, Mysore Gold leading with a decline of ⅛, while Nundydroog, Champion Reef, and Bakaghat Mysore dropped ⅛. October crushings have, however, so far been satisfactory. Amongst Australian Mines Aladdins are firmer at 1¾ in anticipation of favourable cable advices, but Wentworth Ordinary and Priority are unchanged. Mosman and Day Dawn P.C. are the turn lower. A demand has sprang up for Carrington Gold Mining shares (Charters Towers), which have advanced to 3s., and my inquiries have elicited the fact that there is a substantial basis for this movement. It will be remembered that through the crisis in Australia operations at this Mine, where a shaft was being sunk intended to strike the rich reef of the adjoining Victoria Mine, were suspended. The following communication to a reader of Truth from a reliable source in Charters Towers explains the position:

> The Carrington Mine is at present under total exemption from work for five months, but it is likely that work will be resumed in two months' time. An underlie is sunk a distance of about 140 ft. from the straight shaft which is down about 350 ft. The underlie is on the Victoria reef 280 ft. from the surface. At 60 ft. from the straight shaft two levels are in, the S.E. level being about 70 ft., and the N.E. level being about 45 feet from the underlie shaft. The reef in the various stopes averages about 1 ft. in width, but it is not payable stone, the rich Victoria shoot of gold not having been cut. The mine is generally considered a good show, and there is every chance of a shoot of gold being met with as the reef is prospected. The maiden crushing was a failure, but this is not singular, as in most of our permanent lodes blanks are intersected.

I understand that an amount sufficient to thoroughly develop the mine has now been provided by a mortgage, and that work will have recommenced this week, the management being confident that the rich reef will be struck by further sinking of the underlie shaft. Under these circumstances those who have bought the shares at higher prices will do well to at once buy more to average before a higher level is again reached. Advices from Melbourne and Sydney report stagnation in mining shares. From Adelaide Baker's Creek were quoted at 26s. 3d. at the end of September. West Australia was receiving more attention amongst speculators, Coolgardie and its neighbourhood being the chief attraction. A large syndicate had been formed in Adelaide to prospect and take up claims in this district, and shares which cost £25 are now unobtainable at four times the money. The Ivanhoe Company had been floated in Adelaide with a capital of £15,000 in 30,000 shares of 10s., 15,000 paid up to 4s. going to the vendor syndicate, and 15,000 taken by the public at 4s. per share. For the fortnight ended September 8 the crushings of West Australian Mines were as follows:—Centrals, 139 oz.; Fraser's, 216 oz.; Fraser's South, 240 oz.; Nannines, 453 oz.; Bayley's Reward, 4,200 oz.; Hope's Hill, 175 oz. It is added that now that conservation of water is receiving every attention on the part of the Government, still greater crushings are anticipated. In American Mines, Frontinos and Linares have improved, but De Lamar and Don Pedro are down. A "tip" to buy La Plata is being passed round, but I advise my friends to ignore it. The public have already suffered enough over this concern, which has been three times reconstructed. The price is called 3d. to 9d., but a seller this week was glad to accept 2d. for his shares. These incorrect quotations are a source of great mischief, as use is frequently made of them by unscrupulous persons to fleece the unwary. Almada and Tinto are quoted 7½d. to 10½d., yet a seller at 4½d. is unable to find a purchaser. Favourable advices have been received from the Macate Gold Mine of Peru, to which I referred last week. Crushing is expected to commence in a few days, and, from the tenor of the manager's reports showing that the average of the ore runs 18½ dwt. to the ton, good results may be anticipated. The shares have been actively dealt in at 2s. to 2s. 6d. From latest advices from the Holcomb Valley property, it appears that operations had been delayed by the necessity of greater pumping power. This has now been provided, and work is to be renewed on the 15th inst. Nothing has happened to alter the opinion hitherto entertained by the experts of the prospects of the mine.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

A Victim.—These bonds are affected by reports of a possible settlement of the Debt by the Government. S. M. S.—Uruguay bonds are a good investment, and the November coupon is in course of payment. You should take off the coupon and have it collected, which your bankers will no doubt do for you. Hold Caratals for a good advance. The Mine you mention on the Croydon Goldfield will come round. There has been great mismanagement, but it has been put right. Spes.—The recent insurrection in the Province of Buenos Ayres has again put off the settlement of the Debt, but when once the settlement of the National Debt is ratified, some arrangement will doubtless also be made by the Province. Miss Smith, York.—No; the lotteries connected with Ottoman and Panama bonds are conducted honestly enough, but if you buy these through shady channels, you will perhaps never learn when your numbers are drawn. J. W. W.—If you wish to make an exchange, you cannot do better than sell your Argentine bonds and re-purchase Buenos Ayres Water and Drainage bonds at 54. These will receive, under the new settlement of the Debt 4 per cent., eventually returning to 5 per cent, and are also Government bonds, yielding on the 4 per cent. basis close upon 7½ per cent. on the investment. But it would be preferable to await the ratification of the Rothschild settlement.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Parrot.—Both these Financial Investment Companies are adversely affected by the trouble with some of the Trust Companies, but I cannot advise you to sell at these low prices. A recovery should be probable. P. S., Bath.—a. This Exploration Company has been a great disappointment for all concerned. b. I should not put any more money into this concern. This undertaking, and the concern mentioned under c, is a class of Australian Land Companies against which I have repeatedly warned my readers, but it seems hardly advisable to sell now. There might be a chance of c recovering with the improvement in Argentina. The Debentures of the United States Debenture Corporation (d), of course, stand on a very different footing from the shares, and are a well-secured investment. Yet I suppose at present price the shares too had better be held. Bradford.—These Bank shares have no official quotation, but any respectable stockbroker will be able to sell them for you. I cannot recommend individual stockbrokers. T. E.—What you require is forwarded, but you must take care not to incur heavy law expenses, which may easily exceed the amount to be recovered. Melita. No reason to sell Gas, Water, and General Trusts. W. H., Ripon.—The Provident Association of London does not fulfil the promises of its prospectus, hence great disappointment for the bondholders. I shall refer more fully to this concern (on which I last commented in Truth of Oct. 5) shortly. Embarrassé.—The Corporation has apparently very few liabilities and is chiefly suffering from depreciation of securities, which may recover again. I should certain hold now. Sutton.—Hold your New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Four per Cent. Debenture stock, as they have an undoubted security. Crowborough.—High rates of deposit are not compatible with safety. Have nothing to do with this so-called bank. W. J. S.—The £4 per share liability in the Transvaal Mortgage Loan and Finance Company is leading holders to sell, and, as there are very few buyers about, the price has soon been forced down. The shares are £1 paid, and can be sold at about 1¼ discount. Major, Hove.—Have nothing to do with this so-called bank; high rates of deposit are not compatible with safety. The Friary.—You are quite right, these are swindlers. W. H. P.—You seem to be one of the few readers of Truth who have been victimised in this group of Companies. C., Temple.—If you remind me in good time before the next meeting of the Exchange and Hop Warehouses, Limited, I shall be glad to take the matter up. This concern should certainly be wound up.

Home Rails.

Arabian, Jeddah.—Yes, your Railway investments Nos. 1-3 are high-class and well adapted for permanent investment. 4. No reason to sell. 5. A further distribution has been announced a week ago.

American and Foreign Rails.

A. B. C.—The amalgamation of the Ohio and Mississippi and of the Baltimore and Ohio South-Western is an established fact, and the new securities will be exchanged next month. Ohio shares should advance materially in consequence. Karola.—The issue of Canadian Pacific Preference stock in no way interferes with the security of the Four per Cent. Debenture stock, which ranks before it. Why not make a selection from my list of stocks last week under "A Selection of Investments," instead of buying Cape of Good Hope or Natal Inscribed stock? W. L., West Brighton.—Yes, they are a good "lock up," as sooner or later the Company will be reconstructed. Dempster.—Yes, the Atchison Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund Notes are well secured, and yield 7⅜ per cent. on the investment. You cannot do better. R. H.—I do not think it advisable to average the Brazilian Railway stock yet, until the civil war in Brazil has entered a different phase. Of the life offices, I do not like Nos. 2 and 3, but No. 1 is a good office; you refer, of course, to the English head office. A. W. Z., Liverpool.—Milwaukees will no doubt improve with the rest of the list, but a big profit is always worth taking. Yes; Atchison "A" bonds and Reading Firsts are cheap. Certainly hold Norfolk Prefs. and Union Pacifics now. T. C. S.—No reason to sell the Norfolk Gold bonds. With the improved prospects in the States these are safe enough, and likely to recover. You must be aware that a severe crisis has just been passed through. S. J. de St. L.—Both Brazilians of 1889 and Central Pacifics should be held, as present prices are very low and a recovery is probable; but I should not buy more. The low-priced stocks you want you can select from the recommendations in my letter. Brighton.—You are mistaken; Paraguay Central Debentures are not quoted 10, they were dealt in at 14 to-day. They should be held, as sooner or later a change for the better will no doubt come about even in dishonest Paraguay. F. J. O.—You should hold all the Railway stocks Nos. 1-6 for an improvement. I like No. 5 least; but they will probably go better when the dividend is paid. W. X. Y. Z.—Hold Louisville (1), and buy more to average, see remarks under the "Louisville Deal." You might also average No. 2. Hold Nos. 3 and 4. There is nothing special against the Nitrate securities, Nos. 5-7, but the policy of the Chilian Government. No. 8 is very speculative, sell if you can. Trio.—The Atchison Guarantee Fund Notes at 97 yield 7⅜ per cent. on the investment, although only bearing 6 per cent. interest, because they are redeemable at 103 after five years. It is a high-class investment. E. H.—There seems to be a talk of a Vanderbilt deal, in which the Chesapeake and Ohio is to be included, and if that come off a rise is probable. D. Wood.—Whenever some reorganisation of the Erie comes about—and this will shortly be on the tapis—the holders of Atlantic Firsts will have to be dealt with, and you should hold in the hope of a marked improvement. Two Sisters.—Although there has been a fall in the prices of your stocks, the interest is regularly paid, and you need not have any anxiety on that score, while the prices will no doubt recover. 1. The interest on the Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds is assured for several years to come, altogether independent of the revenue. 2. City of Mexico bonds are well secured, and very cheap. 3. Both Atchison "A" and "B" bonds are good investments, and prices will recover as the position in the States improves. C. F.—1. No reason for selling your Mediterranean Railway bonds unless you prefer to invest your money in English stocks. 2. Yes, you had better hold your Northern Pacific First Mortgage bonds. The other American bonds mentioned are good investments. B. J. H. E.—Mr. T. W. Powell, of 1, Drapers'-gardens, E.C., is the London agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. You should have the stock registered in the name of the English Association of American Bond and Share Holders, of Great Winchester-street, E.C., who would undertake the collecting of the interest for you. Parrhasian.—Do not sell "Bears" of Yankee Rails now. You might be caught badly. After the unfavourable September statement, Grand Trunk are not very tempting. Mysore Gold are likely to recover again, but there seems no prospect of any sharp upward movement. I should not put the whole £5,000 into United States of Havana Debentures, but only £1,000 and spread the rest over some of the other stocks named, viz., Antofagasta Capital stock, Nitrate Railway debentures, De Beers Second Mortgage debentures, and Atchison Five Years Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund Notes. St. Stephen's.—You will find a paragraph on the Stewiacke Valley and Lansdowne Railway in to-day's letter. I shall do my best to bring this matter home to those connected with the Company. Have nothing to with the person named. J. W. W.—You have no remedy. Why do you not register your holding with the English Association of American Bond and Share Holders, who will save you all the trouble. I will return to this matter next week. Raymond.—Certainly hold Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds. Mammon.—Baltimore and Ohio South-Western First Incomes should be held, as the amalgamation with the Ohio and Mississippi, which will greatly benefit them, is now an accomplished fact. Drefald.—You should keep Nos. 1-6 for a considerable improvement if you hold them as an investment.

Mining Shares.

Ajax, Glasgow.—I think your selection in the South African market of the Gold Mining shares Nos. 1-6 is very judicious. I do not, however, care for No. 7. Tone.—1. Yes, they are both a good speculative purchase. 2. Certainly hold these shares for a recovery. Broomfield.—Yes, Nigels, New Primrose, and Glencairns should be held for an improvement, which is probable. Hold also all the Mining shares Nos. 1-5, which are at very low prices. The Music-Hall shares No. 6 are unfavourably affected by the decision concerning the licence. There is no market for Rajah shares, and the news which I have received concerning the mine is very unsatisfactory. B., China. 1. Yes, there is every prospect of an advance in Mozambique shares. 2. I will bear your request in mind to quote the Mining shares in question. All those mentioned by you should be held. Prospects especially of Buffelsdoorn, Afrikander, and Glencairn are very good. 3. Yes, all the quotations are given in the Financial News. 4. You need but reckon the postage extra. 5. Certainly, the reports should be sent to you. 6. The Ferreira is a good mine. Unfortunate.—You cannot do better than to continue to plead poverty; tell them they had better make you a bankrupt. I do not think they will dare to bring the case into Court. Rag.—You should hold Balkis Eersteling. I do not think much of the other Mining shares. Tarapacà Water Works are a fair investment. Medicus and N.E.—Yes, Caratal and Holcomb Valley are likely to improve. Hold. Ashby.—All the eight Mining shares ought to be held for an improvement. J. A.—Hold Caratals. You should buy more Carringtons. See under "Indian, Australian, and American Mines." I do not like Goldfields. G. K.—All the Mining shares Nos. 1-6 ought to be held for a rise. No. 3 (Carrington) should be averaged at once. See under "Indian, Australian, and American Mines." Spes.—Judging from last advices, Transvaal Gold are worth the present price Hold the other three South African shares; I shall shortly have some information to give on them. George W.—1. Day Dawn P.C. are likely to improve. Have nothing to do with No. 2 as an investment. There is no market.

Industrial Companies.

Industrial.—It is a fair speculative investment, but the profits of such an undertaking must necessarily fluctuate, and it is impossible to reckon always on the same dividend. T. T., Wandsworth.—These are a fair speculative investment. Poppy.—No reason to sell these English Brewery Prefs. at present. They are not, however, quoted in the official list. Ledger.—I cannot obtain any reliable information concerning the German Company, and I do not see my way to advise you to embark more money in it. Ap. Tudor.—There is a prospect of the Brewery coming round again, and no option but to hold.

Borwick's Baking Powder. It is the best that money can buy.
Borwick's Baking Powder. Has been awarded Five Gold Medals.
Borwick's Baking Powder. Guaranteed to be free from alum.

Mixed Investments.

A. R. B.—No option but to hold the Brazilian stocks Nos. 1 and 2 until the civil war is over. No. 3 is a good English Brewery stock. No reason to sell No. 4 now, as matters will no doubt come round again. The Nitrate shares are cheap, but all must depend upon the future course of prices of nitrate of soda, and that again depends upon the policy which the Chilian Government may adopt. J. J.—Trust shares like Nos. 1-4 are at present greatly depressed through the unpleasant revelations in other Trust Companies, but I cannot recommend a sale at the present value. Debentures of Trust Companies like No 5 are perfectly safe, and should be held for permanent investment. A. J. F.—I should sell Nos. 1 and 2. Midland of Canada Five per Cent. First Mortgage bonds (3) are a good investment. No. 4 is rather speculative. Hold Nos. 5 and 6. The bonds No. 7 are first-rate. I do not like No. 8. Chilian bonds (9) should be held. Taken In.—1. The circular of the Brewery Company speaks for itself. It has no doubt suffered severely from the crisis in the States, and should now recover. 2. Shareholders in Chartered Banks are liable for an amount equal to the stock, even though paid up. 3. Hold Louisville Six per Cent. General Mortgage and Denver Fours as good investments. 4. Repeal has been accomplished, and prospects of American Rails are thereby improved. Archipelago.—1. I should not pick out Pennsylvania Gold bonds as an investment, and you cannot do better than buy Atchison Five Year Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund Notes at 97, which yield 7¾ per cent. including profit on redemption, and are well secured. 2. Of course, the passing of a Veto Bill would adversely affect Breweries. No; I do not think there is anything in the amalgamation rumours. 3. A purchase of Brazilians would be highly speculative at present, but if you like to run the risk you might bag a good profit. W. E. M.—1. Yes; Entre Rios Railway Prefs. are a good investment. The Trust shares in question have suffered in sympathy with those of other Trust Companies with respect to which agitation is going on. I should hardly think it advisable to sell now. Minnow.—1. Ontario are a good purchase. Hold No. 2-4 for a recovery, but do not buy any more. C. A.—For the investment of your £8,000 to yield 4 per cent., you can easily make a selection from the list of twenty investments, published in last week's issue under "A Selection of Investments." At the present time, and with the aid of this list, you will, in fact, be able to obtain a return of over 5 per cent. with perfect safety. I specially recommend you the Antofagasta Four per Cent. Debentures, Antofagasta Six per Cent. capital stock, and Atchison Six per Cent. Five Years' Guarantee Fund Notes. The latter are a high-class security, yet they will yield 7¾ per cent. S. S.—1. There is no option but to hold, this would be a disastrous time to sell. 2. Yes, hold Cedulas. Constant Subscriber.—No. 1 is a good investment. No option but to hold No. 2. Sell No. 3. No reason to sell No. 4. The South American stocks, Nos. 5-7, should be held for a recovery, also the Bank shares Nos. 8-9. Entre Rios Prefs. and Ordinary (10 and 11) are a promising investment. Better hold Nos. 12-18. Sell No. 19 if you can. Hold No. 20. I do not like No. 21 and 22. Portuguese (23) ought to have been sold long ago. Now hold! Hold Nos. 24-27. I do not think much of No. 28. Sell No. 29. Hold Nos. 30-39. Louisville (40) are likely to go up again. Hold also Nos. 41-44 for a recovery. Nos. 45 and 45A are good investments. Hold Nos. 46-50. Sell No. 51 if you can. Hold No. 52-57. Sell No. 58 and 59 if you can. Hold No. 60. Against most of the stocks which I advise you to sell, I have repeatedly warned my readers long ago, when they were much higher.

Various Investments.

Silver stood a week ago at 33⅛d., and fell on the news that the Repeal Bill had became law in the States to 31½d., from which a recovery to 32⅜d. has taken place. It is quite impossible to predict what will be the upshot; it will henceforth be altogether a question of supply and demand. Amongst the so-called silver securities Peruvian Corporation stocks and Mexican Rails have declined, but Mexican Government stocks have improved. In discussing the proposed reconstruction of the New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency, the City Editor of the Standard has got hold of the wrong story. His statements about commission are absurd, as he forgets that the stock was issued at 6 discount with a cash payment to the Five per Cent. Terminable Debentures, who were pressed three times with circulars to convert into the new stock. No further progress has so far been made with the proposal for the amalgamation of Trust Companies, to which I referred last week. I still hope that some reasonable arrangement will be come to, by which the affairs of the Industrial and General Trust will, after a thorough investigation by a Committee of shareholders, be placed on a sound footing, and under capable and careful management. I am not and never have been an admirer of Trust Companies, but if shareholders do not wish to lose still more heavily, they will do well not to be carried away by the shrieking fraternity, who consider the Official Receiver the only remedy. The report of that official on the South American and Mexican Company, by the way, is instructive reading, and it is evident that the gravest mistakes were made by the directors in the conduct of this concern. I have already expressed my view of the financing of the Middlesborough Town Lands Company and of the whole group of concerns connected with it, notably the Cumberland Gap Hotel Company. Fortunately, few, if any, of the readers of Truth were, to my knowledge, interested in this mad gamble, and still madder feat of financing, and as the matter has been threshed out ad nauseam in the daily press, I need not take up any space with it. The traffic of the Nitrate Railways for the fortnight ended October 31 showed an increase of £29,242 over the corresponding period of 1892, and the market for Nitrate Rails is distinctly firmer at 14¾. The Primitiva Nitrate report for the year ended June 30 last showed a profit balance of £28,233, out of which the Directors have placed £10,000 to reserve and £10,000 to depreciation. No dividend was paid, nor was one expected.—Your affectionate uncle,

MOSES

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

UP FOR THE LORD MAYOR'S SHOW.

"IF the Mater knows we're on the route of the procession she'll be up for it as sure as eggs. She's always talked of seeing the Lord Mayor's Show, as if it were half as good as any circus procession. Infernal old Noah's Ark survival! By George! Guard, I'll cut it, as a family invasion might blow up the whole thing."

"You mean you're going down to Dalheaton," Guard answered, with a laugh.

"No, I don't; I daren't. The old lady suspects something, and haunts Nell now like her shadow. I shall run down for a week to Thring."

"I wish we could have had them here," Guard said, with a kind of shy wistfulness.

"There's no accounting for tastes," Dick Varien replied, with a shrug. "I can fancy nothing more deadly than standing all day at a window to point out the whole Chamber of Horrors to a mother and sister."

Dick forgot that his sister was not Guard's; and besides he had not the faintest suspicion of his friend's being hard hit in that quarter. But George Guard's visit six weeks since to the Variens had hopelessly enslaved him to the sole daughter of the house, Ruth, who on her part was neither unconscious of his feelings nor of her own modified reciprocation thereof. At least, a little further acquaintance with George Guard would doubtless have turned in his favour a feeling which now wavered as

> "The swan's down feather
> That stands upon the swell at full of tide,
> And neither way inclines."

Of this crisis Guard was conscious, and he thought, or, at least hoped, that such a chance as a visit of Ruth and her mother to London to see the Lord Mayor's Show as his guest, might turn the scale in his favour. As, however, his chum had his own reasons for fearing their visit to London at this special juncture in his affairs, Guard could not ask them up in his own name. He had, nevertheless, a faint hope of their coming up spontaneously for the Show; and this hope was strengthened by the sight of Mrs. Varien's writing on a letter which arrived for Dick on the day after his departure for Thring—November 8, the eve of the Show.

Accordingly, George Guard laid in sumptuous lunch materials, accounting to his conscience for the extravagance by the plea that perhaps his sister Edith might run up from Staines for the day, as he had suggested to her. Neither his conscience nor his sister, however, was likely to be deluded into the belief that the profusion of extravagant flowers wherewith he adorned the rooms were meant for her sole gratification. Nor, again, was it a sister's train (L.S.W.) he looked out on the morning of the ninth, but the King's Cross arrivals of the trains from Mitchelsea—the Variens' station. He seemed, indeed, to have calculated to a moment the time of their arrival by the earliest practicable train at his rooms, for at that moment his landlady knocked to announce a young lady. A young lady! She had come alone, reckoning upon the chaperonage of Dick! What was to be done? Upon finding Dick flown, she would fly also. Was there ever so tantalising a situation?

"Show her up," he stammered.

"Please, sir, it was for Mr. Varien she asked."

"Did you say he was from home?"

"No, sir. I thought he was sure to return for the Show."

"Well, show her up, and I will explain," George said, cudgelling his brains the while to think of some chaperon within immediate reach.

Accordingly, the visitor—as pretty and piquant-looking a young lady as was to be seen that day in all London—was shown up, ushered in, and found not to be Ruth! I fear George's crushing disappointment was written with ungallant plainness in his fallen face, for the young lady cried, with charmingly audacious vivacity—

"I am afraid I'm not the expected one; but, then, you see, neither are you, so we're quits! Isn't Dick—Mr. Varien—in?"

"No. He went out of town—down to Thring—on Tuesday."

"Oh, I say! He might have written. After all the trouble I had to make my escape, and to get a clear day in town to see the Show! I did so want to see the Show!" she pouted, looking forlornly round the flower-bedecked room.

Presently she brightened suddenly up, and it seemed as though a sunbeam had broken its way from behind a cloud into the murky November atmosphere of the room.

"Look here! I'll send Dick a wire, and you'll let me stay till he comes? You are expecting ladies? I can tell it by your face, and I see it in these flowers. Why not lump me with the rest, and give me a corner of a window? I'm—— Did you ever hear Dick—Mr. Varien—speak of Nell Linton?"

"I seldom hear him speak of any one else," George replied, smiling down, as an anchorite must have done, upon the winsome face upturned appealingly to his.

"Then allow me to introduce the lady to you, Mr. Guard—for, of course, you're his chum. Mr. Guard, Miss Nell Linton," making a sweeping curtsey to him as she spoke.

George made a correspondingly profound bow. "The rooms are as much yours as mine," he said, as cordially as he could, but his mind was racked by miserable misgivings. Suppose Ruth and her mother, or even Edith, were to come now, and find him tête-à-tête with this exceedingly lovely and exceedingly lively young woman. Her loveliness to them would be but an aggravation of her fastness, slanginess, and confounding audacity. He could not explain her away without disclosing Dick's secret. What was to be done? Why not say he was expecting Dick's mother? This would rout her to a certainty.

"I am expecting Mrs. Varien," he said, truly enough.

"No! Dick's mother?"

"Yes."

"I say, though, that's glorious!"

"I—I thought, perhaps, you wouldn't care to meet her just yet," George stammered, completely taken aback.

"Not as Nell Linton, of course. You must adopt me for the nonce as your friend, or sister, or cousin, or something. Won't it be jolly to take stock of the old lady without her having a notion of my interest in her? I declare it will almost make up for my missing Dick. When do you expect her?"

"I thought perhaps she might have come by the train due at King's Cross at 10.50."

"Oh, then she's not coming; for that was my train," she said, in a tone of chagrin, whereas George was absolutely relieved. "But you won't mind my staying without a chaperon, if Dick doesn't and I don't?" And without waiting for an answer she sent him off to despatch the telegram. And whilst he was away she made herself perfectly at home.

About half an hour later the landlady knocked at the door, and said—

"Please, sir, Mrs. and Miss Varien have just come up. They expected to find Mr. Varien in town. Mrs. Varien and Ruth had, after all, come by the 10.50 but were delayed by some shopping.

George only blinked blankly at the landlady till she added—

"Shall I show them up, sir?"

"Yes, yes, of course," he answered, confusedly.

The landlady had no sooner closed the door behind her, than Nell asked, breathlessly, "What's your sister's name?"

"Edith."

"Well, I'm Edith. Have I a father and mother, and where do I live? Quick!"

"At Staines. No mother."

"Do they know your people—any of them?"

"No."

"All right. I'll write a note of warning for the landlady to give Dick when he comes. Up with the curtain!"

And, indeed, at that moment the curtain went up, for the landlady ushered in Mrs. and Miss Varien. They absolutely stopped within the door, arrested by the sight of this startlingly smart young lady. Mrs. Varien was proper to austerity, while, if Ruth had a fault, it was a Quaker-like primness matching her name. To both, therefore, this almost improperly pretty young woman, with an altogether improperly fast costume and mien and expression, was a shock.

"I fear we are intruding," Mrs. Varien said with cutting coldness.

"Not at all. I half—I mean I'm so sorry for your disappointment. Dick ran down to Thring on Tuesday," George stammered so guiltily that Mrs. Varien half turned to quit the room.

"Is this Mrs. Varien, George? I have heard you speak of her so often and of Miss Varien," Nell added significantly, for she had taken in the situation at a glance of her keen grey eye. "Pray introduce me."

"My sister Edith," the wretched George said almost mechanically. He consoled himself with the reflection that Edith was sure not to come now, as the street was impassable, and she hated crowds.

Mrs. Varien, somewhat ashamed of herself, held out her hand with grudging cordiality, but Ruth showed her relief at finding that the dazzling young person was only Mr. Guard's sister, by what for her was quite an effusive greeting. The only person in the room who was neither abashed, embarrassed, nor compunctious, was the fair impostor herself. She took to her part as a duck to water, with an eager plunge of delight. She spoke with the greatest enthusiasm of Staines (which she had never seen), of its picturesqueness, its antiquity, and its convenient proximity to London. Again and again she appealed to the stupefied George, whom she took a mischievous delight in terrifying and tormenting, and played the part of sister to him so prettily and patronisingly that both Ruth and her mother got the impression that he was the most domestically amiable of men. She soon got to calling him "Georgie" even, and he expected her momentarily to pat him on the head.

"Oh, Georgie is not a bad brother as brothers go," she said airily. "It isn't every brother who would fill his rooms with his sister's favourite flowers," taking some of the choicest flowers as she spoke out of a vase, and making of them, with exquisite taste, a perfect bouquet, which she presented to Ruth. "You won't mind my giving some of your beautiful flowers to Miss Varien, will you, Georgie?" she added, at the same time winking at him with an eye which was fortunately out of sight of the other ladies. "Oh! by the way, wouldn't you like to take your things off?" she asked, turning to Mrs. Varien; and henceforth, as she afterwards expressed it to Dick, she "bossed the whole show"—even the Lord Mayor's Show to boot. She took Mrs. Varien in charge (in order to leave Ruth and "Georgie" to themselves), and proceeded to point out the celebrities of the procession with a magnificent audacity and mendacity which completely imposed on that good lady.

She kept the wretched "Georgie" in an agony lest Ruth might overhear and question some of her outrageous nominations, as, a little later, she did. "Mr. Gladstone! Oh, which is Mr. Gladstone? I didn't see any collars," Ruth exclaimed, excitedly, upon overhearing "Edith" point out the G.O.M. to Mrs. Varien.

"I didn't see him either," George answered, helplessly.

"Surely Mr. Balfour wouldn't carry a silver golf-putter like that?"

"Hardly," he muttered.

"What! that Mr. Rudyard Kipling on the elephant? Your sister must be joking."

"Mr. Kipling is not in England," he said aloud, in warning to the irrepressible Nell.

"It was the elephant I identified," she answered, coolly. "He has probably lent it to a friend for the procession."

Henceforth, however, she was at once more guarded in her nominations and more confidential in her tone. But it was at lunch that she shone with special splendour. She took the whole entertainment out of "Georgie's" hand, and played the hostess to him as prettily and patronisingly as to the ladies. She gave him, to be sure, the credit of providing the special delicacies which he knew she liked; but, for the rest, the entire entertainment might have been at her expense, so graciously did she preside over it.

"Haven't I brought him up well?" she said, nodding over at Ruth. "They say a good brother makes a good husband; but who makes the good brother? A good sister, of course. By the way, have you got a brother to bring up in the way he should go?"

"I've got a brother, but you must ask Mr. Guard, with whom he chums, about his bringing up."

"Oh, of course! That's the 'Dick' you were talking about just now. Well, what's your report of him, Georgie? Is he likely to make a good husband?"

"He's a perfect chum," he answered, without venturing to raise his eyes off his plate. "What a devil of a girl!" he thought; "but she'll pop her head once too often in the lion's mouth, and mine with it."

"Have you but one sister?" asked Mrs. Varien, who, disapproving of this talk about husbands as indirectly improper, wished to change it.

"Yes," George replied shortly, and almost doggedly.

At this moment the landlady knocked and opened the door to make the thunderbolt announcement, "Please, sir, your sister."

"I had no idea you were having company, George, or I should have stayed with Mrs. Bernard, where I had to take refuge from the crowd. I could only get through now. I—I'm afraid I'm de trop," she stammered, noticing the consternation occasioned by her entry.

"This is Dick's mother and sister, Mrs. and Miss Varien," George faltered almost mechanically.

"And this! Who is this, sir?" asked Mrs. Varien, choking with fury, as she glared upon the still imperturbable Nell.

"He can hardly tell you," that lady answered, "for he saw me for the first time only an hour before you came here. I came up to see the Show and a friend who did live in these rooms, but has lately left them. Finding that he was not here, and that Mr. Guard was expecting ladies, I asked him to let me see the Show under their chaperonage from his windows. It was I who suggested that he should adopt me for the nonce as a sister to avoid scandal, and he accepted the suggestion almost at the point of the bayonet when you and Miss Varien were announced."

At this incredible story Mrs. Varien literally snorted her rage and scorn. Without deigning even to look at Nell, she turned savagely on George. "Sir, you have grossly and deliberately insulted me and my daughter, and you shall answer for it to my son! Come, Ruth, the servant will fetch down our things to us in the hall."

George turned upon Ruth a look of agonised appeal which touched her, but did not convince her of his innocence against evidence so overwhelming. What! That a girl he imposed upon them as his sister was an absolute stranger to him an hour before the imposition was suggested to him! The thing was grotesquely incredible. Even to his own sister, Edith, it was incredible, but, perhaps, the dazzling beauty of the imposter weighed with her also as much against George as the facts of the case. Most certainly it did with Ruth.

"I shall go with you, if you will allow me," Edith said, turning her back upon her brother. "But pray come with me into the room to put on your things," she added, having a feminine horror of a scandal. This concession Mrs. Varien made grudgingly, and the three ladies turned to quit the lazar-house of corruption before the fatal infection could pollute them further.

Just as they reached the door Nell burst out wrathfully and vehemently with, "Well, if you must know the whole truth ——" But as the three ladies turned startled round to hear it, George interrupted the disclosure, "You have told as much as is necessary," he said, hastily, with a significant look of warning against divulging a secret which was as much Dick's as hers. This look interpreted his words in the worst possible sense to the three ladies, who made at once and angrily from the room.

Hardly had the door closed behind them when Nell, to George's utter amazement, sat suddenly down and burst into tears! It was partly, no doubt, reaction from her wild excitement of fooling Mrs. Varien; but it was chiefly the remorse of a thoroughly good-hearted girl for the mischief she had made.

"There!" she sobbed, "I—I have done for you with my idiotic foolery, and you such a good sort!"

"Never mind, Dick will make it all right," George said soothingly.

"What?" asked Dick, entering the room at that moment. He had started off at once from Thring upon receiving Nell's wire.

Nell flew to him, threw herself in his arms, and sobbed out the whole story into his very ear. "He wouldn't let me tell because of you," she wound up with.

"There is nothing for it now but confession, contrition, and, let us hope, absolution," Dick said lightly, yet with an anxious face.

Hurrying down he overtook the ladies at the door.

"I say, mother," he said, "I want you all to come back for a minute till I make things straight for Guard and—and that lady."

His mother hesitated, but Ruth hurried back to kiss her brother.

After a moment, Mrs. Varien's curiosity and affection for her son induced her to return to the polluted chamber, where Dick proceeded somewhat confusedly and incoherently to make his explanation. This was what his astonished mother heard:—

Dick had met Miss Nell Linton at private theatricals, and had played the lover to her, first dramatically, and at last with real and successful fervour. The young lady was an heiress and a ward in Chancery, and was watched besides with lidless dragon's eyes by an old aunt; yet she broke through watch and ward and the meshes of the law, and became the wife of Dick Varien secretly, and, so far, securely. Neither had an idea of the monstrous crime they were committing until it was committed; but Dick now took care that his mother should be better instructed, and he gave her fair and full warning of the punishment that would overtake him if his offence became known to the Lord Chancellor during Nell's minority. The awful picture which he drew of the fate which threatened him overcame all other considerations in his fond mother's bosom, and, in her fear for her son, she speedily made peace with his wife. That a reconciliation was even more speedily effected between her daughter and George Guard, need scarcely be stated.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

RATIONAL DOG FEEDING.—Give wholesome and nutritious food (Spratt's Patent Meat Fibrine Dog Cakes). Do not give tit-bits and dainties because your dog, like a spoilt child, prefers what suits his palate. See that the Dog Cakes are stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "×," as cheap and innutritious imitations are often substituted for extra profit. Pamphlet on Canine Diseases post free, SPRATT'S PATENT, Limited, Bermondsey, London.

ART NOTES.

ARTEMUS WARD has told us how he was one day buttonholed in a railway carriage by a vehement champion of woman's rights. "There," exclaimed the latter, when he had finished expatiating on the wrongs of the sex, "don't it make yer blood bile to think how your female sisters is trodden under-foot?" The answer of Artemus was very short. "No, stranger," said he, quietly, "nary bile!" I recalled this anecdote when I was looking at Mr. Albert Goodwin's oil paintings at the Fine Art Society's the other day. That artist seemed to shout at me, as I stood in front of his most ambitious canvases, "There, doesn't it make your flesh creep to look at that!" whilst I found myself instinctively muttering, in reply, "Nary creep!" The fact is, Mr. Albert Goodwin is never so unimpressive as when he evidently sets himself to impress. Look at his "Passage of the Red Sea," for example, and especially at the figure of Moses as he stands on the rock and stretches out his hand over the waters. Now, I do not think that Mr. Goodwin's most partial critic would maintain that this presentation of the Jewish law-giver is an impressive one. To me, as an unprejudiced outsider, his Moses looks far too much like a fat old woman in her night-gown trying to scare away an obtrusive cat, to arouse even a feeling of respect, let alone one of awe. So it is, again, with his "City of Dis," which, by the way, is not unlike his "City of Durham" in another part of the room. For all the impression which is created by its lurid sky, smoke-wreathed battlements, and supernatural citizens, it might as well be the Diss in Norfolk as the Dis of Dante. In the days when Martin's "Opening of the Seventh Seal" and other such pictorial interpretations of the Apocalypse were popular, Mr. Albert Goodman's attempts at the unattainable might possibly have been admired. As it is, they are, as the poet says, "born too late into too old a world." We have become far too knowing and fin-de-siècleish to be frightened by such very stagey thunder and lightning.

It is the more distressing to find that Mr. Goodwin should have thus wasted his time and talent, because in the room adjoining that in which his disappointing oil-paintings are hung is to be found a collection of his water-colours, the delightful qualities of which it would be difficult to praise too highly. To think that an artist who can give us such charming bits of Turneresque beauty as Mont St. Michel and Amalfi, and the Old Bridge at Lucerne, should have troubled himself to illustrate the Pentateuch and the Inferno is, indeed, almost exasperating. Oh, what can have led him, one wonders, to give up to Moses talents that were meant for St. Mark's? There is an answer to this question, but it is too long for me to give here. Meanwhile, if what I have said will help to induce Mr. Goodwin to be content in future with delighting us, and to let those who will attempt to make our flesh creep, I shall not have written in vain.

There is nothing very epoch-making in Mr. Max Ludby's eighty-eight water-colours at the Dowdeswell Galleries. They illustrate the Thames from Oxford to Greenwich, and show us all the well-known "bits" on the river for about the thousandth time. Still, repetition need not be necessarily wearisome, or how exceedingly tired we should be by now of the lark's song. But then, it may be retorted, we are never called on to listen to four score and eight larks' songs all at once. If it be inferred from this that I found Mr. Ludby's drawings just a little monotonous and disappointing I shall not be at the pains to deny the soft impeachment. The moral of the Exhibition is, indeed, a very old one, viz., that a "one-man" show is a most hazardous ordeal, through which even a first-class artist can hardly hope to pass unscathed. Indeed, just as literary critics go through the world exclaiming, "Oh that mine enemy would write a book!" so might art critics with equal appropriateness ejaculate, "Oh that mine enemy would hold a one-man show!"

Most of us have seen some sort of representation of the front of Shakespeare's house at Stratford-on-Avon. To how few of us, however, is the appearance of the back of it familiar. And I doubt if even one out of twenty of those who have visited Stratford are aware that there is a charming old-fashioned English garden attached to it. It was, therefore, a distinctly happy thought on the part of Mr. Francis H. Walker to paint this interesting spot, and the etching which Mr. Arthur Lucas, of 31, New Bond street, has just published of the picture should find a place in every Shakespearean collection.

MUSIC.

SULLIVAN IN BERLIN.

THE experiment which Sir Arthur Sullivan proposes to try at Berlin a week or two hence will be watched with great interest. Nobody could quite understand the reason of the quasi-failure in London of his only serious opera, "Ivanhoe," at the now defunct English opera house. It may have been that people did not appreciate the almost daily changes of cast, or that the prices were not very wisely fixed at fifteen shillings for the stalls and the same sum for the dress circle. Or it may have been a repetition of the old tale, that the opera-going public will not support a "run" of a serious opera. It is, nevertheless, a fact that no opera upon a serious subject—as distinct from comic opera—ever has had a run in London, and that the small, but wealthy and influential clique who now are the main support of opera in this capital demand a frequent change of bill. Sir Arthur Sullivan, however, intends to give "Ivanhoe" another chance. In the first place he has thoroughly revised the work, almost rewriting the weak Torquilstone scene, dropping in another tenor song, and overhauling the entire music, also, let us hope, striking out a good deal of the scene between De Bracy and Cedric, and of the tedious forest scene. The libretto has been translated into German, and in its new form it will, by command of the Kaiser, a fortnight hence be produced at the Imperial Opera House, Berlin. Sir Arthur will leave England this week to supervise the final rehearsals, and afterwards he will go on a visit to the Duke of Saxe-Coburg. The compliment paid by the Berlin authorities—at the instigation, it is understood, of the Empress Frederick—is a special one, for, if I recollect rightly, no opera by an Englishman, and certainly no new work by one of our countrymen, has ever yet been mounted at the Hofoper, although the operas of Stanford, Goring Thomas, and others have been placed on less important stages. This will give "Ivanhoe" another fillip, and as even in these enlightened days a good many people, particularly of the upper classes, still affect to believe that all good music must come from abroad, Sir A. Sullivan's opera, fresh from successes in the German capital, may even stand a chance of a hearing at Covent Garden. It is, at any rate, absurd that one of the most melodious and graceful operas which has been produced within the present generation should be shelved, while greatly inferior comic operas are permanently in the repertory in the provinces.

Mr. Cowen is another British composer who, owing to the feeble home-demand for such things, finds it advisable to produce his new opera abroad. "Signa" is to be done at the Dal Verme, the second opera house of Milan (La Scala is, of course, the first), and although the irritating delays usual in Italy have occurred, and more than one postponement has proved necessary, it seems that, whether fully rehearsed or not, it will have to be given next Sunday. It will be repeated on Monday and Tuesday, after which the portion of Sonzogno's company charged with the duty of producing it will start on tour. At the same theatre Leoncavallo's new opera, "Medici," is down for first performance to-night (Thursday), and the official invitations have been issued. This time none of the London daily papers have cared to spare their musical critics to go to Italy, and they are wise, for one gentleman, unattached, has already been upwards of a fortnight cooling his heels in Milan waiting for the production.

The Royal Choral Society have commenced their new season at the Albert Hall with Berlioz's "Faust." Margaret had been assigned to Frau Moran-Olden, the robust soprano who sang Wagnerian parts in German at the Opera last season; but, as the lady was indisposed, the rôle was undertaken by Mrs. Hutchinson. Why our premier oratorio society should have gone out of its way to engage a German lady for a branch of music in which she had hitherto not been tried here was not quite clear. Mr. Ben Davies was the Faust and Mr. Henschel the Mephistopheles. The choir are, however, the most attractive feature of the Albert Hall performances, and Berlioz's music is thoroughly familiar to them.

On Saturday, Mr. Cowen's "Water Lily," the best of the rather poor show of novelties at the recent Norwich Festival, was given for the first time at the Crystal Palace. Time alone can show whether the public will appreciate such a story, with its magic dreams, its animated water lilies, its swan-drawn cars, and the rest of it. Romanticism of this character when presented on the stage in "Siegfried," has been pretty smartly satirised, and why that which is permitted to Wordsworth, should be forbidden to Wagner is not at all clear. However, the Crystal Palace performance of the new cantata, was on the whole fairly good, and the important orchestration went indeed far better under Mr. Manns at Sydenham than under the composer at Norwich.

In reference, by the way, to the price of the Crystal Palace tickets, I am asked by the Secretary to say that the two-guinea serial concert ticket is only intended for guinea season ticket holders, but that for the convenience of others a three-guinea transferable ticket is issued, admitting to the Palace and also to a four-shilling stall at each of the twenty concerts. If paid for separately the stall and admission would come to £5. No one certainly can complain of the charges made for these splendid concerts. For example, Dr. Richter asks £3. 10s. for a stall for only six concerts, whereas, at the Crystal Palace, twenty concerts under Mr. Manns cost only £3. 3s.

Some little time ago there was grumbling among the supporters of the Popular Concerts that the quartet party was not more frequently varied. The experiment of change has been tried this autumn, but I do not think a solitary subscriber will be sorry now that the regular quartet is reassembling. Lady Hallé returned on Monday and "led" the Razoumowsky quartet in E minor, besides playing the slow movement from Dvorak's violin concerto. Considering the very large repertory of solo music for the violin, it was, perhaps hardly necessary to try a movement from an orchestral work, the instrumentation of which at the Popular Concerts must, of course, be played on the pianoforte. Herr Hugo Becker, the clever cellist, of Frankfort, both on Saturday and Monday replaced that excellent artist Mr. Whitehouse, but on Monday next the veteran Piatti will return to commence his fiftieth season in England.

Monday, the 27th inst., will be the fiftieth anniversary of the production at Drury Lane of "The Bohemian Girl," and Sir A. Harris has arranged a special afternoon performance of Balfe's opera at Drury Lane on that date, Miss Moody, I believe, playing Arline. Everybody connected with the original production is, I expect, now dead, but at least two gentlemen who were present at the first performance are still living, namely, Mr. William Davison, a brother of the great critic, and Mr. H. J. Lincoln, a critic whose experience extends over a good deal more than half a century, but who for some little time past has been living in retirement. I wonder, by the way, that neither of these gentlemen has written a book of reminiscences. Mr. Davison, particularly, has been a watchful observer of musical matters, both before and behind the scenes, for nearly sixty years.

The Lord Mayor's banquet "in honour of Music" on Monday was commendably free from the City element, and it was really a more or less private dinner given to a rather mixed company of about 300 musicians and hangers-on of music. The best speech was that of Mr. Justice Chitty, brief, witty, and to the point; the feeblest the long harangue of Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, who was for the most part, almost inaudible. Lord Mayor Knill acted the recognised part of host by refraining from asking his guests (Mr. Ben Davies excepted) to take part in the music, but it seemed a thousand pities that so many eminent vocalists and pianists from Miss Davies and Miss Anna Williams down to Mr. Chevalier should be idle, while a glee party was endeavouring to make music. One piece of real information was, however, vouchsafed to musicians in the programme, viz., that Stevens, composer of "The Cloud Capt Towers," was born in 1573 and died in 1837. As an eminent musician remarked, Stevens seems to have been cut off in the flower of his youth.

I have received an interesting letter from a highly-respected lady, who both before and after his residence in England was intimate with the Gounod family, giving the true history of the incident in the German war, in which the garden gate of Gounod's house at St. Cloud was labelled, "The house of Gounod, composer of 'Faust.'" It was always understood that this was done by direction of Gounod himself. The lady in question, although she requests that the explanation should be given, marks her letter, "Private and confidential," by which, I assume, she does not wish her name to be mentioned. But the placard, it seems, was posted on the instruction of the lady herself. The Gounods were at Etretat, and when an alarmist telegram was received from General Trochu, they started for England. The lady heard that Rosa Bonheur's house had been committed to the honour of the Germans, and she caused to be affixed to Gounod's house, "Châlet Gounod, à l'honneur des Prussiens." The Prussians did, indeed, respect the premises, but the house was afterwards burnt down by the French, who suspected that Germans were concealed there. The lady adds, "No one knew that I had done it, not even my husband;" so that my ignorance of the fact must clearly be excused.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—I am sure you must want to know all about the new hats for autumn and winter wear, so I have just been to see Madame "Esmé" at 117, Victoria-street, a thoroughfare which has become commercial rather than social during the last few years. Now what shall I begin with? A big black hat fresh from Worth's fertile brain and his Paris atelier, or one of the new silk beavers which remind one of the curiously sloping head-gear of the men of the last century? The big black hat was a perfect picture, being rather deep from front to back in comparison with its width. Long and lovely black ostrich feathers trimmed it in a backward sweep, the ends falling upon the hair. Another from Worth's was in fawn-coloured felt trimmed with dahlia velvet in a tone of pinkish mauve. The bow was large and lordly, and a piece of the velvet was drawn under the brim and held just above the brow with a cabochon of Rhine stones. Three black feathers completed the composition. The brim was slightly curved upward all round. Infinitely becoming was quite a small round black velvet hat trimmed with old rose velvet shot with green, a fine old Louis Quinze buckle being passed through the bow. Some black feathers composed the remaining trimming, one of them falling over the hair. Purely delicious was a large hat with long feathers, a big bow of pale blue velvet upstanding in front, and a knot of violets reposing on the hair at the back. There was something tremendously chic about this. Madame Esmé has a fresh supply of hats and bonnets sent over every fortnight from Paris, so that all the novelties are represented in her atelier. I looked at some bonnets, as they are so much worn now. One

TYPEWRITERS of all makes for Sale or Hire. Machines bought or taken in part exchange for new ones. Documents copied with accuracy and despatch.—N. TAYLOR, Manager, National Typewriter Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane.

HUNTING SEASON, 1893-4.—Busvine's new designs and materials for this year include several special novelties in Riding Habits, Coats for Walking and Driving, Walking Jackets, Gowns, &c. Can be seen at 4, Brook-street, or will be sent by return of post.—JOHN BUSVINE, by special appointments to the Princess of Wales, the Empress of Germany, the Empress of Austria, &c., &c.

was in astrakan, or baby astrakhan, in the pretty little shape which resembles a child's Dutch bonnet, fitting down on the hair between the fringe and the coil of burnished twists at the back. This little bonnet had for trimming a bunch of violets in front and a big bow of black satin at the back. Another was trimmed with a large bow of brightest pink satin mirror velours, with a lovely sheen upon it, large jet circles aiding the ornamentation, and an aigrette. A dear little bonnet with a pointed crown of gold sequin embroidery had a black rosette between the points, which came forward on the fringe in front. A butterfly bow of black lace and velvet finished it at the back. The same shape is made by Madame Esmé in real old brocade which can be assorted to the tones of any costume. The points make it peculiarly becoming, especially when the hair is worn parted in the centre and rising in a little ridge on either side, with a careless-looking curl on the forehead. A very new shape in bonnets was in green velvet, with a tiny curtain of black jetted gauze hanging over the hair at the back. A pair of gold wings formed the other trimming. A perfectly charming green velvet toque was trimmed with a most delightful mixture of sable tail, violets and black feathers. Two large jet pins were thrust through the folds of velvet.

For morning wear there were felt hats, mostly in brown or stone colour, the brim curved slightly up all round. One in mordoré felt was trimmed with sable and three bows of velvet, one green, one brown, and one purple.

The hats of silk beaver in the natural shade of greyish brown, as worn in the beginning of the century, are very new and smart. We saw one of them lined with brown velvet and trimmed with black satin bows, black feathers, and a spray of lovely chrysanthemums.

You know how annoying it is to have the brim of one's hat lose its stiffness and "flop" into all sorts of shapes, instead of retaining the one which exactly suits the wearer. Madame Esmé has all hers wired round the edge, a narrow silk binding hiding the wire. The brim can then be bent into any form that the wearer pleases to give it, retentively holding even the tiniest wave or curve.

Lilla is off for the hunting to Warwickshire with a couple of sturdy weight-carriers and quite a trousseau de chasse, so to speak. We went with her to Busvine's when she had her grand final trying on of all the new garments. Her waistcoats are in themselves worth living for, one being pure white doeskin, with flat, black jet buttons; another in pale mouse-grey doeskin; a third in turquoise blue, one of Lilla's especial fancies; and a fourth in a new check which is very effective, being of medium size in grey with lines of brown. We saw the most perfect-looking driving coat in box-cloth of a pale shade, made to fit perfectly in to the waist at the back, but with straight, double-breasted fronts. Lady Brooke wears one of these. Miss Margot Tennant has invested in one of the "Dreadnoughts" which totally exclude the wet, the seams being stitched four times over, and the fronts elongating so as to entirely cover the knees. Lady Curzon and Lady Fanny Majoribanks have adopted the tight habits, but Lady Cadogan wears a loose front with a waistcoat. Mrs. Leopold de Rothschild has the Lord de Rothschild's hunt-buttons on one of her habits. Lady Raincliffe wears those of the Beaufort hunt. Mrs. Sloane Stanley, whose get-up on horseback is always faultless, has adopted the new check for her waistcoats, and the Duchess of Newcastle has one of hers in the Guards colours. The habits themselves are made in beautiful dark mixtures this year; all of the cloths being made in the West of England. Black, for instance, has a sort of red bloom thrown up on the surface by the admixture of this colour in weaving. It only shows in a bright light, sunshine bringing it out in a very effective manner. Another is in dark blue with gold introduced in the same sparing, indefinite way. A third is green with a white bloom upon it, though the aspect is wholly green, and the tint dark enough to please the most conservative in matters equestrian. The texture is soft as chamois, yet very thick, firm, and full of substance.

We saw several very pretty costumes, one being in dark blue cloth, piped with light blue, the coat made tight at the back and the fronts straight, showing the light blue waistcoat at the neck and waist. The skirt of the coat was cut up a little way at intervals, the sides being piped with the light blue. A tan cloth, with revers in beaver brown velvet, coming in points that meet at the waist, has a band of similar velvet on the skirt. A dark green cloth shows the revers crossing in front, a style that suits some figures remarkably well. Graduated bands of the velvet trim the skirt. Some of the perfectly plain bodices showed how liberally the tailor's skill had been expended on them in moulding the cloth to the figure by means of pressing the seams with very heavy irons, stretching them and pressing them over and over again. Small wonder that "tailor-made" figures are so much admired, for every possible device is utilised for their embellishment. In the new braided jackets, to take a case in point, a different design is adopted for each figure, the length of the braiding in front making the waist look longer, or the width of another pattern giving apparent breadth to the chest. Brown is quite the favourite colour for cloth costumes this season, we were told, and some of the shades we saw were lovely, being warm and responsive to the light, without being bright or unbecoming.

I have been discussing frocks, coats, and dress generally all this week, as Alice has been staying with us, and she is anxious for me to clothe her generally in all that appertains to a winter's outfit of the very latest style. She has, in the meantime, some lovely tea gowns and tea jackets, which I covet tremendously. One made in pale mauve crêpe de chine and silk is a dream of loveliness. The skirt is moulded on to a long swathed bodice of the crêpe de chine, and a grand piece of old lace is suspended by rosettes from the shoulder, and mingled with the Watteau train. Deep flounces of the lace envelop the sleeves, and the gown suits her most beautifully. Then she has a perfect picture gown, made of handsome gold and black bullion, brocaded in large crimson chrysanthemum designs. The gown is semi-high, and the brocade hangs in a long train in straight lines from a deep yoke of black moire, folded into a point back and front. The dress is slightly shaped to the figure at the waist, and a beautiful garniture of jet is carried under the arms, and a fringe of knotted silk and jet reaches the hem of the skirt in front.

Requiring, however, a theatre bodice, her seal-skin coat renovated, and some new evening frocks, &c., I took her to one of my latest "finds," Madame Vanité's, in Princes-street. Madame V. had some capital models, from which we chose our styles. We bought rather a sensible little bodice in black velvet, and, of course, it was mixed with fur and lace. Still the fur did not look in the least aggressive (as I sometimes think it does on evening dresses), for the soft skin of the Persian kid only formed a kind of yoke, and the basque of the jacket was cut in four deep points. The bodice opened over black chiffon, moire, and coarse cream lace, which was folded and puffed into a crazy kind of loose front, and was held together by a deep stomacher of jet.

Charlie was in a hansom in Oxford-street, near the Tottenham-court-road, the other morning, when he saw a little pug dog run over, the wheel of some vehicle crushing one of its paws. The poor doggie naturally howled with pain, attracting every one's attention to its sufferings. A young man, probably its owner, showed his sympathy by bestowing on it first one kick, then another, to the intense

MESSRS. REDFERN beg to announce that the models of Gowns, Coats, Mantles, &c., designed and prepared for autumn and early winter wear, are now ready, and display the combined ideas of the latest London and Paris Houses.—27, New Bond-street, W.

The most beautiful of Winter Garments are those of Nature's own production—FURS. For an elegant fit, genuine and best furs, go to NICHOLAY'S, Manufacturing Furriers, 170, Oxford-street, London. Seal Jackets re-made to fashionable shapes. Moderate prices.

indignation of the bystanders, many of whom expressed their opinion of him pretty freely. Directly after the second kick had been administered, a well-dressed young fellow came rushing to the spot, and with a well-planted blow sent the inhuman owner sprawling. The crowd cheered this breach of the peace, and if I had been there I should certainly have thanked that young man for showing in such an unmistakable fashion his contempt for the cowardly cruelty of which the other had been guilty. This was surely one of the occasions when it is well to be angry, and there is no way to reach such brutes except by the argument of fisticuffs. What do you think of it?

Don't you wish that people would not leave their loops out at the back of their necks? I have seen both men and women with the loops of their overcoats or outdoor jackets protruding, giving one the impression that the wearers were begging to be hung up for awhile out of the way, coats and all. It always amuses me when I see this sort of unconscious invitation extended.

Here is a nice way of making game pie. Do try it:—

Remove the fillets from a couple of pheasants and two partridges and place them aside. Cut the remainder of the meat from the bones and pass it twice through the mincing machine with the flesh of a hare or a couple of rabbits. Fry all the livers with a sliced eschalot, a sprig each of thyme and parsley, a bay-leaf, and a slice of fat bacon, and pound them in the mortar. Add 1 lb. of scraped fat bacon to the forcemeat, season plentifully with salt and pepper, and mix all thoroughly together in the mortar. Line the inside of an earthen game pie-dish with slices of bacon, cover these with a layer of the forcemeat, and put a layer of the fillets at the bottom, then a layer of sliced truffles, then force-meat, repeating the layers of forcemeat, fillets, and truffles until all is used, making forcemeat the last layer. Cover the dish with a thick piece of flour and water paste, and bake it slowly for three hours. Remove the paste and fill the pie with strong gravy made with the bones of the game, and seasoned with a fagot of herbs and peppercorns. Place a saucer with a pound weight on it to press the meat well into the dish, and place it aside to cool. Then garnish the top with chopped aspic.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

MARIANI WINE

This inimitable COCA WINE is an aid to intellectual exertion, and is indispensable to brain-workers and others who suffer from Debility, Exhaustion, Mental Depression, Dyspepsia, Sleeplessness, Voice Fatigue; also to promote Convalescence. Written Testimonials from over 2,000 Physicians. "A powerful rejuvenator and renovator of the vital forces." Sold by Chemists, Grocers, and Stores, or delivered free by Importers, WILCOX & CO., 239, Oxford-street, London. 4s. per bottle, or 45s. dozen.

MOURNING FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR.

Messrs. JAY'S

Large and well-assorted STOCK includes a choice and varied selection of COSTUMES, MANTLES, and MILLINERY, suitable for any degree of Mourning, and ready for IMMEDIATE WEAR. Orders to special instructions are executed in a few hours, and Ladies are Waited Upon in any part of the country without any extra charge whatever.

JAY'S,
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY.
Show Rooms—112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supply the Public Direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving Purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Fine Diamond Half-hoop Rings, from £15 to £200.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £8.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
THE
GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE LTD.
(A. B. Savory & Sons), late of 11 and 12, Cornhill, E.C., is incorporated with this Company, and the business is transferred to the above address.

Fine Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Ring, £18 10s.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

The Largest and Choicest Stock in the World of Novelties specially prepared for WEDDING & COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTS.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Border Ring, £25

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Bracelet, £35.

REGISTERED DESIGN
Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Diamond Cluster Ring, £25

REDMAYNE & Co., Ltd., NEW BOND ST., and CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.
High-Class Goods at Popular Prices.

"LE PERFECTIONNÉ" CORSET
(REGISTERED), AS ADVERTISED.
Prices, in White, 15/6 to 22/6; and in Black, 18/6 to 25/6, ACCORDING TO STYLE.

Redmayne's New Illustrated Catalogue and Fashion Book (92 pages), specially prepared to assist Ladies in "Shopping at Home," is now ready, and will be sent, post free, on application.

ALICE HILL.
SMART EVENING TOILETTES from 5 guineas.
TWEED GOWNS from 3½ guineas.
Stylish Parisian Millinery, Trousseaux, and Corsets.
22a, LOWER PHILLIMORE PLACE, KENSINGTON.

MISS WESTROPP-DAWSON,
Court Milliner,
43, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON (over the Kettledrum Tea-rooms).
FRENCH and ENGLISH MILLINERY, also MANTLES, JACKETS, and TRAVELLING GARMENTS, at extremely reasonable prices.
Things sent on Approval on receipt of Tradesmen's Reference.

CRITERION GRAND HALL.
The SPIERPON ORCHESTRA
AND
Mr. RICHARD MACKWAY'S CHOIR OF BOYS.
RECHERCHE DINNERS AND SUPPERS
AT 5/- & 7/- 6 to 9.30. AT 4/- 11 to 12.30.
No Charge for Attendance. Separate Tables. Lift from Grand Vestibule to Grand Hall. Constantly Varied Programme and Musical Novelties.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL.

Prevents the hair falling off or becoming dry. It is the best preserver and beautifier of the hair of children and adults; prevents it falling off or turning grey, eradicates scurf and dandruff, and is also the best brilliantine for ladies, and everybody's use, and as a little goes a very long way it really is most economical for general use; is also sold in a golden colour for fair haired ladies and children; it contains no lead or mineral ingredients, and being most beautifully perfumed it is a perfect toilet luxury for all who desire silky and luxuriant hair.

Sold by Chemists, BOTTLES, 3/6, 7/-, 10/6.

Equal to 4 small.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO.

A PURE, FRAGRANT, AND NON-GRITTY TOOTH POWDER.

An antiseptic preservative, and aromatic dentrifice, which whitens the teeth, prevents and arrests decay, and sweetens the breath; it contains no mineral acids, no gritty matter or injurious astringents, keeps the mouth, gums, and teeth free from the unhealthy action of germs in organic matter between the teeth, and is the most wholesome tooth-powder for smokers; it has a most exquisite perfume, and is a perfect luxury for all who value the appearance of their own and their children's teeth.

Ask anywhere for ROWLAND'S ODONTO, 2s. 9d. box.

HOWARD & SONS

FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS.] 25, 26, 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W. [SPECIMENS AT WAREROOMS.

EASY CHAIRS EASY CHAIRS EASY CHAIRS A SPECIALTY.

PARQUET FLOORING PARQUET FLOORING PARQUET FLOORING A SPECIALTY.

WOOD TAPESTRY.

WALL DECORATIONS.

IMPERVIOUS TO DUST.

25, 26, & 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.

THE NEW PATENT

TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE.

NO. 20,778.

For Ladies and Children.

These goods are spliced at the instep, where, in the case of lace-up boots and shoes, stockings first show signs of wear. In the heels and feet there is also a splicing thread more than is found in ordinary goods. Thereby the wearing power is doubled without the slightest clumsiness or discomfort. The improvement is particularly advantageous in the thinnest summer makes of stocking, where the extreme fineness of the yarn makes the ordinary goods very apt to wear out almost immediately.

Made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

See Reg. Trade Mark "MUSA DYE" on each pair.

To be obtained of all the best Hosiers and Outfitters in the United Kingdom, and

Wholesale only of the Patentees:

DEBENHAM & FREEBODY,
FLETCHER GATE, NOTTINGHAM.

PAINTERS. MORANT & CO. DECORATORS

91, NEW BOND STREET.

SPECIAL DESIGNS REGISTERED IN	Genoa Velvets, Brocades, Wall Papers, Furniture, Decoration. FOUR DOORS FROM OXFORD-ST.	NOT TO BE SEEN ELSEWHERE.

The CLARET of the SEASON.

CHÂTEAU LA MARNIÈRE

(VINTAGE 1888, BLANQUEFORT.)

21s. Cash, delivered. Sample bottle, 2s. by post.

Order through your Wine Merchant or Grocer.

SOLE PROPRIETORS:

ARNOLD, PERRETT, & CO., LIMITED,
WINE MERCHANTS,
7a, Lower Belgrave Street, S.W. & Country Branches.
PRICE LIST OF CHOICE WINES AND SPIRITS POST FREE.

[n. HELBRONNER, Ld.
300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

VASHTI AND ESTHER: a Story of Society To-day, by the Writer of "Belle's" Letters in "The World," is now ready, in 2 vols., at every Library.

"'Belle' is one of those gifted mortals who, pen in hand, cannot be dull even if they try. . . . Many of the dialogues are brilliant, and on the whole the novel does undoubtedly justify the ambitious title under which its Author writes in 'The World.'"—Land and Water.

Outlaw and Lawmaker.

By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED. 3 vols., at every Library.

"There is plenty of life, variety, and adventure in this work. . . . A very good novel of its kind, with plenty of rapid action, and considerable novelty of situation throughout."—Glasgow Herald.

Woman and the Man.

By ROBERT BUCHANAN, Author of "God and the Man." 2 vols., at every Library.

To His own Master.

By ALAN ST. AUBYN, Author of "The Old Maid's Sweetheart," &c. 3 vols., at every Library.

"The book is brilliantly written."—Scotsman.

A Wasted Crime.

By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat," &c. 2 vols., at every Library.

"Takes a high place, not only among the novels of the year, but among the achievements of the admirable writer from whom it comes."—Daily Chronicle.

The Woman of the Iron Bracelets.

By FRANK BARRETT, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c. 3 vols. [At all Libraries.

"A lively story vividly told."—Westminster Gazette.

The Rebel Queen.

By WALTER BESANT, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." 3 vols. [At every Library.

"A remarkable work. It is fascinating as a fiction, and instructive and suggestive as a study."—World.

The Gun-Runner:

A ROMANCE OF ZULULAND. By BERTRAM MITFORD. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"An intensely exciting story. The author writes from a fulness of experience."—Review of Reviews.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

THE DICTATOR. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY.

WITNESS TO THE DEED. By G. MANVILLE FENN.

HEATHER AND SNOW. By GEORGE MACDONALD.

TIME'S REVENGES. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.

ROPES OF SAND. By R. E. FRANCILLON.

A TRYING PATIENT, &c. By JAMES PAYN.

GEOFFORY HAMILTON. By EDWARD H. COOPER.

LADY VERNER'S FLIGHT. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.

DR. PASCAL. By É. ZOLA. With Portrait.

THE DREAM. By É. ZOLA. With 8 Illustrations.

THE DOWNFALL. By É. ZOLA.

Emile Zola.

A BIOGRAPHICAL AND CRITICAL STUDY. By E. H. SHERARD. With Portraits, Illustrations, and Facsimile Letter. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s.

From Paddington to Penzance:

THE RECORD OF A SUMMER TOUR. By CHARLES G. HARPER, Author of "The Brighton Road." With 105 Illustrations by the Author. Demy 8vo, Irish linen, 16s.

Thiers' History of the Consulate and the Empire of France under Napoleon.

With 36 Steel Plate Illustrations. New Edition, complete in 12 vols., demy 8vo, cloth, 12s. each. First three vols. now ready.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

— THE —

FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

November.

To Your Tents, Oh Israel! By the Fabian Society.
Mr. Rudyard Kipling's Verse. By the late Francis Adams.
The Look-out in the Coal Trade. By Vaughan Nash.
The Ice Age and its Work. Part I. By A. R. Wallace, F.R.S.
Incest in Sumatra. By R. W. Egerton Eastwick.
Is Marriage a Mere Commodity? By William Smart.
How to Reach Europe with Maps. By Cope Whitehouse.
Coal Question Solved. By Professor Thorpe, F.R.S.
The Psychology of Labour and Capital. By Robert Wallace, M.P.
The Irish Land Bill—Day. Part I. By X.
The British East Africa Company. By General Sir A. B. Kemball, K.C.B.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED.

NEW NOVELS.

Margaret Drummond, Millionaire.

By SOPHIE F. F. VEITCH, Author of "James Hepburn, Free Church Minister," "Angus Graeme, Gamekeeper," &c. 3 vols. Crown 8vo. Price 31s. 6d.

"A very thorough and earnest piece of work."—Daily Chronicle.

"A strong and clever story, readable and bright from end to end."—Daily Telegraph.

The Curb of Honour.

By M. BETHAM-EDWARDS, Author of "Kitty," "Dr. Jacob," &c. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"A well-told story."—Glasgow Herald.

"Told with great tact and restraint."—Woman.

Paul Romer. A Novel.

By C. Y. HARGREAVES. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"We could welcome more such stories, interesting and thoughtful, and written in the sure and refined English of a thorough gentleman."—Literary World.

"A more wholesome and fascinating tale than 'Paul Romer' has not been told in print for many a day."—Daily Telegraph.

NEW EDITIONS.

A Tangled Web.

By LADY LINDSAY. Price 6s.

One Virtue: a Fiction.

By CHARLES T. C. JAMES. Price 6s.

The Last Touches.

By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD. Price 3s. 6d.

The Pirate.

Vol. 13 of the Dryburgh Edition of the Waverley Novels, containing 10 Page Illustrations by W. H. Overend. Crown 8vo. Price 5s.

"When complete, this will be the best popular edition in existence."—Christian World.

"This edition appears to improve as it goes on."—Athenæum.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, W.

Hurst & Blackett's PUBLICATIONS.

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON.

In 2 vols. Crown 8vo, 21s.

A BOOK OF RECOLLECTIONS.

By JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON,

Author of "A Book about Lawyers," "A Book about Doctors," &c.

"The book is readable enough, and full of pleasant gossip about men of letters and other celebrities, great and small, whom Mr. Jeaffreson has known."—The Times, Oct. 26th.

"There are plenty of good stories in Mr. Jeaffreson's volumes which are sure to have a large number of delighted readers."—The Globe.

FOUR NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NOW READY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

CHRISTINE.

BY ADELINE SERGEANT.

Author of "Caspar Brooke's Daughter," "Sir Anthony," &c. 3 vols.

TO RIGHT THE WRONG.

BY EDNA LYALL.

Author of "Donovan," "We Two," "Knight-Errant," &c. 3 vols.

A HEART'S REVENGE.

BY B. LOFTUS TOTTENHAM.

Author of "More Kin than Kind." 3 vols.

THE IDEAL ARTIST

BY F. BAYFORD HARRISON.

3 vols.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, Ltd., 13, Gt. Marlborough-street, W.

Hatchards, Booksellers, 187, Piccadilly, London

ALL THE NEW AND STANDARD BOOKS.

Post Orders Promptly Executed. Usual Cash Discounts.

THREE NEW WORKS OF FICTION.

NOW READY.

DIANA TEMPEST.

By Mary Cholmondeley.

Author of "Sir Charles Danvers." In three vols., crown 8vo.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "NEAR NEIGHBOURS."

The SWING of the PENDULUM.

By FRANCES MARY PEARD, Author of "The Baroness," &c. In two vols., crown 8vo.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE UNDERGRADUATE."

Dr. MIRABEL'S THEORY. A

Psychological Study. By ROSS GEORGE DERING. In three vols., crown 8vo.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

THE BOOK NOW BEING INQUIRED FOR AT ALL LIBRARIES IS

Mr. Henry Vizetelly's "Glances Back through Seventy Years." Autobiographical and other Reminiscences." 2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

The Graphic.—"Chatty and well-written reminiscences, which form one of the best books on the literary and artistic life during the present century, published for some time past."

Daily Chronicle.—"The two volumes are not to be fairly judged even by the samples we have given, for where we have given one passage, we have been obliged to pass over fifty every bit as good."

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER, & CO., LIMITED, Paternoster House, Charing Cross-road, W.C.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 8d.

London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

LETTERS OF JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL

Edited by CHARLES ELIOT NORTON.

Two Volumes, large 8vo, cloth, 32s.

The Times says:—"We have [illegible] this personal record less and less to attract and to learn more [illegible] from the two volumes of Letters of James Russell Lowell, edited by Charles Eliot Norton. This publication, and the judicious selection from his correspondence shows Lowell to have been not less but more a letter-writer than he was as a man of letters, a talker, and as a public speaker. Indeed, his peculiar qualities showed, as is [illegible] so humorous, so humane, shines forth in his familiar letters even more brightly perhaps than in his published works."

The Athenæum says:—"Great as has been the interest with which these volumes have been awaited on both sides of the Atlantic, there has been no time for impatience, seeing that little more than two years have elapsed since the pen fell from Mr. Lowell's hand. Much as was expected, there will be no disappointment."

CROWNED BY THE ACADÉMIE FRANÇAISE.

NOW READY.

THE LIFE OF MARIE ANTOINETTE. By MAXIME DE LA ROCHETERIE. With 27 Portraits. Two vols., cloth extra, 21s.

NOW READY.

TRAVELS IN INDIA A HUNDRED YEARS AGO; With a visit to the United States. By THOMAS TWINING. With Portrait and Map. Demy 8vo, 16s.

WALTER CRANE EDITION, 1893.

THE OLD GARDEN. By MARGARET DELAND. The Coloured Designs throughout the Volume by Walter Crane. In handsome cover. 12s. 6d. [Immediately.

NOW READY.

FIELD MARSHAL COUNT HELMUTH VON MOLTKE AS A CORRESPONDENT. With Portraits. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 10s. 6d.

NOW READY.

ALICE LAUDER: A Novel. By J. GLENNY WILSON, Author of "Themes and Variations." 6s.

NEW VOLUME by the AUTHOR of "DODO."

SIX COMMON THINGS. By E. F. BENSON. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. [Third Edition in Preparation.

IN A NORTH COUNTRY VILLAGE. By M. E. FRANCIS, Author of "Whither?" Cloth, 3s. 6d.

PLATONICS. By ETHEL M. ARNOLD. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

LONDON: OSGOOD, McILVAINE, & CO., 45, ALBEMARLE-STREET.

ILLUSTRATED. READY FRIDAY, NOV. 10. PRICE 2d.

JEROME K. JEROME'S NEW WEEKLY MAGAZINE-JOURNAL

"TO-DAY."

"TO-DAY" will be a combination of all the most popular magazine features, together with the most attractive features of journalism.

THE MAGAZINE DEPARTMENT.—Serials and Short Stories are already secured from R. L. Stevenson, Rudyard Kipling, Bret Harte, Clark Russell, Miss Braddon, Grant Allen, Barry Pain, Alden, Zangwill, &c. &c. R. L. Stevenson contributes the first Serial. Jerome K. Jerome contributes the first thirteen Short Stories. In this department also will be found Illustrated Interviews, Topical Articles, &c. &c.

NOTE.—The Serials which appear in "To-day" will not appear in any other form whatsoever for the space of six months after their conclusion in its columns.

THE JOURNALISTIC PORTION (which will also be Illustrated) will consist of Notes on Current Events, written chiefly by the Editor, Mr. Jerome, with assistance from Mr. Barry Pain, Mr. W. L. Alden, and others.

Art, Literature, Music, Theatre, Man's World, Woman's World, Gossip, &c. &c. will be in the hands of Journalists of the highest experience and reputation, and will be treated as they have never been treated before, with a freshness and originality that will make these usually skipped pages read with as much interest as any other part of the journal.

In No. 1, Ready FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10th, will be found—

THE EBB TIDE. By Robert Louis Stevenson.
THE BELL-RINGER OF ANGELS. By Bret Harte.
CHARACTERSCAPES. By Jerome K. Jerome.
A LAY OF THE LINKS. By Conan Doyle.
INTERVIEW with WILLIAM O'BRIEN.
A CYCLING CHALLENGE FROM FRANK SHORLAND.

THE DIARY OF THE LATE EDITOR OF THE MORNING POST, Sir William Hardman.
THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE'S PETITIONS AGAINST HOME RULE. &c. &c. &c.
Together with the Journalistic Features named above.
INTERVIEW with Mrs. PATRICK CAMPBELL.

HOWARD HOUSE, ARUNDEL STREET, STRAND, LONDON.

Mr. WM. HEINEMANN'S LIST.

A FRIEND OF THE QUEEN.

(MARIE ANTOINETTE—COUNT FERSEN.)

Translated from the French of PAUL GAULOT by Mrs. CASHEL HOEY.
2 vols., 8vo, with Portraits, 24s. [At all Libraries.

TIMES.—"M. Gaulot's work tells over again, with new and authentic details, the [illegible] Count Fersen's devotion to Marie Antoinette, of his share [illegible] Flight to Varennes, and in many other well-known episodes of the [illegible] Queen's life."

MEMOIRS.

By CHARLES GODFREY LELAND
(Hans Breitmann).
In 2 vols., demy 8vo, with 2 Portraits, 32s.
[At all Libraries.

TIMES.—"From first to last a very entertaining book, full of good stories, strange adventures, curious experiences, and not inconsiderable achievements, instinct with the strong personality of the writer, and not unpleasantly tinged with the egotism that belongs to a strong personality."

NEW NOVELS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES. IN THREE VOLUMES.

MRS. HUNGERFORD'S NEW NOVEL.

THE HOYDEN.

By the Author of "Molly Bawn."

"A clever, sprightly story . . . fresh, sunshiny, and delightful."—Scotsman.

A Comedy of Masks.

By ERNEST DOWSON and ARTHUR MOORE.

"It is a powerfully-written society tale of London salons and the features of the faces behind the masks which are worn therein. . . . Indeed the dramatic power of the whole book, while free from the least taint of melodrama, is so striking, that if it were rewritten for the stage we should venture to predict for it a brilliant success."—Guardian.

THIRD EDITION.

The Countess Radna.

By W. E. NORRIS.

"In style, skill in construction, and general 'go,' it is worth a dozen ordinary novels, and justifies the place its author has obtained among living masters of fiction."—Speaker.

FOURTH THOUSAND.

The Heavenly Twins.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "Ideala," &c.

"Everybody ought to read it, for it is an inexhaustible source of refreshing and highly stimulating entertainment."—Daily Telegraph.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'. IN ONE VOLUME.

PRICE SIX SHILLINGS EACH.

From the Five Rivers:

STORIES OF NATIVE LIFE IN INDIA. By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of "Miss Stuart's Legacy."

"Mrs. Steel has written a powerful and delightful book. . . . Force, feeling, and originality mark 'From the Five Rivers' as a book distinctly worth reading."—Speaker.

Appassionata: A Musician's Story.

By ELSA D'ESTERRE-KEELING.

The Tower of Taddeo.

A Florentine Story. By OUIDA. With Illustrations by HOLLAND TRINGHAM.

Ideala: A Study from Life.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "The Heavenly Twins." Fifth Edition.

The Premier and the Painter.

By I. ZANGWILL and LOUIS COWEN.

Children of the Ghetto.

By I. ZANGWILL.

PRICE THREE AND SIXPENCE EACH.

Mademoiselle Miss; and other Stories.

By HENRY HARLAND, Author of "MeaCulpa," &c.

"Sometimes humorous, sometimes sad, sometimes cynical, always vivid and realistic. . . . all the stories are charming."—Scotsman.

Wreckers and Methodists.

Cornish Stories. By H. D. LOWRY.

Kitty's Father.

By FRANK BARRETT. Popular Edition.

Oriole's Daughter.

By JESSIE FOTHERGILL, Author of "The First Violin."

Perchance to Dream;

AND OTHER STORIES. By MARGARET S. BRISCOE.

Donald Marcy.

By ELIZABETH S. PHELPS, Author of "The Gates Ajar."

In the Dwellings of Silence:

A Romance of Russia. By WALTER KENNEDY.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE BATTLE OF DORKING."

At all the Libraries, in Three Vols., post 8vo.

The Lesters;

OR, A CAPITALIST'S LABOUR.

By General Sir GEORGE CHESNEY, K.C.B., M.P.,
Author of "The Battle of Dorking," "The Dilemma," "The Private Secretary," &c.

"Charming incisiveness characterises the present captivating work. . . . The characters are admirably drawn."—Daily Telegraph.

"The descriptions of social life in London are vivid and amusing, and are characterised by a real knowledge of the scenes and classes described."—The Speaker.

Abridged Edition of the late Mr. J. A. Symonds' "Renaissance in Italy."

Now ready, with a Steel Engraving of a recent Portrait of Mr. Symonds, demy 8vo, 12s. 6d.

A SHORT HISTORY of the RENAISSANCE in ITALY.

Taken from the work of JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS
By Lieutenant-Colonel ALFRED PEARSON.

VOLTAIRE'S VISIT to ENGLAND,

1726-1729. By ARCHIBALD BALLANTYNE. Crown 8vo, 8s. 6d.

"Eminently readable throughout."—Daily Telegraph.

"A valuable and able piece of literary work."—Scotsman.

ALL the YEAR with NATURE. By

P. ANDERSON GRAHAM. Crown 8vo, 5s.

"Of the 28 papers composing the volume there is not one which does not brim over with love of nature, observation of her by-paths, and power of sympathetic expression, which, as it were, catch the reader, and hold him to the end."—Observer.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

TWO SUCCESSFUL NOVELS.

First Large Edition exhausted.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

A GRAY EYE OR SO.

By the Author of "I Forbid the Banns." In three volumes.
At all Libraries.

A few early Reviews.

The Court Journal says:—"Mr. Moore, whose remarkable novel, 'I Forbid the Banns,' placed him at a bound in the ranks of the writers to be talked about and read, will of a surety add largely to his circle of admirers by his clever new story, 'A Gray Eye or So.'"

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"Entertainment is to be had from 'A Gray Eye or So.' The book has some genuine wit. Not often do three volume novels prove so profitable to the reader."

The Glasgow Herald says:—"Sparkles with epigram, full of good things. Most of the persons are delightful."

The Bookman says:—"Of the cleverness of Mr. Moore's story there can be only one opinion."

The Liverpool Post says:—"Both brilliant and amusing."

The Globe says:—"He (the author) revels in genuine epigram, neat sarcasm, brilliant bits of characterisation; in a word, he dares to be vivacious and never sets us nodding."

The National Observer says:—"Cannot be classed with the average novel, it is worth criticism and worth reading."

The Westminster Gazette say:—"'A Gray Eye or So' bears the mark of a clever man on almost every page. The author has very considerable talent."

The Literary World says:—"Mr. Moore is always original, and he is possessed of an extensive energy of description rare among novelists."

The Liverpool Mercury says:—"There is not a dull page in the three volumes. The writer's knowledge of fashionable society is considerable, his satire is terribly keen, and his management of conversational prose truly delightful. Thus his new novel will sustain his reputation; it is clever, highly attractive, and original in character."

The North British Daily Mail says:—"An undeniably clever book, distinguished by a terse, piquant, and epigrammatic style."

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

A STRANGE TEMPTATION.

By Mrs. J. KENT SPENDER.

In three vols. At all Libraries.

A few early Reviews.

Daily Telegraph says:—"An eminently readable story, told with considerable ability."

The Spectator says:—Mrs. Spender shows real dramatic power."

The Yorkshire Post says:—"The book is quite certain to catch the attention of any reader who takes up the first volume."

The Liverpool Mercury says:—This captivating story—full of charm, originality, and noble thought, deserves a place among our great English novels."

The Manchester Guardian says:—"Speaks highly for Mrs. Spender's powers of observation and sympathetic insight. The situation is a strong one and is handled with great ingenuity."

The Daily Chronicle says:—"There is a good deal of strength in 'A Strange Temptation,' much that is clever and even subtle."

The Saturday Review says:—"The whole book is clever."

The Western Morning News (Leader) says:—'A Strange Temptation' is a book that any author might be congratulated upon."

London: HUTCHINSON & CO., 34, Paternoster-row.

Price 2s. 6d., post free.

ON FISTULA, and its Radical Cure by Medicines. By J. COMPTON BURNETT, M.D.

London: JAMES EPPS & CO., Ltd., 48, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Piccadilly.

JARROLD & SONS'

NEW UNIFORM SERIES OF 3 6 NOVELS.
BY POPULAR AUTHORS.

MRS. LEITH ADAMS' NOVELS.

LOUIS DRAYCOTT. Second Edition.
GEOFFREY STIRLING. Fifth Edition.
BONNIE KATE. Second Edition. [Shortly.

HON. IZA DUFFUS HARDY'S NOVEL.

A NEW OTHELLO. Second Edition. [Shortly.

EVELINE WELLWOOD. By Major NORRIS PAUL.
OLD LATTIMER'S LEGACY. By J. S. FLETCHER, Author of "Quarry Farm," &c.

CURTIS YORKE'S NOVELS.

THAT LITTLE GIRL. Fourth Edition.
DUDLEY. Third Edition.
THE WILD RUTHVENS. Third Edition.
THE BROWN PORTMANTEAU, and other Stories. Second Edition.
HUSH. Third Edition.
ONCE. An entirely new work. Second Edition.
A ROMANCE OF MODERN LONDON. Second Edition.
HIS HEART TO WIN. An entirely new work. [2nd Edition Now Ready.
DARRELL CHEVASNEY. [Shortly.
BETWEEN THE SILENCES. [Ready in December.

NOW READY. Fifth and Cheap Edition of

ELIZABETH BOYD BAYLY'S POPULAR WORK ENTITLED
JONATHAN MERLE.
Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

The SPECTATOR says: "It is rich in character and incident, and is as charming in substance as it is elevated in tone."
Mr. GLADSTONE says: "I find in it much that is excellent and good."
The EVENING NEWS AND POST says: "There is interest in every line, there is an earnestness in every chapter which cannot fail to impress by its evident truth and its pure ideal."

LONDON: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, WARWICK-LANE, E.C.

WARD & DOWNEY'S
NEW BOOKS.

MOLTKE: A Biographical and Critical Study. By W. O'C. MORRIS. With Portraits, Maps, and Plans. 21s. [Now ready.

NEW NOVEL BY F. C. PHILIPS.

ONE NEVER KNOWS.
By F. C. PHILIPS, Author of "As in a Looking Glass." 3 vols.

NEW NOVEL BY MABEL COLLINS.

JULIET'S LOVERS.
By MABEL COLLINS, Author of "The Prettiest Woman in Warsaw." 3 vols.

London: WARD & DOWNEY, LTD., YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.

This Day is Published.

A JOURNEY THROUGH the YEMEN,

AND SOME GENERAL REMARKS UPON THAT COUNTRY. By WALTER B. HARRIS, F.R.G.S., Author of "The Land of an African Sultan: Travels in Morocco," &c. With 3 Maps and numerous Illustrations by Forestier and Wallace from Sketches and Photographs by the Author.

Demy 8vo, 16s.

 The principal object of this book is to throw more light upon a country of which scarcely anything is known, and almost nothing has been written. .....From his knowledge of the Arabic language, the author has been able to add to the personal account of his journey a mass of notes concerning the country, its history, and its inhabitants.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.

BAHADUR

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

BERKELEY SQUARE, W.—By order of [illegible], with the benefit of [illegible] long Ground Lease (nearly 150 years) of a newly-built Mansion in this aristocratic position.

MESSRS. TROLLOPE are instructed to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, E.C., on THURSDAY, NOV. 16th, at TWO o'clock precisely (unless an eligible offer be previously made by private contract), the very special leasehold MANSION, No. [illegible], Berkeley square, containing on the upper floors 11 well-arranged bedrooms, two tiled bathrooms, bath room, six handsome reception rooms on the ground and first floors, principal and secondary staircases, and exceptionally spacious and complete domestic offices in the basement. The premises are in perfect decorative order, and have electric light, and all modern appliances for convenience and comfort, while great attention has been paid to the drainage and sanitary arrangements. Held from Lord Fitzhardinge on lease for an unexpired term of 75 years at a low ground rent. Possession will be given on completion of the purchase.

Particulars of Messrs. R. S. TAYLOR, SON, & HUMBERT, Solicitors, No. 4, Field-court, Gray's-inn, W.C.; and, with orders to view, of Messrs. GEORGE TROLLOPE & SONS, 7, Hobart-place, Eaton-square; West Halkin-street, Belgrave-square; and 15, Parliament-street, Westminster, S.W.

MESSRS. J. A. LUMLEY & Co. are honoured with instructions from the Marquis Conyngham TO LET "SLANE CASTLE, Co. Meath, Ireland, a truly noble Mansion, with the exclusive Sporting over about [illegible] acres, and some of the best salmon fishing on the Boyne. The Castle is well furnished and most picturesquely situated on the banks of the River, in the midst of a fine deer park, and contains some magnificent rooms, billiard room, throne-room, and everything requisite for a large establishment. Splendid hunting, five or six days a week.—Full particulars of the Agents, Messrs. J. A. LUMLEY & Co., 35, St. James'-street (corner of Jermyn-street), Piccadilly.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES.—Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

ALDRIDGE'S.

TWENTY-FIVE valuable High-class HORSES,
Comprising Hunters, Match Pairs, Single Harness Horses, Hacks, and Cobs, selected with the greatest care by Mr. Henry Barnes, late of Andover, will be SOLD by AUCTION by MESSRS. W. & S. FREEMAN, of Aldridge's, St. Martin's-lane, at THORNTON HEATH STABLES, on SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1893, at 2.30 o'clock. The stables are eight miles from town and within ten minutes' of Thornton Heath Station or West Croydon, to which there are frequent trains either from Victoria or London Bridge. The horses can be seen in harness and ridden over fences a week prior to the sale, and are open to veterinary examination. W. & S. FREEMAN.

Catalogue forwarded. Trains met by appointment.

BELSIZE PARK, Hampstead.—To be SOLD, a bargain, a desirable FAMILY RESIDENCE, containing three reception and billiard rooms, studio, ten bed-rooms, bath-room, and every convenience; the furniture may be purchased if desired.—Apply BEAL & CO., 20, Regent-street, S.W. (Folio 20,205).

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c.—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

CANCER WARDS at the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL, Mortimer-street, W.—The WEEKLY BOARD make an URGENT APPEAL for FUNDS in Aid of these Wards. There are 34 beds set apart for patients suffering from this terrible malady. They are admitted without letters of recommendation. Everything that human skill and kindness can suggest is provided, and sufferers are permitted to remain until relieved by art or released by death. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts & Co.
F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.—The long-continued prevalence of scarlet fever is causing a heavy strain on the resources of this Hospital. The benevolent are earnestly asked for HELP. Annual subscribers of a Guinea and upwards for more than a year, as well as donors of Ten Guineas or more in one sum, are Governors, and are entitled to free treatment for their domestic servants. Sufferers residing outside the metropolitan area can only be received into the Hospital from the families of Governors.
Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital, MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott, Dimsdale, & Co., 50, Cornhill.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM for IDIOTS.
Nearly 600 afflicted cases are receiving special care and education.
FUNDS urgently REQUIRED.
Special provision is made for the reception of Private Cases on payment.
H. GERARD HOARE, Esq., J.P., Treasurer.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Cheques or Postal Orders may be crossed Messrs. Hoare, Bankers, 37, Fleet-street, E.C.
Offices, 36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

TRAVELLERS TO BRINDISI AND THE EAST
WILL NOW FIND
BOLOGNA the most convenient stopping-place.
Coupé-lits can be booked beforehand by Mr. FRANK, Hotel Brun, for DAILY EXPRESS TRAIN, leaving Bologna 6.55. p.m., arriving at Brindisi 10.50 a.m.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISE TO THE WEST INDIES.
The Steamship "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, 3,000 h.p. will leave London on the 22nd November, for a 66 days' Cruise, visiting Madeira, Teneriffe, Barbadoes Trinidad, Grenada, St, Lucia, Martinique, St. Kitts, Santa Cruz, Jamaica, Cuba, Nassau, St. Michael's, Lisbon.
The "GARONNE" is fitted with Electric Light, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Baths, &c. First-class Cuisine.
Managers { F. Green & Co. / Anderson, Anderson, & Co. } Head Offices, Fenchurch-avenue, London.
For particulars apply to the latter firm, at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, E.C.; or at the West-end Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, London, S.W.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards. Tennis Lawn.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL METROPOLE.—On the East Cliff, facing the sea, three minutes' from East Station. The largest, and most magnificent Hotel in Bournemouth. Now open to receive visitors. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

GEORGE ALEXANDER, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.

GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 12s. to 15s. per day.
According to position of rooms selected.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Leas. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m

G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden. Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 783.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

PORT OROTAVA, Teneriffe.—HOTEL MARTIANEZ (late GRAND).—First-class, standing in a beautiful garden. Shady verandahs, large public and private rooms. Billiards, tennis. Good cooking, good wines, excellent spring water.

Manager, J. R. EGGER.

PORTRUSH, co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL (B. and N.C. Rly). Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hote dinner. French cuisine. Combined Railway and Hotel Tickets from Belfast.—Illustrated tariff on application to MANAGER.

SALISBURY.—The WHITE HART FAMILY HOTEL, nearly opposite the Cathedral. The largest and principal Hotel in the City. Table d'hôte (two hours each meal) at separate tables daily. Carriages for Stonehenge and other places of interest in the neighbourhood at fixed inclusive charges. Tariff on application to H. T. BOWES, Manager.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL.—First and leading hotel in St. Leonards. Unequalled position, detached, faces sea, due south. Modern improvements, passenger lift, electric light in every room, handsomely furnished. Home comforts. Terms moderate.—Address, MANAGER.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

THE CROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.

TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

LANGHAM HOTEL,
PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.

Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6.30 until 8.15.
Under the Management of WALTER GOSDEN.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.

NO SUPPERS.

TELEPHONE No. 3,097.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.

(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).
Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross Stations. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay, combined with economy of keeping house. Also a few Bedrooms for Gentlemen close by the Management. Lifts, night and day attendance, electric light, baths, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn and Lincoln's Inn Fields. A high-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, happily situated, having all modern conveniences and a moderate tariff. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. Masonic Lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hote, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d., at separate tables. FRANK HACKLEY, Manager. Write for tariff.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

LARGEST, BEST APPOINTED, AND MOST COMFORTABLE HOTEL IN CHANNEL ISLES, AND THE FINEST SITUATION IN JERSEY.
Directly overlooking the Channel. South aspect. Magnificent Public Rooms, all facing sea. Swimming Bath, Hot and Cold Seawater Baths. Tennis Courts, &c. TABLE D'HÔTE DINNER at 7 p.m. (separate tables) "best in Jersey." Reduced Winter Terms on application.
Telegrams—"Grand, Jersey." SYDNEY ROGERS Manager & Secretary.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL, 180 Apartments, Patronised by H. R. H. the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, K.T. Extensive Structural Alterations and Decorative Repairs have been carried out and 30 NEW BEDROOMS ADDED SINCE OCTOBER, 1891. The entire system of drainage has been re-modelled and re-constructed, and the most improved sanitary appliances fitted to all Bath-rooms, &c. The Hotel stands in its own private gardens of 2½ acres, faces the sea, and is only five minutes' from the Harbour in the lower part of the town and Shorncliffe New West End Station, and is most convenient for Continental travellers.—For tariff charges, &c., please address the Proprietor.
N.B. During the winter months visitors are received en pension at the rate of 12s. per day.

HOTEL CONTINENTAL, CAIRO.—This first-class Family Hotel, newly built, and handsomely furnished, is situated in the finest and healthiest part of the Ismailieh quarter, close to the English and Catholic Churches. Perfect English Sanitary Arrangements. Two large Verandahs, Drawing and Ladies' Saloons, Reading, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms, and 24 Private Suites with separate staircase to each. Terms moderate. Excellent Cuisine. Hydraulic Lifts. Honoured by a prolonged stay of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge and H.I.H. Princess Victoria of Prussia. Electric Light throughout. Proprietors, GEORGE NUNGOVICH, also Proprietor of the Hotel d'Angleterre, LUIGI STEINSCHNEIDER, late Manager of Shepheard's Hotel. HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE. This first-class hotel has just been rebuilt.—GEORGE NUNGOVICH, Proprietor, A. ALLICH, Manager.

ALBANY HOTEL
(ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

EASTBOURNE. CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the Grand Parade. Pleasant sea and land views. Patronised by many of the Royal families of Europe. Appreciated for its first-class appointments and homely comforts. Elegant public rooms, convenient family suites, &c. Passenger lift. Table d'hôte. Moderate charges.
G. LOWMAN, Manager.

THE RUNNACLEAVE, ILFRACOMBE. Highest average Winter Temperature in England. South aspect. 120 Beautifully-appointed rooms, thoroughly warmed by hot water apparatus; the entire in constant use; yacht, tennis, billiards, photographic dark room, and indoor skating rink free of charge. Moderate tariff.

OATLANDS PARK HOTEL, Walton-on-Thames, 17 miles from London (Waterloo Station) Most comfortable and homely winter residence, warmed throughout. South aspect. Boarding terms, 10s. 6d. to 12s. per day. Capital stabling.—Postal address, Weybridge.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS, by Artists of the leading Foreign Schools, is NOW OPEN at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket (next the Theatre). Admission, [illegible]

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL. SHEPHERD'S WINTER EXHIBITION of Ladies' Portraits by Sir J. Reynolds, T. Gainsborough, G. Romney, Cosway, Opie, Hoppner, Lawrence, Graham, Morland, Wilson, Sir W. Beechey, Sir W. Ross, Jackson, Hayls, &c., 27, King-street, St. James's.

NIAGARA FALLS in WINTER.
Best and Most Reliable Route to Niagara Falls in Winter.
Best and Most Reliable Sleeping Cars in London.
NIAGARA FALLS, St. James's Park Station.
DAILY, 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Admission 1s. Children 6d.
Tickets may be obtained at all the Best and Most Reliable Stations.

CRYSTAL PALACE.
SATURDAY CONCERT,
November 11, at 3.
Violin, Mr. PUNKET GREENE.
Violoncello, Mr. SLATER or LANGLEY
(Their first appearance at these Concerts).
The GRAND ORCHESTRA, Conductor, Mr. AUGUST MANNS.
PROGRAMME: Overture, "The Fire Worshippers" (Granville Bantock) (first time of performance); Prelude in A, "Lohengrin" (Wagner); Two OLD IRISH MELODIES, "Sweet Lass of Richmond Hill" and "St. Patrick's Day," arranged and orchestrated by Prof. C. Villiers Stanford; Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, No. 1, in G (Max Bruch); Symphony in E flat (Op. 97), Scenes (Bridal)—a. "Im Rhein im heiligen" (Stromo)—b. "Auf dem Anstand folgt Wehe und Lust" (Kompti); Capriccio for Violin and Orchestra (Svend Wm. Gade); The Invitation to the Waltz (Weber). Arranged for Orchestra by Hector Berlioz. Numbered Seats, 2s. and 4s.; unnumbered Seats, 1s. All Saturdays, Shilling Days.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station, in connection with all railways. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations.—New Portrait Models of the late CH. GOUNOD, the late MARSHAL MAC MAHON, H.M. the EMPEROR of GERMANY, and H.M. the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA. Magnificent Group containing Portraits of T.R.H. the DUKE and DUCHESS of YORK. The ROYAL TIGER HUNT. Political Celebrities; Cabinet Ministers. Music all day. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open 9 till 10.

ELOCUTION, EXTEMPORE SPEAKING, ORATORY.—Professor HAYSACK, whose Pupils are among the first clergymen, doctors, barristers, solicitors, public personages, and nobility, GIVES INSTRUCTION. Voice strengthened, defects corrected.—70, Talbot road, Bayswater.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

HOTELS.

— THE —

CAP MARTIN HOTEL,

Between Mentone and Monte Carlo,

RE-OPENS 11th NOVEMBER

(UNDER THE SAME MANAGEMENT).

Perfect Sanitation, Designed and Executed by GEORGE JENNINGS, London.

The Hotel has private Dairy and Laundry. Omnibus meets trains at Mentone.—Address:

MANAGER, CAP MARTIN HOTEL, MENTONE.

ILFRACOMBE.

Warmest Sea-side Winter Resort in England.

ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. The principal Hotel in Ilfracombe.

First-class return tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. Railway, on 1st November to 14th March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance at the ILFRACOMBE HOTEL, £5 5s. each. Available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Ask for Hotel tickets, available by all trains.

MADEIRA.—REID'S HOTELS, Santa Clara, Miles's Carmo Hortas, New Hotel. First-class, in finest situations. Large gardens. Tennis courts. Billiards. Sea bathing. Modern sanitation. All steamers call. Pamphlet free.—PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, London, E.C.

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Mr. TREE, Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Play,
THE DANCER.
Mr. Tree, Messrs. Fred Terry, F. Everill, Fuller Mellish, G. W. Anson, Chas. Allan, Hebden Clark, Beveridge, Leslie Ward, Patrick, Miss Julia Neilson, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Mrs. E. H. [illegible], and Mrs. Tree.
MATINÉE EVERY SATURDAY at 2.
Seats may now be booked two months in advance. Box-office (Mr. Leverton) open daily to till 5. HAYMARKET THEATRE.

GAIETY THEATRE. Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES. Every Evening, at 8, an entirely New Extravaganza, by James T. Tanner, in Three Acts, entitled DON JUAN, by James T. Tanner. Lyrics by Percy Greenbank. Music by Meyer Lutz. With full Company of Gaiety Favourites, including Miss Marie Dainton, Miss Cissie Loftus, Miss Louise Montagne, Miss Maria Davis, Miss Decima Moore, Miss Katie Seymour, and Miss Sylvia Grey, Mr. Edmund Payne, Mr. George Mudie, Mr. Willie Warde, Mr. E. W. Royce, and Mr. Arthur Roberts. Box-office open 10 to 6 daily. Doors open 7.40. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2. Doors open 1.45.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.15, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, UTOPIA, LIMITED, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. Doors open at 7.45 and 2. Box-office open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettit, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, R. Harding, J. Carter, H. Russell, and Arthur Williams; Mesdames Mary Rorke, Alma Stanley, and Agnes Thomas.—Box-office 10 to 6. Doors open at 7.30.

GARRICK THEATRE.—Mr. JOHN HARE, Lessee and Manager.—DIPLOMACY, adapted by Clement Scott and B. C. Stephenson. EVERY EVENING, at 8. Mr. Bancroft, Mr. Forbes Robertson, Mr. Arthur Cecil, Mr. Gilbert Hare, Mr. Trent, Mr. Maycur, and Mr. John Hare; Miss Kate Rorke, Miss E. Robins, Lady Monckton, Miss Luck, and Mrs. Bancroft. Box-office open 10 to 5. Doors open 7.30.

COURT THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—Every Evening, at 9, a Three-Act Farce, entitled THE OTHER FELLOW, by Fred Horner. Preceded at 8.15 by HIS LAST CHANCE. Doors open at 7.45. Box-office now open. Matinée Saturday Next, at 3 o'clock. Doors open 2.30.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.30, Musical Comedy, words by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank, Music by Sydney Jones, entitled A GAIETY GIRL. Messrs. C. Hayden Coffin, E. Lewis, Bradfield, Kaye, Bantock, D'Orsay, Porteous, Rimma, and Harry Monkhouse; Mmes. Decima Moore, Juliette Nesville, Cutler, Studholme, Pounds, Phelps, Maud Hobson, Massey, Selwick, Robinson, and Lottie Venne. At 7.45, SIXES. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY.—Every Evening (at 8.45), THE ORIENT EXPRESS, Mr. Burnand's New Comedy, "received with unceasing laughter." Preceded (at 8.15) by THE RING OF POLYCRATES. Miss Ada Rehan, Mrs. Gilbert, Mr. Lewis, Mr. Clarke, Miss Irving. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.—Box-office daily, 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries. MONDAY, November 13, THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL, with Miss Rehan as Lady Teazle, Mr. Wm. Farren as Sir Peter.

LYRIC THEATRE.—Mr. HORACE SEDGER, Sole Lessee and Manager.—LITTLE CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, by Geo. R. Sims and Cecil Raleigh, Music by Ivan Caryll. EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, with the following cast: Mr. E. J. Lonnen, Messrs. Harry Parker, Furneaux Cook, Henry Wright, George Tate, Rowland Carse; Mesdames Maud Holland, Eva Moore, Alice Lethbridge, Adelaide Newton, Alice Gilbert, Maud Leicester, Eva Greville, and Miss May Yohé. Increased Orchestra and Chorus, conducted by the Composer. Doors open 7.45. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.30.

TOOLE'S THEATRE.—J. K. LAING'S SEASON.—On Monday Next, November 6, will be produced a Farcical Comedy, by the late Fred Leslie and Arthur Shirley, entitled MRS. OTHELLO. Miss Fanny Brough, Mr. Charles Glenney, Miss Cicely Richards, Mr. Julian Cross, &c.—Seats at all Libraries. Box-office now open.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.15, MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine, Templar Saxe, and Charles Danby; Misses Jennie McNulty, Agnes Hewitt, Maggie Roberts, and Lettie Lind. Preceded, at 7.45, by Rex Harley, the inimitable Mimic of Popular Actors. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.30.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.45, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled FIDELIA. At 10.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Two GRAND BALLETS.—At 8, KATRINA, and at 10, THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. Grand Varieties. The new entrance from Leicester-street is now open. Doors open at 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.

PALACE THEATRE.—SCARAMOUCHE, Pantomime Ballet, at 10.40,—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Little Tich, Albert Chevalier, Fannie Leslie, Bessie Bellwood, Lucy Clarke, James Fawn, Brothers Griffiths, Alice Leamar, George Beauchamp, Nellie Navette, Herbert Campbell, Alice Maydue, Billie Barlow; Brown, Newland, and Leclerq; Leo Stormont, Harry Pleon, Marie Tyler, Jenny Valmore, Ada Blanche, J. W. Rowley, Sam Redfern, Harry Freeman, Eugene Stratton, Charles Ross, Tom Bass, G. Robey, Fred Mason, Arthur Rigby, Sells and Young.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

CARPETS.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

AXMINSTER PILE CARPETS,
2/11 (American) 3/11 TO 4/9

WILTON PILE CARPETS,
3/9 TO 4/6

BRUSSELS CARPETS,
2/1 TO 3/9

TAPESTRY CARPETS,
1/9 TO 2/6

LINOLEUM,
1/- TO 4/- PER SQUARE YARD.

DECCAN RUGS,
8/9 EACH.

CATALOGUES FREE.

TRELOAR & SONS
LUDGATE HILL.

£100 WORTH OF SOLID FUN FOR 1/-

"Funny Little Chaps."

Eight Separate 1s. TOYS in neat box, and all material complete, for One Shilling. Be first in the field to get this

CHRISTMAS NOVELTY.

Of all Toy and Fancy Goods Dealers, and of the Sole Makers,

THE J. L. YOUNG MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LIMITED,
67, 68, & 69, FORE STREET, LONDON, E.C.,
Post-free, 1s. 3d.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S
PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses,
158, OXFORD ST. W.
2, QUEEN VICTORIA ST. E.C.
(FACING THE MANSION HOUSE.)

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET, SHEFFIELD.

The Best is the Cheapest!
Fixed, moderate prices for first quality.

TRADE MARK ON EACH GARMENT

Dr. Jaeger's "Health Culture," and Jaeger Price List, sent free on application.

WEST-END JAEGER DEPOTS—
3 & 4, Princes-street, Cavendish-square (near Regent Circus);
156, Regent-street (near the Quadrant);
30, Sloane-street (adjoining M'Pherson's Gymnasium);
456, Strand (near Trafalgar square).

CITY JAEGER DEPOTS—
85 & 86, Cheapside (near King-street);
158, Fenchurch-street (near Lime-street);
42 & 43, Forestreet (near Moorgate-street Station).

"THE NEW WIRE MAT."
FELTEN & GUILLEAUME'S
GALVANISED
PATENT SPIRALIUM WIRE MAT.
Practically indestructible

Write for Prices of this and their 'CONVOLVULUS' Wire Mat to
Sole Agents: W. F. DENNIS & Co., 11 Billiter St., London E.C.

THE WINDOW

Is the most important thing to be considered in the decoration of a house. The eye naturally turns to the opening by which light enters the room; and in the ideal home the view from that opening, and everything that serves to frame it, should be attractive. The most beautiful thing to be seen through a window is a garden of flowers, but nine-tenths of human habitations in civilised countries are so placed that their windows overlook scenes very different—sometimes dreary streets, stables, and chimney pots. Glacier Window Decoration will add beauty to the window, it is not costly, and no alteration of sashes is required. It is the only effective and reliable substitute for stained glass.

Hundreds of specimens can be seen, and all information can be had at

THE GLACIER DEPÔTS,
153, Piccadilly, W., and 56, Queen Victoria St., E.C.

CAMEO
CIGARETTES

A PHOTOGRAPH IN EVERY PACKET.
A SEPARATE MOUTHPIECE FOR EACH CIGARETTE.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.

TO ENSURE THE GREATEST COMFORT
WEAR THE NEW PATENT
"EIDEX"

COMBINATION
FOR LADIES & CHILDREN.

By Royal Letters Patent. No. 16016.

The demand for Combination Garments generally has considerably increased during the last few years, but the one weak point in this otherwise most sensible garment was the difficulty in securing an efficient wrap at the back.

This has now been overcome by means of an extra covering inside at the back only, which is an improvement of the utmost practical utility. Ladies will immediately apprehend and appreciate the greatly enhanced comfort to be obtained by wearing the "EIDEX" COMBINATION.

Prices: From 6/11 Pure Wool from 9/11 Ribbed do. from 5/6

NOTE.—The Lion's Head Trade Mark is Attached to Every Garment.

To be had of all Ladies' Outfitters, and Wholesale only of STAPLEY & SMITH, London Wall, London, E.C.

GRANT'S
MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY.

FIRST-PRIZE MEDALS at LONDON, MELBOURNE, and CALCUTTA

Is the most delicious Liqueur in the World.

Have you ever tasted it?

It is very strengthening for the weak and aged, and most comforting in damp and chilly weather. Nice with lemonade or soda water.

Sold by Wine Merchants and at Restaurants.

"The Cup of the Prince, the Peer, and the Peasant."
"The most popular and healthful Beverage of the Century."

By Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

"MERSANO"
A SPARKLING NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE.

Recommended by all the leading medical faculty as the only perfect and health preserving table drink. The most welcome friend in every sick room, and indispensable on every table.

CERTIFICATE OF HONOUR and GOLD MEDAL have been awarded for the special excellence of "Mersano."

Wholesale from Local Agents in all parts of the Kingdom. Any difficulty with local supply, communicate with the Patentees:—

Forbes, Maxwell, & Co., Ltd., Aberdeen

SAMPLE BOTTLE POST FREE NINE STAMPS.

6d. per Bottle. To be had Everywhere

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.
ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.
PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE

For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.

INVALID COMFORTS

Walking Machine for the lame

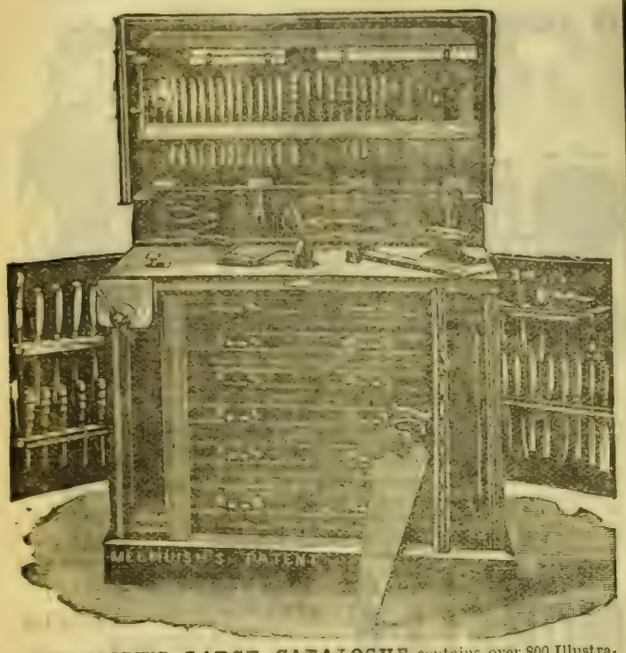
Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2.
Exercising Chairs £5.5s.
Reclining Boards £1.1s.
Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d.
Easy Chairs £2.10s.
Commode Chairs £3.10s.
Carrying Chairs, £1.
Bed Tables 7s. 6d.
Crutches 10s. 6d.
Folding Couch Chairs 10s.
Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS
From £1.5s.

SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS
£2.2s.

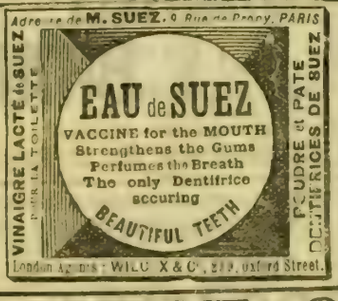
Invalid Carriages
Perambulators
Rubber Tyres
From £1.10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telgrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.



MELHUISH'S LARGE CATALOGUE contains over 800 Illustrations of Labour-saving Tools and Machines for Wood Workers. This handsome volume sent parcel post, 1s. 4d. Awards for Excellency. Bronze Medal, 1884. Gold Medal, 1890.

MELHUISH SONS, & CO. FETTER LANE, LONDON, E.C.



BENGER'S FOOD.

For Infants, Children, and Invalids.

"Humanly speaking, 'Benger's Food' entirely saved baby's life. He could digest nothing until we began the 'Benger.' He is now rosy and fattening rapidly."—Extract from Private Letter.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED
INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION.

TINS, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s., OF ALL CHEMISTS, &c.

FOR

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS &c.

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

Cigars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins, 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder for Burning and Inhalation, Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. Of Chemists everywhere.

TOO FAT. Dr. GORDON'S Elegant Pills cure STOUTNESS, rapidly and certainly. State height, weight, and send 2s. 0d., 3s. 6d., or 11s. to DR. GORDON, 24, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR CORPULENCE.

READ THE FOLLOWING PRESS NOTICES:—

SHOULD STOUT PERSONS STARVE THEMSELVES?

"We are afraid that semi-starvation as a cure for corpulency prevails very much to a dangerous degree. Mr. Archer, the late well-known prominent jockey, was in the habit of going without food for a long stretch in order that he could ride a certain horse at its weight, and there is not much doubt that the debility resulting from this habit of abstemiousness was certainly not conducive to combatting the dire attack of fever which was perhaps indirectly responsible for the untimely end, in the zenith of his fame, of this unfortunate but accomplished horseman. Even Mary Jane in the kitchen will eat sparingly of the food allowed her, while she will seek to reduce her fat by copious draughts from the vinegar cruet, and succeed only in injuring the coats of her stomach—the forerunner of dyspeptic troubles which will be difficult to overcome.

"The continental medicos seem to advocate this great reduction of ordinary foods, but one of these savants suggests that the stout person should eat considerably of fatty meats in order that the appetite is appeased, and consequently less food required, so that practically this is indirectly advocating semi-starvation. On the other hand Mr. Russell, the British specialist, takes a different course. He says, 'Eat as much as you like,' and as it is an acknowledged fact that under his treatment persons lose from 2lb. to 12lb. per week, it be a good deal stronger against those so-called starvation cures made in Germany." Some claim that Mr. Russell has to insist upon his patients drinking hot water every morning; but, on the contrary, he avers that it is dangerous to do so, and has of course never advised it. No, the success of Mr. Russell's treatment is incomparably beyond other specialists, for he resorts to no stringent dietary, and simply prescribes a harmless vegetable tonic combination which is the outcome of years of study and botanical research. We advise all those interested in this question to get his book, the price of which is only 6d. It is entitled, 'Corpulency and the Cure,' and is published by him at Woburn House, Store-street, London, W.C. It can be had direct, or through any bookseller."—The Million, October 14th, 1893.

The following are extracts from other journals:

"Any remedy that can be suggested as a cure or alleviation for stoutness will be heartily welcomed. We have recently received a well-written book, the author of which seems to know what he is talking about. It is entitled 'Corpulency and the Cure,' and is a cheap issue (only 6d.), published by Mr. F. C. Russell, of Woburn House, Store-street, Bedford square, London. Our space will not do justice to this book; send for it yourself. It appears that Mr. Russell has submitted all kinds of proofs to the English Press. The editor of The Tablet, the Catholic organ, writes: 'Mr. Russell does not give us the slightest hope for a complete cure of the evil, but in the most outright fashion and matter of fact manner he suggests a hundredweight of original and unsolicited testimonial letters for our perusal, and offered us plenty more if required. To assist him to increase this pounds known, we think we cannot do better than publish quotations from four of the letters submitted. The first one, a Marchioness, writes from Madrid: "My son, Count ——, has reduced his weight in twenty-two days 16 kilos (i.e., 34 lb." Another writes: "So far (six weeks from the commencement of following your system) I have lost fully 2 stone in weight." The next (a lady) writes: "I am just half the size." A fourth: "I find it is successful in my case. I have lost 5 lb. in weight since I commenced (two weeks). Another writes: "A reduction of 18lb. in a month is a great success." A lady from Bourn in auth writes: "I feel much better, have less difficulty in breathing, and can walk about." Again, a lady says: "It reduced me considerably, not only in the body, but all over." The author is very positive. He says: 'step on a weighing machine on Monday morning and again on Tuesday, and I guarantee that you have lost 2 lb. in weight without the slightest harm, and vast improvement in health, through ridding the system of unhealthy accumulations.'"—Cork Herald, August 27th, 1892.

HOW TO CURE CORPULENCY.

"The main feature of fat in the animal body has been made the subject of much spirited discussion; on the one hand, it was contended that satisfactory evidence exists of the conversion of starch and saccharine substances into fat, by separation of carbon and oxygen, the change somewhat resembling that of the vinous fermentation; it was urged, per contra, that oily or fatty matter is invariably present in the food supplied to the domestic animals, and that this fat is merely absorbed and deposited in the body in a slightly modified state. The question has now been decided in favour of the first of these views, which was enunciated by Professor Liebig, the very chemist who formerly advocated the second opinion. By a series of very beautiful experiments, MM. Dumas and Milne-Edwards proved that bees feeding exclusively upon sugar were still capable of producing wax. Dr. Ebstein advocates the use of fat in cases of corpulency, while other doctors as high up the ladder of medical fame recommend lean meats, while others worry the unhappy victims of obesity by insisting upon administering copious draughts of hot water fasting, a most pernicious practice, we believe. Although so much has been written on this subject by the learned foreigners of the medical faculty, we can approve of no theory so effectual in the reduction of corpulency as the one advanced by Mr. F. C. Russell, the author of 'Corpulency and the Cure,' an interesting little brochure which can be bought for six stamps, from the publishers, at Woburn House, Store-street, London, W.C. He goes in for facts and not fancies, and practically says, first ascertain your correct weight, then drink three doses of a vegetable compound, perfectly harmless, of a most agreeable flavour; then step upon a weighing machine in twenty-four hours, and see if you have not lost 2 lbs. or more of unhealthy fat. The book is well worth reading."—Birmingham Daily Gazette, August 19, 1893.

EXTRAORDINARY SUCCESS IN THE TREATMENT OF OBESITY.

"Our corpulent readers will be glad to learn how to positively lose two stone in about a month with the greatest possible benefit in health, strength, and muscle, by a comparatively new system. It is a singular paradox that the patient, returning quickly to a healthy state with increased activity of brain, digestive and other organs, naturally requires more food than hitherto, yet, notwithstanding this, he absolutely loses in weight one or two pounds daily, as the weighing-machine will prove. Thus there is no suggestion of starvation. It is an absolute success; and the author, who has devoted years of study to the subject, absolutely guarantees a noticeable reduction within 24 hours of commencing the treatment. This is different with other diseases, for the patient in some cases may go for weeks without being able to test whether the physician has rightly treated him, and may have derived no real or apparent improvement in health. Here, we repeat, the author guarantees it in twenty-four hours, the scale to be the unerring judge. The treatment aims at the actual root of the disease, so that the superfluous fat does not return when discontinuing the treatment. It is perfectly harmless. We advise our readers to call the attention of stout friends to this, because, sincerely, we think they ought to know. For their information we may say that, on sending cost of postage (sixpence), a reprint of Press notices from some hundreds of medical and other journals (British and foreign), and other interesting particulars, including the 'recipe,' can be had from a Mr. F. C. Russell, Woburn House, Store-street, Bedford-square, W.C."—Belfast News Letter.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, first month or less period, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

REVERSIONS.—The Reversion Mortgage Trust purchase reversions and life interests, or lend thereon at 4 per cent. per annum. No charge made unless business results.—Apply to Messrs. FELDMAN, 34, New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London. Solicitors and Estate Agents' attention particularly requested.

BUYERS and SELLERS of quoted and unquoted Commercial, Industrial, and Mining Securities should communicate with THE COMMERCIAL STOCK and SHARE CORPORATION, Limited, Stock and Share Dealers, 10, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C. Telegraphic Address: "UNQUOTED, LONDON." All Mining Shares dealt in at close current quotations. Advances made on Stocks and Shares at moderate rates. Send for List giving numerous quotations not published by any other firm, post free.

Foreign Medicines & Toilet Articles &c
Roberts & Co
Chemists. 5 Rue de la Paix Paris
Kept at their London House
46 New Bond St. W.
all French & Foreign Medicines &c

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?
PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement and biliousness, it has been pronounced by medical men of high authority as most efficacious.

"I use the Aerated Pitkeathly largely, and value it."—Dr. MATTHEWS DUNCAN.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN,

and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Nimrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE.

CLARKE'S
WORLD-FAMED
BLOOD MIXTURE

"CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE is entirely free from any poison or metallic impregnation, does not contain any injurious ingredient, and is a good, safe, and useful medicine."

ALFRED SWAINE TAYLOR M.D., F.R.S., Lecturer on Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology.

Warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities from WHATEVER cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the blood and bones. Thousands of testimonials. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent for 33 or 132 Stamps, by the Proprietors—THE LINCOLN AND MIDLAND COUNTIES DRUG CO., LINCOLN.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited,
No. 64, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON, W.C.
General Accidents | Personal Injuries
Railway Accidents | Death by Accident.
C. HALCRO ST. JOHN, Manager.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE Estd. 1803. 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subscribed Capital, £1,000,000. Paid-up, £200,000. Total Funds, £1,000,000.—E. COZENS-SMITH, Gen. Man.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Hollborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £ 6,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.
(FIRE.)

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES.

LONDON OFFICE: 81, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

ASSETS OVER .. .. £31,800,000.
SURPLUS EXCEEDS .. .. £6,400,000.

This Society originated the Tontine System of Life Assurance, under which the premiums paid form a lucrative investment, and not an expense, affording provision for old age as well as immediate family provision in the event of death.
ABSOLUTE SECURITY. LOW PREMIUMS. LARGE PROFITS.

Before assuring elsewhere, send for Prospectus and Illustrative Pamphlets.

A. MUNKITTRICK, Manager for Great Britain and Ireland.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.
No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
[ESTABLISHED 1867.]
ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE,
Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,
From £30 to £5,000,
To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their
NOTE OF HAND ALONE.
ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.
Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.
NO SURETIES REQUIRED.
Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.
HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.
BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.
DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.
FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.
COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.
£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.
NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.
JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

THE GRESHAM
LIFE OFFICE,
ST. MILDRED'S HOUSE, POULTRY, LONDON, E.C.

THOMAS G. ACKLAND, F.I.A., F.S.S., Actuary and Manager. JAMES H. SCOTT, Secretary.

WEST-END BRANCH—2, WATERLOO PLACE, S.W.
Sir FRANCIS OSBORNE, Bart., Local Secretary.

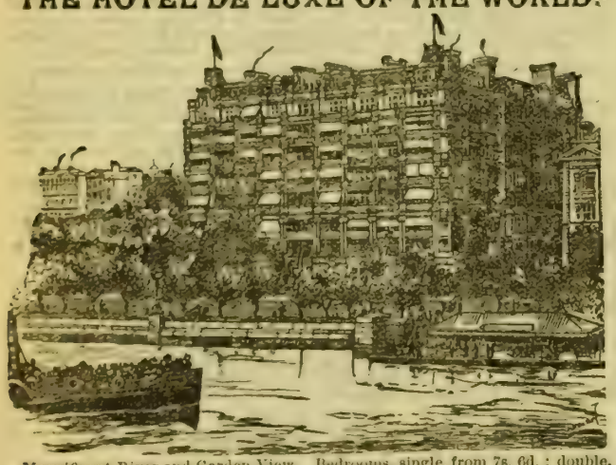
FUNDS.

Assets	Exceed	£5,000,000
Annual Income (1892)		£913,602
Total Payments under Policies		£11,000,000

Moderate Rates of Premium. Liberal Scale of Annuities. Loans granted upon Security of Freehold, Copyhold, and Leasehold Property, Life Interests, and Reversions. Also to Corporate and other Public Bodies, upon Security of Rates, &c.

PROPOSAL FORMS, &c., to be obtained on application to the Society's Agents, or to the Head Office as above.

SAVOY HOTEL & RESTAURANT,
Victoria Embankment, LONDON.
'THE HOTEL DE LUXE OF THE WORLD.'



Magnificent River and Garden View Bedrooms, single, from 7s. 6d.; double, from 10s. 6d. Small and large suites, with bathrooms, &c., attached, from 25s. No charge for Light, Baths, and Attendance. Shaded Electric Light everywhere. No gas. The building is absolutely fireproof.

SAVOY RESTAURANT, with large terrace. The finest and only Open Air Restaurant in London. Private Rooms for Dinner Parties, &c.

THE VICTORIA ROOMS. Specially adapted for Balls, Banquets, Masonic and Regimental Dinners.

Chef de Cuisine, M. ESCOFFIER. Manager, L. ECHENARD.
Proprietor of the Hotel de Provence, Cannes.

General Manager, C. RITZ,

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35 Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

TORPID LIVER. HEADACHE.

Small Pill.
Small Dose.
Small Price.

Purely Vegetable, Sugar Coated.

Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d.

BABIES

are often deprived of necessary flesh and strength by the weak and emaciated condition of the mother. The mother's milk is made rich and she is furnished with strength by taking of Cod-liver Oil, with hypophosphites. Wonderful how soon babies and children are made fat and healthy and mothers are nourished back to a normal condition by Scott's Emulsion. Blood diseases and hereditary weaknesses are cured also.

Scott's Emulsion

MOTHERS

ought to give Scott's Emulsion to all growing children, or any member of the family whose health is at a low ebb.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Lim., 47, Farringdon-st., London, E.C.
All Chemists, 2/6 and 4/6.

WESTWARD TO THE FAR EAST.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALASIA.—Varied, picturesque, and fastest route is via Vancouver.

CANADA AND UNITED STATES.—Through tickets to all points; luxurious dining cars, sleeping cars, mountain hotels.

ROUND THE WORLD.—By arrangement with the P. & O. Company, and all Atlantic Lines via Japan or Australia, price £125.

FREE FARMS. With Cash Bonus to Settlers in the North-West.—For berths and descriptive pamphlets, apply PASSENGER DEPARTMENT, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, King William-street, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL
AN EXCELLENT MEDIUM MILD INDIAN CIGAR.

A most delightful weed. Sample four or five 1s., or free by return post 12 stamps.

BEWLAY'S 49, STRAND, W.C.; 74, STRAND (EAST INDIA HOUSE); & 143, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.

Tobacconist to the Royal Family. Estab. 1780. Descriptive Price List post free.

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES Londonderry Wallsend, 38s.; Pittington Wallsend, 37s.; Primrose, 36s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 35s. per ton. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 766.—DEFINITIONS OF RUGBY AND ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

BLACKHEATHEN (real name and address will be given next week) £1 1 0
MANDEVILLE (" " " ") 1 1 0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 767.—ORIGINAL ANECDOTE OF FOOTBALL.

BOBUS (real name and address will be given next week) £2 2 0

SPECIAL NOTICE.—"TRUTH" HOME MADE TOY AND DOLL SHOW AT THE ALBERT HALL.

There are three points in connection with this coming Show to which I wish again to draw special attention.

The first is that there are still some hundreds of Dolls on hand which have to be dressed for the Christmas Exhibition. Time is passing rapidly on, and it is hoped that applications for these Dolls will be made forthwith. Now that it is settled that the Show is to be at the Albert Hall, it would indeed be a pity if the ample space for exhibiting the dressed dolls were not to be well filled.

The second point which I would emphasise is the demand for HOME MADE Toys of all kinds. Such playthings being usually stronger and more substantial than those toys which are purchased, are eagerly welcomed at the Children's Hospitals and Workhouse Schools of London. Will the readers of TRUTH and their friends therefore make a special effort this year to make the Home-Made Toy Department of the TRUTH Show a large and interesting one. Prizes, as in former years, will be awarded to the makers of the more notable Toys.

And then, in the third place, there is the TRUTH TOY FUND, which, as was explained last week, is in great need of liberal assistance. Donations will be most gratefully received.

Readers of TRUTH who did not look at the Puzzle pages last week may be interested to learn that they contained a special notice as to the system to be carried out in awarding the Prizes for the Dressed Dolls.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 768.

The result of this Competition will not be announced until Competition No. 771 is also decided.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 772.

We are naturally anxious to make the coming TRUTH Toy and Doll Show at the Royal Albert Hall an unprecedented success. It being thought that the ingenuity of our competitors may be well exercised in helping to the attainment of this end, the usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week to that competitor who suggests

THE MOST ORIGINAL FEATURE WHICH CAN BE INCORPORATED IN THE "TRUTH" TOY AND DOLL SHOW WITH A VIEW TO ENSURING ITS INCREASED SUCCESS.

I need scarcely say that it will be useless for competitors to send in suggestions which are not thoroughly practicable as well as original. All answers must reach me at the latest by the morning of Monday, November 20.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name and the address of ALMAVIVA, winner of Prize No. 765 are Joseph Harry Fry, Esq., Harvey-villas, Church-road, Willesden, N.W.

IGNORAMUS.—The house is still in existence.

M. W. P.—A parcel of dolls can be sent to any address without delay.

WHY NOT?—The notion is not a new one. I am, however, obliged for your letter.

J. J. KELSEY.—The quotation you send is from Bayard Taylor's translation of "Faust."

HINDE STREET.—Many thanks for your suggestion.

 Several answers are held over until next week.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 769.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ANAGRAM FORMED OUT OF THE FORTY-TWO LETTERS IN THE WORDS "THE FRANCO-RUSSIAN ALLIANCE: CRONSTADT AND TOULON."

 There has not yet been time to check the Anagrams printed below, so their publication must not be taken necessarily to imply their correctness.—THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

Can such national carousal trend * to strife on nd?—Malignant.

* Trend = turn off, diverge.

Let colossal autocrat and enfranchis'd nation run. Azzolino.

From Russia: à Carnot.—Let ironclads sail forth; one can daunt us. From France: Couldn't stand loan in cash for return into Alsace. From ngland: Calls for caution in our adherents, and annot last.—Cabbage.

An unnatural concord, that lost, ends in real usco.—Stanchion.

Our land's rash union attracts no confidence at l.—Permute.

Patriotic Frenchman (loquitur): "Chantons donc rt: à la santé du Tsar! L'union il créa'." "Sing e then loudly: to the health of the Tsar! He eated the alliance."—Girouette.

Illusions no use, France, and catch not an old urtar.—Preclaro.

A Franc or Russ can't stand alone until cool in ath.—Cricket.

Ironclad sent. Ah, France! count not at all on uss aid.—Doe.

All this fuss an' "national accord" rot cannot idure—Vox.

Carnot's unnatural confederation shall do antics. D'Artagnan.

France cannot stand alone, nor shall it aid or cut s.—Timothy.

1. Such union of land or race cannot stand least ial. 2. Oho! Careful transactions. I cannot nderstand all.—Whig.

An illusion of the Tsar and Carnot; rest, loud n-can. N.B.—I have divided the anagram into o parts to correspond with the two parts of the Original Sentence"; the first referring to the Alliance" and its hoped-for results, the rest to onstadt and Toulon with their noisy demonstraons. I need scarcely explain that I have used the ord "can-can" in its legitimate sense of "much o about nothing."—Democritos.

1. Note our last caution! Tsar and old France annish. 2. Ah! Carnot entices Tsar till loud anon sound afar.—Scottie.

Lo! Carnot and enthusiastic nocturnal farandes (see TRUTH, No. 877, October 19, "Notes om Paris").—Pet Lamb.

1. Fraternal lands' too enthusiastic annual conrd. 2.* Fraternal lands annul a concord too thusiastic.—Rose Island.

An union clear, could France stand loan to this Tsar?—Dora.

* Re anagram No. 2. "Fraternal lands" might apply to Germany, Austria, and Italy affording to treat the alliance as not genuine.

Call a dinner and rout, this can force loan "sans" tout.—Santos.

Oh, cut cant! for cold Tsar desires tin (annual loan).—Chattie.

Darn* such fond union—stol'n Alsace real attraction.—Newnham.

* The familiar Yankee expletive of contempt is intended.

1. Insane hatreds can account at last for droll union. 2. A continent scorns that droll union, as a dual farce.—Imara.

"L'union! Our national standards cancel other facts."—Noah.

All rant leads to uncertain confusion and to crash.—Almaviva.

France (loq.): A northern concord annuls fatal Sedan. Lo! it is a out. D. T.

Oh! Tars all! Concord is fortunate; it can annul Sedan.—E. J. J.

1. Craft on land can e'en do ill. Aha! I cannot trust "Russ." 2. Ah! France! ill act! Trust not "Russ" aid on land—on ocean.—Veni.

Ah! France! let not sailor land. Count not "Russ" can aid.—Doe.

1. France (loquitur): Cold Tsar! I fear Teuton cannon! Land staunch sailor. 2. France out in the cold! Tsar land Tars; oil us a cannon. 3. A crucial test. A cannon shot and ruin forestall'd? No!—Dromedary.

And Teutons all around scan clear hints for action; or, Teutons, and all around, scan clear hints for action.—Rasenensis.

A clash. Lot of continental rancour, as I understand.—Shlowmow.

1. A cold land turns frantic on a Southern alien coast. 2. Such loud, ill, arrant antics cannot atone for Sedan. 3. Q.: Can staunch friends soon cool and later turn tail? 4. Our aunt can t dare call it nonsensical and so forth.—Querist.

I, Russia, all on sudden contract that loan on France.—Barrage.

1. Tsar's full cannon reach and court isolated nation. 2. Has not national cure of curs'd rant lions and eclat?—Limp.

Our allies, not actual and constant friends, anchor.—New Chum.

1. Carnot and Tsar in union, call curses on thav lad foe (William of Germany). 2. Our Latin Alsace is not far Deutschland, nor cannot.—Quartus.

Hail on, as friends content, and cast all rancour out.—Heron.

1. Do not taunt French canaille and cool Russian tars. 2. Do not taunt French canaille and a cool Russ strain.—Rabelais.

France and Russia turn allies to catch land? O, no!—Doris.

Scorn thus cast on an idle dalliance ran not far out.—Wulstan.

Fast and constant honor unite us all in real accord.—Sinona.

1. All such tactic our land and nation notes nor fears. 2. And not all faithless or untrue nations can accord. 3. Our land is not all asunder at this—a concern of cant.—Grodge.

1. Near concords that can last until a loan is refound. 2. Nearer concords that can last until a loan is found. 3. Lo! can such odd, unreal fraternisation last? No, can't.—Yoko.

1. Cant! foe Russ, all cant! coalition an underhand sort. 2. Rare fuss! rant! Hold. Coalition announced can't last. 3. Truce on cards! Can union of nations all hatred last?—Dumnorix.

1. O, France, to trust in Russia, and London can teach all. 2. England (loq.): I stand aloof, and chance real insult, or stun Carnot. 3. England (loq.): In a lion trust; or stand aloof; and can chance result. 4. England (loq.): I can trust on, or stand aloof, and chance real insult. 5. Fleet at anchor; stun Carnot. Our island aids no clan. 6. Fleet anchor'd; alas, Carnot's consultation and ruin! 7. And all Russia, don't care to consult a French nation.—Norval.

1. Arrant L. S. D. infatuation. Shall Carnot succeed? No, no! 2. No! And France calculates not to tarnish our island! 3. A dual French attraction, nonsensical to our lands. 4. France don't calculate to tarnish our islands anon. 5. A false nation's antic, "Carnot léchant l'Ours du Nord."—Louisa.

1. A Co.! Clan! Friends on trust? Each turns, to aid all, anon. 2. A Co.! Clans! Friends on trust? All turn, to aid each, anon.—Cæsar's Corner.

A! lad, the Russ and inconstant Celt carol for a Union.—Foy.

1. National accord is sure to annul us—stoic Fatherland. 2. Nations unite lot across accord, annul Fatherland.—Chawles.

1. Oh! O Lamont Lad! let Ch[illegible] head in fun and caravan. 2. So call the Tartars on to dinner—A caravan is loud fun. 3. Can one scratch a Tartar? No!—So it all ends in loud fun.—Lunatic.

As friends a cruel rout to scan, that land no lion can.—Lovesecker.

Shall a sad union frustrate a continental concord?—Nodding Violet.

Bear all! and countries cannot unite for a loan.—J. A. D.

National concord. If stolen Alsace turn at Russ heed.—Ivy Leaves.

An entente and truce cannot last. No, 'tis cool as frail.—Veneneus.

For all nations rule an action that adds us concern.—Bernard.

Call union France Russ Carnot, to stand alone is death.—Saheb Bahadur.

Stand us a loan Catholic Carnot, land * foes in return.—Dido.

* To land a blow.

1. Autocrat still concerts union, anon lands had fear. 2. So near still so far, an' nautical concern doth daunt.—Incognita

Our fanatic cousin's thrall,
Or land and sea content!

A Spook.

Turn in nautical concord adieat ends a nice sleuth.—Lancastrian.

Can [illegible] friends adore? All act on national trust.—Rollie.

Cools on S. A. R.; or, cold and heat a contrast unit in loan.—Podger.

* Son Altesse Royale

No host can at all control France and Russia united.—Cognoscente.

A union for raut; all shout in accord, else can't stand.—Selah.

France can't stand alone, do no hurt to call in Russia.—Ylang-Ylang.

O Christian! Can foes' total rancour stand annulled?—Maia.

A Continental lot o' fuss, understand; à la chronic R.A. (array).—Sol.

Salut! allons! à chanter (anon) Diantre! Sot, cru, Fi donc!—Merle.

1. Innate dual concord to crush fast all nations near. 2. Fall, Teuton! Dual nations rose, ran in stanch accord. 3. Lorn autocrat's fleet has lands in accordant union.—Excelsior.

Ah, Carnot, trust once in fat rascal, lend L. S. D. on an I.O.U.—Miss Sahib.

All nations toast, dance, and frolic, nor shun a truce.—Sharpenhoe.

1. And I trust all honour to Alec and Carnot's finances. 2. As Alec cannot honour and trust all friends' action.—Robin.

All fusion. No sadder curse that national contract.—Eucalyptus.

1. An archonist adoration falls: counsel turned cant. 2. Natural insurance: school-lad to a constant friend.—L. C. Smith

Thus cordial tars can flare on a continental sound.—J. H

Dost shut out France in Alsace-Lorraine land? Cannot!—Moonlighter

1. Trust such national declarations! Can London fear? 2. Can the serf stand round national nautical colours? 3. Fall n house stand on in trust, Alec or Carnot can aid. 4. Cut* tars can honour national friendships and fleets.—Zeta

* I find "cut" as an adjective is used for tipsy, or overcome by liquor.

A droll nautical craze; no, that art ends in confusion.—H. C. M.

A scandal. Carnot could not feast thus in Lorraine.—Ubique.

—

 Answers have also been received from Trim, Esperanza, M. S., Marplot, M8., B. Hopkins, Dora, Beata, Limp, and Concabar.

ATKINSON'S WHITE ROSE.

"A CHARMING SCENT."— H.R.H. The DUCHESS OF YORK.

"THE SWEETEST OF SWEET ODOURS."

ATKINSON'S IS THE ONLY GENUINE.

Of all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers, and of the Manufacturers, 24, Old Bond Street, London.

The 'NEW GUINEA' Spring Bedstead.

Pillars 1-in. Sides 1¼-in. strong Tubes, Double Woven Wire Mattress, Patent 'Reliance' Side Fastenings. All Iron and Steel, no Wood-work. Bedstead in 3 parts only. Easy to fix up and take down.

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.

Orders executed same day as received for this bed.

To be had only direct from—

CHARLES RILEY,
Freeman-street,
BIRMINGHAM.

Illustrated Price Lists Post Free.

21/-
Carriage Paid.

EVERY DESCRIPTION —OF— Bedsteads, Bedding, Spring Mattresses, Bedroom Furniture, &c. direct from the Manufacturer.

ALL GOODS GUARANTEED FOR 5 YEARS.

SPÉCIALITÉ:—THICK LEGS & THIN FEET.
A Want Long Felt, met at Last.
GOLF, SHOOTING, and CYCLING

STOCKINGS!

HOMEKNIT.
Free from all Seams.

Made of pure long staple Scotch Wool, full length, broad ribs, double heels and toes, most comfortable in wear, guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Colours: Navy Blue, Black, Light and Dark Grey, Heathers, and Fancy Mixtures.

Spécialité:

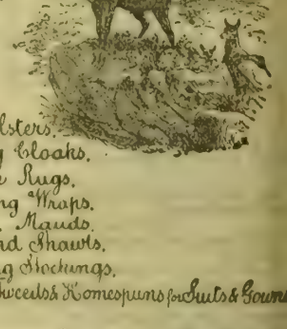
THICK LEGS and THIN FEET, all Sizes,
2/6, 3/6.

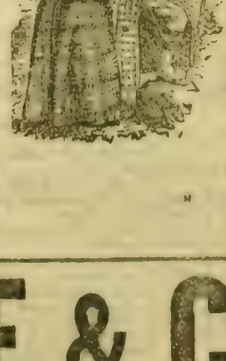
THE HIGHLAND CHECK,
(As Illustration.)
Hand-Knitted, for Cycling, Golf, or Shooting, 3/6 & 4/6
Thick legs and thin feet 5/6
Postage, 3d. per pair; 2 pairs, 4½d.

Terms: Strictly Cash with Order.

A. W. GAMAGE,
126, 127, 128, 129, HOLBORN, E.C.

SCOTTADIE
THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE
115 & 115a REGENT STREET
LONDON W.





For—
Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Mauds.
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns.

Telegraphic Address—Scott Adie, London.

ARTISTIC HOMES.

"ABOUT OUR HOMES."

MAPLE & CO. "ABOUT OUR HOMES." (Hazell, 1s.). Maple & Co. will be happy to SEND a COPY of this little BOOK, which contains much interesting information upon DECORATION and other matters in connection with modern furnishing, free of charge, upon application.

BEDROOM SUITES

1000 BEDROOM SUITES

1000 BEDROOM SUITES at from £5 to £500 forming a selection without [illegible] in the world, in every conceivable variety of style and design, and every [illegible] at prices ranging from £5 to £50, thus rendering [illegible] every case of requirement. Every [illegible] about to furnish should visit the Fabrics [illegible] of Bedroom Furniture.

MAPLE & CO LTD

TOTTENHAM COURT RD. LONDON

The Largest and most Convenient

FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN THE WORLD

EASY CHAIRS

FIVE HUNDRED TO SELECT FROM

MAPLE & CO. have always on show an immense assortment of their world-famous Easy Chairs, Lounges, and Settees, in every shape and coverings, all ready for immediate delivery, and at most moderate prices. A Comfortable Easy Chair is always an acceptable present.

TURKEY CARPETS

FINE QUALITIES

MAPLE & CO wish to direct special attention to some very choice Turkey Carpets now on show, remarkable both for their exceptionally fine quality and purity of colouring—many being exact reproductions of the most beautiful specimens of XVII. century art.

NEZOOM CARPETS

NEZOOM CARPETS

MAPLE & CO.'s NEZOOM CARPETS (Registered) are now on show, in all the new patterns and colourings. These carpets, being of the finest quality, and made entirely without seam or join, will wear admirably, and all waste in matching is avoided. List of Sizes post-free

THERE ARE WORSE THINGS THAN ALKALIES IN SOAPS.

For example---Silicates, Bad Fats, Methylated Spirits, Sugar, Rosin, and Poisons.

Vinolia Soap

IS GUARANTEED PURE, EMOLLIENT, FRAGRANT.

The Otto in Toilet "Vinolia" Soap costs a PENNY A DROP.

BLONDEAU et CIE., Ryland-rd., London, N.W.

American Depot:—73-77, WATTS-STREET, NEW YORK.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,
HAEMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.
Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists
E. GRILLON.
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London

PINE WOOL PRODUCTS — TRADE MARK — Pat. Lond.

LAIRITZ'S CELEBRATED

Established 1853. Awarded 18 Medals and Diplomas. For the Relief and Cure of GOUT, RHEUMATISM, COLDS, &c.

Wadding in packets, Knee-Caps, Inside Soles, Oil, EXTRACT FOR BATH, Lozenges. Of all the LEADING CHEMISTS everywhere. Flannels, Underclothing, Knitting Yarn. Sold by all leading Drapers and Hosiers.

Wholesale Depot for Fabrics only: WELCH, MARGETSON & Co., 16, Cheapside, London.

Caution.—Observe the True Trade Mark with Signature on each piece.

PINE WOOL.

THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS COMPANY, 29 & 31, Beekman-street, New York, have been appointed our Agents in America for the sale of "TRUTH." Single copies can be obtained through any newsdealer in the United States and Canada, or by applying direct to the International News Co., where yearly subscriptions will also be received. Newsdealers throughout the United States and Canada can obtain supplies of TRUTH by applying to the wholesale agents.

AN AROMATIC FRAGRANCE is imparted to the mouth by the use of Sozodont. It is beyond doubt the cleanest, purest, and best tooth wash ever offered to the public. No lady ever used Sozodont without approving of its cleansing and purifying properties, and the flattering testimonials that have been bestowed upon it by eminent Dentists speak volumes of praise for its merits.

SOZODONT

though efficient and powerful is absolutely harmless, for it contains neither mineral nor acid; it is wholly vegetable in its origin.

CANADIAN CLUB WHISKY.

COLD CAPSULES, 1866 make. Bottled at the Distillery in Bond and under Government supervision, whereby the age and genuineness are guaranteed by an official certificate with every bottle.

WHITE CAPSULES, 1888 Make. BOTTLED in ENGLAND

DISTILLED BY HIRAM WALKER & SONS, Ltd. ONTARIO, CANADA.

Age and Genuineness Guaranteed by the Excise Department of the Canadian Government, by Certificate over the Capsule of every Bottle.

LONDON OFFICES:
69 & 70, MARK LANE, E.C.

Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

TRADE W MARK

—— CAN BE OBTAINED OF ALL WINE MERCHANTS. ——

The ÆOLIAN

is conceded by the WORLD'S BEST MUSICIANS to be without question

THE GREATEST MUSICAL INVENTION OF MODERN TIMES.

THIS Unique and Wonderful Instrument is not only adapted to the wants of the Trained Musician, but can also be played by Anyone AFTER A FEW DAYS' PRACTICE; so that every home can have, by means of the "ÆOLIAN," any piece of music ever written—from the simple Psalm to the most intricate Opera, Waltz, March, or Dance. The Musical Expression, or Tone Colour, can be varied entirely at the will of the player, the "ÆOLIAN" responding as promptly to any change of tempo, or degree of power, as a well-drilled Orchestra.

Testimonials have been received from the following Eminent Artists and Musicians, viz.:—

Mons. Jean de Reszke; Mons. J. Lassalle; Mons. Edouard de Reszke; Signor Luigi Arditi; Senor Pablo Sarasate; Mons. A. Vianesi; C. W. Pearce, Mus. Doc., Cantab.; Madame Berthe Marx; Herr Anton Seidl; and many other prominent members of the Musical Profession.

A VISIT TO OUR SHOW ROOMS WILL BE ESTEEMED A FAVOUR.

Price from £25 to £104.

GEORGE WHIGHT & Co.

225, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

(Sole Licencees for England.)

BEECHAM'S PILLS

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as
Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver, and Female Ailments.

Prepared only by the Proprietor, THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helen's, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere, in Boxes, 9½d., 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each, with full directions.

The 1s. 1½d. Box contains Fifty-six Pills.

THE SALE IS NOW SIX MILLION BOXES PER ANNUM.

PIANOS ON THE THREE YEARS' HIRE SYSTEM.

This system is carried out extensively, liberally, and equitably by CHARLES STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, W.C. The pianoforte becomes the absolute property of the hirer at the expiration of three years, or may be returned at any time, at the option of the hirer. The rates charged are the same as for ordinary hire, and no addition is made to the price. PIANOS, GRAND and UPRIGHT, new and second-hand, by BORD, BECHSTEIN, and other high-class Makers, at from 10s. 6d. to 100s. per month. Lists and all particulars will be forwarded post-free on application to

STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, London, W.C.

FOR POLISHING METALS, ESPECIALLY BRASS,

THERE IS NOTHING BETTER THAN

"LA BRILLANTINE"

Metallic Powder.

TRY IT, AND CONVINCE YOURSELF.

It is used by the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, the Life, Horse, and Dragoon Guards, &c.

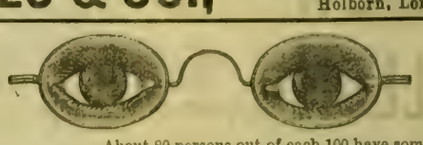
— Sold Everywhere. Boxes 6d. and 1s., post free. —

PROPRIETORS—

J. F. BAUMGARTNER & CO.,

15 (T.), Newman-street, Oxford-street, London, W.

ABSOLUTELY REFUSE IMITATIONS.



UNEQUAL VISION.

About 80 persons out of each 100 have some difference of focus between the two eyes, and yet the majority are content to wear spectacles made with both lenses alike, – the result is, continual straining and impairment of the vision. For the eyes to be used healthily, each eye should be suited separately. This method is always practised by

MR. JOHN BROWNING,

Ophthalmic Optician (Author of "Our Eyes," now in its Fourteenth Edition), at his only address, 63, Strand, W.C., where he may be consulted personally, free of charge, respecting spectacles for all forms of defective vision, between the hours of 10 and 4 daily except on Saturdays.

ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE.

INCORPORATED A.D. 1720.

Funds, £4,000,000. Claims Paid, £36,000,000.

LIFE. FIRE. SEA. ANNUITIES.

For the Latest Developments of Life Assurance, consult the Prospectus of the Corporation.

Full particulars on application to Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, E.C.

OR TO

29, PALL MALL, S.W.

TANN'S

£5 5s.

SAFES.

LISTS FREE.

NEWGATE ST.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the County of London. Communications should be made payable to Registered E. Bradbury. "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 881. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, November 16, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

THE SEVENTEENTH

CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF "TRUTH,"

"The Spookeries,"

Will be published on

THURSDAY, the 30th of NOVEMBER,

In a Special Wrapper,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

It will be profusely Illustrated by F. Carruthers Gould.

The Illustrations will include THREE DOUBLE-PAGED and FOUR FULL-PAGED CARTOONS, printed in colours:—

1. "Truth" Speaks about Spooks.
2. Viva el Toro.
3. A Demonstration of Loyalty (With a Collection).
4. Salisbury's Stuffed Geese.
5. Chamberlain's Dive.
6. A Royalty Raree Show.
7. Work for the Girl-Flogger.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

IN less than five weeks' time the Truth Doll Show will be held at the Royal Albert Hall. Meanwhile, there are about 850 dolls at this office waiting to be dressed. The prevalence of scarlet-fever in London during the past twelve months has led to the opening of new Hospitals, and the number of poor children who are eagerly hoping to take part in the Truth distribution next month is, therefore, exceptionally large. Thus, more dolls than usual will be needed, and it is these extra ones which during the coming few weeks will have to be dressed. In the name of the Children, then—many of them passing through a slow and weary convalescence after a long spell of intense suffering—who will assist in this good work?

I am sorry to add that the present condition of the Truth Toy Fund is not at all encouraging. The total sum received is only about £200—not sufficient to provide a tithe of the toys required. I do not like to anticipate the failure of the Fund, for that implies widespread disappointment to those least able to bear it. It must be remembered that upwards of 27,000 children in London are actually expecting Truth's Christmas presents. Naturally enough, it does not occur to them that the stream of generosity which has been flowing for the past thirteen years is this Christmas to run unexpectedly dry. But clearly some such explanation will have to be made to them unless the money comes in during the next week or two.

It has been said that trade has been bad this year, and that, therefore, the Truth Toy Fund must suffer. But this surely is an absurd inference. The readers of Truth are not asked to pay off the National Debt. A very small remittance from each of them would suffice to buy the children their Toys—the price, say, of one cigar from the gentlemen and the cost of one packet of caramels or chocolates from the ladies. Even in a time of commercial depression I refuse to think that this is too much to ask.

Meanwhile, I have received the following amounts towards this year's Fund:—

F. C. G., £1. 1s.; Ina Honiere, 5s.; G. L., 2s.; Dankbarkeit, £2; S. W. Spelsman, £1. 1s.; Geo. Bolton, £1. 1s.; L. F. B., £2; Derrick & Harold, £5. 5s.; Mrs. Russell Carew, £1. 1s.; C. D. Kemp Welch, £2. 2s.; Y. B., 5s.; Robert Kaye Gray, £10; Walter Samuelson, £1. 1s.; Wynnie Kemball, £1; C. H. T., 10s.; W. W., £1; C. W. D., £1; C. A., £3. 3s.; Margaret, £2.

The following contributions have also arrived:—

Two large Skin Horses, from Mrs. Charles Wertheimer; 100 Badges, from the Secretary, Welcome Club.

There is no truth whatever in the statement which has appeared in numerous journals that the Queen has been "slightly indisposed at Balmoral owing to the severity of the weather." The Queen has been in excellent health throughout the autumn, and cold weather always suits her best. It is also quite untrue that the Queen's "rheumatic complaint" has lately been "unusually severe." The Queen has frequently suffered from rheumatism in her knees for the last twelve years, but it is merely a local malady, and it has not troubled her Majesty of late either more often or with more severity than usual.

I announced several weeks ago that the King of Italy had offered the beautiful palace of Capo di Monte to the Queen, in case her Majesty would like to visit Naples. I understand that the offer has been accepted, and that, all being well, the Queen will go to Naples just before Easter for a stay of four weeks. Capo di Monte is on the hills above Naples, and the palace is surrounded by a vast and very beautiful park. It is one of the most delightful Royal residences in Europe.

The only Court functions during the Queen's residence at Windsor will be two Councils, the reception of M. Decrais, and an investiture of the Bath and other Orders.

The Queen's Munshi, who has just returned to England, after spending five months in India, is taking a remarkably prominent place at Court, and his exaltation is causing most acrimonious criticism. The Royal servants and carriages are at the disposal of the Munshi, and I hear that an order has been given that at any future Court functions at which he may think fit to be present he is to be "attended" by one of the Gentlemen Ushers. The Munshi has been accompanied from India by his wife and daughters, and their attendants.

Lady Antrim, who has succeeded Lady Ampthill as Lady-in-Waiting on the Queen at Balmoral, will return to Windsor with the Court, and during her Majesty's stay at the Castle, Lady Downe and the Dowager Lady Erroll are the Ladies-in-Waiting. The Dowager Lady Churchill is to be on duty at Osborne during the Christmas holidays, and she will accompany the Queen to Italy in the spring.

Lord Bridport and Captain Walter Campbell are to be the Lord and Groom in Waiting on the Queen at Windsor from next Friday until the 28th, when they will be replaced by Lord Playfair and Lord Edward Pelham-Clinton.

The Royal tradesmen of Aberdeen have presented a bronze statue of the Queen (by Birch) to that city, and it was unveiled on Thursday under somewhat depressing circumstances. It was fully expected that Prince and Princess Henry of Battenberg would have come from Balmoral to unveil the statue, but they excused themselves; and, as no representative of the Court could be obtained, one of the donors had to preside at the function. There has consequently been a great deal of grumbling at Aberdeen, where quite a "dour" feeling has been expressed against the Royalties for the ungracious manner in which they are considered to have behaved in connection with the statue.

I hear that the Duke and Duchess of York will probably spend the month of February at some place on the South Coast, possibly either Hastings or Eastbourne. If the Duke and Duchess should go to Eastbourne, it is expected that they will reside at Compton Place, the seat of the Duke of Devonshire, which was occupied by the Prince and Princess of Wales and their family for a short time during the early spring of 1892.

Prince and Princess Christian, who have returned to Cumberland Lodge, Windsor Great Park, after an absence of three months, will shortly entertain several parties. The Prince of Wales, the Duke of Coburg, and the Duke of Connaught are to be among their guests, and also the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, the Hereditary Prince of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, and Count Mensdorff. Prince and Princess Christian will be included in the Prince and Princess of Wales's next house-party at Sandringham. Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein is staying at Berlin with the Empress Frederick, but she will return home this week, and Princess Louise (Princess Aribert of Anhalt) is now at Cumberland Lodge with her parents.

The Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, who are now residing at Gmunden, will probably come to England for a fortnight in the course of the winter, when they will be the guests of the Queen at Windsor Castle, and of the Prince and Princess of Wales at Sandringham. The Duke has not visited England since 1878, and the Duchess has not been in this country for eighteen years.

If practice makes perfect, the process of unfurling the northern war flag and rolling the drum must have attained great perfection in Ulster, except that too many rehearsals are liable to make demonstrations more mechanical than spontaneously enthusiastic. The Duke of Devonshire's visit to Belfast was eminently uneventful. The northern lights blazed to order and in a practised way, but with a much-dimmed lustre. The Duke and Duchess were the guests during their visit to the north of Ireland of Mr Dunville, known to wealth and fame in connection with Irish whisky. A party of northern magnates was assembled to meet them. Mr. Dunville, junior, is Secretary to the Duke of Devonshire; his wife belongs to the family of Lamberts, in the County of Meath, from which the Queen has taken two Maids of Honour.

Last week in Dublin Lord Ashbourne presided at a meeting of the Trinity College Historical Society, of which he was an active member in his earlier days. An interesting feature in the proceedings was the speech of Mr. John Redmond. It was the first occasion on which a genuine Home Ruler spoke and was favourably listened to within the walls of Trinity College. After this there is hope for Ulster yet. Time was when Trinity College shouted "No surrender!" as valiantly as Belfast does at this present moment. It is not only fair ladies who consent, whilst most vehemently refusing to do so.

The Wiltshire County Ball Committee held a meeting last week at which it was decided not to have a ball this season, as so little interest has been manifested in the subject, presumably in consequence of the severe depression which at present prevails in the county.

For AMUSEMENTS, see page 1071.
For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 1070 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1072.

I am asked to say that Mrs. Playfair, 31, George-street, Hanover-square, is organising a ball to be given at Prince's Hall, Piccadilly, on December 13, on behalf of King's College Hospital. The hospital is greatly in want of funds. It is situated in the midst of the Law Courts, and Mrs. Playfair is being aided in her good work by Bench and Bar. Amongst the patronesses are Lady Coleridge, Lady Davey, Lady Russell, Lady Jeune, Mrs. Lockwood, Mrs. Gully, and many other wives of Judges and Barristers.

A sale will be held in Westminster Town Hall on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday next, at which each of the stalls will be devoted to different charitable objects. Mrs. Pritchard will have a stall in aid of Penny Dinners for Poor Children, Lady Butt for the Girls' Friendly Society, and so on. There will be the usual musical and dramatic entertainment each evening.

I am pleased to be able to mention that the idea of a club for nurses put forward in a letter to TRUTH a few months ago will be realised on December 6, when the Duchess of Portland will open a Nurses' Residential Club at 17, Nottingham-place. This institution will provide suitable accommodation for nurses, as well as a Recreation Room open to all members of the club.

Captain Machell's indisposition at Liverpool was due, I hear, to his having taken a medicine for gout which, whilst it relieves the pain at once, very frequently temporarily affects the head. This ought to be a warning to those afflicted with gout to bear the ills they have.

The death of Colonel Ramsay Maitland, late of the 79th Highlanders, is much regretted at Edinburgh, where he had resided since his retirement from the Army. He was very popular in society, took an active part in county business, and interested himself zealously in the management of several charities. He distinguished himself very much during the Crimean Campaign, and also in the Indian Mutiny, and he served in the Army for thirty-seven years. Colonel Ramsay Maitland belonged to two ancient and notable families—the Maitlands, of Clifton Hall, and the Ramsays, of Barnton. His elder brother, the late Sir Alexander Gibson Maitland, was one of the most prominent Liberals in Scotland, and in 1868 he achieved a great triumph for his Party by carrying the County of Midlothian against the present Duke of Buccleuch, then Lord Dalkeith. With the restricted franchise and open voting, this was a wonderful victory, for Midlothian was then regarded in Scotland as an impregnable Tory stronghold.

The following "rules and regulations" have been served by the Duke of Grafton on his allotment tenants, who rent land of him. I think there can be no more conclusive evidence that a Parish Councils Bill is needed, with very large powers in regard to allotments. The italics are mine, and I would particularly direct notice to the obligation of tenants with their families to attend some place of worship on Sundays and on Christmas Day. This is about as absurd as it would be were the Duke's tenants to insist on his Grace and his son, Lord Euston, being particular in their attendance in church on these days. Often a labourer has not time to look after his allotment during the week, and, to my thinking, in those cases, the text regarding an ox or an ass falling into a pit would cover necessary work:—

The notice is headed, "Rules and Regulations under which Allotments are held from his Grace the Duke of Grafton, K.G.," and runs as follows:—1. Tenants shall hold their respective allotments as yearly tenants, except as hereinafter provided. 2. A tenant shall not underlet or exchange any part of his allotment. 3. Every tenant shall keep his allotment clean and well cultivated, by spade husbandry only; shall well manure every part of it at least once in two years; shall not plant the same kind of crop in two years in succession in the same place, but shall manage his allotment in all respects to the satisfaction of his Grace's agent, who will frequently inspect it. 4. The rent shall be paid at the time and place appointed, and if payment is not then made one shilling will be added to the rent; if not paid before the expiration of one month from that day another shilling will be added, and if unpaid at Christmas-day the land will be absolutely forfeited. 5. Though the landlord will keep up the boundary fences and scour the ditches, the tenants shall be jointly answerable for wilful damage. 6. No entrance will be allowed on any pretence into the allotment field except through the gateway, and every tenant going to or returning from his allotment, or carting manure thereto, shall keep the appointed road. Any tenant found or known to have offended against this rule, or to have introduced into the fields any person who has so offended, shall, for each offence, pay a fine of one shilling. If any road or path be pared or encroached on, soil to repair the damage will be taken from the adjoining allotment. No manure, weeds, or other matter shall be left on the roads or paths. 7. No work shall be done in the allotment field on Sunday or Christmas Day, nor shall any vegetables be taken out of it on those days after ten o'clock in the morning. Each tenant and his family is expected to attend some place of worship on those days with regularity. 8. Except in case of any condition or rule being broken, one quarter of a year's notice to quit at Lady Day or Michaelmas will be given by the landlord or his agent, and one quarter of a year's notice shall be given by a tenant wishing to quit at either of the before-mentioned terms. 9. Except in cases of forfeiture, the growing crop of any tenant quitting his allotment, and the labour and manure expended on that part from which no crop has since been taken, shall be valued by a respectable person, to be nominated by the landlord or his agent, whose valuation shall be final, and the amount of it shall immediately be paid to the quitting tenant, deducting what may be due for rent, repairs, or labour which should have been performed on the allotment. 10. In case of any breach of condition or rule, which shall entitle the landlord to determine the tenancy, the landlord or his agent shall have power to enter and retake possession of such allotment, as if such allotment had not been let, and the tenant shall be liable to be deprived of his allotment without compensation for growing crop, labour, or manure.

The Directorship of the Veterinary Department of the Board of Agriculture, a post which is worth £1,000 a year, will become vacant at the end of next month by the retirement of Professor Brown, who attained the age of sixty-five early in the present year, but he was granted an extension of time for a few months. Professor Brown has been connected with the Department, of which he is the very efficient head, since 1865.

Dr. Yorke Davies writes to me this week in answer to Dr. Andrew Wilson's theories on fat reduction, but I think that my readers have heard enough about fat by this time, and I really cannot open the columns of TRUTH to a scientific debate on a technical matter between two experts. It will have struck most readers that Dr. Andrew Wilson was avowedly only stating a theory, while Dr. Yorke Davies is nothing if not a practical man. In this capacity he now contends that Dr. Andrew Wilson makes two errors: (1) That it is possible, under any circumstances, to cut fat entirely out of the dietary; (2) That in order to reduce fat it is necessary to go on consuming fat. He agrees that a certain proportion of fat in the diet is necessary, but points out that the leanest meat contains five per cent. of fat, and that nearly all animal and vegetable foods contain as much as is required for the process of digestion and assimilation. When, however, the body is once freed of superfluous fat, he would allow the patient to take as much in his food as he likes.

HÔTEL BURLINGTON, Boscombe, Bournemouth. Perfectly unique!!! Over 200 rooms, practically designed, sumptuously appointed, and fitted throughout with all the comforts of a well-arranged country mansion. Electric light. Passenger lift. Acres of matured grounds sloping to the Pier. Most moderate tariff, forwarded by Manager, or obtainable at the Burlington and Buckingham Palace Hotels, London. Bournemouth EAST Station.

Many ladies have written to express concurrence in my opinion that the "poor gentlewoman" would, as a rule, be better off as a domestic servant than as a governess, companion, or "lady help." One of my correspondents tells the following story of a young relative in straitened circumstances, who went as companion to a lady whose husband occupied a dignified position. After about a fortnight in a very uncomfortable place, the girl asked permission to go out to lunch with a friend who was passing through London. The lady assented, but gave her notice to leave, professing to have understood that the girl had no friends, and stating that she objected to a companion who wanted to go out visiting. The same night, while undressing, the girl accidentally set fire to her clothes, and to the room, and narrowly escaped being burnt to death. The employer charged her with doing this out of revenge for having received notice to leave, denounced her before the servants and firemen, and packed her off the next day, which was Sunday. No wonder this dame preferred a companion without friends! Few people would venture to treat a servant in such a fashion.

But how anybody can have the audacity to ask a "lady" to take a general servant's place at wages under 5s. per week passes my comprehension. That such a height of audacity is possible is proved by the following advertisement from the Daily Telegraph. I can only say that "ladies" are extremely foolish if they accept such terms. Provided they really mean to work, they are worth more, not less, than the traditional domestic, and they ought to have no difficulty in obtaining wages accordingly:—

Lady wanted (gentlewoman by birth and education essential) who would prefer a general servant's post in small family (assisted by the lady of the house) to governessing. Salary £12 and laundress, &c.

I hear from a student at the Royal College of Science that for a long time past serious annoyance has been caused by the systematic stealing of coats, umbrellas, and other property from the laboratories. From my informant's account of the matter I gather that the coats are hung outside the laboratories, without anything to prevent the pockets being rifled or the garments abstracted, and in an institution of this character it seems to me to be the clear duty of the authorities to remedy this state of things, either by providing a cloak-room or putting some one to keep watch of the premises.

With reference to the plucking of ostriches, I have received the following letter from Mrs. Edward Phillips in answer to the letter from another lady which appeared in last week's TRUTH:—

SOCIETY FOR THE PROTECTION OF BIRDS.

Vaughan House, 11, Morland-road, Addiscombe, Croydon,
November 11, 1893.

DEAR SIR,—The immediate object of the Society for the Protection of Birds is to avert, if possible, or at least diminish, the destruction of useful and beautiful birds solely for decorative purposes. Ostriches are not only not destroyed, but are actually preserved and bred largely for the sake of their plumage. They are costly and delicate birds, and die readily under ill-usage. The Arab method of plucking the birds undoubtedly is cruel, just as some methods of shearing sheep are cruel, but in neither case is it to the interest of the proprietors that the creatures should suffer. The plucking of the feathers injures the formative cells, with the result that in subsequent growths the feathers deteriorate and are of small commercial value. In the early days of ostrich-farming at the Cape the system of plucking was followed because no other was known; happily this has been altered since about 1878, thanks to Mr. G. J. Nathan, who suggested a better plan, and to Mr. Douglas, who was the first to put it into practice. The plan of clipping the feathers is now universal in South Africa. When perfect, the feathers are cut off close to the flesh, and in about six weeks' time the stumps wither and become loose in their sockets, and are then drawn out without pain to the bird.

Heartily thanking you for the encouragement which you have more than once given to us in our efforts, I remain, yours faithfully, E. PHILLIPS, Vice-President.

What Mrs. Phillips says is confirmed by a letter which I have had from a South African ostrich farmer. He says that the account of the catching and throwing of the birds given by my correspondent last week is incredible. The birds' legs would inevitably get broken in the struggle, and, once broken, cannot be mended, which means the loss of the bird. For this reason, at the Cape, a bag is pulled over the ostrich's head to keep it quiet, and in this state the feathers are clipped off in the manner described by Mrs. Phillips. My South African correspondent adds that in all his experience, which includes the hunting and shooting of wild ostriches, he has never heard a bird scream, and knows no one who ever has. I hope that these explanations will reassure my original correspondent, and lead her to withdraw her hostility to the Society for the Protection of Birds.

The following startling paragraph about golf appears in the Western Morning News. That a game of this deadly nature should be every day growing in popularity is an alarming sign of the times:—

St. Marychurch Local Board has referred complaints of the danger of golf-playing on Babbacombe Downs to a Committee. Dr. Karkeek reported five deaths during October, giving the rate of 9·1 per 1,000.

C.O.M. WHISKY.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—ANDREWS & CO., Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

C.O.M. WHISKY.

MAJOR HOWE & CO.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

Parents often wonder how it is that, after they have expended large sums on the education of their boys at expensive schools, they find these young gentlemen incapable of answering a German letter or ordering a dinner at a French restaurant. A little pamphlet entitled "The Caricature of German in English Schools," just published by a certain Herr Curt Abel-Musgrave, throws a good deal of light on this mystery. It deals with six "German" grammars compiled by English pedagogues, and now in use in leading public schools, and in every one of these the German critic finds abundant food for mirth and ridicule—just as we should, no doubt, in English grammars written in France by Frenchmen or Germans. I wonder whether we should hear similar criticism if we could obtain the opinion of an ancient Greek or Roman on British Greek and Latin grammars.

A lady asks my opinion on the salaries paid by the Girls' High School Company to their mistresses. It seems that a lady who has taken first-class honours at Cambridge is paid £120 a year, without board or lodging; and that many other highly-educated women are only paid £80 a year. The hours appear to be long and the work heavy, and I hear of one school in which three mistresses broke down from over-work in one year. Speaking as an outsider, I should say that primâ facie a graduate with high University honours, male or female ought to earn more than an artisan, and that £80 per annum—say 32s. a-week—is very inadequate pay for highly skilled intellectual labour. As a matter of fact a mistress of a public infant-school expects more than the latter sum, and on the whole, I should say the teachers in the High School would infinitely improve their position by migrating to the Board Schools. Were they to do so, the shareholders might find it expedient to forego some part of the five per cent. dividend they are now receiving, and increase the salaries in proportion.

Exception has been taken to a recent award of a scholarship by the Governors of Woodbridge Grammar School. A boy of nine was examined in accordance with the regulations in the division for candidates under eleven. He headed the list, obtaining 423 marks out of a possible 550—76·9 per cent. Another boy, aged eleven, was examined in the division for candidates under thirteen. He obtained 522 marks out of a possible 725—72 per cent. This was 4·9 per cent. in favour of the younger boy, but, nevertheless, the Governors awarded the scholarship to the elder lad. On the face of it, this decision seems unfair, and the father of the younger boy has not unnaturally objected to it. From the papers which have been submitted to me, I gather that the Governors possibly took into consideration the position of the two families, and bestowed the scholarship where they judged it was, from an eleemosynary point of view, most needed. But in that case they hardly complied with their scheme, which provides that the scholarship shall be freely and openly competed for, and be given as a reward of merit on the result of the examination. If the examination is not to be the sole test, the fact should be made known to parents beforehand. The present practice is bound to cause dissatisfaction and unpleasantness.

In a recent issue of TRUTH a picture was given of a Welsh Vicar, who was modestly described as an ecclesiastical Whiteley. A "Welsh Coaster" now asks me to append to that picture the following. As the suggestion is that both are portraits of the same cleric, I am very glad to comply; but whether the two really are the same, I really cannot say. If the Welsh Church, however, contains two parish priests of such abnormal energy as this, there is more vitality in it than it has credit for:—

There is a Vicar, also in North Wales, who is a Magistrate of acknowledged impartiality and ability. He is a literary man, as a Vicar should be, and an author. He is full of public spirit and abounds with energy. When he went to his parish, twenty five years ago, there was hardly any population. Since then, chiefly through his well-directed efforts, his neighbourhood has become widely known as a favourite health-resort. Where formerly stood a few cottages are now beautifully laid-out streets of country residences, villas, shops, public buildings, and handsome places of worship. A large population exists to the great advantage of the few country people who formerly were his sole parishioners. Hardly any improvement has been made but what was due to his initiative. He is indefatigable in championing the interests of his district, and holds several public offices. His exertions in his parish are so well appreciated that a very substantial pecuniary testimonial has just been raised—quite spontaneously—for him by parishioners of all shades of opinion. In further and indisputable evidence of his thoroughly good work as a pastor, he has not only built, in a few years, a large and handsome church, but has filled it with an attached congregation. This is the merest outline of what has been performed by this Welsh Vicar.

Here is an Irish cleric who is not exclusively occupied with spiritual things. The advertisement has been appearing regularly in a Liverpool paper. A reader of the Liverpool paper asks me what I think of it. Well, it seems to me a pity that a Rector should have to supplement his income by trapping and selling rabbits; but if he finds it necessary, I don't know why he should not do it—always provided they are his own rabbits:—

Fresh Trapped Rabbits.—A Brace of above sent free to any address on receipt of P.O.O. for 3s.—Rector, Dungloe.

With reference to the appointment of the Rev. Eric Farrar to St. Thomas's, Coventry, I am informed by a gentleman who seems to know all about the circumstances that the living is of little or no value in a pecuniary sense. It is worth nominally only £200 a year, and the parish is a very poor one, no less than 7,000 of the inhabitants being classed as poor. It is said, therefore, that only a man of means could take the living, and that this as much as anything else led to Mr. Farrar's appointment. Whether this is all gospel I cannot say, but I give it as it is given to me. In any case, a petition was presented to the Bishop asking him to appoint the Rev. Llewellyn Wood, Senior Curate of Holy Trinity, Coventry, who had worked for eleven years in the diocese, and who, it is to be presumed, was prepared to accept this living. The Bishop, I gather from the local newspapers, indeed, admits that the living was given to Mr. Farrar because of services rendered by his father, who had been the Bishop's chaplain. If so, I cannot imagine a worse ground

---

A correspondent writes:—

You did not exactly state the full facts with reference to the Bishop of Derry. Not only did he go to Capetown to perform the ceremony in regard to his daughter's marriage, but he is connected by hereditary claims with the leading Duke of the S.A. Chartered Company. In days gone by Mr. Alexander was an enthusiastic Liberal, and Mr. Gladstone was attracted to him by a certain smartness of style in his preaching, and made him Dean of Emly. In 1866 the Tory Government came into office, and the father of the present Duke of Abercorn became Viceroy of Ireland. This gentleman's land agent was a certain Major Humphreys, to whose daughter Dean Alexander was married. Very opportunely Dr. Higgins, the then Bishop of Derry, who had the reputation, according to the late Bishop Wilberforce (vide "Diary"), of selling every living in his gift, was translated from this sphere of usefulness to another and better world. A grateful sense of Major Humphreys's services as a land agent stimulated the then Viceroy to press for the appointment of the Major's son-in-law to the vacant Bishopric. Lord Derby, as Premier, hesitated. But the claims of the land agent, backed up by the landlord, were not to be gainsaid, and the fortunate son-in-law found himself the youngest Bishop on the Bench. It is but natural the Bishop should expatiate, when occupying the pulpit of Westminster Abbey, upon the claims of the Company, of which the present Duke of Abercorn is Chairman, just as he preached in the Albert Hall for the claims of the Irish Unionist demonstrators, of whom the Duke of Abercorn is also the Chairman. All this does honour to his sense of gratitude for Bishoprics received, and other spiritual blessings, but it hardly makes him an independent authority either in respect to Mr. Rhodes and his filibusters, or to the Duke of Abercorn and his Unionist demonstrators.

The living of Southfleet, Kent, which is worth about £500 a year, with residence, and is in the gift of the Bishop of Rochester, has become vacant by the death of the Rev. George F. Goddart, who had been Rector for thirty-nine years. He was a son of the celebrated Archdeacon Goddart, who was Chaplain to three Kings of England in succession, and of whose method of preaching there is an interesting account in Mozley's "Reminiscences of Oriel."

A striking example is reported to me from Gloucestershire of the manner in which religious persecution is still practised in our midst. In the village of Brockworth, feeling has recently run very high between the High Church and Low Church parties. The Vicar and the High Church party being in the ascendant, the Protestant Union sent out lay-readers to hold private religious meetings. A cottage where such meetings were held was occupied by a woman whose son was gardener to a lady connected with the High Church party This son was actually informed that his mother must stop the meetings at her cottage, or he must take lodgings in another house, and undertake not to support his mother out of his pay The young man naturally declined to accept either alternative. As a consequence he was summarily dismissed from his situation. Such is the extent to which liberty of conscience prevails in rural England in 1893.

The net result of the Birmingham Church Congress is a deficiency of £780, which will involve a pro rata call of half a crown in the pound from the guarantors.

I have received the following from a correspondent anent the Chapel Royal, St. James's —

I think you must be misinformed about the Chapel Royal, St. James's, when you describe it as useless. During the Session of Parliament the Chapel is always full, and it is odd that the congregation always contains more representatives of the Radical benches than of the other side. Mr. Gladstone nearly always attends the Sunday service when in town, as do many of his Ministry. Only on last Sunday Mr. Gladstone was accompanied by Mr. Herbert Gladstone, while behind him was a member of his Government in the person of Mr R. K. Causton, as well as a member of the Opposition, Sir F. Seager Hunt. Facing him was the Earl of Mar and Kellie, and a great many other peers, and all the strangers' seats were closely filled.

The alterations have given general satisfaction. By placing the choir-seats on either side of the altar, more space has been provided in the body of the chapel. The removal of the pulpit, which was always unnecessary, allows the House of Commons pew to be enlarged. The communion-table has been cut down to more usual dimensions, and now displays with much better effect the gold candlesticks, alms-dishes, flagons, and patens, which are such splendid specimens of the goldsmith's handicraft. The two pieces of tapestry imported for the Royal Wedding are to remain. The improvements, it is an open secret, are all due to the suggestions of the sub-Dean.

Since Dr. Creser succeeded to the post of organist there has also been a marked improvement in the musical portion of the service. The singing now is fully equal in quality to that at St. Paul's or the Abbey; but a retrograde step has unfortunately been taken in the substitution of "S.P.C.K." hymns for the "Ancient and Modern."

The Bishop of Chichester has evidently been benefited by his recent holiday in Switzerland, for he was in high form at the Diocesan Conference the other day, summing up the various debates with admirable lucidity, and delivering a most forcible impromptu defence of Free Trade. All Bishop Durnford's remarks throughout the Conference were pervaded by the strong common sense for which he has always been so eminently distinguished among his Episcopal brethren.

A scheme has been organised by the Bishop of Winchester, who is now in residence at the Deanery, Winchester, for establishing some Diocesan Chaplains, who are to reside in a house which he has taken at Farnham, and who are to be sent out by him to take charge of vacant parishes, or to officiate during an Incumbent's absence through illness. This is an excellent project, and it may be hoped that Bishop Thorold will be able to carry it out.

The Rev. John C. Burnett, who died last week, was one of the very last of the old school of Evangelical clergy. He commenced his clerical career in Somersetshire fifty-nine years ago, and he had been beneficed in the Diocese of Bath and Wells since 1841, and had been Rector of St. Michael's, Bath (a living in the gift of the Simeon Trustees), since 1857. He was a most active parish clergyman and a forcible preacher, and was long a prominent figure on the platforms of religious meetings. Mr. Burnett was one of the most intimate friends of the late Dean Law, who gave him his first preferment, and whose interest obtained for him the living of St. Michael's. Mr. Burnett continued his work until within a fortnight of his death, although he was in his eighty-seventh year.

For true Christian charity and tolerance commend me to the Anglican cleric. A Roman Catholic congregation at Bishop Auckland, mainly consisting of poor working people, recently held a bazaar to raise funds to wipe off a debt on their church. To their credit, a number of persons outside the Roman Catholic communion generously helped to make the bazaar a success, and four well-known local Churchmen took part in the opening ceremonies. These praiseworthy efforts have, however, deeply grieved the Vicar of Auckland (the Rev. E. Price), and on Sunday week he gave expression to his feelings in a lengthy sermon, in which he urged his flock "not to encourage false doctrine," "to be loyal to Church principles," &c.

I have received £5 from Traveller for the Dinner Fund.

I must congratulate the German Emperor upon his energy in putting down card swindling in his Army. As a rule, I should say that the German officers are thoroughly honest men, and they have the advantage over our officers of being willing and able to live on their pay, although it is a very small one. Captain von Meyerlink, having been proved to have taken advantage of his position as a nobleman to act as a go-between betwixt usurers and their victims, has had the grace to do himself justice by hanging himself. How is it supposed that many of our Captain von Meyerlinks live? In precisely the same way as he did. Our fashionable circles contain more men and women who traffic in introductions and such like go-betweenism than that of any other country in the world. Ladies are paid for procuring guests. Gentlemen—so called—are touts, who introduce their young friends to usurers, and who are paid a commission on the introduction. Given a country where birth is still a social distinction, where birth has no money and yet wants to make two ends meet, and birth takes to very strange devices.

Some disgraceful statements are in circulation with regard to the examination of Militia candidates at Portsmouth last September. It is asserted on the authority of candidates present that the members of the Board (five Captains presided over by a Lieutenant-Colonel) openly prompted the answers to the questions, and discussed among themselves in the hearing of the candidates how the questions were intended to be answered. What is described as a "buzz of conversation" went on in the room all through the first day. On the second, owing, it is said, to rumours of what was going on having leaked out, things were done more "decently and in order," in obedience to a hint from a superior quarter. The Director-General of Military Education has been making personal inquiries into the matter, and it is to be hoped that he will have the courage to order a new examination, for nothing less will meet the justice of the case.

I am told that in several recent cases soldiers serving with their regiments in Egypt have applied for transfer to regiments proceeding to India, offering at the same time to extend their colour service to twelve years, but have found, after their C.O. has endorsed the application and the doctor has passed them, that the General vetos the application. No reason is assigned for this veto. What reason can there be? If it were a question of keeping the man in Egypt, the General's action might be explained, but, as I understand the case, it is simply a question between the man being allowed to go to India and being discharged to the Reserve. If the C.O. and the doctor think him fit to proceed to India on an extended engagement, why should the General object?

Long ago attention was drawn in TRUTH to the inconsiderate way in which medical inspection is often carried out in the Army. For this function the men are paraded in their shirts and trousers, with bare feet, their shirt-sleeves rolled up, and the fronts of their shirts open. In this guise it is no uncommon thing for them to be kept waiting twenty minutes or half an hour till the doctor arrives, which is, in winter, a barbarous and dangerous state of things. This medical inspection takes place in some cases every week; it may throughout the army for all I know. I would suggest that, in the winter at any rate, once a month would be quite often enough, and that both in winter and summer steps should be taken to ensure that the doctor shall be on the spot as soon as the men are paraded.

There seems to be no grievance more universally resented among soldiers in India than their detention beyond the period at which they are legally entitled to discharge. Almost every mail brings me correspondence on the subject. The War Office theory seems to be that they may keep a man in India till his eight years are up, and then bring him home at whatever time after suits their convenience. This is the precise converse of what the rule ought to be. A man should be discharged in England at the expiration of his eight years, but the authorities should have the right to bring him home at any time before that which suits their convenience. When a man is on foreign service, at the expiration of his seven years the War Office takes the right to detain him an extra year. What is the intention of this but to give them a period of grace in which to bring him home?

One of my Anglo-Indian readers tells me that the reason of the Viceroy being allowed to remit his salary to England at 2s. 2d. per rupee is that the amount is fixed by Act of Parliament in pounds sterling, and not in rupees, so that he is legally entitled to have the English value of his money. I hear now, for the first time, that the members of the Viceroy's Council enjoy the same privilege on the same grounds. A report is also current that the Bishop of Calcutta is on the same footing, but for what reason Heaven only knows. The Act of Parliament and the pound sterling explain the "how" of the matter, but not the "why." Why, I should like to know, has Parliament ordained that the Governor-General and his Council alone among Indian officials should have their pay measured out in English gold?

It may interest somebody at headquarters to hear that the school attached to the garrison at Gozo has only been visited by an Inspector of Army Schools once during the last four and a-half years. At the time of my information the school work was practically at a standstill, as the Schoolmaster could not put the children into a higher standard until they had been examined. It would seem that the existence of this garrison—which is about 500 strong—has been forgotten by the authorities concerned with Army Education, for Gozo is in daily communication with Malta, and there is not the slightest reason why the school should not be inspected.

A Fair Beautiful Skin.—By washing with Sulpholine Soap the natural tint and peach-like bloom of a perfect complexion is ensured.

WINTER VISITORS TO BOURNEMOUTH will find "The Imperial" one of the most complete residential establishments in the United Kingdom. Finest position on East Cliff. Luxuriously furnished, with appointments and cuisine of the highest order. Moderate tariff.—Apply, Manager.—W. H. DORÉ, Proprietor.

I have never been an opponent of a strong Navy, although I have questioned the wisdom of Lord George Hamilton's dictum that our Navy must be as strong as that of any two other naval Powers, for this seemed an invitation to these Powers to engage in a beggar-myself game of building ships. But this I should like to know: If we were engaged in a war with some great Power—say with France—should we seek to remain masters in the Mediterranean?

On a strategical question like this, the fullest consideration would be needed. Without pronouncing one way or the other, I cannot help seeing that, were we at war with some strong Mediterranean Power, the difference of the insurance between British and neutral bottoms would transfer to neutrals all the carrying trade now under the British flag in the Mediterranean, for on such a mare clausum the risk of isolated steamers capturing our ships would remain, even if we were to vanquish the enemy's ships of war in some great naval battle, or to block her principal ports. If we had no other route than that by the Cape, obviously—come what may—we should have to concentrate our energies on holding the Mediterranean route. But this alternative route we have. It is true that it is longer than that by the Suez Canal, but our position on the Red Sea would enable us to block the Mediterranean route to our enemy, and consequently this enemy would be unable to cut us out by using the shorter route. I hardly see, therefore, how the Mediterranean can be called the key of our Empire. In a war, a Commander should concentrate his forces, and not weaken himself by spreading them indefinitely, for the result ultimately achieved depends on general, not on partial, success. This, if I read history correctly, was the lesson that Napoleon taught. I do not go, however, further than this: our naval experts should decide whether, in the event of war—say with France—we should hold or evacuate the Mediterranean.

It is asserted in naval circles that Lieutenant Gordon, who died recently of typhoid fever in the hospital at Gibraltar, is a victim of the scandalously unhealthy condition of the Royal Sovereign, in which vessel he had been serving. It is really most discreditable that a new battleship, on which nearly a million of the public money has been expended, should have been fitted only with sanitary appliances of a perfectly obsolete kind, which after a short time were found to be so defective in condition that the vessel became dangerously unwholesome. Who is responsible for this deplorable and disgraceful state of things?

One of the multitudinous grievances of the Indian Telegraph Service is the amount of Sunday labour exacted from the officials. A clerk, in a recent letter to TRUTH, says that in first-class telegraph offices the clause of the Queen's Proclamation guaranteeing liberty of conscience in India is a dead letter, for the employés in these offices are absolutely precluded from attending church on Sunday. Lord Elgin would do well to investigate the entire administration of the Telegraph Department, where there exists more discontent than in any other branch of the public Service with which I am acquainted—which is saying a good deal.

The Chippenham Guardians, like many other Boards, now make a small allowance of snuff and tobacco to aged inmates of the Workhouse, and last week it was proposed that those who do not smoke or take snuff should be granted, as an equivalent, tea and sugar to the amount of threepence per week. These commendable attempts to soften the aged pauper's lot do not, however, meet with the approval of Mr. Clutterbuck, the Chairman. He portentously warned his colleagues that it was not within the province of the Board "to give luxuries," and by his casting vote he defeated the revolutionary motion. In Mr. Clutterbuck Chippenham evidently possesses a bulwark of Bumbledom.

Judging by the following letter of Lord Mayor Duckett to Lord Burleigh, which I have come across in a book containing letters written during the reign of Elizabeth, the nobility of that day rather protested against the excessive feastings of the City Corporations and Companies, than approved of them:—

> Our dutie to yor Lordship humbly done, it may please the same to be advertised that for avoiding the excessive spending of venison and other vitail in the Halls of this Citie, which we understand to have been offensive to her Matie and the Nobilitie, we have by Act of Common Council forbidden such festes hereafter to be kept, and have restrained the same only to necessarie metinges in w^h also no venison is permitted, as by the copie of the Act herew^th sent unto yor L may appere.

I would suggest that our City Fathers should look up this Act, and act upon it, in which case I should imagine that turtle soup would come under the category of "other vitail," which, as well as venison, Lord Mayor Duckett pledged himself should neither appear at Corporation nor City Company feasts.

The Managing Committee of the Galashiels Parochial Board have just taken the extraordinary step of ordering various fines under the Vaccination Acts to be paid out of the poor rates. The Committee had previously passed a resolution to suspend prosecutions for vaccination offences, but it was over-ruled by the Board of Supervision; after which the Committee had recourse to the ingenious expedient of indemnifying at the public expense the stalwarts who refused to comply with the

A CHRISTMAS BOX.—A Merryweather's Fire Pump, with Buckets, for my friend's country house. Price Lists. 63, Long-acre, London. W.C.

PFUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. PFUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

Act. One need not believe in vaccination to see that this is a most outrageous irregularity. On the same principle a majority of publicans on a Board of Guardians might order fines for drunkenness to be paid out of the rates. If these Galashiels gentlemen are so anxious that the anti-vaccinators should not suffer for conscience' sake, let them pay the fines out of their own pockets. The auditor will, I trust, secure that result by surcharging the amounts disbursed in this way.

What a local paper describes as "an extraordinary and painful scene" occurred at the meeting of the Thames Ditton School Board the other day. In the course of it, the Right Hon. Lord Foley said (so it is reported) "that Mr. Kearns (another member) was a liar, and he would have nothing more to do with him." A Thames Ditton resident, who does not seem to adequately appreciate the distinction conferred on the Board by the noble Lord's membership, asks me whether this kind of language is customary amongst hereditary legislators. As I do not mix in such circles myself, I cannot speak with authority on the point. Lord Foley is in a better position to do so. If he calls a colleague "a liar," I suppose it may be taken for granted that the expression is not unusual in his sphere.

A Bournemouth correspondent tells me that I was entirely right in criticising the action of the late Mayor in ordering the withdrawal of a summons, and that my friend who considered the criticism "rot" is all wrong. It seems that not only did the Mayor order the withdrawal of the summons, but that his action has been challenged in the Town Council, and that he then admitted and defended what he had done. I have the report before me—as well as a good many other facts—which show that there were good reasons for challenging the Mayor's action. It seems, therefore, that the only "rot" which I have published was the contradiction given by my first correspondent.

It may be remembered that reference was recently made in TRUTH to the eviction of Mr. Davies, a chemist at Heytesbury, for the alleged reason that, as a member of the Sanitary Authority, he had called attention to the condition of cottages belonging to his landlord, Lord Heytesbury. I subsequently published a letter from Mr. Flower, the Medical Officer, contraverting Mr. Davies's assertion that the orders of the Sanitary Authority for a house-to-house visitation had not been complied with, and suggesting that Mr. Davies's action followed, instead of preceding, his notice to quit. A letter from Mr. Davies in reply to this reached me on Tuesday of last week, too late for the current issue of TRUTH. I now take the following extracts from it :—

I did not see Mr. Flower's letter in your issue of the 26th ult. in time to reply earlier. . . . Things have come to a pretty pass when a member of a body charged with looking after the people's health, who does his duty, has such motives imputed to him by one of its servants. I called attention to a case of overcrowding in a cottage belonging to Lord Heytesbury, tenanted by Mrs. Lawrence, at one of our meetings in October, 1892. My notice to quit is dated February 3, 1893. Mr. Flower writes of "imaginary sanitary defects," knowing at the same time that in Mrs. Lawrence's cottage since I first called the attention of the authority to it, cases of diphtheria and typhoid-fever have occurred. From the cuttings I enclose, taken from the Wiltshire Times, you will observe that the cottage is in such a wretched condition that the authority at the last meeting gave peremptory orders for it to be closed. It is no worse now, however, than it has been for years past. Mr. Flower forgot to tell you when writing about the house to house visitation, that he only completed it the day before the issue of TRUTH in which his letter appeared. He was ordered to make a house to house visitation on September 4. I taxed him at our meeting on October 16 with not having made the visitation; he replied that he did not consider it necessary to do so. It is not for me to say what caused Mr. Flower to change his mind. You will see, however, that at the last meeting of our authority "numerous cases of nuisances" were reported from Heytesbury, and I must bear witness to the fact that within the last three weeks, the sanitation of Heytesbury has had more attention paid to it than I can remember for a corresponding period within the last twenty years.

Mr. Davies seems to have all the best of the argument, and the doctor, in view of his misleading letter to me, does not come out of the discussion much better than the noble landlord. Considering how many letters have been written on the matter, it is somewhat remarkable that no attempt has been made on Lord Heytesbury's part to deny or extenuate his alleged persecution of the chemist.

At the late municipal elections, Mr. S. L. Baker, being desirous of representing the electors of the South-East Ward of Poole, thus sought to ingratiate himself with the fishermen ratepayers in that district. It would be interesting to know how these successors of the Apostles took the compliment :—

Now, in writing for the South-East Ward, we cannot forget the fishermen, as they nearly all live there. When I was a boy I used to stand about the Fish Shamble steps, and wonder how it was that Jesus Christ chose so many men of that kind to be His disciples, as they did not impress me then as men at all fitted to be such—forty years ago they were very rough—but if they still seem rough, they are very much better men.

From further information which has reached me during the week, I should say that the late municipal election at Dover was one of a character hardly paralleled since the Reform Bill. The Mayor, who in any other town makes at least a show of impartiality, descended openly into the arena, and held electioneering meetings in the Mayor's parlour. One of his leading henchmen, who is the Official Receiver in Bankruptcy for East Kent, spoke at one of these meetings, and held a meeting at his Dover office a night or two before the election. On the day of the election two of the presiding officers—one of them, I understand, a scheduled briber—were busily engaged in bringing up voters when not themselves within the polling-booth. The Vicar of one parish, in conjunction with his two wardens, sent out a circular to his flock. A Roman Catholic priest, another political parson, and an Army Chaplain on the station also signed circulars. The intervention of the last-mentioned reverend gentleman in a civil contest of this kind is a proceeding emphatically calling for the notice of the authorities.

One Dover correspondent writes :—

You are quite right in all you say respecting the late election here, and you might add that the result was achieved by the usual Dover methods—bribery, treating, intimidation, and every form of corrupt and illegal practice. The special Dover plan of bribery is to give the independent electors a shilling or half-a-crown, with a pot of beer, before the poll as an earnest of good faith, and to follow this up with "payment by results" afterwards—that is to say, "No win, no boodle," but if the desired results are secured, there follows a liberal distribution of "thick 'uns" and "thin 'uns" (sovereigns and half-sovereigns) among the electors who have registered their names at the committee-rooms of the successful candidate.

Another way in which "payment by results" is managed is indicated by the following stories, which I find in another letter from Dover. A woman purchased a box of pills in the town, immediately after the Election. The assistant asked her how her husband had voted. She replied for the successful candidates. On opening her parcel when she got home she found half-a-crown wrapped up with the pill-box. A day or two later another woman purchased a feeding-bottle at the same shop. She was asked the same question and received the same answer. The assistant (a lady) replied, "Well, you have got your bottle, and here's a shilling for you besides to drink 'B.'s' and 'F.'s' health." The woman accordingly got her bottle for nothing. "B." and "F." were, of course, the successful candidates. When it is remembered that at the bottom of all this shameless corruption in the present instance is the question whether an improvement scheme is to be adopted at a cost of about £100,000, or another at a cost of about £20,000, and that the dominant ring in the Corporation are supporting the former scheme with all their might, it will be readily perceived that Dover has reached an almost unexampled degree of municipal corruption.

I am told that the Police in the provinces, like many men in other positions, are seriously aggrieved at the way in which the retirement regulations are carried out. The Police Act of 1890 provides for superannuation at the age of sixty; but retirement is left optional, and the result naturally is that the best-paid men at the top of the tree stick to their salaries as long as they can, blocking promotion, and compelling the men below them who wish to retire to do so before they have earned the pension of the higher grade. Compulsory retirement is the rule for all grades in the Army, Navy, and Civil Service, and the Police ought undoubtedly to be put on the same footing.

Last week reference was made in TRUTH to the rapid promotion of a member of the Bristol Police Force, who, after being appointed an Inspector at the age of twenty-two, was within a year raised over the heads of thirteen old and experienced officers to the rank of Chief Inspector. I am now informed that the young gentleman in question is the son of Captain Parry, her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary for the division which includes Bristol. It is urged in defence of the Chief Constable that this is the first occasion on which he has gone outside the Force to fill an appointment, and that all the other Superintendents and Inspectors were promoted from the ranks. Far from making it better, this makes the matter worse, for it shows that there has been a departure from the ordinary course. Bristol, however, is not the only place in which discontent has been caused in the Force by unfair promotion, and the Home Secretary would do well to consider whether some regulation cannot be framed requiring a reasonable term of previous training and service as a condition of appointment to a responsible post of command.

When I last week advocated the use of "the cat" as a punishment for assaults on women and children, I did not intend to recommend the particular instrument known by that name. I mention this, as one or two humanitarians have pointed out to me that the "cat" is almost an instrument of torture, and that corporal punishment may be inflicted quite as effectually without recourse to actual cruelty. So be it. Provided we get corporal punishment in an effectual shape, I don't much mind what the shape is. A Glasgow correspondent recommends periodical administration of a rod or cane, and I should think that this would serve the purpose as well as anything else.

The position of the Irish landlord cannot be so very bad, after all. At the Banbridge Quarter Sessions a few days ago, Captain Leslie, of Ballyward, obtained a decree against one of his tenants named Harold for a half-year's rent. The plaintiff, it transpired, collects his own rents, and he stated that on the rent-day in June Harold came to his house without his coat, whereupon "he told him he should come decently to pay his rent, and to go home and dress himself." From the stories which are told in some quarters one would hardly have imagined that any Irish landlord could afford to be thus particular. On the contrary, one would have thought it more likely that the landlord would be without a coat in which to receive the tenant.

I look in vain for any sign of improvement under the last Bankruptcy Act in the cost of realising small estates. A case has just come under my notice in the Cheshire County Court where the estate realised (within a penny) £178, of which only £32. 11s. 4d. reached the creditors, the unsecured creditors receiving only £13. 9s. The Board of Trade and the lawyers, on the other hand, divided between them over £66, while even the trustee and the auctioneer got £35.

Colonel Guthrie, of Penarth, writes to disclaim having attempted to set the fashion of smoking on the Magisterial Bench. The Colonel's explanation of the Western Mail paragraph, to which I referred last week, is that he did not light his cigar till the business of the Court for the day was finished, and the other Magistrates and the general public had left, there being then only the Clerk, a few police officers, and two reporters in the room. I agree with Colonel Guthrie that the atmosphere of a Court of Justice at the close of the day's proceedings is not fragrant, and I certainly do not see why he should not have sweetened it with a little tobacco, nor why the local press need have recorded the fact as though the Chairman of the Bench had been puffing a cigar while meting out justice.

By the way, a well-informed friend of mine tells me that I was wrong in saying that no Judge has been seen on the Bench in England with a pipe in his mouth.

THE COUPÉ COMPANY'S Telegraphic Address is "COUPÉ, LONDON."

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.—Patterns are now ready, & will be sent post free, of these new & fashionable Cards for Christmas (specially printed). A most complete collection, comprising many striking novelties.—PARKINS & GOTTO, Court Stationers, Oxford-st., Londn.

"How," says he, "about Chief Baron Nicholson?" Nicholson? Was he the learned Judge who used to sit somewhere out of Leicester square? If so, he was about the only Judge of my time that I have never been before.

Mr. Skinner, a farmer at Hornchurch, Essex, told a lamentable story at the Romford Petty Sessions last week, and he seems to have been very harshly treated by his landlord. Mr. Skinner has lost £1,100 by his farming operations during the last three years, and, owing to the drought, this season's early crops were a failure. The landlord's agent would not give him time, but sold him up for rent, property worth £500 bringing only £60. At Michaelmas, the rent being again due, the agent refused to allow him a few days' grace to get up his potatoes, and insisted on another forced sale, which caused a further serious loss. The unfortunate farmer was now summoned for non-payment of rates, but the Magistrates being more merciful than the landlord allowed him six weeks to find the money due. It would be interesting to learn who is Mr. Skinner's landlord, and whether that individual approves of his agent's procedure.

The following singular case came before the Lexden and Winstree Bench on Saturday week. David Cooper, travelling hawker, was summoned for doing damage to a tree to the amount of one penny at East Donyland, on October 17, 1891. The only evidence as to this offence was that of Mr. E. J. Heavens, the prosecutor, who stated that the man alleged to have done the damage gave the name of "David Cooper." Mr. Heavens had never seen the man since that date, more than two years ago, but the summons had at length been served on a certain David Cooper, travelling hawker, staying at Lowestoft. This man did not appear, but the Lowestoft police had been informed by his wife that he had never been to East Donyland, and, so far as I can gather, there was absolutely no proof that he was the individual wanted. Nevertheless, the Bench not only convicted the Cooper of Lowestoft, but imposed the absolutely monstrous penalty of 17s. 7d. Even if it had been clear that he was the right man, the odd sevenpence would have been a sufficient penalty for such a trumpery offence.

A dissatisfied litigant—the representative of a large class—tells me a curious story about a County Court Judge. He brought an action for a debt. The debtor pleaded that he was barred by the Statute of Limitations. The plaintiff showed a payment on account which took the debt out of the Statute. The Judge, however, rose superior to the trammels of Statute and Case law, and gave judgment for the defendant. He refused to reconsider his judgment or to allow a new trial; and, as the amount of the debt was under £20, there was no appeal, and, consequently, no remedy. The plaintiff laid his complaint before the Lord Chancellor and the Treasury, but got nothing more from either of them than a regret that they had no power to interfere; and nothing more can be done except to petition for the removal of the Judge. That has been adopted, and I understand that over 2,000 signatures to the petition have been obtained. But the removal of one Judge hardly meets the necessities of the case. The fact seems to be that at present, when the amount is under £20, a County Court Judge can make his own law, regardless alike of Parliament and of the Superior Courts. The question is, Can County Court Judges be safely entrusted with that amount of discretion?

The Magisterial Bench in the Isle of Man appears to be fully as much in need of reform as the most Tory-ridden English County Bench. The Nonconformists claim that they form the great majority of the inhabitants of the island, but, according to a statement made at a meeting of the Manx Nonconformist Council on Thursday, out of about forty Magistrates no fewer than thirty-eight are members of the Church of England. Gentlemen who are simply engaged in trade or commerce are rigorously excluded from the Bench, which is almost entirely composed of lawyers, Army officers on half-pay, parsons, and landowners. Most of these Justices, it is needless to say, are Tories. The Council appointed a deputation to wait upon the Lieutenant-Governor, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Walpole or his successor will take steps to remedy such a scandalous state of things. As there is no property qualification for Manx Magistrates, it should be easy to do this.

An Englishman at Las Palmas, Grand Canary, sends me an extract from a Spanish local paper of which the following is a translation. It is, of course, only the Spanish journalist's fun; but in view of the misplaced tenderness with which wife-beaters are constantly treated in this country it would not be surprising if the intelligent foreigner really believed what is here set forth:—

In England there exists a law in which are set forth the punishments meted out to those who ill-treat their wives, viz.:—

	£.	s.	d.
For throwing plates at her head, using disgusting language, and breaking a glass in her face... ...	0	10	0
For striking her in the face with clenched fist, and kicking her in the ribs	0	15	0
For smashing her eye, making it look like a tomato, and cutting her mouth	1	0	0
For a regular beating all over a body	1	0	0
For pulling her about by the hair of her head, like a cat by the neck	2	0	0
For a good kick, which will break some of her limbs or bones	2	0	0

MORAL.

Spanish mothers, don't allow your daughters to marry an Englishman!

COACHING of highest excellence in West of Eng. at "Crawford's," Wykeham Ho., Clifton, Glos., for ARMY EXAMS. (Univ. and Civ. Serv.). Five crowded years of success. No vacancies till Jan., '94.

EIDERDON PURE WOOLLEN FABRICS, in various weights and colourings, for Dressing Gowns, Smoking Jackets, Ladies' three-quarter Capes, Dresses, and Underskirts; also the new Ballylareen Duffle Frieze for Ulster Coats, Inverness Capes, and all descriptions of Winter Wraps where "warmth without weight" is the desideratum. The Eiderdon Rug. Samples of Boyd & Company's productions, with "The Book of the Ulster," illustrated, and forms for self-measurement, may be obtained, post free, on application to the Sole Proprietors and Makers, BOYD & CO., 77, Royal-avenue, Belfast.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. In connection with the extraordinary disparity of the sentences at Reading Quarter Sessions, it should be mentioned that there were a number of previous convictions against the prisoners Siarey and Parker. Probably the Recorder regards the fact that these men had been in trouble before as a justification of the heavy punishment with which he visited them. But I would remind Mr. Griffits that judicial authorities of greater experience and eminence than himself hold that the system of cumulative sentences is cruel and unjust, as well as useless. Most people will, I think, agree with me that, whatever their past history, men ought not to be sent into penal servitude for stealing a few shirts or a pair of boots. It will also be agreed, I think, that if Mr. Griffits's sentences for thefts were far too severe, that for an abominable assault on a child was far too lenient. Amongst the amateur administrators of the law who figure in the following list, there are, it will be observed, several clergymen. It seems to me that the dispensation of justice (or injustice) is one of those "worldly cares and studies" which these reverend gentlemen might—as they are enjoined to do at their ordination—advantageously forsake and set aside. No Magistrates are more prone to error or less inclined to temper justice with mercy than those who prefix "Rev." to their names.

Reading Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. J. O. Griffits, Q.C., Recorder. George Holder convicted of indecently assaulting a little girl seven years of age. Three months.

Reading Quarter Sessions. Before the Recorder. Thomas Siarey pleaded guilty to stealing seven shirts. Five years.

William Parker pleaded guilty to stealing a pair of boots. Three years.

Longton Borough Police-court. Richard Hughes, charged with assaulting his wife and a policeman. He went home drunk, and seizing his wife by the throat beat her about the head with his fists. He continued very violent when arrested, and kicked the constable. There were eighteen previous convictions against defendant, five for assaulting his wife, who was granted a separation order. Fined on the first charge 10s. and costs, and on the second £1 and costs, and 12s. for damages to the policeman's clothing.

Longton Borough Police-court. William Matthews, charged with refusing to quit a public-house, and with assaulting the landlord. On being ejected he struck the landlord a violent blow in the face. Fined 10s. and costs for refusing to quit; committed for one month for the assault.

Dunmow Petty Sessions. Before the Rev. E. F. Gepp, Rev. G. West, Messrs. W. B. Clapham, and E. T. Foakes. Fredk. Titmarsh, a local preacher, charged with assaulting John Stokes by knocking him down and violently kicking him. Stokes said he had to go to a doctor, and was not able to work for days. Fined 2s. 6d. and £1. 1s. costs.

Dunmow Petty Sessions. Before the same Justices. William Reeve and Fred Curtis, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act. On Reeve being searched a rabbit was found in his possession. Curtis was with him. In default of paying £1. 1s. each, defendants were committed for a month.

Samford Petty Sessions. Before Captain M. Edgar, Captain H. E. Lacon, Mr. T. S. Furness, and Rev. J. H. Hocking. Edgar Bailey, shopkeeper, charged with cruelty to a horse. Defendant, whilst drunk, unmercifully beat the animal with the butt end of his whip. He had been previously convicted of a similar offence, and the Bench considered it a gross case. Fined £3 and costs.

Sunderland Police-court. Catherine Dawson, a young woman, charged with stealing 1s. 4½d. from a till. A witness stated that prisoner was the only support of her mother and that she had been out in search of work. Three months.

Wolverhampton Borough Police-court. Sarah Ann Stephens, charged with stealing a quart jug. Twenty-one days.

Wimborne Police-court. Before General Powlett Lane and Colonel Portman. Alfred Hollett, charged with assaulting Henry Stevens Groves. Defendant knocked complainant down and beat him with a stick and kicked him on the head, rendering him insensible. Fined £1 and costs.

Wimborne Petty Sessions. Before the Rev. C. J. Glyn, Captain Carr Glyn, Colonel Portman, and Mr. H. K. Hitchcock. Henry Tubbs, charged with trespassing in pursuit of game. Fined £1 and costs.

Grimsby Borough Police-court. Before Aldermen Veal, Smethurst, and Mudd, Messrs. E. Bannister, J. C. Wright and J. Morton. William John Delf convicted of an aggravated assault on his wife, who obtained a separation order. He struck her several times with his fist and knocked her down, and he had continually ill-treated her. Fined £2. 2s.

Grimsby County Police-court. Before Mr. R. H. J. Parkinson, Rev. C. A. Alington, Mr. G. H. C. Haigh, and Alderman H. J. Veal. David Jones, a youth, charged with begging. He said he had come from Manchester to try and get work on a smack. Fourteen days.

Galway Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. J. C. Gardiner (R.M.), M. Lynch, J. McDougall, M. A. Lynch, P. J. Hannon, Dr. N. Grealy, and Captain Davonport. Michael Gill convicted of seriously assaulting Michael Flaherty, who in consequence was confined to his bed for five days. Fourteen days, and ordered to find sureties.

Galway Petty Sessions. Before the same Bench. Bartly O'Donnell charged with snatching a salmon from the river at Nun's Island. Committed for two months in default of paying £4.

Birmingham Police-court. Before Messrs. Colmore (Stipendiary), Bunce, Wallis, Hart, and other magistrates. Walter Ralph, charged with assaulting Frederick Randall. Defendant struck complainant on the nose with such force as to cause injuries which necessitated his detention in the hospital. Fined 20s. and costs.

Spilsby Police-court. Before the Revs. E. Rawnsley, R. W. Cracroft, and C. T. Swan, Colonel Preston, Messrs. W. D. Gainsford and P. G. Skipworth. Mary Ann Ironmonger, charged with stealing four eggs which were taken from a hedge. Fine and costs, £1. 15s. 6d.

Huddersfield Police-court. Before Messrs. J. A. Brooke, J. E. Willans, G. W. Tomlinson, F. Eastwood, and C. Glendinning. Robert King, charged with cruelty to a horse. The animal, which was attached to a heavily-laden cart, was exceedingly lame, and an inspector found that it was suffering from canker of the foot, the hoof being "completely rotten." Fined 5s. and costs.

Shrewsbury Borough Police court. Before the Mayor (Mr. G. Evans), Messrs. W. Patchett, W. Phillips, and J. Evan Jones. Frederick William Leah, an Army Reserve man, charged with sleeping out. He was found in an old fire-escape in the Market-square. Fourteen days.

Perth Police-court. Before Bailie McNicoll. Thomas Stanton, convicted of assaulting his wife by kicking her in the side. Fined £1. 10s.

John Robertson Deans, convicted of assaulting Elizabeth Lonie by striking her in the face and kicking her, to the effusion of blood. Fined £2.

Carlisle County Police-court. Before Messrs. T. Horrocks, A. W. Shepheard Walwyn, W. C. Butler, J. Selby Chance, and T. H. B. Graham. William J. McLaughlin, Joseph Thompson, and Alfred Rogers, summoned for trespassing in pursuit of game. McLaughlin fined £5 and costs or two months, the other defendants £2 and costs or one month.

Penybont Police-court.—Before Messrs. T. T. Moore and D. P. Powell. Henry Stubbs, charged with assaulting Claude J. Meredith. Besides striking and kicking the complainant, defendant bit him on the neck and ear, taking off two pieces of skin and a piece of the ear. The Chairman said it was a very aggravated assault — the worst he had known — and defendant deserved a heavy penalty. Fined £1 and costs.

Kington Police-court. — Before Messrs. Stephen Robinson and W. H. Banks. Francis Smith, charged with stealing a loaf of bread. One month.

Maidenhead County Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. J. F. Simpson, C. W. Cox, H. H. Durrant, and H. R. Burrows. William McIlroy, charged with sleeping out. Seven days.

MESSRS. HARBORDW, Hosiers, Glovers, and Shirtmakers by appointment to the Royal Family, have opened new premises, 6 and 7, New Bond-street, in connection with their old-established business, 15, Cockspur-street.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

Preston Borough Police court. Before Messrs. H. Sowerbutts, W. Haslam, S. Lee, T. Dewhurst, and F. Thorp. George Robinson, summoned for assaulting an old woman. He struck her in the mouth, knocked her down, and kicked her. Fined 5s. and costs.

York City Police court. Before Messrs. T. Varey and B. W. Empson. Six men, charged with sleeping in a brick yard. Fourteen days each.

Oakham Police court. Before Messrs. A. J. Fludyer, G. J. Noel, H. Heathcote, and R. Tryon. Joseph Harrison, labourer, charged with smoking in the churchyard at Ryhall. Fine and costs, 10s. 6d.

Writing in reference to a charge of cruelty which was mentioned in my Legal Pillory last week, a gentleman at Leeds desires me to explain "wherein lies the difference between setting a couple of dogs on to worry a cat and setting fifteen or twenty couple of dogs on to chase and worry, after, say, half an hour's run, a fox." He also alludes to stag-hunting as practised by her Majesty's Buckhounds, and to rabbit-coursing by fox-terriers, which latter "sport" may be witnessed, he says, almost daily in the Cardigan Fields, Leeds. Although my correspondent does not seem to perceive it, there really is a difference between the hunting of a wild animal like a fox, and the chasing of a tame stag under such conditions as prevail at Windsor, or the coursing of rabbits which are caught and kept for the purpose, and then are not given a fair field. I have frequently expressed my views as to the two last-named "sports," and, like my correspondent, I regret that they are at present legal. But, unlike him, I do not think that because these evils cannot be suppressed, other kinds of cruelty should be allowed to go unpunished.

Another most discreditable and vindictive prosecution has occurred at Alderney. Sixteen citizens, including some of the most respected and law-abiding men in the island, were arraigned before Judge J. Le Cocq and five Jurats on a charge of "tumultuous assembling" in the public streets. The defendants were supporters of Mr. Sebire, the victim of the scandalous sentence on which I commented last week, and the "tumultuous assembling" consisted in carrying him through the town and singing "Rule Britannia" when he was temporarily released on bail. Over fifty witnesses for the defence deposed that the crowd was no more disorderly than the Salvation Army procession in the same streets every evening. The Jurats differed in opinion, two being for the Procureur-Delegate's conclusions, two for dismissing the case, and one for a modified penalty. Instead of following the usual practice of leaning to the side of mercy when the Court is divided the Judge gave his voice in favour of the severest penalties, and one defendant was fined £5 or a month's imprisonment, and six others £2 or fifteen days, whilst the remaining nine were bound over to keep the peace. The whole proceedings certainly look, as the advocate for the defence suggested, like an attempt to crush out the party to which Sebire and the defendants belong.

A man named John Bull was charged before the Walsall Magistrates last week with cruelty to his son and daughter aged nine years. His wife deposed that the prisoner, who was constantly drunk, beat the children with his hand and with a belt, and that he had thrown a knife at one of them. A second witness swore that she had seen the prisoner throw a poker at the head of one child, and a third witness said she had seen him kick them. In addition to this the two children were called, and spoke as to their ill-treatment. In the face of this evidence and of the fact that there was none for the defence, Messrs. S. Russell, J. Scott, and J. Moseley, J.P.'s, came to the astounding conclusion that the case was not strong enough to warrant a conviction. What, in the name of common sense and justice, would the Walsall Bench consider a strong case?

In July last year I referred to the case of a man named John Kelsall, of Salford, who was sentenced to fourteen years' penal servitude at Manchester Assizes for causing the death of his wife. He was found guilty almost solely upon the evidence of a woman named Curran, who said she saw him throw a paraffin lamp at his wife; and as this witness herself admitted that she was in a "muddled state," whilst other persons testified that she was speechlessly drunk, I expressed the opinion that Kelsall had been wrongfully convicted. The Secretary of the Committee which took up Kelsall's case now informs me that Curran has recently made a statement to a firm of solicitors, in which she admits that her evidence was untrue. She persisted in this admission after it was pointed out that she might be prosecuted for perjury. In view of this statement, and of other fresh evidence which was obtained after the trial, the Home Secretary will, I trust, feel justified in ordering Kelsall's release.

The missing-word game is still being merrily carried on through the medium of the small sheet published at Ostend and circulated here, which I have previously noticed. The result of a recent competition is extremely interesting and suggestive. It was stated that on this occasion no word had been fixed upon to complete the paragraph, but that the winning word would be the one sent in (with entrance fees, of course) the greatest number of times. It has now been announced that 8,200 entries were received, 2,500 of which were sent by "Miss Smith, 54, Shaftesbury-avenue, London," who gave one word, and was declared the winner. The total sum received was said to be £198. 14s., and after deducting commission there remained for the winner £183. 18s., of which "Miss Smith" paid £62. 10s. as entries. It is, therefore, evident from the statement of the paper itself that the people who invest their humble sixpences and shillings in these competitions have to face the rivalry of an enterprising female who will risk the substantial sum of £62. 10s. at one stroke. But in spite of this, I have no doubt the gullible British public will continue to accord their support to the gentleman at Ostend—so long, at least, as the Post Office continues to serve his business by distributing his paper.

For THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH, Epps's Glycerine Jujubes will always be found effective. Sold only in boxes 7½d., or tins 1s. 1½d. Labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

One "E. Dalton," of 49, Hanway-street, Oxford-street, is advertising—chiefly in Irish papers, I believe—for ladies desirous of doing needlework in their own homes. To those who respond, he sends a piece of embroidery to be done as a sample and returned. On receiving the sample he announces that the work will "suit him nicely," and explains his method of doing business, the first step in which is the remittance to him of a postal order for £1 as a deposit. A lady at Dundalk asks me whether I would recommend this as an investment. No, I would not. And, speaking generally, I would never recommend any one to deposit cash in the hands of strangers in expectation of benefits to follow, more especially when the strangers are philanthropists of the class who seek to benefit their fellow-creatures through the medium of newspaper advertisements.

Scarcely less dangerous than those who advertise in this way are the unfortunate beings who advertise for philanthropists who will assist them in their distress. Here is one. Needless to state, she makes known her wants through the hospitable columns of the Evening Standard:—

A Young Orphan (gentle birth), left penniless, struggling hard to earn livelihood, is ordered to wear Sealskin Jacket (delicate lungs), being often seriously ill through cold. Will any one kindly give her a tolerably long bust, 33½; waist, 22½; sleeves, inside seam, 19 inches; also mackintosh, flannel dressing gown, jacket. Pity entreated. Satisfactory references.—Charity, &c.

There is something exceptionally pathetic about a penniless orphan (of gentle birth), who can only be saved from an early grave by a sealskin jacket. Even an imitation sealskin would, apparently, be of no avail. I wonder how many sealskin jackets the poor thing has got by this time, and how many mackintoshes, and flannel dressing-gowns. I wonder, too, whether Providence, in removing the poor child's parents, has mercifully left her an uncle.

I have to thank "C. H." for sending me the card of a tradesman in Ebury-street who appeared to be offering some very objectionable hints to domestic servants. I have communicated with the tradesman in question. He has explained to me the motive which led him to put what he did on his card, and he entirely repudiates the intention which it seemed to bear. As he promised to issue no more cards in this shape, it is unnecessary to say more on the matter.

The following advertisement has been for some time past appearing at short intervals in the Daily Telegraph:—

One Pound a Week for Life for £100.—Address Moneta, Box 4,430, Postal Department, Daily Telegraph, Fleet-street.

There is an element of novelty, not indeed about this advertisement, but about the party from whom it emanates. He is, or professes to be, the "Consul at Carlisle for the Republic of Liberia." The Consulship is not, I should imagine, a very fat thing in itself, but an ingenious diplomatist may make something out of it, as the following epistle will show. The letter was written to a lady who had answered the advertisement, describing herself as a spinster of limited means. It is written on ordinary note-paper. The Liberian Government does not apparently allow its representative at Carlisle a supply of official stationery; but an imposing shield, adorned with three stags' heads—the arms, I presume, of Liberia—is emblazoned on the paper with a rubber stamp or some similar contrivance:—

Liberian Consulate, Carlisle,
October 26, 1893.
"Moneta."

DEAR MADAM,—Since my position as a Consul enables me to obtain information about the political movements of Foreign Governments before they become known to the public, and as those movements very largely affect the Stock Exchanges, I know in advance when particular stocks are likely to rise or fall, and consequently can buy or sell foreign bonds at a great advantage.

In addition to this, I employ the late Mr. Reuben de Rothschild's system of investing and re-investing in Government stock, which by itself, without any private information, yields very large profits, and is quite free from risk.

By these two means, I am able to make more than 100 per cent. in the course of a year, and, if you are inclined to deposit £100 with me, I will pay you £52 per annum, viz., £13 every three months, on condition that you consent to my retaining the balance of the profits, amounting to £60 or £70.

At the end of the first year, I will either continue the investment for you, or return your £100 and explain to you how to work the Rothschild system yourself, whichever you like.

The system is easy to understand, although very difficult to find out. It yields about 60 per cent. per annum.—I remain, dear Madam, yours faithfully,

T. P. W. MEYLER-WARLOW, M.A., LL.D.,
Consul at Carlisle for the Republic of Liberia.

P.S.—Ample security given.

Instead of closing at once with this magnificent offer, the lady to whom it was made forwarded the letter to TRUTH. In a few days she heard from the Liberian Consul again:—

Liberian Consulate, Carlisle, November 3, 1893.

DEAR MADAM,—I should be glad to know if you have arrived at any decision respecting the subject of our recent correspondence.

My mode of operation is not a speculative method, but regular investment and re-investment. Loss is absolutely impossible; the money will be perfectly safe; and you will find £52 a year from £100, or £104 a year from £200, an advantageous addition to your income.—I remain, dear Madam, yours faithfully,

T. P. W. MEYLER-WARLOW, Consul.

I have not myself the advantage of being acquainted with the late Mr. Reuben Rothschild's system, but if it enables £100 to grow into £200 in one year it is strange that the principle of it has not become better known. It is also odd that a gentleman possessing this talisman should be reduced to borrowing money at 52 per cent. in order to work the system; nor is it altogether clear why foreign Governments, when about to embark in "political movements" affecting the price of their stock, should previously confide their intentions to the representative of the Liberian Republic in the city of Carlisle. In short, there is every reason to regard the letter of Mr. T. P. W. Meyler-Warlow as a pack of lies designed to lead ignorant and foolish people into handing over their cash to him. I shall feel much obliged to any of my readers in Carlisle who will give me further information about this individual.

What right have railway Companies to charge passengers for excess luggage? This question, so far as the Great Western Company are concerned, has been raised by Mr. A. H. Hastie, of 65, Lincoln's Inn-fields, and, so far as matters have gone at present, it looks as if the Company were totally unable to give the question a satisfactory answer. In August last Mr. Hastie, with his family and servants, went to Paddington Station to travel to Wales. The luggage of the party merely included personal necessaries, and did not exceed what in previous years had been conveyed free; but a demand of £3. 15s. was made for excess luggage. Mr. Hastie declined to pay, and the Company's servants declined to forward the luggage. Mr. Hastie warned them that the consequences might be serious, and they thought better of it and sent the luggage; but at its destination the station-master, under instructions from Paddington, refused to give it up until the charge for excess, now reduced to £2. 10s., was paid. Mr. Hastie threatened to remove the luggage by force, and it was then surrendered. The Company and their solicitors next wrote to him demanding the £2. 10s., but on his asking for a reference to the sections of the Act under which the payment was claimed, the demand was dropped, and he heard no more of the matter.

Two months later a second incident of the same kind occurred with an even more pronounced result. Mr. Hastie's wife and maid returned to London, and their luggage was detained at Paddington, on their refusing to pay a charge of 6s. 6d. for excess. Mr. Hastie and some other servants came up the following day, and their luggage was also detained. Mr. Hastie then wrote, and sent by hand, a letter stating that if the luggage was not at once given up he should issue a writ to recover it. The Company replied that it would be at his disposal at Paddington Station next morning. Mr. Hastie replied that he would accept nothing less than delivery of the luggage at his house, and the Company then delivered it "without prejudice." Here, again, they have allowed the matter to drop.

Thus on three occasions this Company have made a claim, attempted to enforce it by detaining goods, and abandoned it without obtaining satisfaction, the second time under threat of legal proceedings. Railway Companies are not given to foregoing their legal rights in any case, and, least of all, where substantial sums depend upon the result. The inference would seem to be that the Great Western have been making deliberately an illegal claim, and attempting to enforce it by an illegal seizure of passengers' property—a proceeding worthy of a Corporation of brigands. I recommend all passengers on whom similar attempts at blackmail are practised to meet them with the same firmness which Mr. Hastie has shown; and it is to be hoped that the attention thus drawn to the matter will lead some one to investigate the rights of other Companies to make similar charges.

Here is an opening for musicians of a serious turn at Glasgow. "Fully saved" refers, I suppose, to the candidate's spiritual, not his musicial, qualifications, but it is a puzzling expression. Can a soul be partially saved or fully saved, just as an earthly tenement can be "partially insured" or "fully insured"? Is it not incongruous, too, to speak of a soul as being "on fire" after it has been "fully saved"?—

> Bandmaster wanted (voluntary), capable and willing to lead mission brass band consecrated to the work of God in Glasgow; must be fully saved and on fire for souls.—Address 1,685, Citizen Office.

Time was when mothers chose books for their daughters' reading; but the following extract from a review of a novel in the Queen seems to show that we have changed all that:—

> The tale is a nicely-told one, and no girl who has the responsibility of making out suitable library lists for her mother's reading need feel any hesitation about including "——" amongst the novels.

In view of the recent references in TRUTH to the coolie question in Trinidad, a copy has been sent to me of the protest of Mr. Guppy, a Member of the Legislative Council, against the recent decision of the Council fixing the annual importation of coolies for the next three years at 1,500. In this protest I find the fullest confirmation of the views which I have already expressed on the authority of residents in the island. I regret that space prevents my following Mr. Guppy in detail, but here are one or two suggestive extracts:—

> The coolie submits to an amount of degradation and ill-treatment from a bad master which no other immigrant will endure; but I am very far from charging all planters with voluntarily degrading him. On many plantations he is fairly well treated. On many plantations, also, there is no complaint of want of labourers: free labourers flock where they are fairly treated. But the housing of labourers in barracks, where neither privacy nor deceney is possible, is one of the chief causes of driving away the better class of negro immigrants and also the coolies who have completed their five years of forced labour. No decent married labourers could endure a barrack life. The cheap barrack was introduced for the indentured coolie, none existed even in the time of slavery before the present system of forced labour became law, and it has degraded and contaminated all the labouring population of the island who have been exposed to its influences; and will continue its mischievous effects so long as the system lasts . . . .
>
> Competition by the planter who requires labour is absolutely forbidden by the laws in force.
>
> One planter may be able, by having better machinery, better implements of husbandry, or a better knowledge of farming and more skill and industry, to make larger profits from his acreage than another who works on antiquated or exploded principles and with inefficient plant and machinery; but he is not allowed, by offering higher wages or more civilised treatment to the immigrant, to obtain an allotment of a larger number than his incompetent neighbour, who is perhaps trying, by means which I will not here mention, to economise out of the earnings of his labourers enough to maintain an undeserved position. I protest against this gross injustice. In every civilised country, in every free country, the free competition of the employers of labour for that labour is the right of the labourer. The combination of the planters of Trinidad has forced upon the Legislature laws antagonistic to that freedom. By the effects of these laws the natural immigration of worthy, steady, and industrious labourers is placed at a disadvantage; and scarce any but the most worth-

In preparation for the cold season, ladies and gentlemen should visit Ulster House, Conduit-st., W., where their orders for every kind of garment will have prompt and careful attention.

"IZAL."—The new non-poisonous Disinfectant. The strongest and safest the world has ever known. Of all Chemists, in large bottles, at 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., and gallon tins, 10s.

less, lazy, and inefficient, ready to supply their wants by theft when their wages are insufficient to support them, remain in the Island. Clamour against this class is rising high, and the planters are calling for legislation against it, and very properly; but no laws will cause a natural immigration of good and honest labourers so long as the present combination against the freedom of competition is permitted to exist as the law of the land. . . . .

I feel assured that if one-half of the two millions sterling which we have spent on importing forced labour had been expended judiciously on roads and railways, and had our waste lands been made more available as the rewards of industrious steady labour, we should have had free labour of good quality more than sufficient for our needs. . . . .

Another question of Trinidad politics that has lately been brought under my notice is that of the prohibitive law against the cultivation and importation of gunjah or Indian hemp. This law is interesting in view of the opium agitation in this hemisphere. The chief feature of it is that gunjah can only be cultivated under a licence at a duty of £100 per acre. The law was passed ostensibly for the benefit of the East Indian coolies, who were supposed to injure themselves with gunjah; but all the probabilities of the situation point to the inference that the party whose benefit was really in view was the planter, who employs the coolie, and whose influence carried the law. I am told by a gentleman, who ought to know, that the chief effect of the law hitherto has been the development of a profitable contraband trade in gunjah; but although the drug was alleged to stimulate insanity, the insanity statistics show no improvement since the law was passed. This is not surprising, for I understand that statistics show that nine cases of insanity are produced by drink to one produced by gunjah. The anxiety of Britons to suppress the intoxicants favoured by other races, while leaving alcohol untouched—and even selling it to those races which can be educated up to the British taste for it—is one of the most ludicrous traits of our national character.

The Royal Niger Company includes in its other beneficent work that of systematically poisoning the natives under its jurisdiction with the vile spirits specially manufactured for this purpose. The steamer Croft, belonging to the Company, has just been loaded for the Niger with 150,000 gallons of spirits, including 40,000 cases of gin. The wholesale price of this filthy stuff averages, I am told, less than 6d. per gallon. As Lord Aberdare, the Chairman of the Company, is a firm supporter of the temperance movement, he is presumably ignorant of this traffic. It affords me much pleasure to enlighten him. The worst horrors resulting from drink in this country are insignificant beside the effects of the unadulterated poison with which European civilisation does its work in Africa.

An Anarchist who really believes that either he or any one else is likely to be benefited by throwing bombs indiscriminately in a crowd is obviously a lunatic at large. But when he preaches or practises this scheme for regenerating humanity he can hardly plead lunacy as his excuse, for his mental condition is not of such a character that it relieves him from responsibility for his words or actions. Last week a bomb was thrown amongst an audience in a theatre at Barcelona, and on Saturday, at a meeting of Anarchists at Grafton Hall, near Fitzroy-square, Mr. H. B. Samuels, amid the rapturous cheers of his brother Anarchists, declared that their comrade in Barcelona had done good work. Anarchy in London, continued Mr. Samuels, had come to stay. This man Samuels, like most of those who air such monstrous sentiments at public meetings, is not probably himself a dangerous man, for in these matters the man of words is not the man of action. Nevertheless, I should be by no means sorry were he lodged in prison, for the immunity of contempt in such cases is apt to lead from words to action. One suggests, another acts on the suggestion. Doctrines such as these ought no more to be permitted to be publicly expressed with impunity than an appeal to all to turn Thugs.

Nothing is easier than to manufacture dynamite, and it is not difficult to enclose it in some sort of tin with nipples attached on which percussion caps are placed. But then comes the real difficulty. It is to throw it. This would not be difficult were it not that the Anarchist, who has so little regard for the lives of others, has a very strong regard for his own. The man is, in almost every case, an arrant coward. Society is saved from Anarchists by their dread of being caught in their murderous campaign against Society. This is why I would never condone this offence. Once let these men get it into their heads that, if caught and condemned, their crime will be condoned, and we should have a dynamite outrage every week. The will to do it is there; the fear of something happening to them after doing it, bids them pause and due deliberation make.

I really believe that few aid in filling the National Exchequer more than I do, owing to the letters that I receive. On Mr. Rhodes and his "African Filibustering Company, Unlimited," the name of these letters is legion. Some, of course, are the reverse of complimentary, but far the greater number are couched in such terms as lead me to the conclusion that there is a very strong opinion throughout the country, that these African massacres by Company proxy have awakened the national conscience. Some of the letters are curious. A gentleman, for instance, dating from Edinburgh, asks me, why in my denunciations of African filibustering, I have no word against it in Linlithgow? Another sends me a cutting from the Scotsman. It contains a letter from some correspondent, in which he says that my "dislike to Mr. Rhodes and his pioneers may conceivably have something of the personal element in it. The Netherlands

"VERREY'S" RESTAURANT, Regent-street, corner of Hanover-street. The oldest and most select French Restaurant in London. Ladies' luncheons at moderate prices a specialty. Dinners à la carte.

SELF GREY LAMB'S WOOL UNDERCLOTHING. English manufacture. Will not shrink and can be supplied in several substances. Price lists sent.—SAMPSON & Co., 268, 270, Oxford-street, W.

South African Company was financed, and possibly is, by Messrs. Labouchere, Oyens, & Co., financial agents. That Company was defeated through the superior ability of the British South Africa Company in some of its financial schemes. If the British South African Company comes to grief, the other Company referred to sails in." Whether such a Company or such a firm exists, I do not know. All that I can say is, that I never heard of either.

Strange beings are Stock Exchange speculators and Company mongers. I see it stated that on the news being received of Mr. Rhodes's latest battue of Matabele, many hastened to send him congratulatory telegrams. Mr. Rhodes himself, I need not say, kept well in the rear of his warriors, for his own life is far too valuable to his financial friends to be risked where there is the slightest danger. But the battue had strengthened the shares of his Company. Hence the congratulatory telegrams. One would have supposed that even the most hardened money-grubber would, have paused before sending a telegram of congratulation over the massacre of thousands of brave men, even though he might have made money by it. No doubt, if only the Rhodean Army could kill the last of the Matabele, or hold him in chains, condemned to work in a Rhodean mine, Company sharks in London who are pecuniarily concerned in the undertakings of this "patriot" would suggest that Parliament (they do not spend their own money) should vote funds for erecting his brazen statue in some public place, and would insist, as did Nebuchadnezzar, that all should bow down before it, or, like those worthy citizens, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, should take their chance in a fiery furnace.

Mr. McLaren's amendment to the Employers' Liability Bill was lost, and all is perhaps for the best in the best of worlds. I never, however, understood the opposition of the Trades Unions to it. There is no question that the employés of the London and North-Western Railroad wished to stand by the present arrangement in regard to insurance, for the plain reason that they were greater gainers by it than by coming under the operation of the Employers' Liability Bill. They numbered above 60,000, and on a recent ballot they voted for the amendment to the Bill in the proportion of ninety-four to six. It was said that the effect of the amendment being carried would be to render it impossible for the men to strike in the event of a dispute with the Company without losing their own contributions to the insurance fund. On this point I made careful inquiry, for I am heart and soul with Trades Unionism. I find that, whether the amendment passed or not, their power to strike without personal monetary loss would be precisely the same. Their contributions to the fund are paid weekly—that is to say, for a certain weekly payment they insure during the week against accidents. The entire transaction as regards them and as regards the fund begins with the week and ends with the week. Evidently, therefore, they would not lose any of the money that they had subscribed by striking at the end of any week. This, so far as I could gather from the arguments of Mr. Asquith and others against the amendment, was not fully understood.

Mr. Asquith's speech on the debate did not strike me as a very convincing one. He is no doubt clever, but there is a good deal too much of the sic volo sic jubeo about him. Whether he does the right thing or the wrong thing, he is too fond of defending it in a sort of "the world is divided into two categories, those who think me wise and therefore are wise, and those who do not agree with me and are therefore fools," way. It is the hand of iron in the glove of iron, and this is apt to put men's backs up. He was for his Bill mainly because it was his Bill, and therefore perfect.

Observe his arguments: The men of the London and North-Western Railway may have voted almost unanimously for the amendment, but as he did not agree with them, it was evident that there must have been something wrong in the ballot. The Company was prepared to contribute £23,000 to the accident fund, although the Bill itself could not involve them in this expenditure; therefore the Company must be actuated by some dark and wicked design. By paying a lump sum, no matter what accidents might happen, the Company would be led to neglect the safety of the men, although the men themselves were satisfied that they were safe; and it is to be presumed that they had no desire either to be killed or maimed. The division of the fund between compensation for injury or death was unfair; injuries were compensated at too high a figure, deaths at too low a figure; if it was true that the men themselves had insisted on this, they would have taken a different view had they been privileged to consult with him. They were contracting, he again and again said, themselves out of the possibility of striking, although foolish persons, who were in the habit of believing that two and two make four, showed again and again that they did not do this. They must be in error because he said that they were, and further proof was not needed.

Now there was, I admit, much to be said for and against making exceptions to a general law. But it struck me that Mr. Asquith's objection in this particular case was that he had made the law, and that any one who wished to make an exception ought to be destroyed, like the Israelites who did not accept the Ten Commandments when Moses brought them down from Mount Sinai. I make these observations in good part, for I am somewhat of an admirer of Mr. Asquith, and I should be sorry to see him wreck a brilliant future by a mania for posing as a man of iron.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Pure & wholesome, assists digestion.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Guaranteed to be free from alum.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. It has the largest sale in the world.

There is no doubt that the supporters of the Government in the House of Commons are getting uneasy. Under ordinary circumstances, if the Lords had thrown out a Liberal Bill giving effect to the policy for which the Party had been fighting during the six previous years, there would have been a dissolution, when the country would have been appealed to on the programme of the Party, inclusive of the rejected Bill, and plus the addition that the House of Lords must be shorn of its powers to create the necessity of a dissolution. Why was this not done? There is no use blinking the fact. Because the bold course of bringing the abolition of the House of Lords before the country did not commend itself to our leaders; and because without this there was—to put it mildly—a possibility of our appeal to the electorates not proving successful. It is the old story—the Moderates on our side had their way. As we could only fight with blank cartridge, we thought it well to put off the fight.

This being so, I should have said that the right tactical course to pursue would have been to put in the forefront the Bills making the appeal to the country a real one — I mean a Registration Bill and a One-Man One-Vote Bill—and, having passed them, to have dissolved. The Bills would unquestionably be of good electoral service to us, and, as the principles to which they would give legislative effect contain a portion of a programme, we were justified in passing them before our appeal to the constituencies. Here again other counsels prevailed. No one is more in favour of Parish Councils or of the Employers' Liability Bill than I am. But I would first have made sure of being able to bring all my forces into the field for the battle, which will decide whether the entire Liberal programme or the entire Tory programme is to finally win.

As it is, we are engaged in trying to pass the Parish Councils and the Employers' Liability Bills. By all means, therefore, let us pass them. But what next? I say that if our electoral Bills are not passed the odds are that we shall lose the next General Election; for by the present electoral system the classes have an unfair share of voting power. I say, moreover, that unless we go to the country on the ground that when the country has decided for the Liberal programme, the defeated Party must not be allowed to reduce the voters to impotence by the use of their permanent majority in the Lords, our success, even if the electoral Bills have passed, is by no means certain.

The tendency of all Governments is to rest and be thankful, just as the tendency of limpets is to stick to the rock on which they are anchored. This tendency to thankfulness leads them to avoid an appeal to the constituencies so long as they have a majority in the existing House of Commons. It has however, this disadvantage. It subordinates the great issue between the Tory and the Liberal scheme of government to minor issues. Every Government has in its composition a certain amount of "let us eat, drink, and be merry, provided that to-day we do not die." This has time and again wrecked both Liberal and Tory Governments at a General Election. For my part, with six years of Tory rule staring us in the face, everything, I hold, should yield to the necessity of hindering this horrible possibility. Last year we had a majority. This year we do not believe that we have it. Our motion has been crab-like. We have gone backwards. And no one will ever persuade me that this shows that our tactics have been good, if our aim is, as it ought to be, to go forward. We are like the commanders who announce that they have won a victory, but have made a strategical movement to the rear. I want a clear, definite plan of action, and a resolute determination to fight on this plan.

My plan for next session—assuming that the bold scheme of creating Peers and thus neutralising the House of Lords be not adopted—would be this:—Registration Bill, One-Man One-Vote Bill, a resolution declaring that the House of Lords must be abolished, a resolution in favour of all and any of the items of the Newcastle Programme, a resolution in favour of returning officers' costs of election being thrown on the public, a resolution in favour of Local Option, a resolution in favour of Welsh Disestablishment, resolutions pledging ourselves to the views entertained by the majority of working men, a provision in the Budget for payment of Members, and a Budget altering the incidence of taxation so that rich men should pay their full share of taxation, and poor men not more than their full share. Then there should be a dissolution asking the country to give us a good working majority pledged to give legislative effect to all these reforms. I regard my leaders as lions, but whilst these noble quadrupeds are marching to what looks like defeat, roaring vehemently as they march, the warning bray even of a donkey may have its uses.

One thing is certain, we cannot carry on beyond another Session without a dissolution, for the plain reason that the Irish will not agree to our doing so, and they hold the keys of time. Let us then make hay during that Session, and devote ourselves during it, like John the Baptists, to paving the way to a Parliament in which we can do what seems best to us in the interests of progress and sound government. If we live, we shall at least have the consolation that we have done our best not to lose.

OVALINE TOILET SOAP, made with Yolk of Egg, is a wonderful discovery for the skin and hair. As a Shaving Soap it has no equal. Price, 8d. per tablet, 2s. per box.—52, King-st., Regent-st., London.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 8 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

The proposal of the Government to bring together the employers and employed connected with the coal industry under the chairmanship of a conciliator is sound, and the only wonder is why it was not adopted long ago. The selection of Lord Rosebery as the conciliator — or, as Prince Bismarck once put it when he occupied a similar position in the world of politics, as the "honest broker" — is also sound. He has experience of labour questions and of getting men of divergent opinions to act together owing to his having been Chairman of the County Council, and he is shrewd. The fact of his being a Peer will give him weight with the coal-owners, who are "mostly snobs," whilst, on the other hand, I do not think that he will be inclined to advocate unfair terms for the men.

If I might venture to make a suggestion to both sides, it is not to waste time in nagging about the causes of the present dead-lock. Speeches as to what ought to be a fair wage, what the wage was, and what it is, can wait. A temporary arrangement is needed, under which the men employed underground will have a fair wage whilst all these matters are being definitely settled to the satisfaction of all. Men and their families are starving; coal-owners are cutting off their noses because they do not like the men's faces; all industries that require coal are suffering, and winter is setting in. The coal on hand is exhausted, there can be no question of an over-production during the next three months. During that time there is work for all, a fair wage for the men, and a profit for the employers, even though coal may not maintain its present abnormal price. The owners should offer a living wage for all working underground—the men should accept it. This wage should be a fair wage, irrespective of sliding scales, selling price, &c. The position is like that of two States that have been fighting and want a suspension of arms, during which negotiations for a permanent peace can progress.

SCRUTATOR.

"BALDWIN, 'BORDERLAND,' AND BALDERDASH."

SEVERAL interesting communications have reached me during the week with reference to the article under the above heading in the last issue of TRUTH, but I am compelled for the moment to put off dealing with them. Late on Monday I received another lengthy epistle from Mr. Baldwin. In this he enclosed a copy of a letter which he has addressed to the clergyman who wrote the Borderland "Report," and what purports to be a copy of that gentleman's reply. Whether it is the whole of this reply or only an extract from it I do not know; but it appears to me to be an extract only, and as that point must be cleared up before the effect of what the clergyman has really said can be judged, I shall not publish the letter until that point is cleared up. But this is not all. On Monday morning I received a short epistle from the reverend gentleman himself, leading me to expect that a longer communication from him intended for publication in TRUTH was on its way.

He said that he was desirous of defending himself, and asked me to reserve him a sufficient space to enable him to make a full reply; but he had taken the precaution of first submitting it to Baldwin, in order that that gentleman might corroborate it. Just, however, as I am going to press on Tuesday morning I receive a telegram from his reverence to say that he cannot forward his communication, and requesting me not to "publish or refer to" his "previous absolutely private confidential letter." I really must decline to be muzzled in this way. This is a matter of public interest, and the public is entitled to know exactly how it stands. It is to me an utterly incomprehensible thing that a clergyman should write to me on one day on a matter of this nature, which has been for three weeks before the readers of TRUTH, and on the next day telegraph to forbid me to refer to the fact of my having had a letter from him. I cannot recognise that he has any right to give me such orders. I have no reason to conceal the fact that he has written, and I am at a loss to understand why he should wish to conceal it. But the truth evidently is that there is some "occult phenomenon" in the background which it behoves this reverend gentleman to clear up, and I hope he will lose no time in doing so. The issue raised by the last article in TRUTH is a perfectly simple one. Either the account of the séance and of Baldwin's statements given in Borderland is true or it is false. Either the "reporter" has misrepresented matters to the public, or Baldwin misrepresented matters to the "reporter." Which is it? I hope I shall be in a position to say definitely by next week.

I may as well say at once, however, in answer to several of my readers who are thirsting for further revelations, that I really cannot depart from the attitude which I took up last week in reference to Mrs. Baldwin's clairvoyance. One of those who press me to explain how this part of the business is done talks about "keeping faith" with my readers. There is no question of keeping faith about it. When Baldwin and his wife were represented in Borderland as being possessed of mysterious and semi-miraculous powers, I said that I would explain precisely how their tricks were worked. As regards Baldwin, I did this. As regards Mrs. Baldwin, before the explanation could be given, the Professor wrote the letter published last week, in which he contended that his entertainment had been misrepresented in Borderland, and showed by the evidence of his programmes and advertisements that he and his wife had never posed as anything but "illusionists." This removed the only reason which I could have for explaining the tricks. As long as Baldwin, or any other man, is doing an honest business as a conjurer it is no affair of mine to explain his modus operandi. On the contrary, it would be an unjustifiable attempt to injure his business. If people are so foolish as to persist, in spite of every disclaimer on the conjurer's part, that there is something miraculous or "occult" about the performance, they must be left to their fate. I would ask those who have written to me on the subject to kindly reconsider the matter from this point of view, and I think that they will see why I cannot oblige them.

ULSTERS, OVERCOATS, and CAPES are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

THE UNSPEAKABLE QUACK.

The following is the letter from Dr. Arthur Welsford, which I promised to lay before my readers this week:—

6, Cambridge-terrace, Dover,
November 4, 1893.

SIR,—With reference to your remarks upon the attitude of the medical profession towards quackery, may I point out that you seem to completely misunderstand their position. No one can justly contend that there is anything morally wrong in the sale of proprietary medicines providing that no false statements are made with regard to them. So long as there is a demand for such things, so long will there be a supply. No medical man, however, ought to have anything to do with this trade, as there is a wise regulation which provides that no member of the medical profession shall exploit for his own advantage any method of treating disease he may find useful, but he must share with his brother practitioners any special knowledge he may possess for the benefit of the community. Therefore, as far as we ourselves are concerned, we regard a medical man who traffics in secret systems with not only strong disapproval, but also grave suspicion, inasmuch as experience has shown that it is to the discoverer's own advantage to publish his discoveries, if genuine.

With respect to proprietary articles, I think myself that the intending purchaser would act more wisely if he bought from a chemist the pills, &c., of the British Pharmacopœia, the composition of which is known, instead of experimenting upon himself with pills of unknown and uncertain constitution. If, however, he prefers to adopt the latter course of action, no one can blame the chemist for selling him what he wants.

If you had completed the sentence you quoted out of my letter to the Pall Mall Gazette, it would have been more clear to your readers that I was attacking in that letter not this trade but fraudulent quackery. I maintain that when a vendor makes false statements of the grossest character regarding his wares, he lays himself open to the charge of attempting to obtain money under false pretences. I maintain that under high-sounding titles various preparations of the common drug aloes are sold at prices varying from 1s. 1½d. to 22s.; that to obtain this money the various proprietors make assertions regarding their preparations which are absolutely untrue, and that on the strength of these statements poor and rich spend their money on what from its very nature must be a fraud. The properties of aloes are well known, and for certain purposes the drug is most valuable. It cannot, however, possibly cure "consumption, paralysis, fevers, locomotor ataxy, old age," as one proprietor of an aloes preparation tells the public. Nor is another telling the truth when he says his pill "may be given with perfect safety to an infant, or to the aged and infirm; it gives tone to the muscles, strengthens the eyesight, is suited to females of all ages, and will cure every class of disorders that afflict all ages and both sexes, from youth to old age." When one man tells us there is only one real disease, viz., indigestion, and that the cure for it is his mixture, he is inventing, and the claim of another that his aloes mixture will cure "rheumatism and all sorts of complaints and other chronic diseases" is ridiculous. All assert that the active ingredient in their preparations, which is found upon analysis to be aloes, is either a new remedy just discovered in a remote and inaccessible part of the globe, or a marvellous combination discovered after years of patient research. To show you to what lengths these men will go I may point out that one enterprising proprietor publishes a testimonial which he has invented himself and fathers it upon an eminent physician after his death, when he could no longer defend himself. This may be very smart business, but I fail to see that it is honest trading. There is never anything either new or original about these preparations, and they are not "patent" in any sense of the word. One of the most impudent of the quacks is Mattei, who in his line is a genius. He sells distilled water at 2s. the fluid ounce as a cure for cancer. How many women, do you think, have been induced by his lying assertions that cancer invariably returns after operation, and that it is in the blood, to entrust their lives to his treatment, till the golden moments have slipped by when the cancerous tumour might have been removed with safety. Should we, as men possessing special knowledge, do our duty if we refrained from warning such people of the results of their folly? I am not dealing with a question of medical ethics or of advertising, but with a system of swindling which the law permits to go on, and which is a playing with the lives of the ignorant victims. In the face of the recent exposures can any one pretend that the public are properly protected against medical charlatanry and knavery? I enclose for your perusal a series of papers dealing with patent medicines which have lately appeared in Hygiene. You will find that these papers bear me out in all I have said. Finally, I think I have made out my case that the law requires revision on these points, and as you have criticised my remarks on the subject in your journal, I shall feel greatly obliged if you will be good enough to publish my reply.—I am, sir, your obedient servant,

ARTHUR WELSFORD, M.D., F.R.C.S.

P.S.—I beg to draw your attention to pages 5, 25, 36, 83, 93, 113, 124, 156, 181, 213, 296 of the enclosed, which deal with Matteism and the alleged testimonial of Dr. Alfred Swaine Taylor.

I am sorry to say that I cannot agree with Dr. Welsford when he claims to have made out his case. What is his case? If I understand it correctly, it is that a revision of the law is necessary in order to check fraudulent misrepresentation by advertising quacks. "I maintain," he says, "that when a vendor makes false statements of the grossest character regarding his wares, he lays himself open to the charge of attempting to obtain money under false pretences." Well, if he does, is not the law already competent to deal with those who lay themselves open to a charge of this kind? The doctor first asserts that certain persons commit a crime already well-known to the law, and then asks that the law shall be amended in order to make such conduct criminal. Later on he says "I am not dealing with a question of medical ethics or of advertising, but with a system of swindling which the law permits to go on. . . . . In the face of the recent exposures can any one pretend that the public are properly protected," &c., &c. "The recent exposures" are, of course, the allegations against Mr. Harness; and considering that Mr. Harness is at present under remand on, I believe, four charges of fraud, I should have thought that the case, so far as it has gone, points to a conclusion precisely opposite to that here drawn from it. At any rate, it is not accurate to say that the law permits swindling to go on. The law is strong enough for all practical purposes; what is wanting is a prosecutor. Had Dr. Welsford confined himself to pointing out this, he could easily have proved his case, though he would only have been repeating what has been again and again said in TRUTH. It rarely happens that I denounce a swindler in these columns without having to lament that he is permitted to continue his evil courses with impunity, because it is nobody's business to set the criminal law in motion against him. But in this respect there is no difference whatever between the swindler that Dr. Welsford has his eye upon, who defrauds by means of a bogus medicine, and the numerous swindlers that I from time to time have my eye upon, who defraud by various other resources of civilisation. Why then cannot Mr. Welsford and his brother medicos, who feel so strongly on this point, take the law into their own hands? The medical profession is well-organised, wealthy, and powerful. Nothing would be simpler than for it to prosecute every quack who "lays himself open to the charge of attempting to obtain money under false pretences." In so doing, the profession would be fighting its own battle equally with that of the public. Why then, instead of using the law which exists, do doctors cry out that "the law requires revision?"

To my mind, there is no doubt about the answer. What the doctors want is something more than to stop the obtaining of money by false pretences. They want restrictions on advertisements of drugs which no one has yet dreamed of applying to advertisements of any other article. Although Dr. Welsford disclaims the intention of raising any question "of medical ethics or advertising," with all respect to him, his letter does raise such questions, more especially when read with the articles in Hygiene, which he has kindly sent for my edification. In one or two cases, including one referred to in Dr. Welsford's letter, these articles do, I think, show what would be regarded in law as a "false and fraudulent pretence;" but for the most part the articles (and there are about a dozen of them) are devoted to showing that various much advertised remedies are really very simple concoctions, which, in the opinion of medical experts, cannot possibly possess all the virtues claimed for them. That is likely enough, but does it amount to fraud? Not as the law stands. Are we then to alter the law so as to make it criminal to claim for goods sold virtues which they do not possess? That is what Dr. Welsford's argument, read with the Hygiene articles, really amounts to. There may be something to be said in favour of such a step; but, before we take it, let us see precisely where we are going. If such a law is to be passed it cannot be limited to the vendors of drugs. It must apply equally to all tradesmen. Of this, Dr. Welsford seems to be entirely unconscious. He quotes the advertisement of an aloes pill which is alleged to cure "consumption, paralysis, fevers, locomotor-ataxy, old age," and he says, with every appearance of reason, that this must be untrue. But he might quote equally untrue statements which are freely advertised in regard to the virtues of soups, teas, and every article the proprietors of which compete with another in sounding their own praises. If one of these tradesmen is to go to gaol, all must, and if you once begin imprisoning them, I don't know where you will stop; for there is hardly a shop in England in which untruths are not told whenever they are likely to influence customers; and an untruth is an untruth whether it is posted on a wall or uttered across a counter. That doctors should regard the lies of medicine vendors as peculiarly odious and mischievous is very natural, though a trifle absurd. They will, however, find it difficult to convince those who are not doctors that there is any essential difference between a mendacious puff of a pill and a mendacious puff of a pickle.

The medical profession has no monopoly of quackery. In every business and every profession there are individuals, who trade upon the ignorance and credulity of their fellow-creatures, or who regard notoriety as a shorter and easier road to success than industry and merit. There are quack parsons, quack authors and journalists, quack artists, quack advocates, quack politicians, just as there are quack doctors and quack druggists. As long as ignorance and credulity prevail, and the public has a keener appreciation of notoriety than of merit, so long quackery will flourish. As well invoke Parliament to suppress the patent pill-man as to suppress the pulpit windbag, the cheap tailor, the sham poet, the shoddy furniture-dealer. It may be true that in the field of medicine the opening for imposture is wider, and the mischief done by pretentious incompetence more immediately apparent than in any other direction in which quackery flourishes. Men are more ignorant of their own interior economy, and of the effects of drugs upon everyday ailments, than of any other practical affair in life. The more ignorant they are, the more ready they are to look on a doctor as a being possessed of occult powers, and to venerate a medicine bottle with a species of fetish worship. The medicine-man fills in the modern world the position formerly held by the priest and the magician. But is the vendor of patent remedies the only man who profits by this state of things? Does the regular practitioner never trade upon the ignorance or credulity of his patients? Are there no prosperous physicians who derive comfortable annuities from physicking hypochondriacal old men, or fooling nervous old women? Is it an unknown thing for a general practitioner to work miracles with bread pills or syrup and water? It is highly interesting to read in Hygiene the ingredients of all the most highly advertised quack medicines; but in my desire for knowledge I should like to follow this up with an analysis of a few of the good old doctors' stuffs with which I have been familiar since my infancy. From the evidence of my nose and my tongue I should expect to find that about half a dozen well-known drugs recur in all of them with about as much regularity as the ingredients in the quack pills and potions. Aloes, we are told on the highest scientific authority, cannot cure this, that, and the other ills of the flesh. Possibly not. But in my experience even the despised aloe has done considerably more than the highest scientific authority could do. A lady of my acquaintance was for many months a martyr to a distressing skin complaint. It not only baffled her ordinary adviser, but half a dozen others whom she tried at different times and places, including two physicians of the highest eminence. At last in despair she tried a box of the pills which awake the indignation and contempt of the regular practitioner; I must not mention the name, or it will be said that I am in the pay of the vendor. Before she had finished a second box she was cured—and permanently. "Aloes and ginger mixed up with soap!" says the Editor of Hygiene with noble scorn. Well, the fact remains that aloes and ginger mixed up with soap did for this lady at a price of 2s. 3d. what some of the leading lights of the medical profession had been unable to effect in a year and a half; and what, mind you, they had pocketed among them probably fifty or a hundred guineas for not doing. Nor do I think that Dr. Welsford could cite a case in which aloes, ginger, and soap have ever harmed any human being who has tried them. So much for aloes.

The truth is that in no profession is humbug more rampant than in the medical profession. In no profession (with the possible exception of journalism) are ignorance and helplessness so systematically veiled under the assumption of infallibility and omnipotence. In no profession do the professors so flatly contradict one another on the rudiments of their science; in none is the knowledge of one generation so invariably discredited by the next; in none do incompetence, ignorance, or negligence work more irremediable injury; and in none are such large sums obtained for such doubtful services rendered. It follows that in no other profession is the legitimate practitioner on more dangerous ground for throwing stones at the quack. By all means let the laws against fraud and false pretences be enforced, whenever a jury of laymen can find that they have been broken, and let doctors by all means enforce them, if they will be so kind. But let us be spared the spectacle of doctors defending their professional interests in the name of the public welfare, and calling for laws to prevent vendors of drugs doing what vendors of every other article may do with impunity, and of what even doctors are not innocent.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

A ROYAL ANCESTOR FOR TEN GUINEAS.

During the last few months several gentlemen, who have not previously supposed themselves to be the descendants of a line of Kings, have been favoured with an epistle more or less in the following terms :—

71, —— Road, London, N.E.,
October 5, 1893.

SIR,—I am at present engaged in deducing the Royal descents of some of the nobility of this country, and I am under the impression that I can trace your descent from the Blood Royal of England. As, however, such a task would entail a vast amount of labour and research, would you be willing in the event of my success to send me a cheque for ten guineas in return for such pedigree engrossed suitably for framing?—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, WILLIAM BOWKER.
Colonel ——

The first person who brought Mr. Bowker to my notice was a baronet of well-known family. "I know my pedigree a great deal better than Bowker can," said this gentleman, "and I am quite sure that there is nothing resembling Royal descent in it." In this case Mr. Bowker offered to prove the Royal pedigree for five guineas only. A month later he was quoting double that figure, and as this rapid rise in prices seemed to indicate that the market for Royal ancestors was in an excited state, I became curious to know more of Mr. Bowker and his business. The first thing that I discovered was that Mr. Bowker was a young solicitor recently admitted, and that his name was not "Bowker" at all. I suggested that he should come and satisfy me of the bona fides of the Royal Pedigree business, and he came. He then informed me that, seeing no immediate probability of realising a competency out of the law, it had occurred to him that he might profitably occupy his leisure in tracing the genealogies of descendants of Royalty. I asked him whether this field of research was not too limited to yield much profit, but he replied that the Blood Royal is much more widely diffused among her Majesty's subjects than is generally supposed. On my inquiring why he went to work under an assumed name, he said that he understood it would be contrary to professional etiquette for a solicitor to take up this work openly. I pointed out that in these hard times many solicitors are openly engaged as journalists, money-lenders, theatrical managers, company promoters, and in other spheres of action; but he seemed to remain firm in the conviction that the Incorporated Law Society would look askance at the Royal descent business. I suggested that ten guineas was rather a high figure for the article supplied; but he answered, "Oh, dear, no!" and told me (which was no doubt true) that I had no idea of the amount of labour and research which a tough Royal descent would involve. I then asked him whether he could give me an instance in which, after the price had been agreed, he had found himself unable to provide the Royal descent required. He could not; but by way of explanation he stated that he had only been at the business about six months, and had not booked more than two or three customers altogether—I forget the exact number.

There have always been a large number of persons in the world who console themselves for being nobody by the reflection, that once upon a time one of their more or less remote ancestors was somebody. It is a foolish kind of pleasure, and not altogether a harmless one, for when such persons have discovered that one of their ancestors was somebody, they are apt to look down upon those who are in other respects their equals or superiors, but whose ancestors were nobodies. I doubt, therefore, whether when Mr. "Bowker" has supplied a section of the community with Royal ancestors at ten guineas a head, the happiness of the greatest number will have been materially augmented. The party, however, as to whose happiness I am most concerned is Mr. "Bowker" himself. That this gentleman seriously believes himself to have discovered a new and legitimate industry, and to be honestly supplying a public want, is very possible. If it were not, I should not have refrained, as I have done, from mentioning his real name. But I cannot help reflecting on the temptation to which "Bowker" is exposed of inventing ancestors where he cannot discover them; and I fear that if he sticks to the business the number invented is likely to increase, while the number discovered diminishes. In that case I think it morally certain that the Law Society will object, not so much to a solicitor carrying on the pedigree business, but rather to Mr. "Bowker" carrying on the profession of a solicitor. Indeed, the chances seem to me to be that if he does not take the hints I have given him, "Bowker" will eventually find that he has provided himself with a client at his own personal expense.

SECOND THOUGHTS ON "THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY."

Mr. Arthur Wing Pinero ought to present a handsome testimonial to the avowed enemies of Paula Tanqueray. What with threatened actions for libel, Mrs. Kendal's petulant outbursts in America, the silly vapourings in the provincial Press, and the moral controversy all round, this very disagreeable lady has obtained an advertisement which she at her age could scarcely have expected, and cannot, on the whole, be said to have deserved. A clever play can have no better réclame than to hint that it is what the French call un peu shoking. All the goody-goody people, who would otherwise have remained away, will immediately rush at it. And when the author has enlisted either the advocacy or the denunciation of the parson, his fortune is made. I should like to take shares in any play that is preached about in the pulpit. "Don't nail his ears to the pump," says the actor. Then it is that the offender is in peril. "Don't go to see that dreadful play," says the moralist. Whereupon godly and godless London rushes at it and clamours at the Box Office.

After all it is only a question of temperament. There are some people who cannot pass the Morgue in Paris without stopping in. It does not follow that they are cruel, or morbidly inclined, or lovers of the horrible. The thing has to be seen, and they intend to see it. As Browning says:—

"TOILET LANOLINE" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d. and 1s.; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depôt, 67, Holborn viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

> One pays one's debt in such a case,
> I plucked up heart and entered—stalked,
> Keeping a tolerable face
> Compared with some whose cheeks were chalked,
> Let them! No Briton's to be baulked!

There is no particular moral to be deduced or lesson to be learnt or sermon to be preached, except one as old as the hills, from the sight of a dead body fished out of the Seine on a marble slab with the dripping garments overhead.

> The copper couch and one clear, nice
> Cool spurt of water o'er the 'bust,
> The right thing to extinguish lust.

Idle and somewhat morbid curiosity attracts men and women to the Morgue. There is a fatal fascination in the dead. Again, when a wretched, over-driven horse drops down dead or exhausted in the streets; when some patient animal is crushed almost to death under a load; when a poor dog is run over, or the harmless, necessary cat is cast neglected in the gutter, you will always find around them a gaping, curious crowd. These people are not cruel—they are fatally fascinated by a fearful or horrible sight.

There is something of this morbid fascination in Paula Tanqueray. Ask ten out of a dozen women what pleasure they derive from the spectacle of this eminently undesirable lady, and they will tell you that they know some one exactly like her, and they will own that they are irresistibly attracted to her by the really powerful photographic picture of her by Mrs. Patrick Campbell. To say that any grand moral lesson is taught by the spectacle of a woman who has scarcely one attribute of woman's nature in her, of a woman who is as much a monster in the world of women as is the pig-faced lady or the elephant-man, is to my mind as absurd as to say a great moral lesson is taught by gazing at Rembrandt's marvellous "Anatomy Lesson," in the picture gallery of the Hague in Holland, or by visiting the Morgue, or by gazing at an over-driven horse, or a dead dog. Rembrandt paints with exquisite truth the dissection of a corpse. Pinero paints with manifest power a monster of womankind. It is art, but not art of the highest or noblest kind in either case. No one who understands the subject can deny that Mr. Pinero's play is a work of art, though he has necessarily overstrained and overstated his case. If there be any stern moral lesson in the play, it is that there are natures so unnatural and callous that the moralist cannot touch them, just as there are said to be some drunkards so hopeless that they defy cure. But, then, neither moral nor medical science would endorse this statement. The doctrine of hopelessness and despair is never upheld by the moralist. But that is neither here nor there. In all probability Pinero had no more idea of preaching to the people in his play than the man in the moon. He desired to write a play that would succeed. And this he has done.

"DIPLOMACY."

Seriously considered, and from any artistic standpoint whatsoever, Mrs. Bancroft's exquisitely humorous interpolated character, Lady Henry Fairfax, is inexcusable. The character is not wanted; it did not occur in the first edition of the play, when Mrs. Bancroft played Zicka; it is dragged in by the neck and heels at the exact moment when the action of the drama is beginning to stir and boil; it is as out of order as a young gentleman or lady reciting on the hearth-rug at an afternoon tea—but for all that, few who have seen the play would willingly shut Mrs. Bancroft out of the distorted picture. Here, at any rate, we have true comedy acting, full of tact, experience, finesse, and that supreme art that is on the borderland of genius. Watch Mrs. Bancroft in this scene of hers, with its Berne clock, its Eton slang, and its amateurish jests, and see how she not only wakes up her audience, but wakes up the actors and actresses on the stage also. She has the true magnetism. When she talks to anyone on the stage she makes them talk to her. She draws the conversation round her, as it were, not so much monopolising it as attracting interest. The scene before she arrives seems dull, laboured, and commonplace. The dialogue has appeared dull and forced. Why is this? Merely because the artists have not learned the knack of attracting attention to themselves or the words they are saying. And yet Mrs. Bancroft gets laugh after laugh out of the worst dialogue in the play, dialogue that is absolutely inharmonious with what has gone before or that follows after. If Mrs. Bancroft really intends to remain on the stage—and why should she not if she loves it?—why does not someone write her a comedy character worthy of her very great ability? The days of Polly Eccles and Nummy Tighe are over, alas! but there are Society women who would be caricatured by Mrs. Bancroft to the very life. Meanwhile it would be delightful to see her as Mrs. Candour, Mrs. Malaprop, or the Widow Green. We have no comedy actress on the stage within a very long distance of this English artist, who brings to bear on her work rare observation, infinite humour, and a life-long experience.

Miss Kate Rorke plays the third act of "Diplomacy" as well as it has ever been played—far better than Mrs. Kendal, who was the original Dora. No Dora yet has even faintly understood the first act or the Bohemian side of the girl's character. No one has ever touched it or appeared to understand the kind of girl who is hawked over the Continent by a vain old mother, subject to semi-starvation and insult, literally living from hand to mouth, but forced to keep up an appearance. This is the side of Dora's character that Mrs. Patrick Campbell would understand. I would rather see her as Dora than as Zicka, the character that would most certainly be given her; for stage people have got it into their heads that Zicka is a bit of melodrama thrust into a play of trick and manners. Zicka is an attractive, fascinating sneak. She ought not to open the despatch-box to slow music and red-fire, but with a cat-like purr of delight. She is a cat, not a tigress. Mr. Forbes Robertson is the best Julian by far that has been seen, and it would be difficult to get better acting than the Orloff of Mr. Bancroft, the Henry of Mr. John Hare, or the Baron Stein of Mr. Arthur Cecil. The old play has survived the buffets of time. One would have thought that the mission of Lord and Lady Salisbury to the East would have been forgotten by this time, but it is hinted at pretty plainly in the text. It seems to me that Sardou's Dora is the best bit of theatrical machinery since Scribe.

RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR has for over Half a Century sustained its High Reputation as an Indispensable Toilet requisite. RIMMEL'S Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, Powders, &c.—London & Paris.

FARCES AND FAVOURITES.

The success of the farce is the individual. Of this I am confident. The people seek for ensemble in comedy or drama. They want favourites for farces. I will go as far as this and say that there is no farce so bad, so ill-constructed, or so indifferently written that would not be literally dragged to success by such established favourites in this line of business as for instance Mr. Penley, Mr. Charles Hawtrey, or Miss Fanny Brough. It was the same when Wright played farces at the Adelphi; when Robson appeared in "Retained for the Defence" and "Boots at the Swan" at the old Olympic; when Toole was the hero of farce together with Paul Bedford at the Adelphi; when Charles Wyndham was the young husband out on the spree at the Criterion. People did not say we want to see such and such a play, they said we want to see Wright, Toole, Robson, or Wyndham, as the case might be. And exactly the same thing occurs to day. Who knows or cares what "Charley's Aunt" is about? Who dreams of analysing it or criticising it? The playgoer wants to see the indiarubber-faced Penley dressed up as an old woman, with wig, band, and ringlets. The actor has an individuality. People go to see Penley as they went to see Wright, or Robson, or Sothern years ago.

In farce acting Mr. Charles Hawtrey has also a distinct individuality. He is the Wyndham or Charles Mathews of these later days, as good a light comedian as the stage possesses. Thus, mainly through his popularity and individuality he is drawing the brightest of after-dinner audiences to see a farce called "Tom, Dick, and Harry," wherein we see three Charles Hawtreys instead of one. Why do those estimable gentlemen the critics worry themselves about the "probability" of such airy trifles? As if it mattered. The public accept it all as tomfoolery without a murmur. They have got their Charles Hawtrey, and that is enough for them. The dreadfully serious people, who would convert all our theatres into meeting-houses, turn up their noses and pooh-pooh honest laughter, but the people who don't want to be educated when they come up from their country houses, and at night wish to see what is going on, will laugh if they can only get an opportunity of doing so. Things have come to a pretty pass when audiences are actually lectured for daring to laugh in a theatre. Only think of this:—"Such exaggerated manifestations of mirth, however, have one drawback, namely, that they are apt to neutralise altogether the enjoyment of those who found the play but moderately entertaining! Laughter is often infectious we know, but there are occasions upon which an excess of it is apt to arouse only a feeling of melancholy wonder." Dear me! if the poor creature cannot bear to hear the people laugh, why does he not get up and go out? "Tom, Dick, and Harry" is wildly, ridiculously improbable, but therein lies its merit in the eyes of the foolishly and obstinately frivolous. They see three single gentlemen rolled into one, and they laugh until their sides ache.

Sometimes a female farce actor comes along and makes the score off her own bat. Yesterday it was Mrs. John Wood; to-day it is Miss Fanny Brough. Either of them would unaided have made a success out of "Mrs. Othello," a whimsical perversion of Shakespeare's story—a jealous woman instead of a jealous man. Miss Fanny Brough has the true verve of the farce artist. She gets hold of her audience and holds it until it does laugh. She never lets it go till she has established her power. It is hard work, no doubt, but it pays in the end. The great fault of English acting is that it is so washed out and colourless. The dread of exaggeration makes the English actor or actress rush into the opposite extreme of feebleness. The consequence is that the attention of the audience wanders. When they do not yawn or go to sleep they talk, which is worse. But I defy anyone, even after dinner, to go to sleep when Mr. Penley, Mr. Charles Hawtrey, or Miss Fanny Brough is acting a farce, for the very good reason that they are practised and experienced artists and know their business. When the question comes up at the club after dinner, "Where shall we go?" there is no hesitation in going to see Penley, or Hawtrey, or Fanny Brough in preference to the music-hall. But if they were not there, perchance the suggestion would be, "Let's go to hear Chevalier, or Cissie Loftus, or Eugene Stratton, or Dutch Daly, or to see the tableaux-vivants at the Palace." The competition question between theatres and music-halls is settled by the value of the entertainment. The amusement-seeker, like everyone else, buys in the cheapest market and sells in the dearest. If he has to invest three, five, ten shillings, or a sovereign, he will do so to the best possible advantage to his own sense of pleasure.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

"LES ROIS."

THE title of M. Lemaître's new play is a misnomer, as it deals with one King only. But there is no lack of other Royal personages, and we have as much tip-top quality as in Lord Beaconsfield's last novel. Lemaître, as Beaconsfield did, follows the vanishing-view system in painting his portraits. Sometimes two different personages, each of whom one can identify, are fused into one. They somehow become homogeneous. We see in Prince Otto, for example, the late Archduke John, three heirs apparent, one of whom is in exile, another (the late Prince "Citron") dead, and the third, who is the least prominently given in the vanishing-views, still alive. A character in which a Parisian and a European notoriety are kneaded into one, is Baron Issachar, who gives shooting and baccarat parties at his seat of Montclarin, in the kingdom of Alfanie (a compound of German States), and produces at them Prince Otto. The Baron is generally the banker when the Prince plays, and allows those who follow Otto's lead, always to win. A scene in which Issachar was shown demanding his pound of flesh of one of the three Princes was suppressed at the request of the Censor "for the sake of international courtesy." As those who saw it rehearsed thought the scene one of the most lively, the author was sorry to be asked to make this cutting. If the passage had related to an actual instead of to a coming King, he would have been obliged to cut, there being now a law to shelter Sovereigns in friendly relations with France from being insulted or "exposed"—a law, by the way, specially meant to keep close certain negotiations to buy the alliance of a southern potentate for France. One of the characters with whom Issachar finds himself in relations in 1900 is a magnate of certain Asia Minor railways, which, doubtless, will be a good deal developed at that date. The other is the head of a society and political paper favourably known to the Comte de Paris, and a leader in Le High-Life and Le Demi-Monde. This latter has been, according to Lemaître, thirty years ago, secretary and debt-collector of Berthe de Chaton, a venal and avaricious beauty, and his snobbish soul confounded the aristocratic world with the conventionalities of the gilded Bohemia, and of "high-sport." He poses as a gentleman, severely correct, cold, stiff, ultra-English in dress and tone, and rigid in his London-made clothes.

The late Emperor William was the model for Christian XVI., King of Alfanie, who, bowed down (morally speaking, for he is erect as a soldier at attention) with age and infirmities, abdicates all but his kingly title to his eldest son, Prince Hermann. Christian entered the army to serve like any other subaltern at the age of twelve, and has lived ever since in uniform during his waking hours. He wears a sky-blue tunic with two rows of metal buttons, a three-cornered hat, on which wave white cock's feathers and a mass of decorations on his breast. The grand cross of the Blue Eagle hangs from his neck. It was founded in 1413 to reward Crusaders against Judaism. Christian is a fine old King, imbued with old-fashioned but estimable ideas about the functions of absolute monarchy and the duties of Monarchs. In Prince Hermann we have vanishing-view portraits of the late Emperor Frederick as Crown Prince and the late Prince Rudolph. He is a philanthropist, always well intentioned, detests courtly conventionalities, the sad masquerade of high society, and would be glad as Regent to prepare the way for the rise to power of the masses by granting a Constitution. His wife, the Princess Wilhelmine (Sarah Bernhardt), is a compound of the late Empress Augusta as she was fifty years ago and of the Empress of Austria before she took to equestrianism and roving to and fro about Europe. All the Princes at the Court of Alfanie are wedded to their military uniforms. Prince Hermann's regiment is the Engineers of the Guard. He aspires to authorship, is a distinguished mathematician, and looks it. Indeed, his true mission in life is to be a professor. Otto belongs to the cavalry regiment of the Archduchess, and wears a white uniform thick with gold-lace, has a hanging jacket of astrakhan fur, and a black and white schapska and sabretache. Though the villain of the drama, and a low brute, he is the most brilliant of all Royal officers—to the eye at least. Prince Renaud (read the eldest brother of the Empress Elizabeth of Austria) aspires to descend to private life, wed morganatically Lotta, a performer of trapeze feats, and to go with her to the United States to set up as a rich farmer. He is Hermann's cousin. The old King thinks him cracked. Otto is the hope of the Reactionists, and Issachar spends money in getting up a faction to cry "Vive Otto!" and to agitate against Hermann, who is too humane and well disposed towards the masses to be the darling of the classes. Unluckily the masses misunderstand him and are led away by agitators and intriguers. That Prince had, on becoming Regent, the misfortune to send for Hellborn, a Radical advocate, in whom we find a prototype of Gambetta—as painted by his enemies. Naturally, as soon as Hellborn finds himself Prime Minister he becomes an Opportunist, and ends by going over to the Reactionists, his head being turned by their flattering attentions.

It is to Sarah Bernhardt's credit that she did not ask to play the part of Frida, the most interesting one in the drama. That of Wilhelmine, however, affords greater scope to the couturière, and then Sarah is fond of personating Sovereign ladies. Were she to break down as an actress she might retrieve lost fortune by teaching Court deportment to young ladies intending to be themselves presented at Royal Drawing-rooms. There is not a Peeress in England who knows how to manage the long, sweeping train with the stately grace that Sarah does in saluting Hermann as Regent in the abdication scene.

Frida de Thalberg, the witty mistress of Hermann, is a compound of the Russian Nihilist studentess of Paris or Zurich, of the late Mdlle. Feyghine, and of the Princess Krapotkine. She is a sweet, intense, high-souled, and interesting being—wrong-headed often, but always right-hearted. Neither she nor her monitress, Audotia Latanieff, would harm a fly, and they overflow with sympathy for suffering humanity. Audotia is a Louise Michel with a Russian name. But between them and Hermann, as many ills are let loose as if there were a re-opening of Pandora's box. The people of Alfanie march against the Palace as much to threaten as to present a petition against the doings of Hellborn. Their backs rising from some accidental cause, they try to make short work of the household guards, who are under orders not to resist, but to gradually retreat. An order has to be given, and by Hermann too, to fire, and then there is carnage. Wilhelmine here comes in, too, as mother of the puny little Wilhelm, the one scion of the Royal pair, and she defends the prerogatives of the Crown. She fires off a splendid tirade. It bores her husband awfully, whose mind is full of Frida. That Queen of his soul is at the Royal shooting-box of Lovenberg, where she has been secretly sent by her platonic but madly-devoted lover. A most romantic place it is. But it is to be the scene of a tragedy. Wilhelmine goes on the track of the Regent, and comes upon the lovers as Frida is imploring the Prince to give up the work of government, and to devote himself along with her to a Nihilist propaganda. They will lead the life of love-birds without carnal love, and, therefore, with pure consciences. A pistol lies on a table. The Louise Michel woman had left it there in the hope of Frida using it against Hermann, "le massacreur du Peuple." Wilhelmine snatches it up and fires. Her husband falls dead.

There is another tragedy. Otto is shot at Lovenburg, but by the park-ranger as he is descending by a ladder from a hayloft where he had been "conversing" with Kate, the ranger's daughter. Kate is a saucy rustic wench, and has no ideas about humanity. She believes that Otto may marry her, and that in the meantime he will give her money to buy pretty things. Sarah in the last act is queenly indeed. Old Christian, on finding out under what circumstances she shot his son, names her Regent. Her widow's mourning is of violet velvet and a long black veil. Thus arrayed, she steps out from the palace on a balcony and holds up the sickly Prince Royal to show him to the people. His make-up is borrowed from a portrait of Alphonse XIII. "The Kings" is a stirring and spectacular play.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

A SEVERE cold in the head, dear Lady Betty, is not conducive to brilliant composition. I regret, therefore, to have to interrupt your weekly education. With true wisdom, having nothing to say I will say nothing. Since I last wrote, however, no material change has occurred in the social matrimonial markets. Home produce is firm; Americans flat; Foreigners unsteady; Brighton stock irregular; and New York dull. Matrimony is, in fact, already manifesting the tendency to dearness usual at the end of the year.

* * * * *

The Indian Council is not acting generously towards Prince Victor Duleep Singh. When we annexed the Punjaub an allowance of forty thousand a year was granted to the late Maharajah by the British Government. At the time the revenue of this province yielded close upon a million of money, and even now something like a quarter of a million comes to us yearly from this source. When the Maharajah died a few weeks ago his younger children inherited a considerable sum, for his life had been heavily insured, and the amount, according to the will, was to be distributed amongst them. But his heir, Prince Victor Duleep Singh, and the widowed Maharanee have absolutely nothing except whatever may be realised through the sale of Elvedon, the family estate in Norfolk. That Prince Victor desires to retain Elvedon is only natural, the more so that he has always been devoted to the place. Meanwhile, instead of acting graciously towards the family, the India Council is even yet considering whether it shall continue the allowance to Prince Victor, and what the amount of this allowance—if any—is to be. It is plain that out of the quarter of a million that we confiscate annually from the principality we are bound to provide substantially for the children of the deposed Sovereign. This opinion is very strongly held at Court.

Sir Francis Clare Ford loses a thousand a year by his change of post, as the salary at Rome is £7,000 a year, whilst it is £8,000 at Constantinople. As, moreover, nearly everything is found for the Ambassador at Constantinople, and he has to do very little entertaining, this post is always considered the only one where an Ambassador can save out of his salary.

Another vacancy which is giving cause for much speculation is that occasioned through the death of the late Sir Christopher Teesdale, the Master of the Ceremonies. Various names have been mentioned in connection with the appointment, but in common fairness it should be offered to Colonel William Chaine, who for very long has been the Assistant Master. For all practical purposes, Colonel Chaine has done all the work of the office for several years past, for Sir Christopher, being disabled by ill-health, did not attend seriously to the duties; whilst his predecessor, the late Sir Francis Seymour, was during the last years of his life, on account of his blindness and his infirmity, a by no means efficient official. Colonel Chaine is, moreover, popular with the Corps Diplomatique, which is the essential point. Why should Mr. Christopher Sykes not be appointed to the post?

Mr. John Savile, the eldest son of Lord Mexborough by his second marriage, lies dangerously ill with typhoid fever in Dover-street. It was at first suspected that Mr. Savile had contracted the disease through the extensive excavations that are being made next door in connection with the building of the "Bath's Club" upon the land that formerly belonged to Lord Abergavenny. But this cannot have been the cause, for these excavations had not been commenced when Mr. Savile was first taken ill. And, by the way, in the course of the excavations several singular discoveries have been made. Amongst others at a great depth a secret passage has been disclosed, whilst several old Irish farthings have also been found buried. In 1811, 34, Dover-street was the town house of the Lord Dynevor of that time; but he, good man, can scarcely have had any use for secret passages, and least of all for Irish farthings.

Another new Club, the Royal Societies' Club, which is to be opened shortly at 63, St. James's-street, is making rapid progress towards completion. Over 1,000 members have already been elected, amongst them being Sir Frederick Abel, the Vice-President of the Royal Institute, Lord Halsbury, Sir Rutherford Alcock, Sir James Linton, Sir Alexander Armstrong, and numerous other leading lights of the worlds of science, literature, and art. The Royal Societies' Club is the first serious rival that the Athenæum has yet encountered. Several thousands are being expended in alterations and decorations. An exquisite hall and staircase are being built, and the old concert-room, so familiar in the days of the defunct Meistersingers, is being turned into a handsome library. Every member of the Club possesses a jumbled alphabet tacked on to his name.

The engagement of Miss Adèle Grant to Lord Essex will cause much pleasure to the many friends Miss Grant has in America. Miss Grant, it will be remembered, was several years ago engaged to the late Lord Cairns.

A contemporary gravely announced last week that, "as Lord Iveagh has failed to obtain possession of Savernake, he is to be appointed to replace the late Lord Vivian as Ambassador at Rome." This intelligence must have astonished no one more than Lord Iveagh himself.

The "Exhibition of French Artists in Decorative Art" will open at the Grafton Galleries on Saturday next, the 18th. The Private View will be held upon the preceding day. The exhibition contains some very fine modern ironwork, much excellent faience, some curious crystals, together with many other objects of interest of a similar kind. There is also a singular dinner-service designed and partly modelled by Madame Sarah Bernhardt for her own use.

I am asked to announce that the Gallery Club will re-open on Sunday, the 26th inst. There will also be smoking concerts upon the two following Sundays.

An altogether new problem has been started at the leading literary club, which is of some interest. The question is this: If works by Foreign Masters not represented in the National Gallery were offered in exchange for pictures that we have, which twelve should on no account be parted with? The most popular list that has been handed me is as follows:—

No.	274.	Mantegna ...	Holy Family
	186.	J. Van Eyck ...	Arnolfini
	35.	Titian	Bacchus and Ariadne
	213.	Raphael	Vision of a Knight
	852.	Rubens	Chapeau de Paille
	10.	Correggio ...	Mercury, Cupid, & Venus
	294.	Paul Veronese ...	The Family of Darius
	896.	Terburg	Peace of Münster
	697.	Moroni	Tailor
	1,172.	Van Dyck ...	Charles the First
	830.	Hobbema ...	The Avenue
	1,093.	Leonardo Da Vinci	Our Lady of the Rocks

Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

IT does not seem, after all, that the Derby is going this winter to be regarded as merely a "one-horse" race, which was the view justifiably taken of the Epsom event this year after the Two Thousand, and also of the Leger, by all rational people after the easy Derby victory of Isinglass.

Ladas has won all his races this season very easily, and he could not do more than he has done; but it must be candidly acknowledged by his friends that he really has not beaten much. There are many people who have a dismally distinct recollection of a beast named The Baron, who also won all his races as a two-year-old, and who was the winter favourite for the Derby of 1887, with the tragical result that he finished nowhere at Epsom, and, indeed, he never afterwards distinguished himself. After The Baron had been beaten in the Derby, it was suddenly discovered by everyone that, although he had certainly won everything as a two-year-old, yet it was unquestionable that he had never met a good horse, a fact which, by the way, was frequently pointed out in TRUTH during the winter of 1886-87. The adherents of Ladas might regard his future with much more justifiable confidence if he had beaten Match Box, but, as a matter of fact, he has encountered nothing better than Sempronius and Jocasta, neither of which animals, it is now clear, has any pretension to be regarded as first-class. Bullingdon was so ridiculously backward at Ascot that his running in the Coventry Stakes at that meeting must be ignored. The meeting of Ladas and Match Box in the Two Thousand will be very interesting, but, in my opinion, Lord Rosebery's steed will find Son o' Mine a very much more dangerous opponent whenever they meet, whether it is in the Newmarket Stakes or at Epsom, and if now obliged to back a horse for the Derby I would choose Lord Durham's colt.

The Leicester meeting afforded a flagrant example of the scandalous and calf-headed carelessness of owners in making illegal entries, and of managers of meetings in accepting them. Mr. T. Jennings, jun. (who has been racing for the last twenty years, so that such blundering on his part is unpardonable), entered his mare, Affluence, 3 yrs, for the Mile Maiden Plate, which was run last Tuesday. This event was advertised to be open to three-year-olds and upwards "that have never won before the time of entry," and the race closed on October 17. Will it be credited that Affluence was entered, although as a two-year-old she had won the Acorn Stakes at Epsom, a race worth £532? Owners who make such mistakes ought to be smartly fined, and so should the officials concerned.

The Hardwicke Stakes at Ascot, for 1895, has just closed with only 66 entries, which is less than half the number which this race has always obtained until quite recently. The fact is that the Ascot Programme requires a thorough revision, for at present there are far too many rich stakes of the same class, which practically kill each other, and the fields would be much larger and the races a great deal more interesting if a root-and-branch reform were carried out. When the Hardwicke Stakes was established just sixteen years ago, a race with £2,000 added was a novelty, and the amount of the added money was regarded as magnificent. When, however, stakes of £5,000 and £10,000 rose like an exhalation all over the country, the Hardwicke, of course, lost its importance, and this year it was notorious that the best horses in the entry were withdrawn in order that they might be kept fresh for more valuable engagements late in the summer. The Hardwicke should be converted into a stake of £10,000, of which £5,000 might be added from the fund, while the remainder could easily be subscribed by the owners of the horses entered, as in the £10,000 stakes at Newmarket, where, however, the owners are so complacent as to contribute the whole, or nearly the whole, of the amount of the race.

If the Hardwicke entry is comparatively small in numbers, it certainly leaves nothing to be desired in point of quality. It is most satisfactory to find that Mr. Vyner has entered Marcion, for he certainly would not have done so unless he considered himself to be justified in anticipating that his horse will stand training for another two seasons. Marcion is both a speedy horse and a fine stayer, and it would have been most unfortunate if it had been found necessary to cut short his career on the turf in consequence of the shaking which he received on the hard ground at Ascot. Isinglass has not been engaged, nor has Ladas, but among the other notable three-year-olds are Callistrate (who, by the way, is to be entered for next year's Ascot Cup) and Raeburn; while among the two-year-olds are Son o' Mine, Match Box, Xury, Letterewe, Grey Leg, Bullingdon, and St. Hilaire. Lord Bradford has entered his colt Hornbeam, by Chippendale out of Hemlock, of whom I have heard wonderful accounts. People who are interesting themselves about next year's great races will do well to note carefully the names of the two-year-olds which have been engaged in this stake, as they may gather some valuable hints by doing so, and the two-year-old entry for the Ascot Biennial should also be studied. It was fully expected that Delphos would have been engaged in this race, but his name does not appear, nor does that of Xury, and the best known of the lot are Grey Leg, Letterewe, Glare, and Venia. Prince Soltykoff's Granby is evidently expected to distinguish himself in the Jubilees, for he has been entered for both these races, although he was already very heavily engaged. Another animal at present unkown to fame, which will presumably be worth looking after next season, is the Duke of Westminster's Orlet, by Bend Or out of Ruth.

I hear that Mr. Cloete has a fairly smart two-year-old in Dancing Dervish, by Paradox out of Pretty Dance, which he bought last year for 155 gs. Dancing Dervish has several engagements next season, of which the most important is the Epsom Grand Prize.

The race for the Liverpool Cup was spoilt by a most execrable start, by which the chance of some heavily-backed runners was utterly destroyed. La Flèche is understood to have gone amiss just before she ran for the Cambridgeshire, and on Friday she had to beat only some very moderate three-year-olds and a lot of bad handicap horses. It would have been well for the speculative public if Prisoner had never been foaled. He has been very heavily backed for three handicaps, the Stewards' Cup, the Cesarewitch, and the Liverpool Cup, and has always been beaten, while when he ran at Doncaster he was backed only by one or two people whose inspiration savoured of the miraculous. Prisoner will, no doubt, be "followed" by a vast herd of simpletons next season, but he is really a bad horse that can neither stay nor go fast. I am pleased to remember that when he was being raved about as a good thing for the Cesarewitch I predicted that it would turn out that the Doncaster Cup running was all wrong. What Lady Rosebery was about on that occasion it is impossible to conjecture.

During the last two years Lady Hermit has been over and over again a great public favourite for leading handicaps, not one of which did she win, and her victory in the Stewards' Cup at Liverpool was a bewildering surprise after her ignominious collapse at Northampton. The fact is that Lady Hermit is a wretched jade, and it may be hoped that Colonel North will relegate her to the stud forthwith.

Milford, who was expected to turn out the flyer among last season's two-year-olds, has proved a dire failure as a three-year-old, and he is now being sent over hurdles at Newmarket. He is just the stamp of horse that may be expected to distinguish himself in races of that class. It is quite possible, indeed, that a few weeks of hurdle jumping may convert Milford into a very smart horse on the flat. I have been assured that Red Eyes was literally worthless on the turf until she had been sent over hurdles for a few months, and the result of that schooling has been that she has since discovered herself to be a genuine stayer, and has won two of the most important long-distance handicaps of the season.

SANITARY SURVEYS.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

La Flèche will no doubt be despatched to the stud now that she has won a race. There would be no object in keeping the mare in training for another season, as she would be far more likely to deteriorate than to improve, and her only engagements next year are the Hardwicke Stakes at Ascot, and the Champion Plate at Newmarket, neither of which races would she be likely to win.

The season will conclude next week with the Warwick and Manchester meetings, at both of which there are sure to be large fields, and backers are certain to have considerably the worst of the business. The November Handicap at Manchester should be left alone until the day of running. I will deal with it next week.

There were seven colleges at Oxford that took part in the University four-oared races. At Cambridge only four crews started for the University fours. Figures are miserable things on which to found an argument, but these figures alone would arouse a suspicion that there was something wrong with Cambridge rowing. Big clubs like Clare, Pembroke, Caius, and Lady Margaret cannot get together crews, while First Trinity, with a small University at its back, does nothing in the race and rows three men under 11 st. The recent inter-University races have shown that there is nothing radically wrong with the style of Cambridge rowing as there was in the sixties. Ever since the last victory over Oxford the cry has been for heavy men, and it does not speak well for the abilities either of College captains or University presidents that the dearth should be as great as ever. It cannot be that there are no giants in the land. They play golf or football; and the President of the Boat Club must not, like David, go forth to slay, he must cherish these Goliaths, and get them into his service. Nothing has injured Cambridge rowing so much as the football mania. The Rugby match is over at the end of the October term, and the Association game is played in the middle of the Lent term, and yet both the Universities go on playing almost up to the Easter vacation. The colleges follow suit, and so long as Cambridge men prefer to potter about in college matches, instead of helping their Boat Clubs in the Lent races, so long will they bemoan their ill-fortune between Putney and Mortlake. There are plenty of heavy men, but they will not learn to row. And then, when a college does show some promise of better things, as First Trinity was doing, the authorities break out into internecine squabbles that would disgrace a nursery of children. At Oxford rowing is in a healthier state. The entries for the fours show that.

A syndicate has, I am told, been formed to foster professional cycling next year. Already in France the amateur has practically ceased to exist, and in America the Cash Prize League system has been a great success. I should not be sorry to see something on the same lines here. It would clean the amateur stables to a great extent. So long as the riders give the public a run for their money, the venture will pay. Hitherto professionals have failed to secure public confidence because of their dishonest practice. At Johannesburg this evil does not seem to trouble people. Nearly every Saturday there are cycling races, and it is well known that the riders are in league with the bookmakers. But the people bet all the same. At the present time there are numbers of racing cyclists who are professionals to all intents and purposes. They ride for the makers of machines, and the prizes can be changed afterwards for that which is more suitable to men in their class of life—that is, for cash. I see that the proprietors of a new publication have offered a 100-guinea cup for a twenty-four hour race between Shorland, an amateur, and Lesna or Stephane, the French professionals, all three claiming the twenty-four hours record. This generous offer is, of course, a mere advertisement. It is disgraceful that amateur sport should be utilised for the purposes of this up-to-date journalism. These big prizes are the curse of amateur cycling, and I hope the N.C.U. will forbid the race.

The Cambridge University Football Clubs propose purchasing from Caius a football ground close by Fenners. The price is £7,500, and the purchase must be made by June next. Of course there will be a heavy outlay for building and fences. A sum of £6,000 is asked for by next June. The rest will be raised on mortgage. Considering the good gates the Rugby Club gets, this seems crude finance.

MAMMON.

PRECEPT V. PRACTICE IN MASHONALAND.

WHEN Hannibal was in Italy, Scipio declared that Rome could only be saved in Africa. It seems to be the fate of Liberal Ministries to imperil their success at home by carrying on "military operations" in the Dark Continent. A Liberal Ministry bombarded Alexandria and killed many thousand Soudanese, and this enabled a gang of usuring financiers to get their blood-money out of the Egyptians. A Liberal Ministry is now aiding a gang of financiers to sweep out of existence the Matabele, in order that the gang may be in a position to use Matabeleland as a gambling counter in their attempt to trick British investors out of their money. And yet I make no doubt that all Liberal Ministers are really opposed to such doings. C'est la fatalité, as Mdlle. Schneider said in "La Belle Hélène," when she yielded to the blandishments of Paris.

Mr. Gladstone, when his Government was killing Soudanese, comforted their disembodied spirits by telling them that they had been men "rightly struggling to be free." He now comforts the Matabele by telling them that he hopes that they are being treated with "justice, mercy, and charity." In the meantime, the financial gang shoot them with Maxim guns, and Mr. Buxton informs us that the object is to induce them to turn their swords into ploughshares, or, to put it less metaphorically, turn them into mining shovels, and use the shovels for the financiers. If any surviving Matabele ever comes to Europe, how surprised he will be to find that the ploughshare doctrine of civilisation has been reserved for Africa. Swords into ploughshares! Look at Europe. To parody the words of Madame Roland on the scaffold, "What strange things are done in the name of civilisation!"

What I have asserted is this: Mr. Rhodes and his gang, the most prominent members of which seem to be an Austrian financial Baron and a Dutch financier, have made millions out of the British public by selling to them at a huge premium shares of a Company which would have been bankrupt, had it not laid hold, like Ahab, of a vineyard in its neighbourhood by Ahab's plan of killing the owner and confiscating the vineyard. The gang induced the public to buy shares by the glamour of a Royal Charter, by mendacious puffs, and by placing at the head of their Chartered Company two Dukes as decoy ducks. Their first step had been to trick Lobengula out of a concession. He was induced to confirm it, although he still protested against its being what he had really given, by the Queen's name being dragged in, and by her Majesty pledging the word of the nation that, if he allowed digging for gold in his country, the diggers would recognise his sovereign rights, and in no way damnify him. Then these sharp financiers tricked the Government out of a Royal Charter, by concealing the fact that they had saddled the Company formed under the Charter with a lien for themselves which they estimated as worth four million pounds. The Mashonaland bubble, on which this superstructure had been raised, having burst, they forced a war on Lobengula, in order to get hold of Matabeleland. Why? To sell the portion of this four millions' worth of shares, that they had not already foisted off on the public, by puffing Matabeleland as they had puffed Mashonaland.

Mr. Rhodes is represented as a patriot. He is the Cape Prime Minister, and also the head of a crew of financing speculators. Go to Somerset House. Ask for the list of the shareholders in the Concessions Company. This Company was formed to enable the gang to divide the booty of four millions amongst themselves. There it will be seen that Mr. Rhodes holds 352,971 shares of the face value of £1. If he succeeds in looting Matabeland for the Chartered Company, and in fooling investors, he will be able to convert this £350,971 into current coin of the realm. What would be said here, if Mr. Gladstone engaged in a war of Imperial conquest, and it were found that he had so arranged matters that the war, if successful, would secure to him a gigantic private profit? In the history of British Statesmen—and, indeed, of Colonial Statesmen until Mr. Rhodes came on the scene—so monstrous an abuse of an official position for private ends has never occurred. The fact is no figment of my brain. It stands recorded at Somerset House. I refer to Somerset House as my authority. There is no question as to its accuracy. I leave its appreciation to all who have at heart the good name of the public men of the British Empire. The Panama disclosures fall short of it in significance. Jabez Balfour in his Argentine retreat must ask himself, why fate has been so unkind to him, and why he is a fugitive from justice, and Mr. Rhodes Prime Minister of the Cape.

We hear a good deal about Cape public opinion being with Mr. Rhodes, and that we ought to bow to it. Without entering into the mode in which that opinion has been created, I would point out that Matabeleland no more belongs to the Cape than to Nova Scotia: that this filibustering Company was created by a Royal Charter, and that we, not the Cape, are responsible for its actions.

What has happened since the Rhodean forces invaded Matabeleland? Mr. Rhodes computes the killed and wounded Matabele at three thousand, against a loss amongst his crew of border ruffians of five men. It is explained that this is in the nature of wars between Europeans armed with Maxim guns and African natives. Precisely. And this is why such a war is a battue, with men instead of pheasants. I have asked, Where are the wounded Matabele? Mr. Gladstone thought it shocking on my part to imply that possibly they had been killed. I repeat the question: Where are they, if they have not been killed?

Amongst the killed Matabele are two Envoys that Lobengula sent to treat with Sir H. Loch at his request. They entered the camp of the Bechuanaland Police, under the conduct of Mr. Dawson, an Englishman. They were seized on as spies, and subjected to indignities. Not understanding this, one of them snatched up a bayonet to defend himself. The two were butchered. Mr. Gladstone says that it was unfair of me to say that this has tarnished our good name, and I ought to have waited for particulars. The above particulars come from the murderers of the Envoys themselves. I want no further particulars to declare that our good name has been tarnished by this hideous crime. Spies from an enemy do not openly walk into their opponents' camp, accompanied by one of their opponents. Reverse the case. What would have been thought had we sent two Envoys to Lobengula with a Matabele, and he had executed them on the assumption that they were spies? Should we have thought this more justifiable, if Lobengula had first asked us to receive Envoys? I repeat that, on the admitted facts, our name has been disgraced by the murder of these men. There was a third envoy—the brother-in-law of Lobengula. Recent telegrams say that he was ill-treated, and being met on his way home, exhausted and almost dead, was saved by some benevolent Samaritan.

We are now told that the rights of Rhodes and his gang must be respected in any arrangement connected with the possession of Matabeleland. In this I agree. But I deny that they have any "rights" there. Look at facts. They obtained a mining concession by fraud over all the territories of Lobengula. He condoned the fraud and confirmed the concession on the Queen pledging herself that they should only dig for gold where he pleased, and they bought up a further land concession, giving them powers to acquire land in the sphere of the operations of the gold digging. Lobengula allowed them to dig, not in Matabeleland, but in Mashonaland. Whence, then, do they derive any claim to mining rights or to land rights in the the former? The doctrine that they have these rights can only hold good on the assumption that when the interests of Mr. Rhodes, Baron Nathan Meyer de Rothschild, an Austrian, and Mr. Beit, a Dutchman, conflict with hard fact and with the plighted word of the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, hard facts and the Queen's plighted word must be subordinated to these interests. To say that the Company has acquired land rights in Matabeleland is tantamount to saying that, if I owned a tract of barren land in Scotland, and after allowing a man to dig peat there, told him that he might squat on the land within the sphere of his peat operations, he might become possessor of my house in London by hanging me at the door-post, and then insisting that the house became his, because it had been brought within the sphere of his operations.

Then, as to the cause of the war. Lobengula, we are told, raided in Mashonaland, and the war was caused by his refusing to discontinue this practice. The Charter of the Company gives it alone the rights contained in the concessions. In these concessions there was no right given to exercise jurisdiction over either Mashona or Matabele; indeed, the Queen, as I have already said, expressly pledged herself that the concessionaries should not exercise such jurisdiction. Lobengula sent an impi there to punish his subjects for stealing telegraph wires at the express request of the Company. Both Sir H. Loch and the Company were notified of its departure. This impi was ordered by Dr. Jameson to withdraw from Mashonaland in one hour. It was withdrawing, when one or two hours later Dr. Jameson sent an armed force to fire on it under the command of the very Captain Lendy whom Mr. Buxton had stigmatised as a murderer on account of his former ruffianism. The impi could not cover thirty miles (the distance to Matabeleland) in two or three hours. And because it was impossible, this Lendy and his border ruffians fired on it and killed about thirty men. When Lobengula protested, he was told by the Company that he must agree never in future to enter his own Mashonaland. When he naturally demurred to this ultimatum, the Company insisted that, as a measure of self-defence, they must sweep him and his Matabele off the face of the earth, although Mr. Moffat, our own official, and our only official who had been brought into personal relations with Lobengula, declared that Lobengula had not the remotest intention of attacking the Company. "This may be true," says Mr. Buxton, "but are we sure that Lobengula's impis would not have attacked? Were they not out of hand?" What is the evidence for this theory? Absolutely non-existent. What happened after hostilities commenced conclusively shows that the impis were in hand, for they obeyed their King when he directed them to destroy their villages rather than surrender them, and to march to assured death when he ordered it.

Of course, Lobengula's mode of administering justice in Mashonaland was savage; this is always the case in Africa when a native king is the administrator. But there is not the slightest evidence that Mashona villages were burnt by him, or women and children killed. But what is the record of the Company towards these Mashona, over whom they had no more jurisdiction than I have? "Butchered to make a Roman holiday," says Lord Byron, were the savages in the days of old Rome. Butchered to sell bogus shares on the Stock Exchange are the natives of Africa to-day. Read the following facts, which I extract from the published Blue Books, and meditate on them. Note them well, and then tell me whether it is possible to believe that Rhodes and his gang advanced into Matabeleland because their righteous souls were vexed at Lobengula's mode of treating his subjects:—

In February, 1892, the Company slew six Mashona, and burnt down three kraals, on its being reported to them that somewhere and by some one, a Frenchman, naturalised as an American, had been killed. Against this Sir Henry Loch protested; observing that, "in cases like the present, where the chief has been captured, and resistance is at an end, it would seem unnecessary to burn the kraal, more especially as that involves the punishment of women and children."

In the same month Dr. Jameson reports: "Moghali has raided another chief, who appealed to us for protection. Moghali refusing to submit, Chaplin and a few men were sent to assist the raided chief, so his kraal was burnt and Moghali killed." Lord Knutsford on hearing of this exploit observes: "It is important that nothing should be done which would tend to relieve the Company's representatives from a full sense of their primary responsibility for its policy." In March, 1892, a Mr. Bennett had, or said that he had, some goods stolen, and that he suspected natives from N'Gomo's kraal. Near Mr. Bennett's farm was a kraal belonging to Manguendi. Captain Lendy was sent to arrest Manguendi, who declined to be arrested. Captain Lendy then went to N'Gomo's kraal, and sought to arrest him. He was "impertinent." His kraal was therefore shelled by a Maxim gun, and the chief, his son, and twenty-one natives were killed. On this transaction Sir H. Loch observes: "It appears to me that the action of the local officers was somewhat in excess of the requirements in this case." Lord Knutsford observes: "There is nothing in the information which affords any justification of Captain Lendy's proceedings, and he acted in this matter with recklessness and undue harshness." Mr. Buxton observes: It must be remembered that Captain Lendy, a murderer in the estimation of her Majesty's Government, has been retained in the service of the British South Africa Company, along with Dr. Jameson, who instigated and commended his attack on N'Gomo.

The newspapers that have puffed the Company naturally dislike that facts in regard to its action should be made known. How, then, do they answer facts? By the very simple expedient of not answering them. Some, like the Westminster Gazette, say that they are not facts, because Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Buxton think that more evidence is needed to prove them. Some fall back on vague twaddle about the extension of the Empire, and hold that every crime is covered by Mr. Rhodes's "imperial instincts;" just as Mr. Redmond contends their excellent motives condone the crimes of the imprisoned dynamiters. Some merely say that Mr. Rhodes is a great man with great views, and that I am a small man with small views. Some gently hint that I must have some secret motive in my action in this matter. Some suggest that this secret motive is my dislike of Dukes. All that I can say is, that I never saw Mr. Rhodes; that I have no personal feeling either for or against any of his gang; that I never bought or sold, directly or indirectly, a share in any of his Companies. As for the Dukes, they are neither better nor worse than any other "guinea-pigs," and I do not require to learn from what has been done by Mr. Rhodes that many of our aristocracy can be hired at the price of £1,200 per annum to become Directors of any Company—good, bad, or indifferent. My motive is simply this: Believing that Africans ought not to be slaughtered for the benefit of a gang of greedy financialists; believing that the Prime Minister of a Colony ought not to use his political position to further his private ends; believing that a gang of financiers ought not to get hold of a property (the half of which they value as worth four millions) by trickery, by violation of the Queen's plighted word, and by killing the owners of the property, I raise my voice against what I regard as a national crime. But even admitting that I am the vilest of the human race, that I have the worst of motives, that I am myself a robber, a forger, and a murderer, I hardly see how this alters facts recorded in Blue-Books, in the official reports of a Company, in its official contracts with other Companies, in the returns filed at Somerset House, and in Mr. Rhodes' own telegrams as to what he has been doing in Matabeleland. I have received letters telling me that it is monstrous in me to attack a Liberal Government, if I am, as I say, a Liberal. Whether an act is right or wrong does not depend on who does it. I want certain reforms at home and sound foreign policy abroad. I find Liberal Governments more in accordance with my views than Tory Governments; therefore I am a supporter of a Liberal Government. But I am a discriminating supporter. I do not see why Parish Councils and such like reforms should not be carried at home, without murdering Africans. In the treatment of Africans by border ruffians, I have always found that a Liberal Government is too much inclined to avoid Parliamentary friction by either following in the footsteps of its predecessor, or by staving off action on the plea that facts must be clearly known before any action be taken, whilst in the meanwhile it allows itself to be dragged into complicity with such iniquity as that now going on in South Africa. No one who has followed the career of Lord Ripon and Mr. Buxton can doubt that they regard with horror murder by Companies, and that they would be delighted to join me in my denunciations of the South Africa Chartered Company and of its autocrat, Mr. Rhodes. I have no doubt, too, that Mr. Gladstone shares in these views. They all know the wrong-doings of this Company even better than I do. But to take action might involve them in difficulties with the Cape Government, of which Mr. Rhodes is the head, and in discussions with the Conservatives at home, who are always ready to swear to the virtue of wealthy powerful men, no matter what they may do. They therefore look on, whilst black men are murdered and financiers are making money out of the murders. This is called "recognising the responsibilities of office." The only responsibility, however, that I recognise is, that the nation is bound not to allow its good name and honour to be disgraced by aiding, or by supinely whimpering, whilst "justice, mercy, and charity" are practised by a gang of filibustering Company-mongers in Africa for the benefit of their own sordid pecuniary interests.

Scripture tells us that where the carcase is, there are the vultures gathered. There is a charming naïveté in a telegram from the special correspondent of the Daily News with the freebooters:—"The shrewd colonists who form the bulk of our fighting force are delighted with Matabeleland. The country has quite justified its reputation. It is full of reefs rich in gold, and the pasturage is described as splendid. Consequently, our men have gone to stay." The shrewd colonists are the band of fighting loafers who were attracted to Mr. Rhodes's standard by the offer of farms and loot. Probably very few of them ever did an honest day's work in their lives. They want to sell their "farms" and their "mining claims" to some Company-monger who would bring out his Company in London, having added to the price paid to the freebooter a very considerable sum for himself. Certainly the land has been manured with the blood of its murdered owners, but even with this agricultural advantage I greatly doubt whether it be worth more than land in Mashonaland. As for the reefs being rich in gold, let any one for a moment consider the absurdity of this preliminary puff. The "shrewd Colonists," we are asked to believe, discovered this richness within a few hours of getting possession of the reefs. But a reef can only be proved to be rich or poor after a very careful survey, a more careful analysis of large quantities of rock, a considerable outlay on shaft-sinking, a full consideration of cost of transport, of price of labour, and of many other such details. Experts, indeed, are often themselves deceived as to gold existing in paying quantities. Mr. Rhodes, and his friends Mr. Beit, the Dutchman, and Baron Nathan Meyer Rothschild, the Austrian, are also eager to take time by the forelock in converting their paper shares into something more saleable. They have at once advertised a meeting of the Chartered Company, at which it will be proposed that the Company shall buy these founders' shares for one million of the shares of the Company, and thus double its capital. Why do they want to effect this deal? Because they know that a share in a Chartered Company always has an additional value owing to the silly notion that the Government guarantees the honesty and bona fides of such Companies. I will say this for the "shrewd colonists," and the still shrewder men behind them, that a more resolute and clever gang of marauders I never came across. There is a mixture of Captain Kidd and Jabez Balfour in them that, to those who think that anything is permissible in the pursuit of wealth, is no doubt attractive—nay, positively, fascinating. They have got hold of Matabeleland. So far as I can make out, the war has been successful. The pioneers of civilisation are in possession of their vineyard. The Colonial Office recognises their rights to it. They are to be allowed to become owners of a country as large as France, in addition to being owners of Mashonaland, which also is as large as Spain. They may sell or give away its land; they may exact their royalty of 50 per cent., or otherwise deal with its mineral wealth. Under a proper administration of justice, these men would be indicted as accessories of murder and robbery. Is it then suggesting too much when I say, that they ought not to be allowed to confiscate to their own uses Matabeleland, under a Royal Charter? The country possibly is worth nothing. What do they care? They will say that it is worth much, and, fortified by a Royal Charter, they will sell shares to fools, and, having pocketed the proceeds of the sales, laugh at their dupes, as they sit in their palaces in Holland, or in Austria, or wherever else they reside.

As it may be well that the country should understand who are the chief South African financiers, I publish the following list of the Directors of the principal Companies there. It will be seen that this band of philanthropists has spread itself, like vermin, over every financial undertaking, and that many of these pillars of the extension of the British Empire are not by birth Britons:—

List of Directors.

Lord Gifford, V.C., Betchworth
- United Concessions Company, Limited
- British (Chartered) South Africa Company
- Horo Concession and Exploration Company (of Swazieland), Limited
- Bechuanaland Trading Association, Limited (Chairman)
- Bechuanaland Exploration Company, Limited (Chairman)
- Southern Land Company, Limited
- Mines Trust, Limited

Hon. Cecil J. Rhodes (Cape Premier)
- De Beers Consolidated Mines, Limited (Life Governor, Chairman)
- United Concessions Company, Limited
- British (Chartered) South Africa Company
- Exploring Company, Limited
- Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa

Alfred Beit (of Wernher, Beit, & Co., Diamond Merchants), 29 and 30, Holborn Viaduct, E.C., and Prince's Chambers, 56, Pall Mall, S.W.
- De Beers Consolidated Mines, Limited (Life Governor)
- United Concessions Company, Limited
- British (Chartered) South Africa Company
- Exploring Company, Limited
- Beira Railway Company, Limited
- Moodies Pioneer Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Wolhuter Gold Mining Company, Limited

Rudolph Henrichsen, Prince's Chambers, 56, Pall Mall, S.W.
- De Beers Consolidated Mines, Limited
- Beira Railway Company, Limited
- Moodies Pioneer Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Griqualand West Diamond Mining Company (Dutoitspan Mine), Limited

F. Volklein, 56, Pall-mall, S.W.
- Transvaal Consolidated Lands, Limited
- Meyer & Charlton Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Jumpers Gold Mining Company, Limited

J. Wernher (of Wernher, Beit, & Co., Diamond Merchants), 29 and 30, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.
- De Beers Consolidated Mines, Limited
- Exploring Company, Limited, in 1892 (since retired)
- New Jagersfontein Mining and Exploration Company, Limited
- African Trans-Continental Telegraph Company, Limited

Charles Rube (of Wernher, Beit, & Co., Diamond Merchants), 29 & 30, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.
- Ferreira Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Bantjes Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Wolhuter Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Alexandra Estate Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Crown Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Randfontein Estates Gold Mining Company (Witwatersrand), Limited
- Langlaagte Estate and Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Block "B" Langlaagte Estate Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Paarl Central Gold Mining and Exploration Company, Limited
- Robinson Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Jumpers Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Meyer & Charlton Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Geldenhuis Estates and Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Transvaal Consolidated Land Company, Limited
- Modderfontein Gold Mining Company, Limited

M. Michaelis (of Wernher, Beit, & Co., Diamond Merchants), 29 and 30, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.
- Ferreira Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Bantjes Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Wolhuter Gold Mining Company, Limited

J. Elliott (of Wernher, Beit & Co., Diamond Merchants), 29 and 30, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.
- Crown Reef Gold Mining Company

A. Dünkelsbühler (of Dünkelsbühler & Co., Diamond Merchants), 34, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.
- Champ d'or French Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Transvaal Coal Trust, Limited
- Consolidated Bultfontein, Limited
- Durban Roodepoort Gold Mining Company, Limited
- South African Argonauts, Limited

F. W. Greem (Clerk to Dünkelsbühler & Co., Diamond Merchants), 34, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.
- Flora Gold Mining Company, Limited (in liquidation)
- Ethel Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Alexandra Estate and Gold Mining Company, Limited

S. Neumann (of S. Neumann & H. J. King, Diamond Merchants), 46, Holborn Viaduct, E.C., and of Sigmund Neumann, Merchant, Warnford-court, and of M. Lilienfeld, Diamond Merchant, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.
- Ferriera Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Wolhuter Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Main Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- New Crœsus Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Crown Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- United Ivy Gold Mining Company, Limited
- South African Trust and Finance Company, Limited
- African Trans-Continental Telegraph Company, Limited
- Transvaal Coal Trust, Limited
- Horo Concession and Exploration Company (of Swazieland), Limited
- Johannesburg City and Suburban Tramways, Limited
- South African Argonauts, Limited

Henry James King (of S. Neumann & H. J. King, Diamond Merchants), 46, Holborn Viaduct, E.C., and of H. J. King, Merchant, Warnford-court, E.C.
- Main Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- New Crœsus Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Bothas Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- New Grahamstown Gold Mining Company, Limited

Julius Friedlander (of Neumann & King, Diamond Merchants), 46, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.
- Princess Estate and Gold Mining Company
- Moss Rose Extension Gold Mining Company

R. S. D. Felkin, Stockbroker (of H. J. King, Merchant), Warnford-court, E.C.
- Flora Gold Mining Company, Limited (in liquidation)
- Alexandra Estate and Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Paarl Central Gold Mining and Exploration Company, Limited
- Moodies Gold Mining Company, Limited
- New Grahamstown Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Figaro Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Bothas Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Modderfontein Gold Mining Company, Limited

Martin Lilienfeld, of Holborn Viaduct, E.C. (Refer to S. Neumann, H. J. King, Julius Friedlander and R. S. D. Felkin.)
- Main Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Figaro Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Flora Gold Mining Company, Limited (in liquidation)
- Ethel Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Bantjes Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Modderfontein Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Johannesburg City and Suburban Tramways, Limited

Thomas Rudd (J. Rudd & Co., Merchants), 8, Old Jewry
- African Banking Corporation, Limited
- United Concessions
- Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa, Limited (Chairman)
- South African Gold Trust and Agency Company
- Mashonaland Agency, Limited
- African Gold Share Investment Company, Limited

C. D. Rudd.
- United Concessions Company, Limited
- Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa, Limited

H. E. M. Davies, 8, Old Jewry, E.C.
- Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa, Limited
- South African Gold Trust and Agency Company, Limited
- African City Properties Trust, Limited
- Cape Town District Waterworks Company, Limited
- Gold Estates (Transvaal) Company, Limited
- Luipaards Vlei Estate and Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Mashonaland Agency, Limited
- Nooitgedacht Estate and Gold Mining Company, Limited
- Village Main Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited
- African Gold Share Investment Company, Limited
- Mines Trust, Limited

Family Washing only.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered lay following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

H. Mosenthal (of Mosenthal, Sons, & Co.), 72, Basinghall-street, E.C.
De Beers Consolidated Mines, Limited
New Jagersfontein Mining and Exploration Company, Limited
Consolidated Bulfontein
Exploration Company, Limited
Horo Concession and Exploration Company (of Swazieland), Limited

G. H. Raw (of Fry, Son, & Co.), Gresham House, E.C.
New Heriot Gold Mining Company, Limited
Nigel Gold Mining Company, Limited
Stanhope Gold Mining Company, Limited
City and Suburban Gold Mining Company, Limited
Salisbury Gold Mining Company, Limited
South African Trust and Finance Company, Limited
New Consort Gold Mining Company, Limited
South African Prospecting and Mortgage Corporation, Limited
Gold Estates (Transvaal) Company, Limited

Percy F. Tarbutt (of Tarbutt & Quentin), 23, St. Swithin's-lane, E.C.
Consolidated Gold Fields of South Africa, Limited
New Reitfontein Gold Mining Company, Limited
Central Montrose Estate and Gold Mining Company, Limited
Northern Transvaal Lands Company, Limited
United Langlaagte Gold Mining Company, Limited
Mines Trust, Limited
South African Gold Trust and Agency, Limited
African Gold Share Investment Company, Limited
Village Main Reef Gold Mining Company, Limited (Chairman)
Sunbeam Gold Mining Company, Limited
Victoria Hill Consolidated Gold Mining Company, Limited

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

My Dear Ben,—The Stock Exchange superstition about a "nineteen-day account" has once again received confirmation, for it must be admitted that the account which has now run its course, although bringing no heavy fall in its train, was uncomfortable throughout. The coal strikes still drag their weary length along, unsettling industries and adversely affecting the railways: the ratification of the settlement of the Argentine Debt by Congress has not yet been obtained; renewed "Bear" attacks have been the order of the day in the Yankee market, although meeting with but indifferent success, and the fighting in Matabeleland has been crowned with the announcement of a fresh juggle in Chartered shares through a proposed arrangement with the United Concessions Company, a sudden collapse in Chartered shares being the upshot.

Fin de Siècle Finance.

The public mind has also been somewhat disturbed by certain developments in Trust Company finance which, although but the outward signs of a trouble which has been in existence for some time, are yet tending to again undermine the slowly returning confidence. The resignation of Mr. Frank May, the Chief Cashier of the Bank of England, for instance, has rightly or wrongly been connected by rumour with certain ill advised investments in the shares of Trust Companies of part of the funds of the Bank of England Clerks' Provident Fund, but it is not apparently an important matter, and the real responsibility would, if there is anything in the talk, rest with his superiors. Mr. May, who has held the post since 1872, has rendered good service to the Bank in the past, and the responsibility must after all chiefly rest in higher quarters. Perhaps the Governor and Directors will in future give a little more attention to important details than they appear to have done. The impression at present prevails that the Bank has had more to do with "Fin de Siecle Finance," and that it had more interest in preventing the collapse of the Barings and Murrietas than appeared likely on the face of it. The Bank of England should, like Cæsar's wife, be above suspicion, but nothing has apparently occurred that need cause any grave anxiety, and I should say that the warning will not be thrown away upon those chiefly responsible. In connection with the South American and Mexican Trust, certain disclosures have been made by the Official Receiver which will no doubt receive the attention of the Committee of the Stock Exchange. With reference to Trust Company finance generally, I repeat that thorough investigation by shareholders' committees is desirable, and that every safeguard must be provided to prevent mismanagement in the future. These Companies were started at a period of inflated values, and the securities bought at that time have, in many cases, seriously depreciated during the protracted crisis which has followed the Baring collapse. But it should be remembered that the losses have been actually made some time ago, and that they are in most cases discounted in the present prices of the stocks of the Trust Companies. Unless risks altogether incompatible with their real business have been incurred, most of the Companies should, moreover, be able to nurse their investments until their value reaches again a higher figure. If directors have acted ultra vires, or if they have been guilty of irregularities, let responsibility by all means be fixed upon them, but I would again warn shareholders not to be carried away by the clamour for vengeance by noisy wreckers. That is not the way to recover their own or reduce their losses. Finally, it may be hoped that when this Trust scare has run its course, a healthier tone will be created in the Stock market, in which the so-called revelations connected with this chapter of "Fin de Siècle Finance" are only too eagerly seized upon by unscrupulous "Bear" operators.

Home Rails.

The leading "Heavy" stocks have again shown remarkable strength, considering the continuance of the strikes, the only important exception being Sheffield securities, that line suffering very heavily from the strikes, while the new Dore and Chinley branch of the Midland threatens it with fresh competition. The traffic returns for the week show some improvement, but the decreases caused by the strikes are still severe. On the other hand, covering operations by professional "Bears" are steadying quotations, especially of Midlands and North-Western. North-Eastern were weak at one time, but are again firmer, which is not surprising, as this line really profits by the coal war in the Midlands. I have so fully given my view of the unfavourable dividend outlook that I can leave my readers to form their own judgment. The unfavourable South-Eastern working statement has prevented any improvement in quotations of Dover "A," notwithstanding the oversold state of this market, but Brighton "A" are distinctly firmer. Traffics still show decreases, and will continue to do so as long as the coal strikes last. The latter are, in fact, the sole fons et origo of the decreases, as the passenger movement keeps well up to the mark. The termination of the coal strikes will, however, now probably come too late to enable the Company to recoup any substantial portion of its losses during the current year, and no higher dividend than 5½ per cent. is generally looked for on Brighton "A" for the year. Deducting the accrued portion, say 4½ per cent., from the present price of 144½, we obtain on the basis of 5½ per cent. a yield of nearly 4 per cent. on the investment—not so very bad a return perhaps when the improved prospects for next year are considered. The chief factor is, however, the market position. It is now said that the "shop" operators have closed their "Bear" commitments, but that a very large short account is still open for others, a statement which receives confirmation by a backwardation of ¾, which was exacted at the settlement. There is some talk of Metropolitan and Metropolitan Districts being likely to benefit from the re-opening of Olympia with the new Constantinople performance. The Scotch stocks, although cheap, have been altogether neglected.

The Yankee Market.

The feature in the American department has been the prevalence of determined "Bear" raids in the early part of the week, followed by greater steadiness and a recovery from the lowest. The success achieved by the Republican Party in the State elections was considered a "Bull" point on the other side of the Atlantic, most of the leading Wall-street financiers belonging to that party, but it tends to militate against any drastic repeal of the McKinley tariff. The financial condition is still improving, and the position of the New York banks is stronger than ever. The distrust caused by the silver purchases having now disappeared through the repeal of the Sherman Bill, it may be assumed that trade generally will revive, although the traffics of the roads can but gradually recover. Passenger traffic has no longer the Chicago Exhibition to stimulate it, but the approaching close of the lake route will, on the other hand, benefit the railways. According to mail advices, moreover, the tonnage of the Granger roads is steadily increasing, general business is improving, grain is moving to the seaboard, and a buying movement for merchandise has set in, the like of which has not been seen for many months. A strong "Bear" attack on Atchison was led by Addison Cammack, who sent selling orders to Boston in order to create the impression that something was wrong with the road, his object apparently being to affect the whole list of stocks by raiding this one. It was also sought to frighten holders by widely circulating the statement that the decrease in net receipts for July, August, and September had been 975,000 dols., without mentioning that these receipts still showed a surplus of 469,000 dols. over fixed charges, including the Second Mortgage "A" and "B" bonds. These three months, moreover, cover the worst period of the crisis through which the country has passed. In fact, as the huge gross decrease for the three months ended September 30 of 1,985,000 dols. worked out, through large savings in working expenses, to only 975,000 dols. net decrease, it is obvious that October, with only 290,000 dols. gross decrease, will show a great deal better, and, as the Statist puts it, "if the Atchison Company in future has no larger decreases in gross earnings than in October, its capacity to cover fixed charges appears assured." In fact, as the surplus profit for the last fiscal year of the Company was 2,647,000 dols., there is still a margin of 1,672,000, which has to run off before fixed charges are imperilled. The view which I expressed last week that there should now be a recovery in Denver traffics bids fair to be borne out, and the improvement in Denver Prefs. and Ordinary which I foreshadowed, has already commenced, the former gaining nearly three dollars. Louisville have again been attacked, but there is a strong undercurrent, and all will now depend upon traffics. If these should improve, the shares will rise to a higher level, my statements as to the deal with the Chesapeake and Ohio South-Western having been fully borne out by a semi-official statement since made in contradiction of a very misleading report dished up in the Times. With reference to the Northern Pacific, an influential committee of American holders of the Consolidated bonds has been formed to co-operate with the Berlin committee. It is estimated that of the 44,000,000 dols. of these bonds outstanding fully 15,000,000dols. are held in Germany, a large proportion of which have been deposited with the Deutsche Bank. The semi-annual interest maturing December 1 will not be paid. The Milwaukee line has again shown a moderate weekly traffic decrease, and the next few returns will be watched with considerable interest; but this stock is, on the whole, very well held. Talk is revived that the Reading receivers are anxious to issue a reorganisation plan, under which the coupons of the General Mortgage Fours fund are to be funded for a term of years—perhaps four years. This is vigorously objected to by the General Mortgage bondholders, who claim that stockholders and income bondholders should be the ones to suffer. Income bondholders claim that funding the General Mortgage coupons is a violation of the terms of their mortgage, which provides that no lien shall be placed ahead of theirs. Funding the coupons for four years would give money enough to pay off the floating debt, but there is no question that such a plan will be vigorously opposed. Looking at the American market generally, I do not advise speculative transactions except perhaps for short turns, buying when the market is flat and selling when it is firm; but, as I have said before, investors who can pay for well selected stocks and lock them up for three or four months will at the end of that period no doubt see a good profit. Grand Trunks have not yet recovered from the effect of the unfavourable September statement, and Canadian Pacifics have been intensely dull.

House Drainage.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

Baltimore and Ohio South-Western.

At last the amalgamation of the Baltimore and Ohio South-Western with the Ohio and Mississippi is an accomplished fact, and all preparations have been made to carry it out. The new securities will be issued to the Preferred and Ordinary stockholders of the Ohio and Mississippi, and to the holders of the various Baltimore and Ohio South-Western securities by the middle of December, and in the meantime an issue is made of Four-and-a-Half per Cent. First Consolidated Mortgage 100-year Gold bonds of the Baltimore and Ohio South-Western Railway Company, under the scheme of amalgamation. These bonds, having the unconditional guarantee of the Baltimore and Ohio for principal and interest, and being a first charge upon the 916 miles of road of the amalgamated Companies, may be considered a gilt-edged security, and are undoubtedly cheap at the issue price of 101 (the first coupon due in July 1, 1894, carrying eight months' interest from November 1, 1893), and will, no doubt, go to a premium. With regard to the amalgamated Baltimore and Ohio South-Western Company, there is no doubt that now it is worked in close alliance with the Baltimore and Ohio, forming a complete through route between St. Louis and the Mississippi River on one side and the Atlantic seaboard on the other, it will very considerably increase its business and net receipts.

More about the Stewiacke Valley Bonds.

With reference to the monstrous piece of financing involved in the issue of bonds of the Stewiacke Valley and Lansdowne Railway Company, upon which I commented last week, I have obtained some further particulars, which will prove of interest to the unfortunate bondholders. It appears that of the £50,000 bonds offered for subscription £11,000 bonds only were subscribed and certified by the Trustees; the Company, however, subsequently issued a further £4,200 bonds on which they have paid interest, but such bonds have never been submitted to the Trustees for the certification requisite to make them obligatory on the Company. As I have already stated, interest on the bonds has been in default since July 1 last, but under the Trust Deed the Trustees, Lord Claud Hamilton and Mr. Edward Lawrence (the latter of whom was appointed recently in place of Mr. Pender), have no power to take any action against the Railway Company until they have served on the Company a six months' notice of their intention to take possession of the mortgaged premises. This notice was served on the Company in August last, and expires, therefore, in February next year. I am informed that the Trustees have experienced the same difficulty as Mr. Wales, the former Secretary, in obtaining any information from the Company about the state of affairs, and that the payment due to the Trustees for their services is also in arrear. It is stated that one section of the railway has been graded and is ready for the rails, but the rails have never been laid. I also hear that inquiries are being made in Canada on behalf of the Trustees with the view of obtaining information as to the position of the Company and the value and prospects of the property, and until the Trustees are in possession of further particulars they are unable to decide what course it may be possible for them to take in the Debenture holders' interests. In giving publicity to the information which I have been able to collect I can assure the various readers of Truth who have applied to me in this matter that I will not leave a stone unturned in order to either obtain redress or bring the matter home to those implicated in it.

Minton's (Limited). Minton's China.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

Kaffir and Other Mines.

More battles in Matabeleland, more victories, Lobengula a fugitive, the Chartered Company about to carry out the annexation! The dreams of the jobbers in the Kaffir Circus seemed on the eve of coming true, when suddenly on Friday afternoon the word was passed round that a new issue of Chartered shares would be made in connection with the United Concessions Company. Bang went down the price of Chartered shares from 27s. 9d. to 24s., and loud were the complaints of this sudden move of Rhodesian finance. Of course, the arrangement with the United Concessions Company will be approved of at the meeting on the 20th inst., when no doubt all the eloquence of the aristocratic Board will be turned on, and so the capital of the Chartered Company becomes £2,000,000, instead of £1,000,000. But that is not all. As I stated last week, a further issue of stock or a reconstruction on Rhodesian lines will have to be faced, as it is notorious that the Company was short of funds before the war against Lobengula was undertaken, and those who lent it the money for meeting the expenses of the campaign will expect to be repaid. The incident of last Friday, therefore, is only one in the chapter of surprises which holders of and operators in Chartered shares will enjoy in the near future. These Chartered troubles are, unfortunately, unsettling the whole Kaffir Circus, and prevent even the public from investing in Witwatersrandt Gold shares, although the Matabele adventures have absolutely no bearing upon the Randt. The October output in that district, in fact, amounts to 138,599 oz., which is 2,530 oz. in excess of the August output of 136,069 oz., the previous record figure, and compares with 129,585 oz. in September. The African Gold Recovery Company's share in this yield was 35,000 oz., making, with 3,000 oz. obtained in other districts, a total of 38,000 oz. in October against 37,000 oz. in September. It is, indeed, surprising that, with such results, the Randt shares remain neglected, the only improvement of any extent being a rise of ¼ in Jumpers, although small fractional advances have to be recorded in half a dozen instances. The Rietfontein remains a dark horse. The New Primrose return for October reached 7,769 oz., with a profit of £10,550, against 7,519 oz., with a profit of £9,613, in September. Mail advices from Johannesburg report a very satisfactory meeting of shareholders of this Company, at which Mr. B. I. Barnato stated as "the greatest proof of the confidence he had in the property the fact that when the shares stood at £5. 17s. he had refused to sell, and to-day his firm's holding was larger than ever." The mine now stands third on the list of producers, with a total capital of only £218,500, as compared with the two and three-quarter millions of the Robinson and the half million of the Langlaagte Estate, which are the only Companies that take precedence of it in the output table, and there is excellent reason for believing that it will run hard in the ensuing twelve months for first place when the fifty new stamps of the Moss Rose are at work. The Buffelsdoorn output for October was 2,019 oz., against 1,480 oz. in September, but the mill was at work only part of the time, and a very much larger output from both crushing and cyanide process is looked for in the current month. These are some of the most promising shares in the market. The meeting of the Afrikander Gold Mine was held last Wednesday, when a very satisfactory statement was made by the Chairman. The October output has risen to 931 oz., against 872 oz. in September. Quite apart from the mining operations, the possession by the Company of forty acres of freehold land within the limit of the Klerksdorp township will, in view of the proposed railway from Johannesberg to Klerksdorp prove of great importance. The small office expenses of £188 in seventeen months are also a gratifying point. South Simmer and Jack shares are firm, favourable advices from the property being expected. Diamond Mining shares are dull, New Jagersfontein being neglected. Amongst Australian Mines, Carrington's have attracted attention in view of the recommencement of work, but it appears that the jobbers are running "Bears" in these shares, as much as 3d. per share back having been paid. This is rather a dangerous game to play with low-priced shares. Brilliant St. George United are stronger on a sharp advance in Australia, where insiders have apparently got wind of some favourable development. A cablegram from the Aladdin Mine reports the striking of rich ore in two places, the mine improving all round, and a crushing of 300 tons for 750 oz., making the high average of 2½ oz. to the ton. This fully bears out my anticipations.

Persian Bank Mining Rights Corporation.

More than once have I criticised the promotion and management of this extraordinary concern, expressing the emphatic view that the shareholders would never see any profits, as the concessions for which that equally ill-conceived undertaking, the Imperial Bank of Persia, received £800,000, payable as to £150,000 in cash, and as to the rest in ordinary shares, were worthless. The capital consists of £1,000,000 in £5 shares, £350,000 being Preferred Ordinary, and the balance Ordinary. In the circular which has been issued by the Directors, the confession is now made that "the difficulties that exist with regard to fuel, transport, water, and the severity and length of the winter, seriously impede profitable mining operations; while the want of protection to life and property owing to the weakness of the Government and the opposition of the local Governors and petty officials render such operations altogether impossible." It is surprising that it should have taken the Directors three years, and that a heavy expenditure should have been incurred, before they discovered a fact which I predicted at the very outset. Now they announce that they have been compelled to close all the mining works of the Corporation in Persia, and apply to the Foreign Office to obtain compensation from the Persian Government. But whether they will obtain redress or not in this way, I trust that the Imperial Bank of Persia and the promoters will be compelled to disgorge the stupendous sum obtained from the public for mining concessions which have proved absolutely valueless.

More Widows' Finance.

Under the heading "Widows' Finance" I published side by side on September 14 two letters, one signed by a Mrs. A. Stampe, of 7, Lambourne-road, Clapham, S.W., the other by a Mrs. A. Gordon Edwardes, of Avondale, 30, Regent's Park-road, N.W., in which the writers stated that, in consequence of the unfortunate death of their husbands three months since, they were compelled to dispose of certain Founders' shares of £10 each in the Alliance Financial Company at about £11. 10s. each, which they were told were worth £20 each, and on which dividends of 30 and 35 per cent. were paid for the last two years. I expressed the view at the time that the matter had a very suspicious look, and as further letters emanating from these interesting widows continued to reach me, I again repeatedly warned my readers to have nothing to do with the shares. But the little game of trying to unload Alliance Financial Founders' shares is still going on merrily, for not only do I find in the Financial News of the 7th inst. a copy of the very same letter, but two identical communications have again reached me which had been addressed to readers of TRUTH, one by Mrs. A. Stampe, the other by Mrs. A. Gordon Edwardes. The matter is further complicated by the publication in the Financial News of a copy of a letter written by Mr. Capon, the Secretary of the Alliance Financial Corporation, in which he confirms the statement that dividends of 30 and 35 per cent. have been paid on the Founders' shares during the last two years, while a correspondent states in the same paper that, being induced to buy four of these Founders' shares in February, 1891, he has received no dividend whatever, and that two letters addressed to Mr. Capon had not been answered. I wonder what that gentleman can have to say to this strange statement, and I should very much like to know how many shares the two widows have been able to sell through their persistent efforts?

The Syndicate Touts Again.

The syndicate touts, to judge from the number of circulars which reach me, are again very active, which must unfortunately be considered a proof that they still find persons gullible enough to listen to their blandishments. One of the most persevering touts is the individual who works under the magnificent name of "The Imperial Stock and Debenture Corporation," of 45, Finsbury pavement, E.C. His circulars are headed "A Matter of Interest to Everyone," and he actually holds out the hope of 312½ per cent. profit in two days. Need I repeat my warning to readers of TRUTH to have nothing to do with this tout? Another firm of syndicate touts, to whom I have often had occasion to refer, is Harvey, Macdonald, & Co., of 20, Great Brunswick-street, Dublin, who boast of having a number of clergymen amongst their clients. As a matter of fact, a little transaction which an English clergyman had with this firm has just come to my knowledge, and, as it is instructive as regards the methods adopted by these gentry, I herewith give a short résumé:—

In July last an English clergyman, seeing the advertisement of Harvey, Macdonald, & Co., sent them in a moment of weakness, £5 to invest. A few days after they wrote to him to say that, owing to the improvement in the stock markets they had been able to close the "Stock Fund" in which he had one share at a net profit of 50 per cent., or £2. 10s. profit on his £5 subscribed; they added that the result was not quite so good as they expected, but they thought he would prefer a quick return, and re-invest again rather than wait longer for an uncertainty, and they asked him if he wished them to re-invest the £7. 10s. on his behalf. They also stated that they had received very reliable information from America, and strongly advised him to increase the sum of £7. 10s. in hand; also to send instructions on an enclosed form for further discretionary transactions to be conducted on his behalf. The clergyman was not at home when this letter arrived, but the letter was forwarded to him. On receipt of it he at once wrote asking for a cheque for the amount due, and declined any further investment. A few hours after the letter announcing the profit reached him, he had received a further letter from the firm saying that they saw a good chance to re-invest his £7. 10s., and which they accordingly did, and that the investment appeared likely to turn out well. They again wrote a few days later saying that, as they firmly believed a quick rise was certain to occur on the declaration of the South-Eastern Railway dividend, they had bought him (for the rise) £750 South-Eastern Railway Deferred stock at 78, with a cover of 1 per cent., or £7. 10s., and they enclosed what purported to be an official contract therefor. They added that although the dividend subsequently declared was quite up to market expectations, the stock receded for some unaccountable reason to 77, thus exhausting his 1 per cent. cover, or £7. 10s., causing a total loss, and asked him to forward a cheque for £7. 10s. advanced by them to protect his stock. This, of course, he declined to do, and not being able to obtain payment of the original £7. 10s. he placed the matter into the hands of a Dublin solicitor. The latter accordingly applied for payment, and in reply received a letter from Harvey, Macdonald, & Co. saying they much regretted the loss his client had sustained, which, however, was not unusual in gambling transactions, and added if the rev. gentleman had written to say that his financial position would not warrant such a heavy loss, they would willingly have borne part of same. The solicitor then issued a writ against them, claiming the £7. 10s. on an account stated, and declined to agree to any settlement. At first they asserted that they would defend on the grounds that the transaction was a gambling one, but on reconsideration they thought fit to pay the entire debt, £7. 10s., and costs incurred.

It is evident, therefore, that the atmosphere of the Law Courts does not agree with these kind of people, and that energetic action through a sharp solicitor will in most cases have the desired effect. Better still is it, however, to give the syndicate touts one and all a wide berth. Even the most unsophisticated must understand that, if it were so easy to make profits of 300 per cent. without risk, these gentry would make them for their own account and retire millionaires after a year or two.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Exsul.—You should hold the Argentine stocks Nos. 1 and 2 for a recovery, which may reach a considerable figure. No reason to sell No. 3. Certainly hold Mexican Sixes (1) and Louisville shares, both of which are likely to improve. Bess.—The report about a further issue of Cedulas has not so far been confirmed. Hold! Poor Curate.—I think that there is no fear of default. The bonds are well secured. Blackbird, Armagh.—No reason to sell Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold Income (1), or Buenos Ayres Great Southern Ordinary (2). Certainly, hold Argentine Funding bonds (3) for a rise. You have done quite right to buy Antofogasta (Chili) and Bolivia Four per Cent. Debenture stock, which is a gilt edged security.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

W. J. S.—The reply concerning the Transvaal Mortgage and Finance Company was given in last week's issue. Dan.—No. I do not think that you need sell these Trust shares now. T. E. Auchterarder.—This question was replied to in TRUTH a fortnight ago. Jus.—I regret very much being unable to furnish any further information concerning the Trading Company in question. Aurora.—1. It is impossible to tell what the result will be, but it is no use to throw these Trust shares away now. 2. For the same reason these should be held. Sell Imperial Bank of Persia (3). I gave this advice from the very outset. Sell the Mining shares, No. 4, if you can. Hold No. 5. I have always commented unfavourably upon Burmah Rubies (6), and the result has fully borne out my view. I do not like the Mexican concerns No. 7. I cannot tell when No. 8 will resume dividends, but I should hold. Hold Denver and Rio Grande Four per Cent. Mortgage bonds (9), also the Bank shares, Nos. 10 and 16. No reason to sell the Mining shares, Nos. 11, 12, and 13, which will recover again. I am afraid that you could not sell No. 14, except at considerable loss. No. 15 is a good investment. Carby.—I am afraid affairs do not look favourable for shareholders in the Bank. If a call is made, you will, of course, be obliged to pay up. The article is based on mere guess work. Write to the liquidator for information. Viola.—Bank of Australasia shares now stand at 68. The Bank appears to be doing well, and the shares should be held.

Home Rails.

Waiting.—No, I do not think that it is worth while buying East London Railway shares for an early rise. O. P.—Brighton "A" will hardly get a better dividend than 5½ per cent. for the year, of which 4½ per cent. may be said to have accumulated. Deducting this amount from the present quotation, we obtain a price of 140, upon which the return is nearly 4 per cent. per annum. But prospects for next year are no doubt more favourable. £ s. d.—Metropolitan Districts at 25 are a good "lock up," but it is hardly advisable to buy them on speculation for an early rise.

American and Foreign Rails.

P. A. M.—1. I expressed my views of the Louisville deal with the Chesapeake and Ohio South-Western in last week's issue. Hold Louisville. 2. The Trust Company has greatly suffered through the bad times. I do not think the amalgamation will go through. 3. The other two stocks should be held for a recovery. Interested.—Yes, Mohawk and Malone Four per Cent. First Mortgage bonds, guaranteed by the New York Central, at 101, and Chicago, St. Louis, and New Orleans Five per Cent. bonds guaranteed by the Illinois Central at 118, are good investments, but I should be inclined to prefer the Baltimore and Ohio South-Western Four and a-Half per Cent. General Mortgage bonds, guaranteed by the Baltimore and Ohio, which are just being issued at 101, as being as good and yielding a higher return. Alpha.—I advised last week to hold Denver Preferred, since which time they have risen two points. You should hold for a further improvement. K. O. H.—a. A good bond. b. Not much. c. Yes. d. The Law Debenture Corporation. Sussex.—I am glad you have done so well. Hold Louisville (1) and buy more to average on any relapse. 2. Hold Milwaukees for something like your figure. 3. Hold Atchison Second Mortgage Bonds. F. H. P.—This Brazilian Railway is, of course, adversely affected by the revolution in Brazil, and there seems no option but to hold. H. O., Worcester.—1. Illinois Central stock is a good investment, also the Uruguayan Debentures (2), but I do not care much for No. 3. Brownswood.—I think you should hold the Atchison bonds. If you were to sell in the hope of getting in lower, you might easily miss your chance. Constant Reader, Carnforth.—Yes, I think that both the American Railroad bonds (Nos. 1 and 2) are a good speculative purchase, but I do not care so much for No. 3. Timothy.—It would be no use to present the coupons for payment, but you must watch the notifications which may appear subsequently. Marcus.—Mexican Rails are a dangerous stock to speculate in, especially just now, as it is impossible to see clearly. I. P.—Yes, Atchison Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund notes at 97 yield 7⅜ per cent. on the investment, and are well secured. Assiduous.—I do not care so very much for the stock you have selected, but it is likely to maintain dividends. S. R.—Yes, the Four and a-Half per Cent. Baltimore and Ohio South Western Consolidated First Mortgage Bonds, guaranteed by the Baltimore and Ohio, at 101, are a gilt-edged bond and worth buying. M.C.—The quotation of the South West of Venezuela Barquisimeto Seven per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures is 35-38. Kendal.—The position of Atlantic Firsts will have to be recognised in any reorganisation of the Erie Company, which will, moreover, have to pay the real earnings to the bondholders. Rupee, Folkstone.—The Canadian and American bonds Nos. 1-3 are good investments, and so are the Debentures Nos. 4-7. The new Baltimore and Ohio South Western Four and a-Half per Cent. Consolidated First Mortgage, guaranteed by the Baltimore and Ohio, at 101, are gilt-edged and should suit you as a permanent investment. See remarks on the same in my letter. Dora.—A prominent New York firm of solicitors, Alexander & Green, have, according to the Wall-street Daily News, given a legal opinion on the status as to security and lien of the Extended Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund notes of the Atchison system. Besides having an equal amount of general mortgage 4s. deposited for their security as well as all the stock of the Chicago extension, and also all the capital stock of the terminal property in Chicago, these notes, when issued, were made a second mortgage upon the 470 miles of main line through Kansas, together with all the stock and equipment of the Company wherever situated, and all the property, real and personal, then held or subsequently to be acquired by the Atchison Company. This mortgage is prior in date and lien to that of the Atchison Four per Cent. General Mortgage bonds, and when the 7,041,000 First Mortgage bonds were acquired in the reorganisation, the Guarantee Fund notes became the first mortgage upon the main line of the Atchison system in Kansas, the equipment, &c. Dart.—Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Six per Cent. capital stock at 107 yields upwards of £5. 12s. per cent. per annum on the investment, and is a very progressive stock. Norwich.—Your broker will be able to buy the Nitrate shares.

Mining Shares.

Cork.—You should hold Golden Gates (Charters Towers) for a recovery. Day Dawn P.C. are likely to improve again. Inquiry, Eastbourne.—I have not changed my view of Caratal in any respect. They should be held. The comment in question is absurd. Gloucester.—You should hold Oceana for the present. Nothing has yet been finally decided about the bonus in coal shares, but this will no doubt be settled shortly, and a substantial distribution may be looked for. Tiro.—1. A swindle. Have nothing to do with it. 2. If you hold the shares, keep them on the chance; if not, do not buy. 3. I cannot say, but I expect some very favourable news shortly. D. O.—Yes; South Simmer and Jack and Buffelsdoorn are very promising South African "coming" Mines. Langley.—It is a fair Mining risk. G. M.—Nothing is known in the market of the rich discovery you speak of on the property of the Main Reef Gold Mining Company. The shares are a fair speculative lock-up at the present price, but holders may have to face a reconstruction before long, as the Company needs funds. A. R.—West Argentines, like mines generally, must be regarded as a speculation, and not as an investment. The shares are a fair lottery ticket at the present rubbish price, but it is right to point out that they carry 1s. 6d. liability. The shares can be obtained at 1s. 5d. or less in "the House," so there is no reason to give the figure mentioned by the "outside" so-called Corporation who are "puffing" them. Miles.—I see no signs of an upward movement in Cape Copper shares. D. O.—I gave my reasons for a recovery in Carrington shares last week. It is understood that there is a "Bear" account in the "House," and that the outside brokers are also "short" of them. Sailor.—Yes, hold May Consolidated now. Ali Musjid.—1. Yes, hold, a recovery is probable. 2. The price of Klerksdorp Estates is about 1s. 6d.-2s.—at which figure it is policy to risk holding them. 3. Coromandel Gold shares are nominally about 1s. 2s. Operations up to the present have been very disappointing, and the outlook is very unfavourable. Sell if you can, and get rid of your liability. H. C. E.—1. You should risk holding Nine Reefs a month or two longer, although developments in the northern parts of the Colar fields are not stimulating. 2. Take advantage of the recent rise in Pahang Corporation to sell. Nemo.—Sell Ripanji.

Industrial Companies.

Vir.—In my opinion there is no scope for this concern. Sell if you can! Lamb.—A good deal depends upon a revival of trade in Chili and a rise in the Valparaiso exchange. Both these events would benefit the Company. X. Y. Z.—1. The business appears to be going on satisfactorily, but it is impossible to obtain particulars. 2. No. 3 and 4.—Write to the secretary for information. Thoughtless.—1. I am afraid that I cannot help you with respect to the first-named Company. You should sell the shares for what they may fetch. 2. Under the circumstances you had better leave Mexican stocks alone and buy instead Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Six per Cent. capital stock at 107, which will return you about £5. 12s. per cent. per annum, and is likely to advance.

Mixed Investments.

M. H.—I do not think there is any prospect of a substantial advance in the bonds No. 9. The stocks Nos. 10-12 are not known here, and I cannot advise on the same. I suppose there is no option but to hold No. 15 for the present. I think you could do better than in the two stocks specially referred to, but I see no harm in holding them. Trinity Terrace.—I think you should hold the Peruvian Debentures (1), as well as the American Rails, Nos. 2-4. Caratal and Holcomb Mining shares (5 and 6) should be held, also Nos. 7 and 8. The Brewery shares, Nos. 9 and 10, should now be held. This Company has been very disappointing, but matters are now improving. J. (Stafford).—Some of the best investments in my list of well-secured stocks are Ind, Coope, & Co.'s First Mortgage Debenture stock, yielding £3. 18s. per cent. per annum, and Gordon Hotels Perpetual Debenture stock, yielding £3. 13s. per cent., but you might also subscribe to the new issue of Baltimore and Ohio South-Western Four and a-Half per Cent. First Consolidated Mortgage Gold bonds at 101, now offered by Messrs. Brown, Shipley, & Co., which are gilt-edged and yield a higher return. Black Reef.—1. Hold Croydon King block. Work has been resumed, after a month's exemption. The straight shaft is to be sunk deeper, as the Directors hold the view that there is a reef under foot. 2. Hold Texas "B" shares. Their turn will come presently. The "B" Debentures are a fair speculation. 3. Hold. 4. Position improving, but don't buy now. No, I do not recommend purchases of Nos. 5-8. R. K. R., Brighton.—No reason to sell any of the eighteen stocks referred to. All the Debentures of Trust Companies which you hold are all right, and the investments have on the whole been prudently made. No reason to sell No. 13 now. The interest on Erie Second Mortgage bonds will, no doubt, be scaled down, but the owners will probably receive some compensation. Oceana.—You have done well to follow my advice to sell these Trust shares. 1. Hold the Brewery shares, but do not average yet. 2. Hold. On any reaction you might buy more of No. 3. Yes, you might buy more to average Transvaal Estates and Development (4), if you have not already more than you can afford to hold and if you are willing to lock up more capital for an indefinite period. Hold No. 5. You have no choice in the matter of North-East Bultfonteins but to keep them, unless you are inclined to give them away. A Perplexed Spinster.—Hold Bank of New South Wales shares, which are a good investment. Hold the other two stocks named for the present. Shebas are quoted 14s. 6d., 15s. 6d., which seems to be a fair figure for them. The big capital is a drawback and should not be lost sight of. Fiddlestrings.—Although the return of Home Rails Nos. 1-3 is low and the coal strikes will scale down dividends for this year, you will, perhaps, wish to hold as a permanent investment. That must depend on your own decision. The Bonds Nos. 4-6 should be held, also Nos. 7 and 9. Get rid of No. 8 if you can. Sell the mining shares Nos. 10 and 14. Hold Nos. 11 and 13-16.

Various Investments.

Silver has fluctuated within narrow limits, at one time rising to 32¾d., and receding to 32$\frac{5}{16}$d. The improvement seems to have been entirely due to orders for the East, and the decline set in when these were filled. Amongst the so-called silver securities, Mexican Sixes have risen to 62¾, reacting to 61¼. Mexican Rails are weak, and Mr. Mackusick's Second Prefs. have dropped to 39, while Peruvian Corporation stocks have fallen sharply, the Debentures receding as much as 3½ to 57½ on fears of litigation. There has been a moderate improvement in Greeks on the formation of a new Cabinet, with M. Tricoupis at its head. It is satisfactory that the King should have — though tardily — placed this statesman again into power, for he is the only Greek financier whom Europeans are inclined to trust, but even he will find great difficulty in unravelling the tangled skein of Greek finance. The question of a new loan, and of some kind of European control, will now, no doubt, crop up again. In Chili the vexed question of the paper currency is still disturbing trade. When this is settled, there will be a more general revival in the country, and exchange, which has been greatly depressed, will rise again. A very favourable effect should then be produced upon the railways and the Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia capital stock, now earning 6 per cent. (which is moreover guaranteed), will have a prospect of increased dividends. The October traffic, by the way, again showed a large increase, amounting to 407,000 dols. against 254,000 dols. last year. Nitrate Rails have advanced to 15, as I anticipated, and show great firmness in anticipation of further large traffic returns. The fact that immense amounts of money are at present idle in the hands of bankers was illustrated by the tenders for the £750,000 Treasury bills last week reaching the sum of £10,000,000. Yet, notwithstanding this plethora of money, unreasonable distrust prevents the recovery in the Stock Markets, which seems so well justified.—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

P.S., Tuesday.—Since writing the above, Government intervention in connection with the coal strike has shed a new ray of hope on the situation. Should the coal war terminate at an early date, a revival in the Home Railway market might give the other departments that impulse of which they stand so greatly in need.

Typewriters of all makes for Sale or Hire. Machines bought or taken in part exchange for new ones. Documents copied with accuracy and despatch.—N. Taylor, Manager, National Typewriter Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane.

Rational Dog Feeding.—Give wholesome and nutritious food (Spratt's Patent Meat Fibrine Dog Cakes). Do not give tit-bits and dainties because your dog, like a spoilt child, prefers what suits his palate. See that the Dog Cakes are stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "×," as cheap and innutritious imitations are often substituted for extra profit. Pamphlet on Canine Diseases post free, Spratt's Patent, Limited, Bermondsey, London.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

A LUCKY CROSS-EXAMINATION.

TOM BRIGHTLEY had had a good many anxious and perplexing cases since he was called to the Bar, but never one which caused him so much anxiety and perplexity as the following:—

The facts, so far as they were presented to him, were these. Achilles Flatman, a writer for the Secularist Press, was going down to Windsor on Saturday afternoon with the intention of spending Sunday up the river. He was alone in his compartment until a moment before the train started; then suddenly an elderly, prim looking lady bustled in beside him. When the train reached Ealing this lady gave Achilles into custody for assaulting her by putting his arm round her waist and attempting to kiss her.

Now, to Tom Brightley the charge, on the face of it, was absolutely incredible. Tom knew Achilles well. In his briefless days he and the redoubtable Secularist had been fellow-writers on the short-lived Chancery Lane Gazette, which was started for the purpose of teaching common people common law. Achilles—though the outside public, who knew him only by his ferocious denunciations of the Virgin Mary, the Patriarchs, and the Apostles, thought him a reckless desperado—was, as Tom knew, really one of the most timid and shyest men he ever met. In the presence of women he was afraid to open his own mouth, let alone attempt to kiss theirs. Tom could not imagine him guilty of such boldness even with the freest of the sex, and he felt convinced that in the company of such a prim and severe and elderly lady as the prosecutrix was, Achilles' only desire would be to hide himself out of her sight.

And yet if he had not attempted to kiss Miss Christian, why had she brought the charge? She was a lady of unblemished character and of good social and pecuniary position, so the suggestion of blackmail was altogether out of the question. Physicians who had attended her assured Tom's solicitor that hysteria was equally out of the question: they all agreed that Miss Christian was a woman of exceptional strength of nerves and coolness of head. The only other alternative was that the charge was trumped up for the sake of vengeance. That was the solution Achilles Flatman himself favoured. He assured Tom that he had for several weeks before the charge was made noticed Miss Christian, or a lady very much resembling her, hanging about the office of the Iconoclast, the militant journal of which Achilles was at once the editor and the staff, and he was convinced that she had brought the charge against him impelled either by her own anger at his attacks on the established faith, or by the persuasions of the clergy who, Achilles maintained, regarded him with feelings of hatred and terror sufficiently strong to induce them to stoop to any device to secure his ruin.

Improbable as this theory seemed, Tom was at first inclined to adopt it in default of a better. Soon, however, the inquiries of his solicitor showed it to be untenable. Miss Christian never went to church. She was regarded by the clergy of all denominations in her neighbourhood as a lapsed and lost one. As she was reputed rich, every clergyman, from the Vicar of the parish to the Shepherd of the "Christians Elect," had made it his business to attempt to gather her into his fold, and each one in his turn had been repulsed. She openly expressed her disdain for the whole set, and if she was religious at all, what her particular views were was a secret known apparently to herself alone. People whispered indeed that she had once or twice been seen in a Roman Catholic church, but, on investigation, there seemed to be no substantial grounds for this rumour.

Yet though he could discover no conceivable motive for bringing a false charge, Tom never for a moment doubted that the charge was false. Achilles' character, as has already been said, made it in the highest degree improbable that he could commit such an offence, and his assurances and protestations of his innocence had the ring of sincerity in them.

"I swear to you, Mr. Brightley," the little man declared, with tears in his eyes, "the thought of such a thing would never, and never did, enter my mind. I have my faults, Mr. Brightley—brown sherry is one of them; but I'm always most reserved with ladies—I am, indeed, Mr. Brightley."

"You hadn't been taking too much brown sherry before this happened?" asked Tom.

"No, sir, no. I had been a teetotaller, Mr. Brightley," exclaimed Achilles. "Yes, a teetotaller, sir, for two whole days nearly. I was resolved, in fact, to give it up; besides, I had no money to pay for any."

"How was it you were travelling first class to Windsor then?" asked Tom.

"Oh, Lord Rumansberry, who is the Iconoclast's chief, and, I might say, only permanent subscriber, sent me the ticket with an invitation down."

"I see," said Tom, and he was silent for a moment. He was thinking, could the whole thing be a joke of old Rumansberry's? That venerable member of the peerage was capable of breaking his best friend's neck just for the fun of the thing. A moment's reflection, however, showed Tom that this solution was impossible. There was no reason to believe Lord Rumansberry knew of Miss Christian's existence, and, besides, the lady's character and position made it impossible that she would lend herself to such a device.

"Tell me exactly what happened," Tom then said, "from the time you got into the train at Paddington until the charge was made."

"Well, you see, the train was just starting. I was deep in Colonel Ingersoll's last great work, when the carriage-door opened, and in jumped Miss Christian. I looked up, and she kind of glared at me for a moment, and then seated herself in the corner furthest away from me. I noticed nothing more until the train began to slow as it came into Ealing. Then suddenly she gave her bonnet a pull to the side, tossed up her hair a bit, and struck herself a smart slap on the cheek, which left a red mark. Then, while I was gazing startled and alarmed at her extraordinary behaviour, the train stopped, she opened the door hastily, jumped out with a scream, and the next thing I knew was my being seized by the collar by a porter, and dragged out of the carriage."

"It is certainly a marvellous tale," was Tom's comment. "I doubt very much whether you will get the jury to believe it."

"But it's true. I assure you it is as true as true can be," protested Mr. Flatman, vehemently.

"I don't doubt you," said Tom. "I was merely expressing my fear about our being able to persuade the jury of its truth. You see, most unfortunately for you, appearances, and, what is even worse, prejudice are against you. Your story is, on the face of it, extremely improbable, because the conduct of the woman is utterly motiveless. Then again, her character and position make it more improbable still; it is inconceivable that a wealthy and respectable lady should bring such a charge without some reason or other. Then—I'm sorry to have to say so—your character, as the public understand it, makes her story seem more probable, and, therefore, makes yours seem more improbable. A jury of churchgoing tradesmen will think that nothing is more likely than that a Secularist should attack unprotected ladies. Then, last of all, there is against you that unfortunate tendency that juries of men will always display—a tendency to believe a woman before a man. So you see, although you are innocent, you mustn't blame me if you are found guilty. Your solicitor and I will do everything we can for you, but, to tell you the honest truth, I'm not very hopeful of the result."

When the case came into Tom's hands, Mr. Flatman had already been before the Magistrate, who had heard Miss Christian's evidence, and then, on the application of the defendant's solicitor, had adjourned the case for a week to give him an opportunity to instruct counsel. When the case came on again, Tom appeared for Flatman. He cross-examined Miss Christian in a general sort of way, chiefly for the purpose of seeing what her story really was, and what kind of person she was herself. As yet he would adopt no more specific line of cross-examination, as he had not yet made up his mind as to the proper course for the defence.

In reply to his questions, Miss Christian retold her story clearly and well. Every attempt of his to make out any discrepancy between what she now said and what she had said before completely failed. She answered, too, firmly and unhesitatingly, and appeared as little disconcerted or nervous as a woman under such circumstances could be expected to be. There was an air of resentment also in her references to the defendant that seemed to show that she bore a grudge towards him for injury done. Instead of his cross-examination shaking her evidence, Tom felt that it had only strengthened it. Indeed, a doubt whether, after all, her story was not true, and whether Flatman in a moment of temporary insanity, or of exaltation due to brown sherry, had not behaved in the way described, came into Tom's mind, and, in spite of all his efforts to believe in his client's innocence, persisted in remaining there.

After the cross-examination was over, the porters who were on the platform when the train came in were called. They all spoke to the state of excitement in which Miss Christian was when she reached Ealing, and to the fact that her bonnet and hair were disarranged, and that marks, as of fingers, were on her left cheek. This completed the case for the prosecution. The Magistrate, at the request of Tom Brightley, who did not admire the sort of justice administered at London County Sessions, committed Flatman to take his trial at the Old Bailey.

During the interval between the commitment and the trial, Flatman's solicitor made inquiries in every direction as to the prosecutrix. Nothing whatever was discovered which threw the slightest light on the case, or which supplied the shadow of a motive for bringing a false charge against Flatman, if false charge it was. His solicitor, indeed, who knew him less intimately than Tom Brightley, did not hesitate to express privately his view that Flatman was guilty, and Tom himself, when the final result of the investigations was put before him, summed up his opinion in the words that either Flatman was guilty or Miss Christian was mad. Unfortunately for Flatman, Miss Christian always showed herself uncommonly sane.

At last the trial came on. Tom Brightley, as he took his place in Court, felt almost as uncomfortable as his client did as he took his stand in the dock. Tom could not make up his mind what to say for the defence. He had thought of suggesting blackmail, mistake, madness; but there was not a glimmer of evidence to support any one of these. In the end he resolved to wait for anything which might turn up during the case for the prosecution, and if nothing did turn up simply to deny the fact and call evidence of character to show that such conduct as that charged against Flatman was most improbable—a very hopeless defence he himself could not deny.

Miss Christian was the first witness called for the prosecution. Her appearance at once favourably impressed the jury. A better example of a modest, straightforward, respectable lady of forty-five or so than she seemed could not be imagined. And she gave her evidence admirably. Without hesitation or equivocation she answered the questions put to her shortly and to the point. When the prosecuting counsel sat down and Tom Brightley rose to cross-examine her it was clear to any one accustomed to Courts that the Judge and every man on the jury believed her evidence was the evidence of truth.

Tom saw this, and he knew how hard it is to shake such a conviction when once established, and he knew also how little material he had on which to rely to shake it; but he pulled himself together and began the desperate task with that air of confidence which only the born advocate is able under such circumstances to assume. His first concern was to discover what she knew of the prisoner. She did not seem loth to impart her knowledge of him, which simply amounted to this, that he was an infidel writer and orator—a fact Tom was not anxious to have much attention called to. She admitted she sometimes read his paper, though she was not of his way of thinking. She had never attended his lectures. When she got into his compartment she had no notion who he was. She denied that she ever had been about the office of the Iconoclast, or, indeed, knew where the office was. Thus ended Tom's not very successful attempt to establish a motive for bringing the charge.

Next he examined her as to the occurrence itself. Never was there a better witness. Every attempt Tom made to confuse her ended in his defeat: every attempt to establish discrepancies, in his confusion. After half-an-hour's sharp conflict, he felt that the battle was over and the victory was with the witness.

He was just glancing over his notes of the evidence to see if he had omitted anything before sitting down, when a slip of paper was handed to him from somebody in the benches behind him. He opened it and read, "Ask her if she knows anything about the Virgin Mary."

Startled by the strangeness of the suggestion, Tom turned round, and asked in a Court whisper who had sent the paper?

"Somebody behind," replied a junior. "It was passed down from the back of the Court."

"See if you can find the sender," said Tom, and he turned to the witness and asked some trifling questions to give time for inquiries.

"Can't discover at all who it was," at last the junior behind whispered.

What could the mysterious communication mean? Was it merely a joke perpetrated by some frivolous member of the Junior Bar, or was it a suggestion from some one who knew some twist or crank in the witness's mind? Tom could not decide to his satisfaction which it was most likely to be.

He had, however, no time to think. He must use the suggestion at once, or abandon it altogether. As things stood the case was lost. The worst that could happen if he asked the question suggested would be a rebuke from the Judge. In desperation he resolved to risk this on the chance of helping his client.

"Miss Christian," he said, speaking in the most off-hand way, "do you happen to know anything about the Virgin Mary?"

The jury opened their eyes with amazement, and the Judge gasped with speechless indignation. Before his Lordship could recover his breath to interfere, the witness had replied.

"Yes, I do," she said, eagerly. "I know something no one else knows."

Now the amazement of the Court went out, not to the question, but the answer. Tom, though his heart was jumping in his breast, looked as cool as possible.

"I thought so," he said, just as if he had all along been leading up to this answer. "Now, may I ask you what is your private information?"

A dead silence reigned in the Court, while the witness drew herself proudly up and put her hand on her bosom.

"It is this," she said, gravely; "I am the Virgin Mary!"

* * * * *

Unknown to her doctors, and even her most intimate friends, Miss Christian was a hopeless monomaniac, and she had trumped up this charge against Achilles Flatman in revenge for his articles in the Iconoclast. Who it was that gave Tom the information which revealed the real facts was never discovered, but no doubt it was some old servant or dependant to whom Miss Christian had confided the secret of her life.

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one-half West-end price.—PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion. Perfect fit guaranteed. Caution, the only address, other people are trading on our name.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is, 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

ART NOTES.

MY notice of the exhibition of oil paintings at the Institute is, I am aware, belated, but it is belated of intent. I have, in fact, purposely refrained from writing in hot haste what I thought about it. But the result of my delay is somewhat embarrassing; for now, when I sit down to write about it in cool leisure, I feel that I have positively nothing edifying to say. It seems so utterly futile to assert for the twentieth time that there are three times too many pictures crowded upon the walls, and that half the number would have been appreciated twice as well. It is so useless to record the personal feeling of dazed depression with which one turns at last from the closely packed mosaic of canvases. It is such a waste of space to complain of the multiplication of mediocrity and the prevalence of the pot-boiler. The simple fact is that the number of painters and the facilities for the exhibition of their works have so enormously increased of late years that Art is becoming hackneyed and commonplace by its very diffusion. Just as a lover of music closes, or would like to close, his ear against familiar melodies ground out by a score of barrel-organs, so does the lover of Art instinctively turn from the dull and uninspired, though often workmanlike, way in which well-known types of landscape and familiar beauty-spots are reproduced time after time at this, that, and the other Gallery. Many of our younger artists see this for themselves, and this accounts for the new departures they take and the daring way in which they fly in the face of convention.

But at the Institute there is little to be seen of the new methods. Most of the older men are content to repeat themselves; whilst many of the younger men are too prone to repeat, to the best of their ability, somebody else. Thus it is that one turns almost eagerly to Mr. Rupert Bunny's picture (No. 481). He, at any rate, has painted the Annunciation as no artist has ever painted it before, and this in itself is a merit in the Piccadilly show. It is true that his angel looks at a little distance like a white Queen standing on a chess-board, and suggests some such title as "Mate in Three Moves" or "A Reminiscence of the Tchigorine-Tarrasch Match," but none the less the picture is interesting, and that is saying a great deal.

No. 583 would not be so bad if Mr. Adrian Stokes had not painted a similar subject so very much better; and Mr. J. R. Reid's picture of a village postman (No. 259) may be accepted as satisfactory enough if it is intended to be a burlesque by himself of the artist's own very pronounced style. Mr. Skilbeck's little joke is to give us a Virgin Mary with a missal bound and illuminated up to mediæval date (No. 230). Perhaps next year he will be waggish enough to depict Jehu on a "Pneumatic Safety," or Elijah ascending to heaven in an electric tram. Why, oh! why, should Mr. Delapoer Downing want to trespass in Mr. Marcus Stone's copyright garden (No. 543)? Mr. Somerscales is a little disappointing with his deep sapphire seas, which, at any rate, suggest an infringement of Mr. Henry Moore's well-known marine patent. If Mr. Haynes Williams's young lady has the ear-ache as badly as she appears to have it (No. 512), it is difficult to understand why she is so silly as to take off her hat in the open air. And what in the world can have led Mr. D. Porter to take so much trouble in painting a gouty foot (No. 456)? Mr. Cecil W. Roe and Mr. Arthur Burrington have pictures in the Exhibition of exceptional merit.

There is nothing in Mr. Charles Sainton's collection of silver-point drawings at the Burlington Gallery (27, Old Bond-street) which is particularly new. This artist has shown us several times before with how much delicacy and daintiness he can use a method of drawing now so rarely employed. So long as he keeps to idealized sketches of ballet girls and fairies his work is satisfactory enough as an exemplification of what can be done with the pure line. But silver point does not lend itself to the drawing of such prosaic types as London newspaper boys and street arabs.

Mr. Thomas McLean's winter exhibition contains specimens of most of the artists whose works one expects to see at No. 7 in the Haymarket. There we find, of course, "A Highland Spate," by Mr. Peter Graham; a series of peasant children by Harlamoff; another strip or two of Mr. Kenny's interminable roll of sapphire sea; a Sussex pastoral, by Mr. E. M. Wimperis; and a new arrangement of M. Eugene de Blaas' buxom and comely models. There is more freshness, for the London picture viewer, in the two characteristic paintings by B. J. Blommers. In the place of honour is a replica of Mr. W. Q. Orchardson's well remembered Academy picture, "The Young Duke."

MUSIC.

ALTHOUGH it is nearly six months before the opera season at Covent Garden opens, Sir Augustus Harris is already credited with the idea to produce, among others, the following operas new, or almost new, to this country, to wit—Leoncavallo's "I Medici" and "Vie de Bohême," Mascagni's "Radcliffe" and "Romano" (the work, perhaps in order that it may not be confounded with the advertisement of a restaurant, has been rechristened "Roma"), Puccini's "Manon," Bruneau's "L'Attaque du Moulin," Gounod's "Sapho," Cowen's "Signa," Tschaikowsky's "Mazeppa," Massenet's "Werther" and "La Navarraise," a new opera by Mr. Isidore de Lara, Smetana's "Sold Bride," Berlioz's "Damnation de Faust," Verdi's "Falstaff," and one or two others. He is also strongly advised to revive Balfe's "Puits d'Amour," Barnett's "Mountain Sylph," Gluck's "Iphigenia," Handel's "Rinaldo," Paisiello's "Serva Padrona," Peri's "Euridice," and various archaic works, the mounting of which would probably result in a deficit of £400 a night. That any of the operas of the ancient repertory will be given I do not believe there is the smallest chance. Meanwhile, fifteen new operas are announced for the Covent Garden manager, who is confidently expected to produce the whole lot in a season which, at the most, cannot last longer than eleven weeks. It is perfectly true that Druriolanus has made no announcement on his own account. Instead, the manager acted the wise part of going over to Milan last week to hear two of the new operas that have been offered him, and to decide for himself. Whether he will accept either or both, or neither, is unknown here, and is perhaps not yet settled by Sir Augustus. It will suffice that one is described as Wagneresque and the other as Cowenesque, that both suffer under the disadvantage of being in four acts (though the last two acts of Mr. Cowen's "Signa" have now, it appears, been thrown into one), and that in both the modern habit of killing off the most interesting personages is faithfully observed. Indeed, in Leoncavallo's "I Medici," in which Giuliano de' Medici is represented as in love with two young women at a time, one of them dies of consumption and heart disease in the penultimate act, her demise being hastened by the fact that her unworthy lover is blithely singing love duets with her dearest friend almost under her very window; while in the next act the lover is stabbed in church, to the huge satisfaction of his brother Lorenzo the Magnificent, who, coram publico, congratulates himself that his rulership of Florence is now uncontested. Mr. Cowen's tragedies are, on the other hand, left to the last scene of all. He has carried us through Tuscan farmyards, where impresarii come in search of budding prime donne, and through the bustle of a Neapolitan carnival, until at last the flighty heroine is stabbed by the hero's own avuncular relative, and the hero himself commits suicide with the same knife. This economy of weapon is dramatic, and it will also prove a perfect godsend in certain Italian opera-houses not so bountifully provided with "properties" as Covent Garden. Meanwhile, Mr. Cowen's music is said to be a great advance upon his previous opera "The Lady of Lyons," and it seems to have fairly surprised some of the Milanese, who had never before heard an opera by an Englishman, and believed that no Briton could write one. I believe that before Sir Augustus left Italy he also had some sort of a private hearing of a new opera by Mascagni.

Although it was sent out "With Sir George Grove's compliments," I should imagine if the manuscript announcement in regard to Schumann's "Genoveva" were submitted in its original form to the genial director of the Royal College of Music, a scholarship in newspaper paragraphing would forthwith be formed at Kensington Gore. Meanwhile, "Genoveva" is not "as yet unheard in this country." It has, of course, not yet been given in its entirety, and perhaps the scenes with the ghost and the dumb boy would hardly be appreciated on our stage. But all that Dr. Villiers Stanford deemed worth producing of the music was performed by the Bach choir at St. James's Hall on March 8, 1887.

"Genoveva," by the way, furnished an excellent example of the thin-skinnedness of the musical critics of old. Schumann himself could write some trenchant criticisms, as witness his notice of Meyerbeer's "Huguenots"; but when F. E. Krüger, who was one of his staff on the Neue Zeitschrift, ventured to express his opinion of "Genoveva," Schumann insulted and quarrelled with him, so that Krüger resigned.

Although Mr. Manns is usually to be thanked for the helping hand which he gives to the younger school of native musicians, it would be interesting to know what induced him to revive Mr. Granville Bantock's prelude to the "Fire Worshippers." The piece cleverly orchestrated as it is, was written by this young Wagner lover in his school days for a Royal Academy concert, while as the prelude is a mere introduction to a big cantata, there are many good reasons why it should not be heard apart from its surroundings. Mr. Manns was on safer ground in giving a hearing to Miss Beatrice Langley, a promising young English violinist, who seems to need a better violin, but on the other hand, Mr. Plunket Greene might now give a rest to old Irish songs, unless, indeed, he can find another "Off to Philadelphia."

Signor Piatti made his reappearance at the Popular Concerts on Monday, but for his solo he could discover nothing better than part of his own violoncello sonata in C, which he gave us twice in 1885 and had down to Monday not tried again since. Señor Sarasate, too, returned to London on Monday, but only to play familiar chamber compositions in association with Madame Marx. While fully recognising and acknowledging the talent of Madame Marx, the doctrine "toujours perdrix" is not without its weight, and it would be interesting to watch the result of a change of pianists.

It is not given to every pianist to refuse £25,000 for a three months' tour. But M. Rubinstein has declined this offer, which was made to him by Hermann Wolff, the Berlin concert agent, and henceforward he intends to stick to his own music. He proposes to give three recitals of his own pianoforte works at Berlin this winter, but no charge will be made for admission, which will be limited to music students. But what he chiefly desires is to see his sacred operas "Moses" and "Christus" on the stage. He once consulted the late Dean Stanley as to the possibility of the stage production of these works in this country, but the answer, as may be expected, was not wholly satisfactory.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—A singularly precocious niece of mine of ten summers asked me the other day "if it did not make the Queen very angry to read in history that people called her uncle 'Silly Billy'?" In reading "Catriona" (1)—the finest story that has appeared since "Kidnapped," to which it is the sequel—I could not help wondering again and again how the Duke of Argyll will appreciate the merciless portrait of his ancestor there presented to him. The present Duke, as his grossly unscrupulous indictment of a nation, "Irish Nationalism" (2) shows, is no sticker at trifles when a partisan political purpose is to be served; but the Celtic ferocity which that work exemplifies as vigorously as it denounces it, is necessarily a nineteenth-century modification of the savage hate which in the eighteenth century made his ancestor plot and execute the dastardly judicial murder of James of the Glens. Why the Duke should need to go for instances of internecine Celtic falsehood and ferocity to early Irish history, when he had them to his hand in the Scotch annals of yesterday and of his own house, is neither inexplicable nor unnatural; since it is those who live in glass houses who usually do throw stones, according to the shrewd Spanish proverb:—"Herradura que chacolotea clavo le falta"—"The clattering hoof means a nail gone." The ferocity of the Duke's onslaught upon Irish ferocity recalls the famous judicial charge of his ancestor recorded in "Catriona." Having kidnapped the hero because his evidence would have exculpated the intended victim, and having suborned false testimony to this victim's guilt, and having packed a Campbell Jury to secure a partisan verdict, the Duke as Justice-General upon the Bench thus frankly explained to the condemned Stewart—and the explanation is historic—his reasons for compassing his judicial murder:—

> Having referred to the year '45, the chief of the Campbells, sitting as Justice-General upon the Bench, thus addressed the unfortunate Stewart before him:—"If you had been successful in that rebellion, you might have been giving the law where you have now received the judgment of it; we, who are this day your judges, might have been tried before one of your mock courts of judicature; and then you might have been satiated with the blood of any name or clan to which you had an aversion."

Yet the present Duke has to go back to the Irish of the twelfth century for examples of the intertribal and internecine savagery of the Celt! Fancy any Scotchman—not to say a Campbell, not to say the head of the Campbells—holding up hands of holy horror at "those pure Irish Celts of the twelfth century, with unspellable and unpronounceable names, tearing at each other's throats, ravaging each other's territories, slaughtering each other (men, women, and children), and leaving each other, so far as they survived, to perish with hunger in the bogs and woods of a ravaged land." "Quis tulerit Gracchos de seditione querentes?" But to return for a moment to "Catriona," it is a rarer than that all but rarest of achievements—a successful sequel—since it is a sequel more successful than its predecessor. "Kidnapped" was the finest imaginative effort since "Esmond," but "Catriona" is finer than "Kidnapped," and because it is "Catriona"—because, I mean, of its exquisite portrait of that heroine. There is nothing in English fiction more exquisite than this picture of the boldness of absolute innocence, and of the shrinking sensitiveness of its innocent shames. Nor in all English fiction is the lovers' necessary misunderstanding more delicately, more naturally, or more artfully contrived to show the characters of the couple clear to the bottom. Was there ever a more maidenly, naïve, or natural betrayal of love and jealousy than Catriona's?—

> "Did you kiss her truly?" she asked. There went through me so great a heave of surprise that I was all shook with it. "Miss Grant!" I cried, all in a disorder. "Yes, I asked her to kiss me good-bye, the which she did." "Ah, well!" said she, "you have kissed me too, at all events."

And the clearing up of the misunderstanding, and the rushing together of their long pent-up and fretted hearts on that desolate Dunkirk shore—is there anything to approach it for natural and simple pathos and passion, and "the old-time innocence of love" in any contem-

(1) "Catriona": A Sequel to "Kidnapped." By Robert Louis Stevenson. (London: Cassell & Co.)
(2) "Irish Nationalism": An Appeal to History. By the Duke of Argyll, K.G., K.T. (London: John Murray.)
(3) "Kenilworth." By Sir Walter Scott, Bart. With Introductory Essay and Notes by Andrew Lang. Twelve Etchings. Two Vols. (London: John C. Nimmo.)
(4) "The Little Minister." By J. M. Barrie. With nine Illustrations by W. Hole, R.S.A. (London: Cassell & Co.)
(5) "The Patriot Parliament of 1689." With its Statutes, Votes, and Proceedings. By Thomas Davis. Edited with an Introduction by the Hon. Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, K.C.M.G. (London: T. Fisher Unwin.)
(6) "Travel and Adventure in South-East Africa." By F. C. Selous. With Illustrations and Map. (London: Rowland Ward & Co.)
(7) "The Australians." A Social Sketch. By Francis Adams. (London: T. Fisher Unwin.)
(8) "A History of the Gold Coast of West Africa." By A. B. Ellis. (London: Chapman & Hall.)
(9) "Cradock Nowell": A Tale of the New Forest. By Richard Doddridge Blackmore. (London: Sampson Low, Marston, & Co.)
(10) "The Hand of Ethelberta": A Comedy in Chapters. By Thomas Hardy. (London: Sampson Low, Marston, & Co.)
(11) "Twice-Told Tales." By Nathaniel Hawthorne. Second Series. (London: Frederick Warne & Co.)
(12) "Glances Back through Seventy Years." By Henry Vizetelly. Two vols. (London: Kegan Paul, Trench, & Co.)

porary story? Not the least charm of the book for you will be its sinewy style, which has all the supple vigour of an athlete in perfect training. There's not a word wasted or wanting, or out of place or of proportion, or undecided in its aim, reach, or stroke. Let me pay Mr. Stevenson the deserved compliment of mentioning in the same breath with "Catriona," the latest issue of the "Border Edition" of the Waverley Novels "Kenilworth" (2), and that other brilliant Scotch novelist, Mr. Barrie, the compliment of sitting above the salt in the same noble company, "The Little Minister" (3), of which a new edition with nine illustrations by Mr. Hole, has just appeared. In reading Sir Charles Gavan Duffy's brilliant introduction to the first volume of the "The New Irish Library"—Thomas Davis's "The Patriot Parliament of 1689" (4)—I was more than once reminded of the hero of "Catriona's" horror of politics, inspired by the Duke of Argyll's judicial murder of James Stewart:—

> But I had had my view of that detestable business they call politics. I had seen it from behind, when it is all bones and blackness; and I was cured for life of all temptation to take part in it again.

You will say that by this every one, except the Duke of Argyll, knows that the policy of England in Ireland seen from behind is, and has always been, "all bones and blackness"; and that Sir Charles Gavan Duffy's scathing exposure of it in his masterly Introduction

> Is as tedious as a twice-told tale
> Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man.

But, if nothing new can be said of English policy in Ireland, of Irish policy in Ireland much can be said—and has in this little shilling volume been fully and fairly said—that will startle the readers of those historical novelists, Macaulay and Froude. Let me adjure you to give some spare half-hour to this little book, which sets forth Irish policy in Ireland, not as Froude or Macaulay, Duffy or Davis, represents it, but as it is expressed in the Acts of that Patriot Parliament itself. Lest my recommendation in a matter wherein I admit some prejudice might naturally weigh lightly with you, I shall fortify it by the unquestionable judgment of Mr. Lecky. In the second volume, and on the 184th page of his "History of England in the Eighteenth Century," you will find this note:—

> By far the best and fullest account of this Parliament with which I am acquainted is to be found in a series of papers on it (which unfortunately have never been reprinted) by Thos. Davis in the Dublin Magazine of 1843. In these papers the Acts of Repeal and of Attainder are printed at length, and the extant evidence relating to them is collected and sifted with an industry and skill that leaves little to be desired.

"The absent are always in the wrong," says an Italian proverb, and so are the silent; hence Macaulay and Froude have hitherto, in default of the defendant's appearance in Court, had it all their own way in their special pleading against the Irish government of Ireland. In common fairness you should hear, if not the advocates, at least the facts, on the other side, before you pronounce judgment—all the facts, not one or two selected and distorted out of a mass that point directly the other way. If these long-buried feuds and ferocities are to be dug up by such men as the Duke of Argyll, let us have a general resurrection of them, according to the happy suggestion of Mr. Selous to Ma-kwaykwi in what promises to be the most delightful book of travel of the season, "Travel and Adventure in South-East Africa" (6).

> "Selous," cries Ma-kwaykwi, "you have finished the King's game. You are a witch; you must bring them all to life again. I want to see them all—all. Let them all walk in at the kraal gate, the elephants and the buffaloes, and the elands."
> "All right, but when the lions come in will you, Ma-kwaykwi, remain where you are to count them?"

A coherent book of any sort will soon be as scarce as four-year old mutton; since it pays the author, as it pays the farmer, better to dispose of the immature product. "The Australians" (7), like "China and Her Neighbours," is a collection of magazine articles strung together mechanically by the thread of the binder. It is called "A Social Sketch," though it is a sketch of a country in which "society" in the technical sense is, says the author non existent.

> To treat of "culture" and "society" in Australia, in the sense that one does in the greater European capitals, would be like treating of snakes in Iceland.

Isn't it odd, by the way, that the quaint forty-second chapter of Horrebo ne's "Natural History of Iceland" should always be misquoted thus? The heading is "Concerning Owls," and the entire contents of the chapter consist of the single sentence:—

> There are no owls of any kind in the whole island.

Mr. Adams's smartly-written chapters upon the intellectual and spiritual life of Australia might be similarly concise and negative; and, indeed, there would seem to be an equal, that is, an almost absolute, lack of every characteristic grace of Christianity and virtue of civilisation throughout that Continent.

Yet more depressing reading is Colonel Ellis's rather dry, but accurate, "History of the Gold Coast of West Africa" (8). It is hard to decide whether the Christian Powers, inclusive even of that Isle of Saints, England, or the native tribes whom they robbed or murdered, or employed to rob and murder each other, were the more treacherous or relentless savages. Upon one interesting, if incidental, point the History contradicts, on what seems overwhelming evidence, the popular belief—L.E.L.'s suicide and its cause. According to Mrs. Bailey, and to the biographers of that facile versifier, L.E.L., the lady was driven to suicide by the Bluebeard infidelities and brutalities of her husband, Mr. Maclean, Governor of the Gold Coast. Colonel Ellis, however, adduces evidence which seems conclusive against both the Bluebeard outrages of the husband and the suicide of the wife.

> From the testimony of all the Europeans of Cape Coast, Mr. and Mrs. Maclean were on the most affectionate terms, and the precarious condition of the health of the former, who had been confined to the castle through sickness nearly the whole time his wife was on the Coast, effectually disposed of the supposed debaucheries, and of a charge afterwards made that he neglected her nightly for orgies in town. Nor could the suggestion of suicide be maintained, for upon the table at which she had been writing lay an unfinished letter to a lady friend written in a most cheerful strain.

L.E.L. certainly took an overdose of Scheele's preparation of prussic acid, but she had taken it for spasms according to a long established habit which her husband had strongly discountenanced. The moral is, have no close relations of any kind with a literary celebrity, since the picturesque biographer would sacrifice his own mother, or as Wordsworth has it,

> Would peep and botanise
> Upon his mother's grave.

to heighten a colour, deepen a sentiment, or add a graphic detail.

Before closing I must advertise you of the appearance of cheap editions of Mr. Blackmore's "Cradock Nowell" (9), of Mr. Thomas Hardy's "The Hand of Ethelberta" (10), and of the classical "Twice-Told Tales" of Hawthorne (11). —Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely, DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

P.S.—Mr. Henry Vizetelly's "Glances Back through Seventy Years" (12) is a singularly interesting scrap-book, like nothing so much as the mélange it describes of the Parisian bijoutier:—

> Hors d'œuvres were mixed with roasts and vegetables with entremets; fishes' heads, scraps of cutlets, fricandeaus and fillets, half-picked drumsticks, and portions of ragouts and mayonaises were intimately blended with fragments of pastry, salads, macaroni, vegetables, cheese, and fruits, the whole being, moreover, impregnated with at least twenty different sauces.

Unlike this mélange of the "bijoutier's," however, Mr. Vizetelly's retrospect is at once appetising and appetisingly served. It is, to be sure, desultory to incoherence; but your attention, if continually distracted, is never wearied, and though you can open the volumes where you will without any break of interest, you cannot lay them down so lightly. Any one interested in the evolution of the Press from the Ascidian stage will find the book of absorbing interest, and will well understand Teufelsdröckh's description of such a backstairs revelation of the newspapers of that day as "Satan's Invisible World Displayed." The awful editorial "We" may sometimes be somewhat still of a Mokanna to-day, but it is at least more respectable and self-respecting than in the days when Colbourn boasted that £100 spent in advertisements would secure such favourable criticisms from the literary oracles of the time as would force any book down the throat of the public.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—How do you like the cold wind that has been gambolling about for the last few days? I can't abide it, to use a phrase of Sarah's. I nearly screamed with cold when I went out the other morning and turned the corner, meeting a full, roaring blast of bitter wind and a quantity of dust that it was blowing along exactly on a level with my eyes, it seemed. How I do envy men for not having to wear veils! They can never know the sensation of having a handful of dust poured in through the meshes of the lace without the smallest possibility of getting out again, and feeling it meander down one's cheeks. Men have not to grope for their own noses on a cold day, as we have, under the necessary piece of net that serves to keep our hair tidy. It is impossible to keep it neat without a veil, is it not? There are certain kinds of cold days that are far from disagreeable, but an east wind, combined with a lot of loose road-dust, is a different sort entirely.

We had a splendid view of the Lord Mayor's Show from a window in Cannon-street, and spent a most enjoyable morning, for directly the Show had passed we sat down to a sumptuous luncheon, the main features of which were oysters and champagne, and to both of these I did the fullest possible justice. Although the Show did not seem to me quite so lengthy as in former years, it was well up to the mark, and the two triumphal cars representing the Tower Bridge and Caxton's Printing Press were a decided success. The idea of having the latter emanated from the Lord Mayor himself. He being a stationer has of course been the medium for supplying tons upon tons of paper for printing purposes. He therefore owed a debt of gratitude to Caxton, and I must say he paid it in a very handsome manner. But I rather think the most popular feature—and deservedly so—was the lifeboat, manned, as it was, not by mere supers, but by the men belonging to the Deal lifeboat—men who have saved so many lives. They were most heartily cheered all along the route. From an æsthetic point of view the great attraction was the brand-new City Marshal in a brand-new uniform and on a brand-new horse. He was indeed "a thing of beauty," and I trust that he will find his position a "joy for ever." The City Fathers are, I understand, very proud of their new Marshal, not merely for his appearance, but because he is a genuine West-end bred and born Baronet instead of a mere City-made article. But, whilst admiring this new addition to the City Troupe, I could not but feel what a pity it was that his wife was not induced to ride by his side; in fact, the absence of our sex from the Show is a great mistake. I am sure the members of the Common Council would have hailed with delight the presence of the City Marshal's wife in the procession, for there is no doubt it was owing to the way in which she charmed these worthy Councillors when appealing to them for their votes on behalf of her husband that he won his election. And why should not the Common Councillors themselves bring their wives and their daughters?

Before leaving the City Councillors I must enter a protest against their wearing the chimney-pot hat of everyday City life when clothed in their sable-trimmed robes. The Lord Mayor has a head-gear far more in accordance with the rest of his attire. Why should not the unfortunate Councillors be equally favoured? As to the Lord Mayor, he seemed to be one of the cheeriest Lord Mayors I have seen for many a day; and though, doubtless, the thoughts of his heavy responsibilities were constantly before him—how could they be otherwise, seeing he was confronted all the time by the mace and the sword of office?—he had plenty of time to recognise his many friends on the line of route. I hear delightful stories of the way he is going to entertain during his term of office. I hope amidst all the banquets he will not forget our sex, and give some dances—small and earlies, I would suggest, at the Mansion House—not large and late ones at the Guildhall. The former are far more enjoyable than the latter. But, from what I am told, I think we may with safety trust our interests in the hands of the Lady Mayoress.

Here is a little anecdote for you in connection with the Show. Charlie went down from his club to Trafalgar-square with a friend of his to have a look at the procession. In putting up his hand to his hat for a moment, in some way he jerked the cigar he was smoking into the air, and afterwards could not find it anywhere, though he could smell it burning. He took off his overcoat and searched all his pockets, but could not find it anywhere, though the odour of burning continued quite strong. Much puzzled, he did not know what to make of it, when a man in the crowd pointed with his stick to a young woman's hat, and nestling in the brim of it he saw the missing "smoke" calmly consuming the feather that formed part of the trimming. Very gently abstracting it, he threw it on the ground, set his heel upon it, and rapidly left the spot, the owner of the hat being in complete unconsciousness of the whole affair.

I went to the dressmaker about your evening dress, and have started it comfortably on its way. The pink broché is a lovely shade, soft and pale, and the green velvet bows and rosettes will be simply sweet. I gave the strictest instructions that your beautiful and precious old lace was not to be touched with the scissors, but I wish you had let them use some bought lace, and kept the old in your own possession. You could then have put it on the gown when the other had been worn once or twice. You see, a dressmaker can answer for herself that she will not cut it, but not for all her numerous hands. The order must occasionally miss the very one to whose share it falls to sew on the lace. I have been rendered very cautious by frequent accidents of the kind.

We turned into Russell & Allen's, and saw some perfectly delightful evening gowns. One was a yellow brocade made with a plain skirt and a dinner jacket. The latter was turned back from the neck, with a deep collar of white satin, over which was laid a shaped piece of fine cream-tinted lace. The sleeves were turned back at the elbow with cuffs of white satin, also veiled with lace. At the waist, both back and front, was a small band of open-work jet, holding, or seeming to hold, the folds together. This touch was most artistic, the jet being lined with white satin, like the lace. Another pretty bodice was in broché velvet of a very soft pink shade, the flowers being rather deeper in tone. Turned back from the neck was a full collar with overlapping points, made of white satin bordered with a band of black satin, a narrow jet fringe following the line of junction of the black and white. The double basques, made of the velvet, were rather full. This bodice was to be worn over a skirt of black jetted tulle. Some of the moiré silks for evening wear quite enchanted us. One was in the palest tones of pink and blue, which made a perfect union. Another, already made up, was in pale pink, with large double-puffed sleeves in mirror velvet, also pink, with a delicious bloom upon it. The bodice, one of the old-fashioned pointed ones now revived again, was trimmed with bands of the velvet coming in points to the waist and ending among the fulness of the sleeves. The skirt was remarkably new and pretty, each seam being covered a little way up with twists of the velvet, nding in a "cauliflower" bow of the same. This trimming vas carried up nearly to the waist on the two front eams. For wearing with a black satin skirt was a vhite satin bodice cut low and made with just a fold of leep rose pink velvet laid inside at the edge where it touches he shoulders of the wearer. A sort of pleated fan of black atin rose high over either sleeve, a black satin rosette narking its beginning and its ending. A jet centre rightened each rosette. Towards the centre was a pink elvet rosette. A very wide band of black satin formed a vaist belt, fastening in front under a large bow, the two oops of which stood well out on either side of the centre n a way that was peculiarly chic. Equally pretty in its wn way was a yellow satin bodice, starred with silver nd made baby fashion, with folds coming upwards from he waist and ending in open flutes bordered with silver ace. Inside the bodice was a becoming fold of creamy ace. The sleeves, a picture in themselves, were lined with atin a shade paler than the other. A bow with long ends n pure white moiré ribbon made a graceful effect at one ide of the waist. Now, were not these pretty dresses? They make one long to invest for one's own adornment.

HUNTING SEASON, 1893-4.—Busvine's new designs and materials for this year include several special novelties in Riding Habits, Coats for Walking and Driving, Walking Jackets, Gowns, &c. Can be seen at 4, Brook-street, or will be sent by return of post.—JOHN BUSVINE, by special appointments to the Princess of Wales, the Empress of Germany, the Empress of Austria, &c., &c.

RIDING HABITS.—A speciality in Riding Habits. Has been declared the best, without exception, by all ladies who have seen it. Quite new. Patented. Made only by G. S. WOLMERSHAUSEN & Co., LTD., 16, Gt. Marlborough-street, Regent-street, London, W.

Have you not often noticed how badly nearly all men's hirt-fronts set when worn in evening dress? They ither bulge out at the sides or gape open in the front—r, what is most usual, work themselves into a deep crease cross the centre. Now, Charlie has been, with our ssistance, and with the assistance of a Nottingham firm—Messrs. Slatter & Slatter—making a study of this, to nen, all-important question. Messrs. Slatter make their hirts on a principle of their own—that is to say, they ut them not only to measure and size, but to suit the uild of each individual figure; so that, as they put it, 'any abnormal development" is fully provided for, thus reventing all bulging and creasing. It stands to reason hat a shirt ought to be cut differently for a man, say, 5 in. round the waist to that for a man 25 in. Then, gain, this firm cut the sleeves as you would cut the leeves for a coat, which gives more freedom, but at the ame time does away with a vast mass of superfluous inen. In fact, they build up their shirts from a pattern he same as a tailor builds up a coat; which, in addition o other advantages, has that of enabling them to repro-luce the same shirt at any time. Charlie is delighted vith his experiment, and says that not only is this style f shirt advantageous in the matter of evening dress, ut that it is exceptionally comfortable wear in con-ection with all athletics.

I forgot to tell you last week of an incident that occurred n Spanish-place. Maud and I saw a lady catch her foot n the braid of her dress and pitch heavily forward, coming lown with a crash upon the pavement. With her was a ittle girl who, seeing that she did not get up, seemed very nuch frightened, crying out in a voice of distress, "Oh, nother, are you hurt?" The only person who happened o be near them at the moment was a clergyman who had lmost to step over the lady who had fallen. He walked ast, however, without taking the slightest notice and scended the steps of the large school that is close by. When Maud and I reached the spot we found that no par-icular harm had been done by the fall, but we both felt nd expressed surprise at the conduct of the clergyman. Can you imagine any one behaving in such an unfeeling nanner?

Apropos to dress braids, you must always use the indings made of velveteen, for they act as polish to the oots, whereas braid rubs it off. Make a note of this. The proper way is to fold it in two, turn the double part o the edge of the dress, and turn in the two raw edges owards each other, sewing them very closely and firmly o the dress. The velveteen can also be used as a inding.

Have you seen any of the new wavy braids for trimming dresses? They are sewn with a sequin at each point, as he waves rise to an angle and dip down again. Some-imes beads outline the edge as well. The new beaded vaist-belts are very pretty and becoming. They have a deep, strong buckle in front and shorter ones at regular intervals round either side. Between these, large beads are hung in wavy lines. With the dress trimmed with one of the above braids and the belt in the same colour, a pleasant effect of uniformity is obtained. A tan coloured gown could have both the addenda in golden brown or a deeper tone of tan, and I have seen a Gobelin blue woollen material trimmed with dark blue sequined braid.

Is not getting up in the morning a struggle on these cold mornings? This is one of the occasions when we are made aware of our own duality. When we are called in the morning one of us wants to get up, and keeps reminding the other that there will be a rush and a flurry later on if we do not at once turn out. The other takes no heed, but lazily lies enjoying the delicious comfort of the last few moments, falling into a little doze sometimes from which That Other within us is sure to awaken the more indolent half of us just as the stolen sleep seems sweetest. The struggle between the two, ends usually in the victory of the energetic half, for facts are stern things, and the breakfast hour is, or seems, one of the sternest of them when the glamour of departing sleep invites us to linger on the pillow.

Paris babies who have correct ideas of what is up-to-date and psychologically suited to the moment, have their nurses dressed in Russian costume. It is just possible that our English babies may feel called upon to follow suit before long, when our parks will be frequented by Muscovite nursemaids who speak with a cockney twang. What do you think?

I have just seen the twenty-first annual report of St. Mary's Cottage Hospital, at Northam, Southampton. This excellent charity was founded in 1872 by Mrs. Black, and is a pleasant instance of what can be done by one good-hearted woman for the suffering poor. A good heart, however, is not enough in itself. It must be supplemented by untiring energy, a capacity for administrative details, and a head for accounts. The only qualification needed by the patients is that they are suffering from ulcers of the leg or diseases of the skin. This is sufficient passport, no letters of recommendation being needed. Children are also admitted freely, so that practically there are no limitations to the hospitality exercised. Even the fares of certain patients are paid to enable them to attend while living at a distance. It is pleasant to turn to the balance-sheet and find that there is actually a hospital in England which is not in debt. I see that Hospital Sunday yielded a sum of £57 to the charity, and that the ball given at Princes' Hall last May, though it clashed with the ever-memorable so-called "Reception" at the Imperial Institute, resulted in the sum of £210 being realised.

The Women's London Gardening Association has got on so well that it has opened larger premises at the original address in Lower Sloane-street. They gave an At Home to celebrate the event, and had a table very prettily laid out with gold and terra-cotta chrysanthemums, and lovely glass shaded to exactly match the flowers. The lights were shaded in the same scheme of colour, and even the d'oyleys were embroidered in tints that harmonised with all the rest. The Association now sells fruit as well as flowers. Their principal business is that of tending greenhouses and window plants in the absence of their owners from town. This was just the thing that so many women longed for who loved their plants, and hated to leave them to the care (or otherwise!) of servants.

My remarks upon the Scotch haggises shown at the Cookery and Food Exhibition have elicited an interesting letter on the subject from a Scottish gentleman. He says that modern fastidiousness now sends the dish to table wrapped in a napkin, and pleads guilty to himself preferring it served in that dainty style. He adds, "No doubt you will give me credit for a Scotchman's proverbial 'literalness' when I explain that Sir Walter Scott, of course, expressed the correct principle of haggis cooking, but with obvious exaggeration." My correspondent

The most beautiful of Winter Garments are those of Nature's own production—FURS. For an elegant fit, genuine and best furs, go to NICHOLAY'S, Manufacturing Furriers, 170, Oxford-street, London. Seal Jackets re-made to fashionable shapes. Moderate prices.

MESSRS. REDFERN beg to announce that the models of Gowns, Coats, Mantles, &c., designed and prepared for winter wear, are now ready, and display the combined ideas of the latest London and Paris Houses.—27, New Bond-street, W.

declares that haggis is by no means a lady's dish, and that he can never get his wife to regard it with mercy, but that on a cold, raw day, or when frost embitters the air, it is most excellent and appetising.

This being so, I have asked him to send me a recipe for making the famous dish, and will tell you all about it when I hear from him.

In the meantime, this is a quite lovely dish. You may call it Suprême de volaille aux huîtres :—

Stir 4 oz. of freshly-made bread crumbs into half a pint of stock, boil until it is a stiff paste, and place it aside to cool. Cut the meat from the breast of an old hen, pound it in a mortar, add the prepared panada and 1 oz. of butter, pound again until it is a pulp, then add one egg and work it with the pestle until the whole is thoroughly amalgamated ; season with salt and pepper, and rub it through a wire sieve. Now work it with a wooden spoon in a basin, adding a gill of cream at intervals. Decorate a plain pipe mould with rings of truffle, put in the cream, twist a buttered paper over and steam very carefully (without allowing it to boil) for half an hour. Put twelve oysters into a stewpan with the liquor, just bring them to the boil, strain at once and remove the beards. Dissolve ½ oz. of butter in the stewpan, mix in a dessertspoonful of flour, and add sufficient oyster liquor to make the quantity of sauce required, stir until it boils, then add half a teacupful of cream, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, the bearded oysters, and a few small quenelles (which should be made with a portion of the forcemeat), add a seasoning of salt and pepper, replace the lid and stand the stewpan in a bain-marie to warm, as it must not boil. At the time of serving turn the suprême on to a silver dish, fill the centre with the oyster ragout and pour the sauce round.

This dry curry, also, is particularly nice, and an excellent way of using cold game :—

Cut a large onion into small dice, put it into a stewpan with an ounce of butter, cover with the lid, and fry it until the onion is a light brown colour. Pare, core, and mince two large apples, add them to the onion, and allow them to cook in their own steam until they are done. Now add a dessertspoonful of (Vencatachellum) curry-powder and one of paste, a dessertspoonful of tomato purée, one of chutney, and one of King of Oude's sauce, replace the lid and stand it on a warm part of the stove for twenty minutes. Pick the meat from the bones of cold poultry or game into small shreds, mix them with the prepared curry, add a little cream, or cold white sauce, replace the lid and allow it to get quite hot. Then arrange it in a nice heap in the centre of a silver entrée dish, garnish with fried croûtons of bread, and serve boiled rice in a separate dish. To boil the rice :—Put a 4-quart stewpan on the stove, half full of water ; when it boils shower in 4 oz. of Patna rice, replace the lid and boil quickly (without stirring) for twenty minutes. Strain it into a colander and wash the rice in several waters. Allow it to drain on the rack for fifteen or twenty minutes, when it should be quite dry and every grain separate.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

OLD SILVER FOR PRESENTS.

The Choicest Stock of genuine Old Silver in London, at moderate cash prices, with 10 per cent. discount.

SPINK & SON,
Goldsmiths and Silversmiths.
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, W.
and at 2, GRACECHURCH ST. CORNHILL,
LONDON, E.C.

ESTABLISHED 1772. Under the Patronage of H.M. the Queen.

MOURNING FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR.

Messrs. JAY'S

Large and well-assorted STOCK includes a choice and varied selection of COSTUMES, MANTLES, and MILLINERY, suitable for any degree of Mourning, and ready for IMMEDIATE WEAR. Orders to special instructions are executed in a few hours, and Ladies are Waited Upon in any part of the country without any extra charge whatever.

JAY'S,
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

EXSHAW'S No. 1 BRANDY,
66/- per dozen.
SUPPLIED DIRECT TO THE PUBLIC.

CHAMPAGNES.
JULES CHAMPION & CO.'s (in All Sizes), 68/- Per Doz.
Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1884 (in Bottles only) 105/- per doz. Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1889 (in all sizes) 84/- per doz.
Lebeau & Co. Vintage 1889, 54/- per doz.

POWELL, TURNER, & CO.,
28, KING STREET, ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

CHUBB'S 128, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, LONDON, E.C.
FIRE RESISTING. JEWEL THIEF RESISTING.
WEST END BRANCH—
68, ST. JAMES'S STREET, PALL MALL, S.W. SAFES.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.
THE VIENNESE STRING BAND WILL PLAY DURING
3/6 DINNERS, 6 to 8.30. SEPARATE TABLES. NO CHARGE FOR ATTENDANCE. 5/-

"To breathe 'Sanitas' is to breathe Health."

CORDON STABLES C.M., M.D., R.N.

"Sanitas" Eucalyptus Disinfectors, 1s. each.

"SANITAS OIL"
Prevents and Cures
Bronchitis, Influenza, Diphtheria,
AND ALL
Lung and Throat Affections.
DIRECTION:
INHALE and FUMIGATE with "SANITAS OIL."
PAMPHLETS FREE ON APPLICATION
THE SANITAS Co., Ltd., Bethnal Green, London, E.

"Sanitas" Oil, 1s. Bottles;

Pocket Inhalers, 1s. each.

Fumigators, 3s. 6d. each.

"Sanitas" Eucalyptus Oil, 1s. Bottles.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.
300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

LADIES' HOSIERY.

Ladies requiring stockings for comfort, elasticity, and wear-resisting qualities should ask for the Patent TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE, which are undoubtedly the best produced. They are made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

Each pair is stamped with the Registered trade mark, "MUSA DYE," and "PATENT TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE, No. 20,778" on sole of foot.

To be obtained of all the best Hosiers and Outfitters in the United Kingdom.

Ladies experiencing any difficulty in obtaining these goods are requested to write to the patentees, who will forward them the address of the nearest vendor. This will ensure their having the genuine article.

Wholesale only of the Patentees:
DEBENHAM & FREEBODY,
Fletcher Gate, Nottingham.

MELLIN'S FOOD
For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

MELLIN'S EMULSION
Of COD LIVER OIL and HYPOPHOSPHITES.
The Finest Nutritive and Tonic Food for Delicate Children and Weakly Adults.
VERY PALATABLE. EASILY DIGESTED. PERFECTLY SAFE.
Price 1s., 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per Bottle.

MELLIN'S FOOD BISCUITS
(Manufactured by Carr & Co., Carlisle, especially for G. Mellin.)
DIGESTIVE. NOURISHING. SUSTAINING.
For Children after Weaning, the Aged, Dyspeptic, and for all who require a simple, Nutritious, and Sustaining Food.
Price 2s. and 3s. 6d. per Tin.

AN ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET ON THE FEEDING AND REARING OF INFANTS,
A Practical and Simple Treatise for Mothers, containing a large number of Portraits of Healthy and Beautiful Children, together with facsimiles of original testimonials which are of the greatest interest to all mothers, to be had, with samples, free by post on application to Mellin's Food Works, Stafford Street, Peckham, S.E.

The Original Firm, Established 1810.
MAPPIN BROTHERS'
"Queen's" Plate.
(PROTECTED)
For TABLE FURNISHING, &c.

By Her Majesty's Special Warrant.

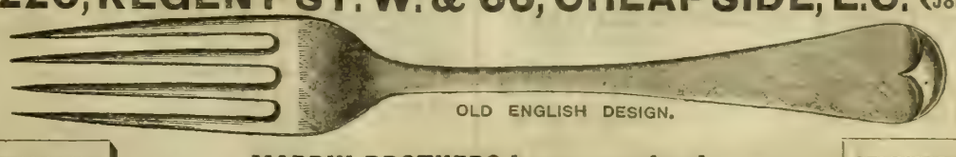
Queen's Plate is the finest in the World. Has stood the test of over 80 years, and is supplied direct to the public by the actual Manufacturers

From Queen's Works, Sheffield.

Mappin Brothers' Corporate Trade Mark is on all Manufactures in Queen's Plate and Queen's Cutlery.

Only London Show Rooms: 220, REGENT ST. W. & 66, CHEAPSIDE, E.C. (Next Sir John Bennett's.)

OUTFITS OF "QUEEN'S" PLATE.



"QUEEN'S" TABLE CUTLERY.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST and SAMPLES POST-FREE.

MAPPIN BROTHERS have received THE HIGHEST AWARDS at the CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

SELECTIONS of Goods forwarded to the Country on APPROVAL.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW NOVELS, &c.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "DEAR LADY DISDAIN."

JUSTIN McCARTHY'S New Novel, "RED DIAMONDS," is just ready in 3 vols., at every Library.

MACLAREN COBBAN'S New Novel, "THE BURDEN OF ISABEL," will be ready immediately, in 3 vols., at every Library.

Vashti and Esther: A Story of Society To-Day. By the Writer of "Belle's" Letters in the World. 2 vols.
"It has in it all the material necessary for the pleasant and profitable occupation of a spare afternoon."—Daily Telegraph.

Outlaw and Lawmaker. By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED. 3 vols.
"A highly interesting story, very charmingly told."—Scotsman.

Woman and the Man. By ROBERT BUCHANAN, Author of "God and the Man." 2 vols.

To His own Master. By ALAN ST. AUBYN, Author of "The Old Maid's Sweetheart," &c. 3 vols.
"The book is brilliantly written."—Scotsman.

A Wasted Crime. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat," &c. 2 vols.
"Takes a high place, not only among the novels of the year, but among the achievements of the admirable writer from whom it comes."—Daily Chronicle.

The Woman of the Iron Bracelets. By FRANK BARRETT, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c. 3 vols.
"A lively story vividly told."—Westminster Gazette.

The Rebel Queen. By WALTER BESANT, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." 3 vols.
"A remarkable work. It is fascinating as a fiction, and instructive and suggestive as a study."—World.

The Gun-Runner: A ROMANCE OF ZULULAND. By BERTRAM MITFORD. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.
"An intensely exciting story. The author writes from a fulness of experience."—Review of Reviews.

The Luck of Gerard Ridgeley: A TALE OF THE ZULU BORDER. By BERTRAM MITFORD. With a Frontispiece by STANLEY L. WOOD. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. [Immediately.

The Red Sultan. By J. MACLAREN COBBAN. A new Edition. Crown 8vo., cloth extra, 3s. 6d.
"Apart from its attractiveness as a simple story, 'The Red Sultan' has quite exceptional claims to admiration in virtue of its vividly pictured and dramatically disposed group of character studies.....Comparisons are odious, and therefore we will not say that in 'The Red Sultan' Mr. Stevenson's 'Kidnapped' has found its superior, but we will say that it has found a worthy peer."—Daily Chronicle.

Emile Zola. A BIOGRAPHICAL AND CRITICAL STUDY. By R. H. SHERARD. With Portraits, Illustrations, and Facsimile Letter. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s.
"An admirable book.....A model of what a biography should be."—To-Day.

From Paddington to Penzance: THE RECORD OF A SUMMER TOUR. By CHARLES G. HARPER, Author of "The Brighton Road." With 105 Illustrations by the Author. Demy 8vo, Irish linen, 16s.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

F. V. WHITE & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

I.

WINTER'S CHRISTMAS ANNUAL
(Ninth year of Publication), entitled
A MAN'S A MAN. By John Strange Winter.
In picture cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d. [At all Booksellers and Bookstalls.

II.

By Mrs. Lovett Cameron.—A TRAGIC BLUNDER. 2 vols. [At all Libraries.

III.

By Florence Marryat.—THE HAMPSTEAD MYSTERY. 3 vols. [At all Libraries.

IV.

By B. M. Croker.—A THIRD PERSON. 2 vols. [At all Libraries.

F. V. WHITE & CO., 14, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

W. H. ALLEN & CO.'S Publications.

New Novel by Mr. SHERER, at all Libraries.

ALICE OF THE INN.

A TALE OF THE OLD COACHING DAYS.

By J. W. SHERER, C.S.I.

Author of "Who is Mary?" &c. [This day.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE SHADRACH;

AND OTHER STORIES.

By FRANK R. STOCKTON.

"There is not a tale in the book which is not pleasant, easy, and entertaining reading."—St. JAMES'S GAZETTE.

Crown 8vo, 5s.

HERE AND THERE IN ITALY AND OVER THE BORDER. By Signora LINDA VILLARI, Author of "Tuscan Hills and Venetian Waters," &c.
"Madame Villari is a pleasant writer, and conveys a clear general impression of the places she visited."—Bradford Observer.

Crown 8vo, Illustrated, 6s.

IN THE SHADOW OF THE PAGODA: Sketches of Burmese Life and Character. By E. D. CUMING.

NEW EDITIONS OF STANDARD NOVELS, 6s.

AN AMERICAN MONTE CRISTO. By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF AN EMINENT POLITICIAN. By EDOUARD ROD. (Rendered into English from "La Vie Privée de Michel Tessier.")

THE HARLEQUIN OPAL. A Romance. By FERGUS HUME.

London: W. H. ALLEN & CO., Limited, 13, Waterloo-place, Publishers to the India Office.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

THE SECOND EDITION IS NOW READY.
In 3 vols.

MARIE CORELLI'S NEW WORK,

BARABBAS:

A Dream of the World's Tragedy.

"Where there is so much that is elevating and devout, as in this remarkable literary work, we prefer to recognise the writer's faith and let her special opinions pass."—Guardian.

"Say what the critics may, this book will have a wide circulation here and in America. Apart from the perennial attractiveness of the central theme, readers will recognise the serious endeavour of the Author to portray vividly and realistically what she conceives to have been the historic setting of the terrible last days of Christ. . . . It is the most ambitious flight of a novelist who has crowds of readers and devoted admirers."—Christian World.

"Will doubtless find many readers and admirers."—Black and White.

"It may be said at once and without hesitation that Miss Corelli has written many pages of real power and imaginative beauty, and that the book as a whole is vivid, and has a certain reality."—Illustrated London News.

"To some readers it may convey a more intense conception of the incidents it describes than the more brief and restrained descriptions of the Evangelists."—North British Daily Mail.

CHEAP JACK ZITA. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "Mehalah," "In the Roar of the Sea," &c. Three vols.
A Romance of the Fen District in 1815.

THE STAR-GAZERS. By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of "Elf's Children," &c. Three vols.
"A stirring romance."—Western Morning News.

A WOMAN OF FORTY. By ESME STUART, Author of "Muriel's Marriage." Two vols., crown 8vo.

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THE ICELANDER'S SWORD. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "Mehalah," &c.
With 29 Illustrations by J. MOYR SMITH. Crown 8vo, 6s.
A stirring story of Iceland, for boys, by the Author of "In the Roar of the Sea."

TWO LITTLE CHILDREN AND CHING. By EDITH E. CUTHELL.
Profusely Illustrated, crown 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, 6s.
Another story, with a dog hero, by the Author of the very popular "Only a Guard-Room Dog."

TODDLEBEN'S HERO. By M. M. BLAKE, Author of "The Siege of Norwich Castle." With 36 Illustrations, crown 8vo, 5s.
A story of military life for children.

METHUEN & CO., 18, Bury-street, W.C.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

IN EVERY HOME A USE IS FOUND FOR ELLIMAN'S

For Aches and Pains

ELLIMAN'S UNIVERSAL EMBROCATION

AN EXCELLENT GOOD THING

One Shilling and Three halfpence

PREPARED ONLY BY ELLIMAN SONS & CO. SLOUGH, ENGLAND.

LUMBAGO.

From a Justice of the Peace.

"About a fortnight ago a friend advised me to try your Embrocation, and its effect has been magical."

STRENGTHENS THE MUSCLES.

From "Victorina," "The Strongest Lady in the World."

"It not only relieves pain, but it strengthens the nerves and muscles."

SORE THROAT FROM COLD.

From a Clergyman.

"For many years I have used your Embrocation, and found it most efficacious in preventing and curing sore throat from cold."

BRONCHITIS.

From Mr. R. J. Callis, 5, Trelawn-terrace, Hendon. January 26th, 1891.

"My two children, two and four years old, were attacked, last November, with bronchitis. The Doctor could give them little relief, and finally it appeared in an aggravated form. At last I thought I would try your Embrocation, and, I am pleased to tell you, with gratifying results. They are both well now, and I have no hesitation in saying through using your splendid Embrocation."

PREPARED ONLY BY

ELLIMAN, SONS, & CO.

SLOUGH, ENG.

1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. Of all Chemists.

BACK HURT.

From Mr. J. A. Dickson, 170, Belsize-road, South Hampstead, N.W., May 29th, 1891.

"A month ago, whilst playing a somewhat rough part, I fell and hurt my back. The next morning I could not move, but I sent for a bottle of your Embrocation, and had it well rubbed in, and in two hours could get up, and by the time the bottle was empty was cured."

CYCLING.

From L. Fabrellas, St. Sebastien, Spain.

"I am a member of a Cycling Club here, and can testify to the excellent results to be obtained by using your Universal Embrocation."

RHEUMATISM.

From A. Barton, Esq., The Ferns, Romford.

"I write to say that had it not been for Elliman's Embrocation I should have remained a cripple up to the present moment."

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED.

FOUNDED IN 1842.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE (either New or Second-hand) of the BEST ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from One Guinea per annum. LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for books exchangeable by the Library Messengers) from Two Guineas per annum. COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from Two Guineas per annum. N.B.—Two or three friends may unite in One Subscription, and thus lessen the cost of carriage. LIBRARY BOXES GRATIS.

TOWN AND VILLAGE CLUBS SUPPLIED ON LIBERAL TERMS.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books Gratis and post free.

SALE DEPARTMENT.

All the Leading Books of Past Seasons are on Sale, second-hand, at greatly Reduced Prices. LISTS GRATIS AND POST FREE.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON;

241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; and 48, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Mansion House End).

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NEW WORKS.

NOW READY.

A HISTORY OF THE POST OFFICE, from its Establishment down to 1836. By HERBERT JOYCE, C.B., one of the Secretaries to the General Post Office. In 1 vol., demy 8vo, 16s.

NOW READY.

A HISTORY OF ENGLISH DRESS—Saxon, Plantagenet, Tudor, Stuart, and Modern. By GEORGIANA HILL, Author of "Mundus Muliebris." In 2 vols., demy 8vo, with numerous Illustrations on Steel, 30s.

NOW READY.

THE DUKE OF SOMERSET. The Letters and Memoirs of Edward Seymour, Twelfth Duke of Somerset, K.G. Edited and arranged by Lady GUENDOLEN RAMSDEN and W. H. MALLOCK, Author of "In an Enchanted Island," &c. In 1 vol., demy 8vo, 16s.

NOW READY.

LADY BLESSINGTON. The Conversations of Lord Byron and the Countess of Blessington. With a contemporary Sketch and Memoir of Lady Blessington. A New Edition with Notes. With 8 Portraits. In 1 vol., demy 8vo, 15s.

NOW READY.

A LOTOS-EATER in CAPRI. By Dr. ALAN WALTERS, Author of "Palms and Pearls; or, Scenes in Ceylon." With Illustrations and a Map. In 1 vol., large crown 8vo, 10s. 6d.

A NEW EDITION NOW READY.

STRAY RECORDS; or Personal and Professional Notes. By CLIFFORD HARRISON. A New and Cheaper Edition, in 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

GET THIS DAY from your Library the following three good Novels, published by Digby, Long, & Co.

1. UPPER BOHEMIANS. By F. G. WALPOLE, Author of "Lord Floysham." Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. [Just out.

2. MARIANELA. A Novel. From the Spanish of B. PEREZ GALDOS. By MARY WHARTON. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. [Just out.

3. WHAT HAPPENED AT MORWYN. By MARIA A. HOYER. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. [Just out.

ALSO

THE NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "IN OTHER LANDS."

THREE EMPRESSES: JOSEPHINE, MARIE LOUISE, EUGENIE. By CAROLINE GEAEY. With Portraits. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. [Just out.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO., Publishers, 18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

Sixth Edition, Sixteenth Thousand, Crown 8vo, paper cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

FOODS for the FAT:

HOW TO CURE CORPULENCE.

By Dr. YORKE DAVIES, Licentiate Royal College Physicians, London.

"I strongly recommend it to fat people."—Lady's Pictorial.

"The fattest will rise up and call the doctor blessed."—World.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS COMPANY,

29 & 31, BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK,

Have Been Appointed our Agents in America for the sale of

"TRUTH."

Single copies can be obtained through any newsdealer in the United States and Canada, or by applying direct to the International News Co., where yearly subscriptions will also be received. Newsdealers throughout the United States and Canada can obtain supplies of TRUTH by applying to the wholesale agents.

"TRUTH"

CAN BE OBTAINED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING AT

THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,

242, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

Mr. WM. HEINEMANN'S LIST

THE ART BOOK OF THE SEASON.

REMBRANDT:

His Life, His Work, and His Time.

By ÉMILE MICHEL,

Member of the Institute of France.

Translated by FLORENCE SIMMONDS. Edited and Prefaced by FREDERICK WEDMORE.

In Two Vols., 4to, containing 67 Photogravures and Reproductions in Colour of Paintings and Chalk Drawings, and 250 Illustrations in the Text. Price £2 2s. net.

Also an ÉDITION DE LUXE, on Japanese vellum, limited to 150 Numbered Copies for Great Britain, with Duplicates of the Photogravures on India paper, price £10 10s. net. (Only a few copies remain unsubscribed for.)

The latest inventions in Photogravure and Process-Engraving have enabled the Publisher to reproduce almost everything of Rembrandt's that is accessible in the Public Galleries of Europe, as well as most of the numerous Private Collections in England and on the Continent. A Complete and Detailed Catalogue of the Master's Pictures, Etchings, and Drawings is included.

An Illustrated Prospectus may be had on application.

A Friend of the Queen.

(MARIE ANTOINETTE—COUNT FERSEN.)

Translated from the French of PAUL GAULOT by Mrs. CASHEL HOEY. 2 vols., 8vo, with Portraits, 24s. [At all Libraries.

TIMES.—"M. Gaulot's work tells over again, with new and authentic details, the romantic story of Count Fersen's devotion to Marie Antoinette, of his share in the celebrated Flight to Varennes, and in many other well-known episodes of the unhappy Queen's life."

Memoirs.

By CHARLES GODFREY LELAND (Hans Breitmann).

In 2 vols., demy 8vo, with 2 Portraits, 32s. [At all Libraries.

TIMES.—"From first to last a very entertaining book, full of good stories, strange adventures, curious experiences, and not inconsiderable achievements, instinct with the strong personality of the writer, and not unpleasantly tinged with the egotism that belongs to a strong personality."

The Romance of an Empress.

CATHERINE II. of RUSSIA. From the French of R. WALISEWSKI. In 2 vols., 8vo, with Portrait, 28s. [At all Libraries.

NEW NOVELS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES. IN THREE VOLUMES.

MRS. HUNGERFORD'S NEW NOVEL.

THE HOYDEN.

By the Author of "Molly Bawn."

"A clever, sprightly story . . . fresh, sunshiny, and delightful."—Scotsman.

"Mrs. Hungerford's novels are never dull. Her latest romance 'The Hoyden,' has that power of attraction which Mrs. Hungerford's pen possesses in no ordinary degree."—Daily Telegraph.

A Comedy of Masks.

By ERNEST DOWSON and ARTHUR MOORE.

"It is a powerfully-written society tale of London salons and the features of the faces behind the masks which are worn therein. . . . Indeed the dramatic power of the whole book, while free from the least taint of melodrama, is so striking, that if it were rewritten for the stage we should venture to predict for it a brilliant success."—Guardian.

THIRD EDITION.

The Countess Radna.

By W. E. NORRIS.

"In style, skill in construction, and general 'go' it is worth a dozen ordinary novels, and justifies the place its author has obtained among living masters of fiction."—Speaker.

FOURTH THOUSAND.

The Heavenly Twins.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "Ideala," &c.

"Everybody ought to read it, for it is an inexhaustible source of refreshing and highly stimulating entertainment."—Daily Telegraph.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.

NOVEMBER. Price 2s. 6d.

ABRIDGED CONTENTS.

THE STRUGGLE IN THE SENATE,

1. Misrepresentation of the Senate. By SENATOR W. H. STEWART.
2. Obstruction in the Senate. By SENATOR H. C. LODGE.

EUROPEAN WOMEN,

1. A "Parisienne." By the MARQUISE DE SAN CARLOS.
2. The "Spanish Woman. By EVA CANEL.

HIGHWAYMEN OF THE RAILROAD. By W. A. PINKERTON.

THE WEALTH OF NEW YORK. III. By the MAYOR OF NEW YORK.

MAGIC AMONG THE RED MEN. By Prof. H. KELLAR.

THE WELSH IN POLITICS. By J. E. OWENS.

THE DECLINE OF ECCLESIASTICISM. By J. E. RAYMOND.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

45, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

James R. Osgood, McIlvaine & Co. beg to announce that they will publish Next Week the Christmas and December Combined Number of "HARPER'S MAGAZINE." This issue will be complete in itself, and the price One Shilling, as heretofore.

The very gratifying success attained in past years has encouraged them to enter into contracts with many of our leading and best known Artists for the production of a magnificent Number, which it is intended shall be pre-eminent for the beauty of its illustrations and the variety and interest of its literary contents.

These arrangements have necessarily entailed a large expenditure of money, but it is confidently anticipated that the

CHRISTMAS "HARPER" of 1893 will prove the success of the season.

To secure Copies orders should be placed with your Bookseller without delay.

THE CAMPAIGN IN MATABELELAND.

All interested in this Campaign, in South African Politics, and especially the Chartered Company, should read the Cheap Third Edition of

LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL'S BOOK,

Now Ready at all Booksellers',

"MEN, MINES, AND ANIMALS IN SOUTH AFRICA."

FULLY ILLUSTRATED. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, price 6s.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & COMPANY, LIMITED.

THREE STRIKING NEW NOVELS, IN A NEW SERIES, have just been published by Messrs. Griffith, Farran, & Co.—"THE CONFESSIONS OF A WOMAN," "AN ADOPTED WIFE," by A. Keyser, and "DUST and LAURELS," by M. Pendered. They are published at Two Shillings each, and may be had at all the Libraries, of all Booksellers, and at all Bookstalls.

GRIFFITH, FARRAN, & CO., 39, Charing Cross-road, London.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE BATTLE OF DORKING."

At all the Libraries, in Three Vols., post 8vo.

The Lesters;

OR, A CAPITALIST'S LABOUR.

By General Sir GEORGE CHESNEY, K.C.B., M.P.,

Author of "The Battle of Dorking," "The Dilemma," "The Private Secretary," &c.

"The descriptions of social life in London are vivid and amusing, and are characterised by a real knowledge of the scenes and classes described."—The Speaker.

A SHORT HISTORY of the RENAISSANCE in ITALY. Taken from the work of JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS. By Lieutenant-Colonel ALFRED PEARSON. With a Steel Engraving of a recent Portrait of Mr. Symonds. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d.

VOLTAIRE'S VISIT to ENGLAND 1726-1729. By ARCHIBALD BALLANTYNE. Crown 8vo, 8s. 6d.

"Eminently readable throughout."—Daily Telegraph.

"A valuable and able piece of literary work."—Scotsman.

ALL the YEAR with NATURE. By P. ANDERSON GRAHAM. Crown 8vo, 5s.

"Of the 23 papers composing the volume there is not one which does not brim over with love of nature, observation of her by-paths, and power of sympathetic expression."—Observer.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

Now is the time to subscribe!!!

The New Volumes of the Century Illustrated Monthly Magazine

and

St. Nicholas for Young Folks

commence with the November part.

The Programme for 1894 includes

Mark Twain.

Two Stories by Rudyard Kipling.

Four Stories by Timothy Cole.

A new series of Engravings from the Dutch Old Masters by Timothy Cole.

Write for an extended prospectus of the Jay Volumes

Subscription (half years) Century 8/-

Post free.— St. Nicholas, 6/- Post free

T. FISHER UNWIN, PATERNOSTER SQ. LONDON.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HÔTEL METROPOLE.—On the East Cliff, facing the sea, three minutes' from East Station. The largest, and most magnificent Hotel in Bournemouth. Now open to receive visitors. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.
GEORGE ALEXANDER, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 12s. to 15s. per day.
According to position of rooms selected.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 783.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

PORT OROTAVA, Teneriffe.—HOTEL MARTIANEZ (late GRAND).—First-class, standing in a beautiful garden. Shady verandahs, large public and private rooms. Billiards, tennis. Good cooking, good wines, excellent spring water.
Manager, J. R. EGGER.

PORTRUSH, co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL (B. and N.C. Rly). Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner. French cuisine. Combined Railway and Hotel Tickets from Belfast.—Illustrated tariff on application to MANAGER.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL.—First and leading hotel in St. Leonards. Unequalled position, detached, faces sea, due south. Modern improvements, passenger lift, electric light in every room, handsomely furnished. Home comforts. Terms moderate.—Address, MANAGER.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

THE CROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.

TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.
NO SUPPERS.
TELEPHONE No. 3,507.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn and Lincoln's Inn Fields. A high class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, happily situated, having all modern conveniences and a moderate tariff. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d., at separate tables. FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Write for tariff.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).

Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.
LARGEST, BEST APPOINTED, AND MOST COMFORTABLE HOTEL IN CHANNEL ISLES, AND THE FINEST SITUATION IN JERSEY.

Directly overlooking the Channel. South aspect. Magnificent Public Rooms, all facing sea. Swimming Bath, Hot and Cold Seawater Baths. Tennis Courts, &c. TABLE D'HOTE DINNER at 7 p.m. (separate tables) "best in Jersey." Reduced Winter Terms on application.
Telegrams "Grand, Jersey." SYDNEY ROGERS Manager & Secretary.

OATLANDS PARK HOTEL, Walton-on-Thames, 17 miles from London (Waterloo Station)—Most comfortable and homely winter residence, warmed throughout. South aspect. Boarding terms, 10s. 6d. to 12s. per day. Capital stabling. Postal address, Weybridge.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL, 180 Apartments, Patronised by H. R. H. the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, K.T. Extensive Structural Alterations and Decorative Repairs have been carried out and 30 NEW BEDROOMS ADDED SINCE OCTOBER, 1891. The entire system of drainage has been re-modelled and re-constructed, and the most improved sanitary appliances fitted to all Bath-rooms, &c. The Hotel stands in its own private gardens of 2½ acres, faces the sea, and is only five minutes' from the Harbour in the lower part of the town and Shorncliffe New West End Station, and is most convenient for Continental travellers.—For tariff charges, &c., please address the Proprietor.
N.B.—During the winter months visitors are received en pension at the rate of 12s. per day.

ALBANY HOTEL
(ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

HOTEL CONTINENTAL,
CAIRO, EGYPT.

PATRONISED by ROYALTY and the ELITE of SOCIETY, including H.R.H. the DUKE of CAMBRIDGE and H.I.H. PRINCESS VICTORIA of PRUSSIA. Perfect English sanitation. Electric Light. Hydraulic Lifts. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate terms. Under the personal supervision of the proprietors, GEORGE NUNGOVITCH (also proprietor of the HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE) and L. STEINSCHNEIDER, late Manager of Shepheard's Hotel.

ILFRACOMBE.
Warmest Sea-side Winter Resort in England.

ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. The principal Hotel in Ilfracombe.

First-class return tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. Railway, from 1st November to 14th March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance at the ILFRACOMBE HOTEL, £5 5s. each. Available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Ask for Hotel Tickets, available by all trains.

THE RUNNACLEAVE, ILFRACOMBE.—Highest average Winter Temperature in England. South aspect. 120 Beautifully-appointed rooms, thoroughly warmed by hot-water apparatus; theatre in constant use; yacht, tennis, billiards, photographic dark room, and indoor skating rink free of charge. Moderate tariff.

EASTBOURNE.—CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the Grand Parade. Pleasant sea and land views. Patronised by many of the Royal families of Europe. Appreciated for its first-class appointments and homely comforts. Elegant public rooms, convenient family suites, &c. Passenger lift. Table d'hôte. Moderate charges.
G. LOWMAN, Manager.

MADEIRA.—REID'S HOTELS, Santa Clara, Miles's Carmo Hortas, New Hotel. First-class, in finest situations. Large gardens. Tennis courts. Billiards. Sea bathing. Modern sanitation. All steamers met. Pamphlet free.—PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, London, E.C.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS, by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools is NOW OPEN at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket (next the Theatre). Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S WINTER EXHIBITION includes works by Sir J. Reynolds, T. Gainsborough, R. Ramsay, Constable, Cromé Stark, Vincent Clare, Morland, Wilson, Hayes, Mather, Barrow &c.—Shepherd's Gallery, 27, King-street, St. James's.

CRYSTAL PALACE.
Vocalist, Mrs. HUTCHINSON
Pianist, M. SILOTI (from Moscow). His first appearance at the Crystal Palace).
Violin, Mr. H. KRAUSE.
The GRAND ORCHESTRA. Conductor, Mr. AUGUST MANNS.
The PROGRAMME will include Overture, "Rosamunde" (Schubert); Cradle Song, for Orchestra (C. H. Conder); First Time of performance), Recit., "Mon cœur s'ouvre," Aria, "Comme autrefois" (Les Pecheurs de Perles) (Bizet); Fantasia for Pianoforte in C (Op. 15) (Schubert), adapted for Pianoforte and Orchestra by Liszt; Symphony, "Harold in Italy" (Berlioz); Songs, "Toghètemi a vita ancor" (Arlesa Scarlatti); "Qual Farfalletta" (Don Scarlatti); Solos for Pianoforte, "Romance" (Op. 5) (Tschaikowski); Basso Ostinato (Arensky); Ballade in A Flat (Op. 47), (Chopin). Overture, "Leonora, No. 3 in C" (Beethoven).

NIAGARA FALLS in WINTER.—Finest and Most Realistic Sight in London. Just added, splendid Diorama of Ice Palace at Montreal. NIAGARA HALLS, St. James's Park Station. DAILY, 10 to 10 p.m. Admission 1s. Children and Tickets, including admission, all Dist. and Met. Ry. Stations.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station, in connection with all railways. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations. New Portrait Models of the late C. H. GOUNOD, the late MARSHAL MAC MAHON, H.M. the EMPEROR of GERMANY, and H.M. the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA. Magnificent Group containing Portraits of T.R.H. the DUKE and DUCHESS of YORK. The ROYAL TIGER HUNT. Political Celebrities; Cabinet Ministers. Music all day. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open 9 till 10.

ELOCUTION, EXTEMPORE SPEAKING, ORATORY.—Professor HAYSACK, whose Pupils are among the first clergymen, doctors, barristers, solicitors, public personages, and nobility, GIVES INSTRUCTION. Voice strengthened, defects corrected.—70, Talbot-road, Bayswater.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

THE WINDOW

the most important thing to be considered in the decoration of a house. The eye naturally turns to the opening by which light enters the room; and in the ideal home the view from that opening, and everything that serves to frame it, should be attractive. The most beautiful thing to be seen through a window is a garden of flowers, but nine-tenths of human habitations in civilised countries are so placed that their windows overlook scenes very different—sometimes dreary streets, stables, and chimney pots. Glacier Window Decoration will add beauty to the window, it is not costly, and no alteration of sashes is required. It is the only effective and reliable substitute for stained glass.

Hundreds of specimens can be seen, and all information can be had at

THE GLACIER DEPÔTS,

53, Piccadilly, W., and 56, Queen Victoria St., E.C.

FAC SIMILE OF STAMP ON BACK OF EVERY TWO YARDS OF ALL GENUINE

CHIPPING NORTON TWEEDS

W. BLISS & SON, MANUFACTURERS

W. BLISS C. NORTON

Specially for HUNTING & RIDING BREECHES, Tweed Suits, Boys' Wear & all HARD WEAR

AMUSEMENTS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE ROYAL. Sole Lessee and Manager, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS. Every Evening, at 7.30, A LIFE OF PLEASURE, by Sir Augustus Harris and Henry Pettitt. For full particulars see Daily Papers. Box-office open, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., all day.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Mr. TREE, Sole Lessee and Manager.
TO-NIGHT, at 8.15, the 25th Performance of Henry Arthur Jones's New Play, THE TEMPTER.
Mr. Tree, Messrs. Fred Terry, F. Everill, Louis Mellish, G. W. Anson, Chas. Allan, Holman Clark, Revelle, Baldie, Wyatt, Paton, Cowie, &c., Miss Lulu Nelson, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Mrs. E. H. Brooke, and Mrs. Tree.
MATINÉE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2 p.m.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) open daily from 10 till 5.—HAYMARKET.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.—Every Evening, at 8, an entirely New Burlesque, in Three Acts, entitled DON JUAN, by James T. Tanner. Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Music by Meyer Lutz. With full Gaiety Company, including Miss Marie Hilton, Miss Cissie Loftus, Miss Louise Montague, Miss Maria Davis, Miss Peggy Linden, Miss Katie Seymour, and Miss Sylvia Grey; Mr. Edmund Payne, Mr. George Mudie, Mr. Willie Warde, Mr. E. W. Royce, and Mr. Arthur Roberts.—Box-office open 10 to 6 daily. Doors open 7.30. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2. Doors open 1.45.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.15, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, UTOPIA, LIMITED, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. Doors open at 7.45 and 2. Box-office open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, R. Harding, J. Carter, H. Russell, and Arthur Williams; Mesdames Mary Rorke, Alma Stanley, and Agnes Thomas.—Box-office 10 to 6. Doors open at 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next at 2.

GARRICK THEATRE.—Mr. JOHN HARE, Lessee and Manager.—DIPLOMACY, adapted by Clement Scott and B. C. Stephenson. EVERY EVENING, at 8. Mr. Bancroft, Mr. F. Robertson, Mr. A. Cecil, Mr. G. Hare, Mr. Trent, Mr. Mayeur, and Mr. John Hare; Miss Kate Rorke, Miss E. Robins, Lady Monckton, Miss Luck, and Mrs. Bancroft. Box-office 10 to 5.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.30, Musical Comedy, words by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank, Music by Sydney Jones, entitled A GAIETY GIRL. Messrs. C. Hayden Coffin, E. Lewis, Bradfield, Kaye, Bantock, D'Orsay, Porteous, Rimma, and Harry Monkhouse; Mmes. Decima Moore, Juliette Nesville, Cutler, Studholme, Pounds, Phelps, Maud Hobson, Massey, Selwick, Robinson, and Lottie Venne. At 7.45, SIXES. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY (doors open 7.30).—Every Night, at 8 o'clock, THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL. Miss ADA REHAN as Lady Teazle; Mr. Wm. Farren as Sir Peter; Mr. Clarke as Joseph Surface; Mr. Bourchier as Charles; Mr. Lewis as Moses; Mrs. Gilbert as Mrs. Candour. A MORNING PERFORMANCE Saturday Next, at 2.—Box-office daily, 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries.

LYRIC THEATRE.—Mr. HORACE SEDGER, Sole Lessee and Manager.—LITTLE CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, by Geo. R. Sims and Cecil Raleigh, Music by Ivan Caryll. EVERY EVENING, at 8.30, with the following cast: Mr. E. J. Lonnen, Messrs. Harry Parker, Furneaux Cook, Henry Wright, George Tate, Rowland Carse; Mesdames Maud Holland, Eva Moore, Alice Lethbridge, Adelaide Newton, Alice Gilbert, Maud Leicester, Eva Greville, and Miss May Yohé. Increased Orchestra and Chorus, conducted by the Composer. Preceded, at 7.40, by THE SENTRY. Doors open 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.30.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.15, MOROCCO BOUND. VOL II. John L. Shine Templar Saxe, and Charles Danby; Misses Jennie McNulty, Agnes Hewitt, Maggie Roberts, and Lettie Lind. Preceded, at 7.45, by Rex Harley, the inimitable Mimic of Popular Actors. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30.—Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

TOOLE'S THEATRE.—J. K. LAING'S SEASON.—To-Night and Every Evening, at 9 o'clock, a Farce, in Three Acts, by the late Fred Leslie and Arthur Shirley, entitled MRS. OTHELLO. Miss Fanny Brough, Mr. Charles Glenney, Miss Cicely Richards, Mr. Julian Cross, &c. Preceded, at 8, by THE BROTHERS. Seats at all Libraries. Box-office open daily.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.30.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.45, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled FIDELIA. At 10.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Two GRAND BALLETS.—At 8, KATRINA, and at 10, THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. Grand Varieties. The new entrance from Leicester-street is now open. Doors open at 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.

THE PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—SCARAMOUCHE, Pantomime Ballet, at 10.40.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Little Tich, Fannie Leslie, Bessie Bellwood, Lucy Clarke, James Fawn, Brothers Griffiths, Alice Leamar, George Beauchamp, Nellie Navette, Herbert Campbell, Alice Maydue, Billie Barlow; Brown, Newland, and Leclerq; Harry Pleon, Marie Tyler, Ada Blanche, J. W. Rowley, Harry Freeman, Eugene Stratton, Charles Ross, Tom Bass, G. Robey, Fred Mason, Arthur Rigby, Sella and Young.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

CANCER WARDS at the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL, Mortimer-street, W.—The WEEKLY BOARD make an URGENT APPEAL for FUNDS in Aid of these Wards. There are 24 beds set apart for patients suffering from this terrible malady. They are admitted without letters of recommendation. Everything that human skill and kindness can suggest is provided, and sufferers are permitted to remain until relieved by art or released by death. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts & Co.
F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary Superintendent.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL.

CONTRIBUTIONS are EARNESTLY SOLICITED towards meeting the EXPENSES of this unendowed Hospital, and will be gratefully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Drummond, or by the Secretary.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.—The long-continued prevalence of scarlet fever is causing a heavy strain on the resources of this Hospital. The benevolent are earnestly asked for HELP. Annual subscribers of a Guinea and upwards for more than a year, as well as donors of Ten Guineas or more in one sum, are Governors, and are entitled to free treatment for their domestic servants. Sufferers residing outside the metropolitan area can only be received into the Hospital from the families of Governors.
Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital, MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott, Dimsdale, & Co., 50, Cornhill.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM for IDIOTS.
Nearly 600 afflicted cases are receiving special care and education.
FUNDS urgently REQUIRED.
Special provision is made for the reception of Private Cases on payment.
H. GERARD HOARE, Esq., J.P., Treasurer.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Cheques or Postal Orders may be crossed Messrs. Hoare, Bankers, 37, Fleet-street, E.C.
Offices, 36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES. — Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

TRAVELLERS TO BRINDISI AND THE EAST
WILL NOW FIND
BOLOGNA the most convenient stopping-place.
Coupé-lits can be booked beforehand by Mr. FRANK, Hotel Brun, for DAILY EXPRESS TRAIN, leaving Bologna 6.55. p.m., arriving at Brindisi 10.50 a.m.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISE TO THE WEST INDIES.
The Steamship "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, 3,000 h.p. will leave London on the 22nd November, for a 66 days' Cruise, visiting Madeira, Teneriffe, Barbadoes Trinidad, Grenada, St, Lucia, Martinique, St. Kitts, Santa Cruz, Jamaica, Cuba, Nassau, St. Michael's, Lisbon.
The "GARONNE" is fitted with Electric Light, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Baths, &c. First-class Cuisine.
Managers { F. Green & Co. / Anderson, Anderson, & Co. } Head Offices, Fenchurch-avenue, London.
For particulars apply to the latter firm, at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, E.C.; or of the West-end Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, London, S.W.

LAIRITZ'S
CELEBRATED
Established 1853. Awarded 18 Medals and Diplomas, for the Relief and Cure of GOUT, RHEUMATISM, COLDS, &c.
Wadding in packets, Knee-Caps, Inside Soles, Oil, EXTRACT FOR BATH, Lozenges, Of all the LEADING CHEMISTS everywhere. Flannels, Underclothing, Knitting Yarn. Sold by all leading Drapers and Hosiers
Wholesale Depot for Fabrics only—WELCH, MARGETSON & Co., 16, Cheapside, London.
Caution.—Observe the Tree Trade Mark with Signature on each piece.
PINE WOOL.

GRANT'S
MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY.
FIRST-PRIZE MEDALS at LONDON, MELBOURNE, and CALCUTTA
Is the most delicious Liqueur in the World.
Have you ever tasted it?
It is very strengthening for the weak and aged, and most comforting in damp and hilly weather. Nice with lemonade or soda water.
Sold by Wine Merchants and at Restaurants.

SUGG'S PATENT GAS BURNERS.
The best Burners that have ever been invented.
BRILLIANT, WHITE, SILENT LIGHT.
GAS LAMPS, GAS FITTINGS, GAS FIRES, &c.
Send for Price List, Grand Hotel Buildings, Charing Cross, W.C.
1a, Ludgate Hill, London, E.C.; also at Liverpool and Amsterdam.

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.
BAHADUR

ESTABLISHED 1818.
Ten Prize Medals.
PETER F. HEERING'S
COPENHAGEN
CHERRY BRANDY.
Sold by all Wine Merchants, and at all Bars and Hotels.

THREE GOLD MEDALS

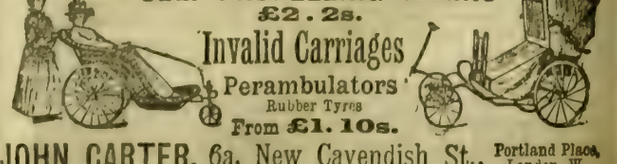
The Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam Corset
Exquisite Model. Perfect Comfort Guaranteed Wear.
Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil; also in the New Sanitary Woollen Cloth. 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.
CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped "Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam No. 116," in oval on the lining.
Sold by Drapers and Ladies Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.
CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.
PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE
For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.

INVALID COMFORTS
Walking Machine for the lame
Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2. Exercising Chairs £5. 5s. Reclining Boards £1.1s. Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d. Carrying Chairs, £1. Bed Tables 7s. 6d. Crutches 10s. 6d. Folding Couch Chairs 10s. Bed Rests 10s. Easy Chairs £2. 10s. Commode Chairs £2. 10s.

BATH CHAIRS
From £1.5s.
SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS
£2.2s.



Invalid Carriages
Perambulators
Rubber Tyres
From £1.10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telgrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

CARPETS.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

AXMINSTER PILE CARPETS,
2/11 (American) 3/11 to 4/9

WILTON PILE CARPETS,
3/9 to 4/6

BRUSSELS CARPETS,
2/1 to 3/9

TAPESTRY CARPETS,
1/9 to 2/6

LINOLEUM,
1/- to 4/- PER SQUARE YARD.

DECCAN RUGS,
8/9 EACH.

CATALOGUES FREE.

TRELOAR & SONS
LUDGATE HILL.

You Want a Typewriter.

TRADE MARK.

REGISTERED.

Does it not strike you that a machine invented by one of the first mechanical geniuses of the day,
That in two years has obtained an unprecedented sale,
That has been adopted by one Emperor, one King, several Princes and Princesses, and 20,000 ordinary users,
That has obtained the highest awards wherever exhibited,
That has gained Five Gold Medals,
That has even found its way into the Vatican at Rome,
That has received hundreds of testimonials,
That has found profitable occupation for thousands of operators,
That has been adopted by the principal Railway Co.'s, Chief Engineering Firms, Technical and other Schools,
That is the easiest to learn, does the best work, and
Has no filthy ink ribbon,

Is the Typewriter you Want?

THE YŌST IS ALL THIS AND MORE.

Contractors to

Her Majesty's Government,
The Colonial Governments,
The Indian Government,
The French Government,
and others.

Full Particulars from—

YŌST TYPEWRITER COMPANY, Limited, 40, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

BRANCH ADDRESSES:—MANCHESTER: 8, Deansgate. BIRMINGHAM: 73, Temple-row. LIVERPOOL: 67A, Lord-street. GLASGOW: 112, St. Vincent-street. BELFAST: 9, Rosemary-street. LEEDS: 21, New Station-street. PARIS: 36, Boulevard des Italiens.

STATHAM'S WATERPROOFS.

Chesterfield Coat 21/- | Regulation (Cape all round) 30/-

CARRIAGE PAID.

Any size up to 52 inches long. Larger sizes, 1/- extra for every two inches.

Best make, thoroughly Waterproof, and adapted for any climate.

Book of Patterns of all kinds of Tweed, Cashmere, and other Waterproof Cloths post free for 6 stamps (returnable).

H. STATHAM & CO.,
CORPORATION STREET, MANCHESTER.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

21/- 21/-

THE "CHELSEA" DINNER SERVICE.

Groups of Flowers in Electric Blue on Ivory Ground.

218.

"Cottage Set," as pattern (50 pieces) £1 1 0
Full Set for 12 persons (108 pieces) £3 3 0
If for the country, 1s. 9d. and 2s. 6d. extra for package.

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, AND TEA SERVICES.

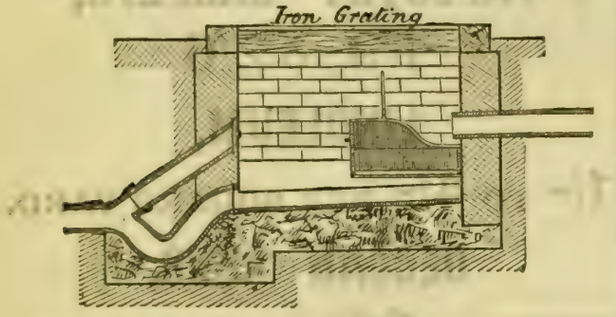
ALFRED B. PEARCE,
39, Ludgate-hill, London
Established 1706.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS. Est. 1886.

NO CESSPOOLS. NO SEWER GAS. NO DISINFECTANTS REQUIRED.

NORRIS' PATENT SEWAGE STRAINER AND FRESH-AIR INLET CHAMBER.

Effectually supersedes the use of the dangerous Cesspool and entirely prevents the accumulation of Sewer Gas, and disposes of the soil in a quick and cleanly way, and renders it perfectly inocuous.



Suitable for VILLAGES and HAMLETS, PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS, COLLEGES and SCHOOLS, MANSIONS and VILLAS, VICARAGES, &C.

Is now in extensive use, and gives perfect satisfaction.

Telegraphic Address, "SUNNINGDALE."

Estimates and all Particulars on Application to the Patentee—

J. NORRIS & SONS

(ESTABLISHED 1857),

BUILDERS & SANITARY SPECIALISTS,

SUNNINGDALE, ASCOT.

AN ALWAYS ACCEPTABLE PRESENT.

An Original Case of MÜLHENS'

GENUINE NO. 4711 BRAND OF

EAU DE COLOGNE.

CASE OF SIX BOTTLES 12/6

THE PUREST & STRONGEST, YET MOST DELICATE EVER PRODUCED.

THE WORLD says: "Anyone desirous of getting a thoroughly genuine Cologne, cannot do better than send for a bottle of the '4711' Double Extract. Once having used it, repetition is a foregone conclusion."

Large selection of Choicest Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, &c. Quintuple Concentrated Extracts, made from Fresh Flowers gathered at Grasse.

Of All dealers in Perfumes, or at the LONDON BRANCH:

62, NEW BOND ST., W.

(ONE DOOR FROM BROOK STREET.)

Price Lists on application to Mr. C. REUTER, Manager. And at

COLOGNE, NEW YORK, VIENNA, RIGA, and ODESSA.

WOODS' PATENT GALVANISED STEEL WIRE MATTRESSES & BEDSTEADS.

Carriage Paid, and Liberal Cash Discount allowed.

Guaranteed for Five Years.

EXHIBITED CARRYING

ONE TON

At LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and other EXHIBITIONS.

SHOW ROOMS:

128, BOLD ST., LIVERPOOL.

Catalogues and Prices free on application to the

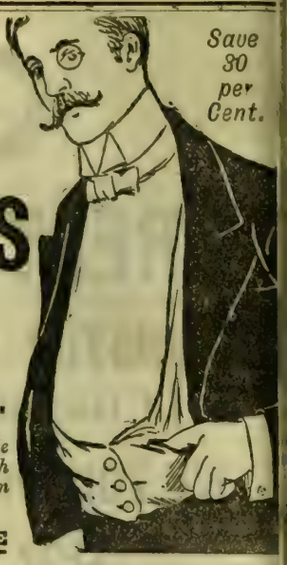
LONGFORD WIRE, IRON & STEEL CO., LTD.

WARRINGTON.

Please mention this Paper.

PURE IRISH LINEN SHIRTS

Save 30 per Cent.



Tailor-Made Direct from Ireland.

Made of the most durable Long Cloth, and fitted with the finest Linen Ireland can produce.

MADE TO MEASURE

FIT AND STYLE GUARANTEED IN THE LATEST FASHION.

Half-a-dozen Pure Irish bespoke Shirts, securely packed, delivered free to any address in the Kingdom for 33/-, 39/-, or 45/-. Foreign Postage Extra.

Sample Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 5/6, 6/6, or 7/6.

Dress Shirts with fine Irish Linen Fittings, Six for 39/-, delivered free. A Sample Dress Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 6/6.

Old Shirts re-fitted with New Irish Linen Fronts, Cuffs, and Neck-bands for 2/3 and 2/9 each. Returned Carriage Free. Coloured Shirts, best quality. French Cambric 30/-, Oxford Cloth 33/- per half-dozen. Patterns Free. Four-fold Irish Linen Collars, best quality, 7/6 per dozen. General Catalogue post free.

For Measure, send size of Collar, Chest, and Height, or an old shirt.

TAAFFE & COLDWELL,

Army Shirt Tailors, 81, Grafton St., Dublin.

TO ENSURE THE GREATEST COMFORT

WEAR THE NEW PATENT

"EIDEX"

COMBINATION

By Royal Letters Patent.

FOR LADIES & CHILDREN.

No. 14016.

The demand for Combination Garments generally has considerably increased during the last few years, but the one weak point in this otherwise most sensible garment was the difficulty in securing an efficient wrap at the back.

This has now been overcome by means of an extra covering inside at the back only, which is an improvement of the utmost practical utility. Ladies will immediately apprehend and appreciate the greatly enhanced comfort to be obtained by wearing the "EIDEX" COMBINATION.

Prices: From 6/11 Pure Wool from 9/11 Ribbed do. from 5/6

NOTE.—The Dog's Head Trade Mark is Attached to Every Garment.

To be had of all Ladies' Outfitters, and Wholesale only of

STAPLEY & SMITH, London Wall, London, E.C.

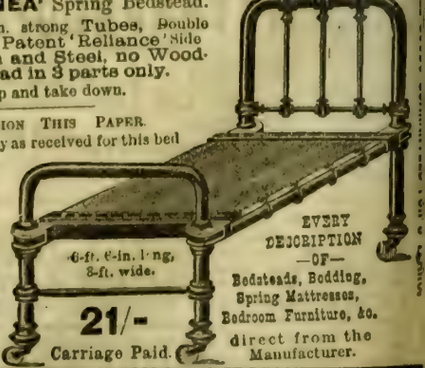
The 'NEW GUINEA' Spring Bedstead.

Pillars 1-in. Sides 1¼-in. strong Tubes, Double Woven Wire Mattress, Patent 'Reliance' Side Fastenings. All Iron and Steel, no Wood-work. Bedstead in 3 parts only.

Easy to fix up and take down.

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.

Orders executed same day as received for this bed



To be had only direct from—

CHARLES RILEY,

Freeman-street,

BIRMINGHAM.

Illustrated Price Lists Post Free.

21/-

Carriage Paid.

EVERY DESCRIPTION —OF— Bedsteads, Bedding, Spring Mattresses, Bedroom Furniture, &c. direct from the Manufacturer.

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES. Londonderry Wallsend, 41s. Pittington Wallsend, 40s.; Primrose, 39s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 38s. per ton Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

FOR

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS &c.

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

ars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins, . 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder Burning and Inhalation. Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. Of Chemists everywhere.

HE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?

PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, ronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derange- nt and biliousness, it has been pronounced by medical men of high authority most efficacious.
"I use the Aerated Pitkeathly largely, and value it."—Dr. MATTHEWS NCAN.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

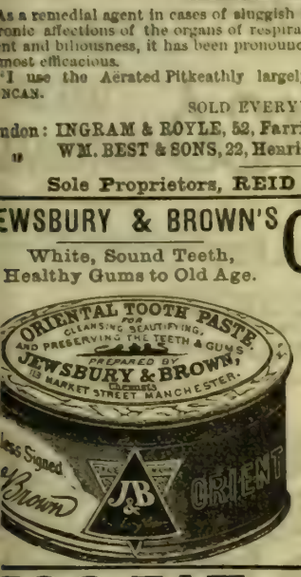
ndon: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

EWSBURY & BROWN'S

White, Sound Teeth,
Healthy Gums to Old Age.

Oriental Tooth Paste.



CAUTION.—The only genuine is JEWSBURY & BROWN'S.

Pots 1/6 and 2/6. All Chemists.

60 YEARS IN USE.

TOO FAT. Dr. GORDON'S Elegant Pills cure STOUTNESS, idly and certainly. State height, weight, and send 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., or 11s. to DR. GORDON, 24, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

ASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.

o. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
[ESTABLISHED 1867.]

ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods, From £30 to £5,000, Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their NOTE OF HAND ALONE.

ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.

so upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, fe Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without ortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so ng as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.

NO SURETIES REQUIRED.

Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
RST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

REVERSIONS.—The Reversion Mortgage Trust purchase reversions and life incomes, or lend thereon at 4 per cent. per annum. o charge made unless business results.—Apply to Messrs. FELDMAN, 34, ew Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London. Solicitors' and Estate Agents' tention particularly requested.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 18[illegible]. 1 Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22 Pall Mall, S.W. Sub. Cap. £1,000,000. Paid up, £[illegible]. Total funds, £1,[illegible]. R. COZENS-SMITH, Gen. Man.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited.
No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.
General Accidents. | Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accident.
C. HARDING, Manager.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £ 6,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE

63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.

(FIRE.)

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST

COMPANY INSURING AGAINST

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS

[AT HOME, OR IN THE STREETS, AT WORK, OR AT PLAY.]

THE RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY,
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. Secs. { W. D. MASSY. A. VIAN.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

BUYERS and SELLERS of quoted and unquoted Commercial, Industrial, and Mining Securities should communicate with THE COMMERCIAL STOCK and SHARE CORPORATION, Limited, Stock and Share Dealers, 10, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C. Telegraphic Address: "UNQUOTED, LONDON." All Mining Shares dealt in at close current quotations. Advances made on Stocks and Shares at moderate rates. Send for List, giving numerous quotations not published by any other firm, post free.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT

BEAUTIFULLY COOL AND SWEET SMOKING.

Sold only in 1-Ounce Packets, and 2, 4, 8-Ounce, and 1-lb. Tins, which ke the Tobacco in fine Smoking condition.

Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and take no other.

SMOKERS ARE CAUTIONED AGAINST IMITATION

The GENUINE bears the Trade Mark—"NOTTINGHAM CASTLE"—on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES, in Packets containing 12
And Tins of 24, 50, and 100.

By Royal Warrants of Appointment to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN,
H.R.H. The Princess of Wales, H.I.M. The Empress Frederick; H.M. The Queen of Denmark; H.R.H. The Duchess of Teck, &c.; and under the Patronage of th Courts of Great Britain, Germany, Russia, Austria, Italy, Denmark, Spain, Sweden and Norway, and Greece, &c.

Egerton Burnett's Royal Serges

AND HIGH-CLAS DRESS
MATERIALS

For AUTUMN and WINTER, comprise a large and choice collection of Hopsacks, Whipcords, Amazons, and all the Latest Novelties for the present Season for Ladies', Children's, and Gentlemen's Wear.
ANY LENGTH SOLD. NEW PATTERNS POST FREE. NO AGENTS.

The ROYAL NAVY BLUE SERGES will not turn a bad colour with Sun, Rain, or Salt Water.
Carriage Paid on Orders of £1 in value to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom. Goods packed for exportation.
SPECIAL RATES for the CONTINENT, INDIA, and the COLONIES. Mention this Magazine.

EGERTON BURNETT, Royal Serge Warehouse, Wellington, Somerset, Englan

TWO TIMES TWO

THE Public is duped by worthless evidence of all sorts. Testimonials from Scientific, Clerical, and Theatrical people, big advertisements, medals, large sales, and thumping claims, by no means prove the article advertised is bona-fide. The one thing in the case of Soap that can alone be relied on is the analyses of some eminent scientific chemists corroborated by that of others.

"VINOLIA SOAP" is the only Soap we know of which has passed through this ordeal. Analyses tell.

Premier, 4d.; Floral, 6d.; Balsamic, 8d.; Toilet (Otto), 10d.; and Vestal, 2s. 6d. per Tablet.

LONDEAU et CIE., Ryland-rd., London, N.W.

American Depot:—73-77, WATTS-STREET, NEW YORK.

N EVERY HOME.

LIPTON'S DELICIOUS TEAS

e reached a pinnacle of success never before attained by any other teas in the world, and their increasing popularity IN EVERY HOME is the surest test of their appreciation by the public.

IF YOU WISH TO ENJOY A CUP OF TEA THAT EXCELS ALL OTHERS

Drink only Lipton's Teas.

THE MOST POPULAR OF THE AGE.

DIRECT FROM THE TEA GARDENS.

NO MIDDLEMEN'S PROFITS TO PAY.

NOTE THE PRICES.

RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT.

nparalleled Success. 1/- and 1/4 per lb. Enormous Demand.

THE FINEST TEA THE WORLD CAN PRODUCE.

Higher Price. At 1/7 per lb. No Higher Price.

OVER ONE MILLION PACKETS SOLD WEEKLY IN GREAT BRITAIN ALONE.

ECIAL NOTICE.—Delivered carriage paid for an extra 1d. per lb. to any address in Great Britain on orders of 5 lbs. and upwards. Samples sent free on application.

LIPTON, Tea and Coffee Planter, CEYLON. The Largest Tea, Coffee, and Provision Dealer in the World.

Proprietor of the following celebrated Tea and Coffee Estates in Ceylon:—Dambatenne, Laymastotte, Monerakande, Mahadambatenne, Mousakelle, Poopraasie Hanagalla, and Gigranella, which cover Thousands of Acres of the best TEA and COFFEE LAND in CEYLON.

Ceylon Tea and Coffee Shipping Warehouses:—Maddema Mills, Cinnamon Gardens, Colombo. Ceylon Offices:—Upper Chatham-street, Colombo.

Indian Tea Shipping Warehouses and Export Stores:—Hare-street, Strand, Calcutta. Indian Offices:—Dalhousie-square, Calcutta.

IERAL OFFICES: BATH STREET, CITY ROAD, LONDON, E.C. Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

MANUFACTURERS TO HER MAJESTY.

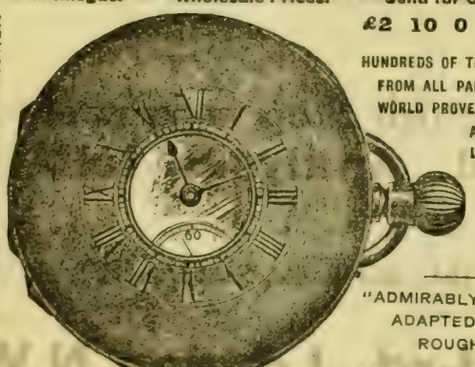
BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR

HAS 35 YEARS' WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION.

Midland Counties Watch Co., Vyse-street, BIRMINGHAM.

Send for Catalogue. Wholesale Prices. Send for Catalogue.

CATALOGUES CONTAINING OVER 1,000 ILLUSTRATIONS POST-FREE UPON APPLICATION TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.



£2 10 0

HUNDREDS OF TESTIMONIALS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD PROVE THE VALUE AND EXCELLENT TIME-KEEPING QUALITIES OF OUR WATCHES.

"ADMIRABLY ADAPTED FOR ROUGH WEAR."

£2 10 0

Gents' Silver Keyless Demi-Hunter, in Plain or Engine-turned Cases, a thoroughly reliable timekeeper £2 10s. 0d.

Purchase from the Manufacturers at a saving of 25 to 50 per cent.

25s. 25s.

LONDON OFFICE AND SHOW ROOM: 15, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. (Near Mansion House.)

LONDON OFFICE AND SHOW ROOM 15, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C (Near Mansion House.)

"THE CHEAPEST THOROUGHLY RELIABLE SILVER WATCH EVER MADE."

Gents' Silver Watch, finely finished movement, crystal glass, timekeeping qualities guaranteed, 25s. Ladies' ditto, ditto, 25s.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE CONTAINING HUNDREDS OF TESTIMONIALS OF THIS AND OTHER WATCHES Gratis and Post Free to any part of the World.

Cheques and P.O. Orders to be made payable to the Company's Manager, Mr. A. PERCY, Birmingham.

PIANOS ON THE THREE YEARS' HIRE SYSTEM.

This system is carried out extensively, liberally, and equitably by CHARLES STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, W.C. The pianoforte becomes the absolute property of the hirer at the expiration of three years, or may be returned at any time, at the option of the hirer. The rates charged are the same as for ordinary hire, and no addition is made to the price. PIANOS, GRAND and UPRIGHT, new and second-hand, by BORD, BECHSTEIN, and other high-class Makers, at from 10s. 6d. to 100s. per month. Lists and all particulars will be forwarded post-free on application to STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, London, W.C.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Disordered Liver, and Female Ailments.

Prepared only by the Proprietor, THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helen's, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere, in Boxes, 9½d., 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each, with full directions.

The 1s. 1½d. Box contains Fifty-six Pills.

THE SALE IS NOW SIX MILLION BOXES PER ANNUM.

S. Sainsbury's Lavender Water

SOLD THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY. Prices, 1s. to 16s. 6d., &c.

MANUFACTORY: 176 and 177, STRAND, LONDON.

ESTABLISHED 1839.

IZOD'S PATENT CORSETS Are the Best.

Prepared by a New and Special Scientific Process.

Medical opinion recommends them for THE HEALTH.

Public opinion all over the world unanimous that they are unsurpassed for COMFORT, STYLE, AND DURABILITY. Sold all over Europe, and everywhere in India and Colonies. Name and Trade Mark, Anchor, on every pair and box. Ask your Draper or Outfitter for IZOD'S make; take no other, and see you get them, as bad makes are often sold for sake of extra profit. Write for our sheet of Drawings.

E. IZOD & SON, 30, Milk St., London. Manufactory: LANDPORT, HANTS

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St [illegible] the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings.

·TRUTH·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 882. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, November 23, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

THE SEVENTEENTH

CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF "TRUTH,"

"The Spookeries,"

Will be published on

THURSDAY, the 30th of NOVEMBER,

In a Special Wrapper,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

It will be profusely Illustrated by F. Carruthers Gould.

The Illustrations will include THREE DOUBLE-PAGED and FOUR FULL-PAGED CARTOONS, printed in colours :—

1. "Truth" Speaks about Spooks.
2. Viva el Toro.
3. A Demonstration of Loyalty (With a Collection).
4. Salisbury's Stuffed Geese.
5. Chamberlain's Dive.
6. A Royalty Raree Show.
7. Work for the Girl-Flogger.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

I MUST again beg the attention of my readers to the position of the Truth Fund for providing the children in the London Hospitals, Workhouses, Workhouse Schools, and Infirmaries with toys at the coming Christmas. Though many kind friends have come forward, a very large sum is required if this year's distribution is to be on the same scale as heretofore. During the last week I have received the following amounts :—

Sir Henry Hawkins, £3. 3s. ; Arthur Franclin, 5s. ; Howard Ellis, 10s. ; S. G. A., £1 ; Muriel, 10s. ; Winifred, 10s. ; Jimmy, 10s. ; Derrick, 10s. ; Harold, 10s. ; N. E. Y. D., 21s. ; Captain R. L. Appleyard, £5. 5s. ; Mrs. Charles Baker, £1 ; X., 20s. ; Five children, L. E. R., £5 ; Tuzzie, Jimmy, Cox, Jo., Veerf, £2 ; M. S. T., 10s. ; John and Stephen, £1 ; Fiddle Bow, £1 ; J. W. T., £5 ; Hugh Cahill Campbell, 2s. 6d. ; General Sir John Ewart, £1. 1s. ; C. N. J. F., £1 ; In memory of Suey and Olive, £1. 1s. ; Dorothy and Petronel, £2. 2s. ; Mrs. St. Maur Wynch, £2. 2s. ; W. N. G., 10s. 6d. ; H. Mallins, £1 ; The Children's Friend, 2s. ; L. M. M., 5s. ; Sylvia and Jessop Shield, £3. ; Mr. Abel Buckley, £10 ; Hon. Mrs. A. Y. Bingham, £1 ; Corney and Muriel, 10s. ; H. Stern, £5 ; Molly, Paddy, Kitty, and Gracie, £2. 2s. ; C. F. M., £1. 1s. ; Irene and Helen Ralli, £4. 4s. ; Mrs. Chas. J. Hill, 5s. ; Connie and Tom, £2. 2s. ; R. M. H., 5s. ; Marjorie, £2 ; J. F., £1. 1s. ; L. B. and S. D., 5s. ; W. Woods, £1 ; Four Children, U. R. A. K., 2s. 6d. ; H. J. Farmer-Atkinson, £2. 2s. ; E. S., 10s.

The Queen, who arrived at Windsor Castle on Saturday morning from Balmoral, will proceed to Osborne on December 19 or 20 for a stay of two months. Her Majesty will return to Windsor towards the end of February, and is then to reside at the Castle until her departure for Italy.

The Prince and Princess of Wales will entertain a shooting party next week at Sandringham ; and on Monday, December 11, they are coming up to Marlborough House for ten days. The Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York, and the Princesses Victoria and Maud are to proceed to Windsor Castle on Wednesday, December 13, on a visit to the Queen.

There will be no balls at Sandringham this winter, but it is understood that during the Christmas holidays there is to be a lawn meet of the West Norfolk Foxhounds and a hunt breakfast at the Hall.

The Prince of Wales is shortly to have some shooting at Gunton, Lord Suffield's place near Cromer, which is let to Mr. Mundy. Gunton is one of the best manors in East Anglia.

Prince Alexander of Battenberg's early death has closed one of the most romantic careers of this or any other century. He was the successful and popular ruler of Bulgaria for several years, and he proved himself to be a brave soldier and a brilliant strategist. The bitter hostility of Russia made him abdicate in the interest of Bulgaria, and then a new career opened before him in Germany. He became the prime favourite of the Emperor and Empress Frederick, and their family, was a persona gratissima at the English Court, and finally was announced to be betrothed to Princess Victoria of Prussia. Every one must remember the storm which raged at Berlin during the brief reign of the Emperor Frederick, in consequence of Prince Bismarck's furious opposition to the proposed marriage ; the Emperor, the Empress, and the Queen being very strongly in favour of the match, which had also the acquiescence of the present Emperor. It was no secret that Prince Alexander was destined after his marriage to fill a very high post indeed in the German Empire. The match was still "on" when Prince Alexander suddenly jilted the Princess early in 1889, in order to marry an opera-singer, whom he had met at Mentone.

The enthusiasm for Prince Alexander which prevailed at our own Court caused infinite trouble to Lord Salisbury for some years, as all kinds of intrigues were going on in his interest. A Blue Book little read shows that such pressure was put on the Foreign Office, that despatches were written to the Ministers of various countries urging a crusade in order to restore him to the throne of Bulgaria. As the Ministers knew that these were written under Royal dictation, and in no way represented the views of Lord Salisbury, they either merely acknowledged them or absolutely ignored them. A tremendous fuss was raised about Prince Alexander when he visited the Queen at Balmoral and at Windsor, and the Emperor of Russia was much exasperated on hearing that the Queen had treated his detested first cousin with Royal honours, had sent him to inspect the Household Troops at Windsor, and had given him the Grand Cross of the Bath, and only Lord Salisbury's almost frantic remonstrances prevented her Majesty from making Prince Alexander a Knight of the Garter a few weeks after his abdication.

When Prince Alexander suddenly married, the pendulum swung in the other direction, and he became an object of positive detestation at Court, where his name was not allowed to be mentioned, and his portraits were all taken down. The Queen and Prince Alexander met at Florence last April, when amicable relations were restored, but the Empress Frederick never forgave him.

The Empress Eugénie, who has been residing at Farnborough since she returned south from Abergeldie Castle is to visit the Queen at Windsor next week before going to the Riviera to pass the winter at Cap Martin, near Mentone.

Major Legge and Colonel Carrington are to be the Equerries-in-Waiting to the Queen at Windsor from December 1 until the day of her Majesty's departure for Osborne.

The number of applicants for the vacant office of Master of the Ceremonies has been beyond all precedent. It is one of the best places in the gift of the Queen, as the duties are by no means onerous, while the emoluments exceed £700 a year, and this official is certain to be given apartments either at St. James's Palace or at Kensington whenever any become vacant. I understand, however, that nine-tenths of the candidates have withdrawn their applications on being informed by the Lord Chamberlain that a thorough knowledge of French and German is an essential qualification for the place.

"A Constant Reader" writes:—

> Will you kindly explain, for the benefit of one of your most faithful readers, who may be "The Queen's Munshi? Is this gentleman a Lord-in-Waiting, a member of an Indian Council, a physician, or, perhaps—a servant?

Not a Lord-in-Waiting, certainly, nor yet a member of an Indian Council. Whether he is a physician I cannot tell; but after what we have seen of the Indian oculists, anything in that way is possible. As for a servant, that is a delicate point. I should not like to hurt the feelings even of a Munshi. So far as I know, the functionary in question is a combination of a private secretary and a private tutor, his chief function in this instance being to direct her Majesty's studies in Hindustani. Whether that makes him a servant, I leave to my correspondent.

Captain Machell bought at the Doncaster sale of Sir Tatton Sykes' yearlings a colt, by St. Simon out of Plaisanterie, for £3,000, and sold him to Mr. McCalmont for £4,000, and he was named St. Esprit, the idea being that this united the names of the father and mother. But their knowledge of French was defective, and they were not aware that St. Esprit is French for one of the Persons of the Trinity. This was first pointed out by Prince Soltykoff, who is a Steward of the Jockey Club, and a member of the Greek Church, a Church which has so great a veneration for the Third Person of the Trinity that its members do not even eat pigeons. The name of the horse, therefore, has now been altered, and it has been named "Raconteur."

In confirmation of what I have so often said about the cruelties of the Irish cattle trade, I see that a steamer from Ireland reached Liverpool on Friday with between three hundred and four hundred head of cattle dead or dying, from injuries received during the gale on Thursday night. The gale was no doubt exceptionally severe, but this record is only an exaggerated instance of what is constantly happening. I should have thought that it would have been to the interest of the owners of the cattle to guard against this wholesale mutilation and massacre of the beasts. If not, why does not the S.P.C.A. interfere?

Mr. "Bowker" and his "Royal Descent" for ten guineas have brought me one or two highly interesting communications with reference to the Blood Royal. It seems that Mr. Bowker was quite right in stating that this highly-prized fluid is much more widely diffused than is ordinarily supposed. A well-known genealogical authority informs me that "probably the great majority of English people, at any rate of the upper and middle class, can rightfully claim King Edward I. as their ancestor, and through him William the Conqueror, Alfred the Great, Charlemagne, and others of like rank"; and also that "plenty of farm labourers in this country are descended from the Emperors of the West." It is, as this gentlemen justly observes, "a curious fact that her Majesty and most of her English subjects are related by blood." I therefore append the following letter, which shows by a mere exercise in arithmetic how this "curious fact" may be mathematically demonstrated:—

> It is mathematically demonstrable that the chances of any one Englishman being of Blood Royal (whatever that may be worth) are several millions to one.
>
> I have no more doubt that I am of the "Blood Royal" than that I share that honour with the gentleman now sweeping my crossing, and with the other gentleman who is to be hanged to-morrow.
>
> Taking thirty-three years as a generation, there have been twenty-five generations since the Conquest.
>
> Every person living to-day is the product of two parents, four grandparents, eight great-grandparents, and so on, with the result that every person now living must (except for intermarriage) have had 16,777,216 ancestors living in the year 1066.
>
> Now, taking the present population at 38,000,000, it follows

For AMUSEMENTS, see page 1125.
For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see pages 1126-27 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1124.

that (except for inter-marriage) those 38,000,000 must have had 637,534,208,000,000 of ancestors living in 1066.

But the whole population of the British Isles in that year and even for 400 years later did not exceed three millions.

Leaving out of account immigration, more than balanced by emigration, leaving out also all those whose descendants have failed to survive through twenty five generations, it follows that each one of those three millions must bear the responsibilities of representing 212,511,403 of our ancestors.

The chances that any one stock could have kept clear of any other stock both surviving, are in fact 212½ millions to one.

We know that the Royal families have been prolific on both sides of the blanket and to assume that any one living person has not some of that precious fluid, the Blood Royal, in his veins is to assume that none of his seventeen million ancestors was identical with any one of the seventeen millions of her Majesty's ancestors

---

What I like about this doctrine is that it is equally full of comfort for the most snobbish loyalist and the most rabid democrat. The one can henceforth regard himself (or herself) as one of the Royal Family, and treat the doings of exalted personages as part and parcel of his (or her) domestic affairs. The other can gloat over the fact that distinction of birth is the veriest humbug of any fiction that man has devised, and that the man in the street, or the man in the gaol, can boast just as good an ancestry as the Queen on the throne, or the proudest peer in the House of Lords. For my part, I comfort myself with the democratic alternative, only carrying it a step further; for when we are all sure of our descent from such ancient worthies as Adam and Eve, or even the patriarch Noah, I cannot for the life of me see why we should even trouble to work a sum in arithmetic to connect ourselves with such mushrooms as Charlemagne or William the Conqueror.

Sorry should I be were Tory magazines to cease to exist, for I like to see every political and social issue fairly threshed out; indeed, I generally read Tory in preference to Liberal articles, for I know the Liberal arguments, and I like to see what the other side has to say on the matter. The Quarterly Review is avowedly Tory, although it often contains many interesting Articles upon literary and non-political matters. There was a time when an Article in the Quarterly or the Edinburgh was an event, for these two magazines, with perhaps Blackwood as the third in the trio, exercised a sort of dictatorship over cultured and educated opinion. This is no longer the case, for at present the name of magazines is legion, and in many of them the signed article has replaced the anonymous article and carries more weight. Still, the Quarterly holds its own as the exponent of the political opinions of a large section of the community, whilst it has always maintained a high literary standard. I am glad, therefore, that a man of Mr. Rowland Protheroe's ability has become its Editor.

The death of Mr. Bremner, the sub-editor of the St. James's Gazette, is a loss not only to that paper, but to journalism. He was an excellent writer, and, what is more rare, a most capable sub-editor. I have before now lauded the editorial ability of the St. James's Gazette. This I have always fully recognised, although I do not agree with the political views that it advocates.

HÔTEL BURLINGTON, Boscombe, Bournemouth. Perfectly unique!!! Over 200 rooms, practically designed, sumptuously appointed, and fitted throughout with all the comforts of a well-arranged country mansion. Electric light. Passenger lift. Acres of matured grounds sloping to the Pier. Most moderate tariff, forwarded by Manager, or obtainable at the Burlington and Buckingham Palace Hotels, London. Bournemouth EAST Station.

Lord Ebury, who died on Saturday, was a member of the House of Commons for thirty five years, and then he sat in the House of Lords for thirty-six years. He was the senior member of the Privy Council, having been sworn in shortly after Lord Grey's Ministry was formed in 1830, when he was appointed to a high office in the Household. Lord Ebury was a prominent figure in the very smartest London society for many years, and during the reign of George IV. he belonged to the set of "Exclusives." After his marriage he became devout, and he developed into a Low Churchman of the austere Puritanical school. He was a hardworking and useful member of the House of Commons for many years, but he made a dreadful mistake when he attempted to restore the Puritan Sabbath in London. Lord Ebury was associated with the late Lord Shaftesbury in many religious and philanthropic movements. He passed the last thirty years of his life at Moor Park, his beautiful place near Rickmansworth, which has been famous for its splendid gardens for more than two centuries, and which was left to him, with a very large fortune, by his father, the first Marquis of Westminster.

The library of the late Prince Lucien Bonaparte, which is believed to be the finest philological collection in the world, is in the market. It contains upwards of 25,000 volumes, printed in some thirty-five alphabets, and it is valued roughly at £40,000. This library includes many books which are neither in the British Museum nor in the Bodleian. Mr. Gladstone, having been shown the principal treasures of the collection by Prince Lucien, remarked that certain volumes ought to be in the British Museum, but the Prince did not take this hint, although a bequest of the books mentioned to the national library would have been but a small return for the benefits which his Highness and his family had received from Great Britain. Unless the library is sold en bloc to go to America, it may be hoped that the volumes indicated by Mr. Gladstone may yet be secured for the British Museum.

Professor Caird, the new Master of Baliol College, is a very strong Liberal, and has always manifested a most hearty interest in Social movements, and he has been a zealous advocate of trade unionism. At Balliol he will follow in the steps of his distinguished predecessor, and he will be a most valuable acquisition to the Liberal party, both in the University and in the city and county of Oxford.

The Chair of Moral Philosophy at Glasgow, which has become vacant by the election of Professor Caird, is no likely to be filled up for some weeks, as the ne Professor will not begin his duties until February. Chair is almost certain to be offered to Professor Jone St. Andrews.

If some of the Tory papers had any se fairplay, or I might almost say of decency, th

BOURNEMOUTH.—"Royal Bath." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due sou Moderate charges. Tariff on application. Comparison inv oes Electric light throughout. Only Hotel on "East Cliff." ght to would have apologised in humble penitence to Mr. Gladstone for their gross insinuations that the Prime Minister was intending to perpetuate a flagrant job at Oxford by appointing Professor Murray, of Glasgow, to the Regius Chair of Greek. Mr. Gladstone has heaped coals of fire upon the heads of his traducers by appointing Mr. Bywater, of Exeter College, the well-known "Reader" in Greek, to succeed the late Master of Balliol. Mr. Bywater is a Greek scholar of European reputation, and his profound knowledge and his consummate ability have been recognised by classical teachers and writers all over the world, and particularly in Germany. Mr. Bywater's admirable lectures have been a leading feature in Oxford teaching for many years, and it has been hoped for a long time past that he would obtain the Greek Chair whenever it might become vacant.

Lord Bute having been re-appointed Lord Rector of St. Andrews University, it was suggested that he should deliver an address at Dundee; but he has not found it possible to do this, so he has sent £1,000 to the Lord Provost for the purpose of founding a Dundee Scholarship at St. Andrews. There is a refreshing common sense in Lord Bute's view that the gift "will do some permanent good, so it is better than half an hour of, say, indifferent talk."

Two livings have recently fallen to Cambridge University, owing to the patrons being Roman Catholics, and it is strange how very little interest was excited by the elections to fill these vacancies. There was only one candidate for the one living, while the other brought out two, of whom the one received twenty-five votes, while the other did not receive any. This mode of patronage appears to have little to recommend it, when it is evident that hardly any of the resident Members of the Senate ever take the trouble to vote, much less to make any inquiry into the respective merits of the candidates, who, as a rule, are quite unknown men.

On such occasions candidates ought to be graduates of Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin if the spirit of the statute were observed, but, at a recent election to a living which fell to one of the Universities, an ecclesiastic was elected, who had been only four years in orders (having previously failed in another profession) and whose theological education had been limited to a brief sojourn at St. Bees, after he had failed to pass the examination for admission to a leading Theological College.

The Rev. Edward Elmhirst, who died last week, was a famous cricketer between fifty and sixty years ago, and he was also a very fine shot. Mr. Elmhirst was one of Tennyson's intimate friends, and he himself wrote many verses, which, however, he never published. He was one of the most popular and successful parish clergymen in the Midland Counties. He had held the rectory of Shawell, in Leicestershire, for fifty-two years, having been presented by Lord Chancellor Cottenham in 1841. He restored the church, established excellent schools, and greatly improved the moral and social condition of his poorer neighbours, by whom he was much beloved. Mr. Elmhirst was a first-rate man of business, and he took a prominent and very useful part in all kinds of county and local affairs.

Principal Morison, of Glasgow, the founder of the Evangelical Union, who died last week, was one of the most learned theologians of the present century. The Evangelical Union was formed in 1843, after Mr. Morison and his father had been expelled from the Ministry of the Church of Scotland for unsound teaching, the fact being that his doctrines were precisely the same as those which are now professed by the sect of United Presbyterians. Principal Morison's theological works have been sold by tens of thousands, and have carried his name all over the world. He was a man of vast learning and a most admirable writer, and was entirely devoted to his literary pursuits.

Several Church of England people are indignant at my having said, apropos to a sermon by the Vicar of Auckland, that the Anglican clergy are conspicuous for uncharitableness and intolerance. Their argument is that the clergy of all denominations resent the coquetting of their flocks with ministers of other sects. This I should be sorry to deny, but in my experience I have found the Anglican clergy far more jealous on this point than those of any other persuasion, and this I attribute to their privileged position. Another case in point has just occurred at Dartmouth. A month ago the Mayor—a member of an old Dartmouth family, and a solicitor of over forty years' standing, but well known as a Broad Churchman and a Radical—opened a Wesleyan Bazaar, and made a speech expressing sympathy with the Nonconformists and dislike of Ritualism. When this gentleman was re-elected Chief Magistrate for the current year, the Rev. H. F. Tracey, Vicar of St. Saviour's, and a Tory tradesman and J.P. named Sampson, both declined his invitation to the public luncheon on the ground of this speech. In other words, both these narrow-minded individuals refuse to sit down to table on a public occasion with one who differs from them in religious matters. In what other religious sect do you find intolerance carried to this length?

With regard to the case of "sweating" by managers of the Irish Distressed Ladies' Fund recently described in TRUTH, I have received from the Executive Committee a letter thanking me for calling attention to the case, and stating that it has been referred to the Dublin Executive for explanation. The Committee could not do more, and I do not suppose that it is their wish that the EIDERTON PURE WOOLLEN FABRICS, in various weights and colourings, for Dressing Gowns, Smoking Jackets, Ladies' three-quarter Capes, Dresses, and Underskirts; also the new Ballydareen Duffle Frieze for Ulster Coats, Inverness Capes, and all descriptions of Winter Wraps where "warmth without weight" is desiderata. The Eiderdon Rug. Samples of Boyd & Conquest's productions, with "The Book of the Ulster," illustrated, and form for self-measurement, may be obtained, post free, on application.

C.O.M. WHISKY.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—ANDREWS & Co., C.O.M. WHISKY. Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

ladies whom they profess to relieve should be treated no better than East-end needlewomen. I hope, therefore, that it will be unnecessary to refer to the matter again.

A "Living Whist Pageant and Bazaar," in aid of the Funds of the Primrose League and Cheltenham General Hospital, is taking place at Cheltenham this week, and, not unnaturally, has aroused a feeling of deep irritation and resentment among the tradespeople of the place. Had the Primrose Leaguers deliberately set themselves to injure local trade they could hardly have done this more effectively than by opening a three days' amateur sale of fancy goods within a month of Christmas, and in a time of universal depression and scarcity of cash. There is something, too, not a little incongruous in the conjunction of a public hospital and a political association as joint beneficiaries in such a movement. I believe, as a matter of fact, the understanding is that the hospital is to have one-tenth of the proceeds. If that is the case, the Bazaar is little better than a trick to fill the languishing Primrose exchequer under cover of an appeal to charity. But, whatever the arrangement, it is a questionable one so far as the hospital is concerned, and a cruel one so far as the local tradesmen are concerned.

My attention is called by a correspondent to the fact that an advertisement has just appeared stating that the Boys' Convalescent Home at Ramsgate is to be given up owing to want of funds, and asks whether it would not be wiser first to look after our own poor, before we act on the appeal of a South African Bishop and supply him with funds to Christianise those of the Matabele who have not been killed by a British Company acting under a Royal Charter? I agree with my correspondent all the more as the Reverend Sylvester, "British Chaplain in Mashonaland," has published a letter, in which he urges that the Company is doing noble work in improving off the face of the globe a "heathen godless nation." My religion does not teach me that we ought to mow down Africans with Maxim guns in order to steal their land, and then to lay the flattering unction to our souls, that we have done well, because we are paving the way in this unchristian fashion for the spread of Christianity.

The depression does not seem to have touched Bristol, for the charitable collections and subscriptions on Colston Day were the largest for many years past, amounting to upwards of £3,571.

I have pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of £5 on behalf of Lady Jeune's Fund from Miss MacNaught, who tells me that the amount is the result of a small entertainment given at Yercaud, Shevaroy Hills, Madras Presidency, and also £1 from Fiddle-bow for the same Fund.

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one-half West-end price.—PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion. Perfect fit guaranteed. Caution, the only address, other people are trading on our name

What next? A circular has just been issued to Commanding Officers of the District from the Chief-Staff Officer's Office, Cork, intimating that "as it is now found impossible to distribute copies of District Orders, to all the units in the District, owing to the great clerical labour which is entailed thereby, and also to facilitate the circulation of memos., &c., the Major-General considers it desirable that a typewriter should be obtained for the Headquarter Offices." For this purpose the Major-General kindly invites Officers commanding "to state whether they are willing to subscribe £2 from their Canteen Funds," which expenditure the Major-General, in a burst of generosity, expresses himself "willing to sanction." What are here described as the Commanding Officers' Canteen Funds are, of course, the property of the soldiers; and what the Major-General so obligingly expresses his readiness to sanction is a misappropriation of such money for the purpose of relieving the War Office of the necessity of providing adequate clerical labour, or a substitute in the shape of a typewriter. If District Commanding Officers are ready to do this, and the higher military authorities approve, there is not the slightest reason why Tommy Atkins should not next be called upon, through his Canteen Fund, to supply his grateful country with arms and ammunition, or to pay himself his own wages, or even to find the modest salary of the Commander-in-Chief.

Copies have been forwarded to me of an appeal that is being circulated from Aldershot for subscriptions to a testimonial to Colonel T. B. Shaw-Hellier, late Commandant, R.M. School of Music. Well, who can object? After the example lately set by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, I really do not see why every officer should not have a testimonial presented to him on vacating a position; or, for the matter of that, any N.C.O. or any private. Why shouldn't Tommy have a subscription got up for him when he takes his discharge?

What looks like an attempt to reduce the employment of Army Service Corps clerks on fatigue duty has just been made at Aldershot; but it has apparently been so planned as to avoid touching the very serious grievance which has so frequently been referred to in TRUTH. An order has just been sent down for twenty clerks to proceed to out stations, but the fortunate twenty have been drawn entirely from the fifth grade, men of a few weeks' service who have not yet become qualified clerks. The effect of releasing these men from fatigue work is naturally to accentuate the grievance of their seniors, who have been doing day labourers' duty for eighteen months or two years past, and now see themselves apparently further than ever from the chance of a "shift."

An Army Medical Officer supplements what I said last week about medical inspections with a strong expression of opinion that for all practical purposes this formality is useless. If a man, he says, has a disease requiring hospital treatment, he will either voluntarily declare it or he will conceal it, and if he desires to conceal it the hurried and superficial inspection which he undergoes from the doctor will not detect it. This officer, I ought to say, controverts what I said in regard to the unnecessary exposure which is inflicted on the men, and gives particulars of the arrangements which he has been familiar with. What I described may not be universal; I am not, of course, in a position to say as much as that; but I have had evidence to the same effect from many different quarters. Adding what I have stated to what my medical friend now tells me, I should say that parades for medical inspection might very well be done away with altogether.

A case has just come under my notice, in which a Sergeant, who had been discharged to the Reserve after eight years' service, desired, after three or four months of civil life, to return to the colours, and made his application at the Depot accordingly. The Depot authorities communicated with the man's former C.O. in India, and then informed him that his C.O. was willing to have him back as Sergeant. The man then threw up his civil employment, but only to learn by a letter from the War Office that he could only be allowed to rejoin as a private. Being loth to do this, he found himself between two stools. If it is the invariable rule that an N.C.O. can only rejoin as a private, the rule ought to be made clearly known. In the present case the man seems to have been actually misled at the Depot by those who should have put him right.

That there would be objections to allowing an N.C.O. who has left the battalion to come back on his old footing, I fully appreciate. On the other hand, it is extremely improbable that any man who has once enjoyed the full-blown dignity of a Sergeant will voluntarily return to his former comrades shorn of all distinctive rank. It is generally understood that old, seasoned N.C.O.'s are at a high premium throughout the Army, and the attitude of the Commanding Officer in the above case seems to show that he thought the man's return in his former rank would be to the public interest. It seems desirable, therefore, that some concession should be made for the encouragement of N.C.O.'s desiring to return to the colours. How would it do to let them serve at the Depot until a vacancy occurred in their former battalions?

I hear that about 50,000 tins of essence of beef, which were purchased by the late Government for the use of the forces in Egypt, have been condemned at Malta. What, in the name of common sense, could be the object of purchasing 100,000 tins of the compound when only 50,000 were required, with the natural result that the surplus stock was kept at Malta until it turned bad?

It is understood that the Channel Squadron is to spend the Christmas holidays at home, an arrangement which will be very popular. The Tory Board of Admiralty always made it a point to keep the Channel Squadron abroad or at sea during Christmas, so that the officers and men lost their holiday leave. Lord Spencer and his colleagues are a great deal more considerate of the comfort and convenience of the Fleet than were their predecessors.

Is it generally known that all the money subscribed in the Mediterranean Fleet for a wedding present to the Duke of York went down in the ill-fated Victoria? Such was, I believe, the case, though personally I was unaware of the fact until my attention was called to it by the following letter. I cannot endorse my correspondent's views, but they help to show what a popularity the Duke of York has acquired with the fair sex:—

DEAR "TRUTH,"—I see that you offer some suggestions with regard to the application of the surplus of the Victoria Fund. Surely there is one sufferer who ought not to be overlooked, though nobody seems to have thought of him, poor fellow! I mean, of course, H.R.H. the Duke of York, who lost all the money—I forget how many thousand pounds—that had been subscribed in the Mediterranean Fleet for a present to him and his bride. I know you think that they had too many wedding presents, but I don't think anybody could have too many; and if, as you say, there is a lot of money over, I must say that I think the Duke and Duchess ought to be compensated out of it just as much as the poor man you were talking about who lost his kit.—Yours, A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART.

It is a question worth an answer, why all this money was kept on board the flag-ship, when there are English banks at Malta, into which one would have expected that the subscriptions would have been paid as a matter of course. I believe that this is not the only sum of money in regard to which the same question might be asked. A great deal of public cash is kept on board H.M. ships which by all accounts might just as well, if not far better, be banked on shore.

A certain Major-General Synge has just provoked a violent storm of indignation at Portsmouth by a stupidly-offensive letter which he wrote to a local paper with reference to the Patriotic Commission and the distribution of the Victoria Fund. In this epistle the Major-General considerately referred to "young persons keeping company with sailors, who, being good enough to get drowned, ensure them a luxurious provision for life, and for offspring possibly of a very questionable paternity." A community largely composed of sailors and sailors' wives and children was naturally not inclined to pocket this abominable and gratuitous insult, and an indignation meeting was held, at which the Major-General was very roughly handled—figuratively speaking. He thought it prudent not to appear in the flesh, or probably the rough handling would have taken a more literal shape, for, as one speaker expressed it, he had insulted every sailor's wife, from the Duchess of York down to the ladies attending the meeting.

Now, Portsmouth having had its turn at Major-General Synge, I should like to have a word with him. The Major-General is the Honorary Superintendent of the "Army and Navy Convalescent and Training Homes for Invalided Men," 24, Landport-terrace, Southsea. This institution has been in existence for some years, and it is largely supported by substantial contributions from various regiments in the Regular Army. The Adjutant of a regiment in India, having forwarded at one time and another over Rs. 1,300 to the Home, wrote recently to Major-General Synge, asking for a balance-sheet or information as to the expenditure, no particulars of which are furnished in the periodical reports. The answer of the Major-General was that a balance-sheet was not issued because it would disclose a deficit which had not been thrown on the institution, and those who had accepted the burden did not wish to parade themselves as having done so. General statements as to the work done were also given by him, but no details in pounds, shillings, and pence. Later on the Major General concluded a long and decidedly impertinent letter in this strain:—

THE COUPÉ COMPANY'S Telegraphic Address is "COUPÉ, ONDON."

PEUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. PEUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

> If you want a balance-sheet merely to show that the subscriptions for the year in question were honestly applied, say so. If you want to show that these have been inadequate to the support and efforts of the institution, this forms the very gist of my endeavours—now taken up by a Committee you do not impugn to place an institution sufficiently described in its papers upon a safe and adequate foundation.

Had I been in the position of the gentleman to whom this was addressed I should certainly have accepted the first alternative, and said that I wanted a balance-sheet in order to show that the subscriptions were honestly applied. For what other purpose does anybody want a balance-sheet from a charitable institution? Everybody who subscribes to a charity has a right to be furnished with accounts showing that the moneys received have been honestly applied, and everybody who receives money for charitable purposes ought to furnish such accounts regularly. On the Committee of the Army and Navy Homes there appear to be a number of eminent warriors, but neither their military eminence nor that of Major-General Synge, who seems to be the one responsible official, absolves them from the ordinary duty of giving an account of their stewardship. I advise them to impress this fact forthwith upon their Honorary Superintendent; and while they are about it they might also recommend him a little judicious study of the art of polite letter writing, or his pen may get him yet into worse trouble than it has already.

There is evidently a concerted scheme to rush us into an increase of our Navy. If the Navy be not strong enough for defence, then it ought to be increased. What I object to, is augmenting it on the basis of holding the Mediterranean in the event of war, if our naval experts tell us that this would not be our course in that event. Our first step should be to decide whether we should endeavour to hold that sea. If this be tactically a mistake, we ought not to do so. Our only interest in it is to keep open our communications through it with the East, and to protect our commerce in it. If it be deemed that we cannot do this without risking defeat through spreading our war-ships over too large an area, then we ought to block the exit, withdraw our mercantile marine during the duration of hostilities, and communicate with the East by the alternative route of the Cape. The whole question is one of tactics, rather than of principle or sentiment. In case of war, our object would be to win; for the winner would be able to dictate the terms of peace; and whether we win in the Atlantic or in the Mediterranean, is a mere question of detail. As for counting on either the Germans or the Italians to help us, were we engaged in a war with France or Russia, this would indeed be trusting to two reeds. The Germans would look on with pleasure at France being weakened by hostilities, and would certainly not incur a war with that country and Russia for our sakes. Italy would simply consider her own interests, and these would be to keep out of the war if possible.

I see no reason, however, why we should go to war with either Russia or France, or why France or Russia should go to war with us. I have always regarded a friendly feeling with France as the keynote of what our policy ought to be; and I have always believed it would be easy for us to establish a line of demarcation between ourselves and Russia in Asia, provided that we would agree not to meddle beyond that line. The Triple Alliance led to the Dual Alliance between France and Russia, and this Triple Alliance was brought about by our vague assurances of support to Italy. As it is, we should keep clear of both of these Alliances, and look alone to the interests of the vast number of human beings within our Empire, without meddling outside that Empire. We have had many wars in the last 150 years. Not one of them has been the result of any Power attacking us, but invariably we have been dragged into them by our mania for meddling in other people's affairs. Surely we ought to profit by this great historical lesson, and keep our breath to cool our own soup, like that very intelligent nation, the United States.

The Times puts it thus: "The average expenditure of England for the last five years has been £4,570,000. It is manifest that this average amount will not suffice for the next five years if France is to build ships at the rate of £2,900,000, and Russia at the rate of £2,600,000. An average annual expenditure of £5,500,000 will only barely keep us abreast of our rivals at that level of superiority the maintenance of which," &c. What I have always said has been, that the incautious declaration of Lord George Hamilton, that we must always have a fleet equal in strength to that of any two Powers, has had the direct effect of leading foreign Powers to build ships, just as when one Continental Power announces that it will increase the number of its soldiers the others follow suit. Let us suppose that Russia and France double their expenditure in ships; are we to double ours? This would bring us to an expenditure of £11,000,000 per annum, whilst it would only cost each of those Powers £5,500,000. It is like playing the game of unlimited poker against two adversaries who have a joint bank.

Now, what would be our position, if we stand to our text that our supremacy over the sea is absolutely dependent on our naval forces being equal to that of our opponents? Italy would only have to join in the war against us for this supremacy to disappear, or, in other words, our fate would be in the hands of Italy. This

WINTER VISITORS TO BOURNEMOUTH will find "The Imperial" one of the most complete residential establishments in the United Kingdom. Finest position on East Cliff. Luxuriously furnished, with appointments and cuisine of the highest order. Moderate tariff.—Apply, Manager.—W. H. DORÉ, Proprietor.

On and after the 27th inst., and until Xmas, Messrs. BENJAMIN, of Ulster-House, Conduit-street, W., will sell their Dress-length Remnants (suitable for presents) of their celebrated Tweeds, Serges, and Homespuns, at 25s., 30s., 35s., and 40s. the dress length.

supremacy, however, does not mean, I gather, that we should have a sufficient naval strength to enable us to come victors out of the struggle by concentrating our forces, but that, during the war, our trade routes should be as safe to the British commercial marine as in peace. Moreover, we ignore skill and tactics, but make the question merely one of numbers. This is simply a position in which we might ruin ourselves without war.

A "special instruction" just issued from the Admiralty ordains that all officers on shore, when known to be officers, even though in plain clothes, must be saluted. It might have been supposed that by this time more reasonable views of this matter would have asserted themselves even at Whitehall. When an officer is saluted, it is in deference to his rank and authority as holding the Queen's Commission. When on shore, and dressed as a civilian, he is, for the time, divested of his official attributes. To require that he shall then be saluted, is to imply that the salute is offered to the man and not to the officer, which is illogical, and, I should have supposed, unconstitutional.

The Indian Government has meted out a somewhat merciless measure of justice to Mr. W. B. Ewin, who was recently dismissed from the Bengal Pilot Service on a charge of drunkenness, arising out of the grounding of the steamer Arratoon Apcar in the Hooghly. At the time of his dismissal Mr. Ewin was a Senior Master Pilot, with seventeen years' service to his credit, and he had never incurred censure of any kind in the performance of his duties. To cast a good servant adrift under such circumstances, with a ruinous stigma upon him, is a step which could only be justified by the clearest evidence. I have had an opportunity of inspecting the evidence in Mr. Ewin's case, and it seems far from clear. Had he been tried on this charge before a court of law, almost any jury, looking at the discrepancies in the evidence, and discounting (as they ought to be discounted) the opinions formed by the Captain and his officers in a moment of anxiety and confusion, would have declined to convict Mr. Ewin. His case has now been laid before the Secretary of State, and I think that Lord Kimberley, even if he does not see his way to pronounce Mr. Ewin wrongly convicted, will have no difficulty in deciding that no case has been made out which justifies his dismissal from the Service.

With reference to the paragraphs upon the Indian Commander-in-Chief and the Nurses in TRUTH of the 9th inst., I have been favoured by an officer of the Medical Staff with a very bitter attack upon the ladies of the Nursing Service. The mildest thing this gentleman has to say is that the nurses are professionally worse than useless, while his strongest remarks, or insinuations, are of a character which I should be sorry to publish. That there is in some instances little love lost between doctors and nurses in this country I am aware; but if this is a sample of what prevails in India there must be a cat-and-dog feud in every hospital. Until I have further evidence in that direction, however, I shall take the liberty of thinking that for some reason my correspondent is a little biassed. As a pleasant contrast to his letter, here is an extract from another which arrived by the same post. The writer is an N.C.O. in a line regiment. My readers can choose between the opinion of the soldier and the doctor:—

> Referring to your issue of the 9th inst., re lady nurses in India, please allow one, who honestly believes that he owes his life to these excellent ladies, to say a word in their defence. None but those who have had personal experience of it can understand the extent of their devotion to the cause they have undertaken. Think, sir, what a change it is for sick men from the hands of native orderlies to those of gentle, kind-hearted English women. If "the very influential section of home society" would transfer their attention to some of the real abuses of Army life, they would be more likely to please the soldier abroad (and his friends at home) than by interfering with the well-earned recreation of his best friends in India.

I hear from a correspondent in the Levant that the money for rebuilding the hospital at Smyrna (£8,000) has already been voted by Parliament. This fact will doubtless be news to the majority of British taxpayers, not to mention Members of Parliament, and it is highly characteristic of the manner in which Parliamentary affairs are conducted that news of such a fact should reach this country viâ Smyrna. It is a thousand pities that those interested in the Levant trade did not take steps earlier to inform public opinion in this country of the true facts of the case; for there cannot now be the slightest doubt that a more senseless and indefensible piece of wastefulness has never been committed.

What makes the matter worse is that a protest against the rebuilding of the hospital was addressed to Lord Rosebery by the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom on March 11 last, while another from firms at Smyrna was despatched on March 21, a memorial from the same firm, forwarded through the Consul-General at Smyrna, on February 10, having been for some unexplained reason detained by that official. The hospital is not only to be rebuilt, but it is to be removed to another site outside the town, and the official reply to the Chamber of Shipping was that this was done in obedience to the sanitary regulations of the Porte. It appears that no new hospitals or additions to existing hospitals are allowed within the town; and the parties who floated the scheme for the new hospital had started the idea that the existing institution required the addition of an infectious diseases ward. But I understand that, at the outside, only one or two infectious cases have been admitted to the hospital per annum, while it is certain that the accommodation in the building has long been in excess of the requirements, and equally certain that by removing the institution outside the town, what little usefulness it has possessed in ordinary cases will be entirely destroyed. Had Lord Rosebery looked into the matter when the protest of the Chamber of Shipping was delivered, he could not have failed to see that instead of spending £8,000 upon it, the most sensible course would be to close the hospital.

A CHRISTMAS BOX.—A Merryweather's Fire Pump, with Buckets, for my friend's country house. Price Lists.—63, Long-acre, London, W.C.

TYPEWRITERS of all makes for Sale or Hire. Machines bought or taken in part exchange for new ones. Documents copied with accuracy and despatch.—N. TAYLOR, Manager, National Typewriter Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane.

As it is, he seems to have been led into sanctioning a nefarious raid upon the public purse by one or two interested individuals, without the slightest prospect of any public benefit resulting.

Mr. Arch. R. Whitehead has put forward a plan for Post Office Insurances and Annuities which has considerable merit. At present, says Mr. Whitehead, Industrial Life Companies have policies in force of the total value of £132,000,000, which is about 270 times the amount insured in the Post Office. In these Companies the working expenses average 14 per cent., and about two-thirds of the policies lapse, often without surrender value. Consequently, out of £5,500,000 paid annually in premiums, nearly £3,500,000 are wasted, so far as regards the provident poor. Now, although the Post Office Insurance and Annuities business has been established for twenty-seven years, the insurers and annuitants only average about two persons to each agency. This, Mr. Whitehead opines, is because those whose incomes are uncertain and precarious cannot promise to make periodic payments throughout the greater portion of their lives. He, therefore, proposes what he terms the single premium system, with 1d. as the unit. The Post Office would offer a shilling's worth of life insurance or old-age pay for every shilling invested at any time, the necessary tables being exhibited at every agency. For example, at the age of 20 a person might buy for a shilling a paid-up policy of 2s. 6d., or old-age pay of 7d. per annum, commencing at 65; at the age of 35 a policy of 2s., or an old-age pay of 4½d.; and at the age of 50 a policy of 1s. 9d., or old-age pay 2¼d.

When a man forges a cheque upon a London banker, the Association of Bankers runs him to earth no matter at what cost, for the almost-certainty of the forger's conviction is the only security that the Bankers have against the forgery of the names of clients. The Economist last week stated, in discussing the rumours respecting what has happened at the Bank of England, that "something graver than a mere error of judgment has been committed." This, practically, is an assertion on the part of one of the most respectable of City papers that a fraud has been committed. The Directors of the Bank of England appear to me, therefore, to be in this position—either they must bring an action against the Economist, or they must take proceedings against the person in their employment who is charged with fraud by the Economist. If they do neither, they either admit that the Bank of England condones a fraud when it takes place within its portals, or that a serious charge of fraud in regard to what has happened within its portals may be made with impunity.

For a long time past efforts have been made at Devonport to induce either the Military or Civil authorities to deal with the disgusting and dangerous condition of the bathing-place in the bay at the foot of Mount Wise. A more revolting condition of things does not probably exist anywhere in the Kingdom. The bay in question is the only available bathing-place for the town and the garrison, and in the summer hundreds of men and boys bathe there daily. Yet into the very centre of it is discharged a sewer which drains the Raglan Barracks and some of the adjacent houses. The consequent condition of the water may be readily imagined. A sample taken from the ordinary bathing place has just been analysed by a high authority. He reports upon this sample:—

> The impure character of "B" was amply evident on the mere inspection of the sample; it was turbid, a dirty brown colour, and emitted a most offensive sewage odour, perceptible at 2 ft. or 3 ft. from the bottle. . . .
>
> In short, it has the character of a sewage diluted sea water, and to bathe in a water so offensively smelling, and having the composition of this sample ("B") is a procedure, in my opinion, dangerous to health, and, under some conditions, even to life.

Hitherto the Military and Civil authorities have been at loggerheads as to whose business it is to abate this scandal. If after the foregoing report they do not speedily adjust their differences, they can only be charged with culpable indifference to the safety of human life.

Penarth seems to be afflicted in its Local Board with a singularly vacillating and muddle-headed body. Considering that the Surveyor had been guilty of negligence and carelessness, the Board called upon him to resign. He did so, and the vacancy was widely advertised. The salary offered was £200 per annum—an increase of £40 upon what had hitherto been paid—and there were a large number of candidates for the appointment. Some of the applicants came to Penarth, the Board paying their railway fares, and it cannot be doubted that amongst them there were men admirably qualified for the position. But at the eleventh hour the Board abandoned the idea of engaging a new man, and reinstated the old Surveyor at the advanced salary. This fortunate official has therefore been awarded an extra £40 a year in consequence of his negligence and carelessness, whilst the ratepayers have to pay the little bill for advertisements, railway fares, &c. The latter are naturally not so well satisfied with the proceedings as the Surveyor, and they have now called upon the members of the Board to resign. It certainly seems about time Penarth had a new Board.

Who can wonder at the disaster which lately overtook Worthing? At the election of a new Mayor the other day, Alderman Piper, the candidate for that office, was questioned as to a statement he had made that if he had been in the position of the late Mayor he would have taken the same course as that functionary in repressing the damning report of Professor Crookshank upon the water-supply of the town. In reply to the question the Alderman stuck to his guns. At the time when the Report was received, he argued, they had the opinion of their medical and sanitary advisers, that the epidemic was over (it will be remembered that there was in the first instance a slight and temporary outbreak), and that it had resulted from accidental causes. Ergo, said the Alderman, the Mayor was justified in concealing from his colleagues that an expert had condemned the ordinary water-supply in the most unqualified terms. When the rulers of a town are so slow as this to learn from the bitterest experience, no calamity can be wondered at. Dr. Crookshank's report showed clearly that the local medical and sanitary advisers of the Corporation were utterly at fault, and gave every reason to apprehend what has actually happened. To suppress it was to remove the one chance of averting disaster. It would have frightened people away, says the new Mayor. Why, what has the other policy done?

OVALINE TOILET SOAP, made with Yolk of Egg, is a wonderful discovery for the skin and hair. As a Shaving Soap it has no equal. Price, 8d. per tablet, 2s. per box.—52, King-st., Regent-st., London.

The best thing that could possibly have been done for Worthing last spring, was to publish to all the world that the water-supply was infected, and to warn people away till its defects had been cured. This would have emptied the town for that season; whereas, in a criminally foolish attempt to avoid that result, the late Mayor and his colleagues have emptied it for the next ten.

Following on the report by the City Medical Officer of Health, to which I referred the other day, Christ's Hospital has now been closed, not temporarily, but for good, and a makeshift arrangement has been devised for the housing of the school between this and the opening of the new buildings at Horsham, which will, I take it, be a matter of many months, if not years. The authorities will now have an opportunity of reflecting upon the soundness of the advice which I gave them a year and a half back, when they were good enough to let me investigate the condition of the premises. I told them then that the only safe way of avoiding the sanitary dangers by which the school was beset was to move into temporary premises pending the erection of the new buildings. Had this been done a year ago, it would have been better for the welfare of the school, and the credit of the governing authorities.

When St. Bartholomew's Hospital earned itself an unenviable notoriety by its insanitary condition, we were told that the vast accumulation of surplus wealth which has been in progress at that institution was designed for the purpose of acquiring a portion of the Christ's Hospital site when the opportunity should arise. As the opportunity is now arising, it seems time for a vigorous protest against any such waste of money. I am not thinking of the dangers of the site, though it is quite certain that, before it is fit for use, a huge sum will have to be spent in unearthing and removing the subterranean abominations which several centuries have left behind them. The real objection is to the purchase of land for charitable purposes at £100,000 an acre in the heart of the City of London. The money which the authorities of St. Bartholomew's propose to squander on merely adding one or two wards to their present premises would suffice to build two or three hospitals in outlying districts where they are badly wanted. All who are interested in London hospital management should bestir themselves to prevent this folly while there is yet time.

The Guardians of Lismore Union have passed and forwarded to me a resolution that the paragraph in TRUTH of the 9th inst. respecting an outbreak of fever at that town is "an unwarrantable exaggeration." The resolution goes on to give particulars of the number of cases, which are said to be thirty-nine instead of from ninety to one hundred, and also of the precautions adopted in "the first case of typhus" (sic), and in the typhoid cases. The Guardians add, what I am glad to hear, that there is now (November 16) only one case of fever in Ballyduff, and one other in the entire Union, except for ten of typhus and one of typhoid in hospital (all convalescent). Having stated so much, it is quite unnecessary for me to comply with the request of the Guardians that I will publish their resolution in full, for it has absolutely no bearing on my paragraph, beyond the precise figures in regard to the extent of the epidemic. There is no doubt that there has been a very serious outbreak. All that I gave beyond that were some facts in regard to the dissemination of the disease by bed-clothing, and upon this the Guardians say nothing. Appended to their communication is a newspaper extract in which a gentleman denies that my statement applies to bed-clothing in his house, but what this is worth I am unable to see.

A Plymouth paper gives some deplorable particulars of insanitary districts in Cornwall, notably Camelford, where there has been a serious epidemic of typhoid, and the Liskeard Union, in various parts of which typhoid, diphtheria, and scarlet fever have been rife. From these and certain other recent cases, it would seem that the Cornish sanitary authorities are in special need of attention from the higher powers at Whitehall, but how far they are from receiving it, the following facts will show. In February, 1892, a complaint was addressed to the Local Government Board of the inaction of the St. German's Sanitary Authority in regard to a nuisance in their district. In September, 1892, the Board informed the complainant that it was about to make an order conferring certain necessary powers on the said Sanitary Authority. In October, 1893, nothing further having happened, the complainant got his solicitor to write, pointing out a section of the Public Health Act under which the Board are bound to take action. Then, only one year and eight months after the first complaint, were draft by-laws sent down from Whitehall. Quis custodiet ipsos custodes?

Since I referred last week to Mr. Hastie's dispute with the Great Western Railway Company over his excess luggage, I have heard that the Company have issued a County-court summons, so that the question is now likely to be fought out by due process of law. This announcement will sufficiently answer one or two gentlemen who have written to me for further information respecting the law—including the musician whose 'cello has been so hardly dealt with by the Brighton Company. I take it that the majority of Companies, however, have clear regulations on the subject of luggage, and that they could have no objection to supply, if asked for it, the statutory authority for their charges.

THE DENSMORE.—The World's Greatest Typewriter. Now adopted in the highest and most experienced quarters. Guaranteed to give satisfaction.—51, Gracechurch-street, London, E.C.

COACHING of highest excellence in West of Eng. at "Crawford's," Wykeham Ho., Clifton, Glos., for ARMY EXAMS. (Univ. and Civ. Serv.). Five crowded years of success. No vacancies till Jan., '94.

Letters have been published in Dorsetshire, written by Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour to Mr. Farquharson, M.P., with reference to Mr. Gatty's slander action. Lord Salisbury says:—"Nothing came under my notice . . . . which justified the impression that you have been making use of matters of personal and private history for the purpose of advancing your electoral prospects." What Mr. Farquharson expects to gain by this flattering testimonial it is difficult to understand. Lord Salisbury may, of course, think as he pleases. Twelve jurymen, however, after the best opportunity of judging, thought otherwise. So strong were they in their opinion that they ordered Mr. Farquharson to pay £5,000 damages. Public opinion, regardless of party, unanimously endorsed their verdict. Lord Salisbury, though an important personage, is not the ultimate court of appeal either from the verdicts of juries or of the public.

A correspondent sends me an interesting balance-sheet of the estate of C. A. Floyd, in Bankruptcy. The total received by the official liquidator was £758. 3s. 4d. £215. 9s. 11d. went to preferential creditors, leaving for other creditors £542. 13s. 5d. Of this, the sum of 8s. 2d. remains for distribution amongst these creditors, the remainder having been expended in costs of liquidation.

Here is so monstrous a case of Justices' justice that I would call special attention to it. Charles Moss, of Mickleton, Gloucestershire, is married and has nine children, and his average earnings are 12s. per week. Crossing an orchard on his way to go to his work, he picked up four apples that were lying on his path. Moss is a man of blameless character, but he is a Liberal and a Dissenter. Brought before the Campden Magistrates, one of whom is a Canon, and all of whom are Tories, for this crime he was fined £1. 4s. And he has since been told that he will not partake in the charity coal distribution on account of his heinous wickedness—this being a further loss to him of 12s. This is the same Bench, which, as recorded in TRUTH at the time, fined a Tory rough 9s. for kicking and seriously injuring a child who had dared to hurrah for the Liberal candidate during the last Cirencester Election. At the same time they fined the father of the child 27s. for collaring the man who had kicked his child, and I am credibly informed that they also ordered that the sentence against the Tory rowdy should not be recorded.

I lately alluded to the serious reflections which Mr. M. Huggard, a Wexford solicitor, had made upon the conduct of the Taghmon Bench, and quoted his remark that it is far more risky for a peasant to fire at a pheasant than for a gamekeeper to fire at a peasant. I added that this was certainly so if all Mr. Huggard said was true. Mr. Huggard has now furnished me with newspaper reports of cases before the Bench which fully bear out his statements. I therefore feel justified in endorsing what he said without any qualifying words.

"VERREY'S" RESTAURANT, Regent-street, corner of Hanover street. The oldest and most select French Restaurant in London. Ladies' luncheons at moderate prices a specialty. Dinners à la carte.

Apropos to what I said last week respecting lawful and unlawful sport, comes an account of a case at Wokingham Petty Sessions, where the Earl of Rothes, John Griffiths, and Charles Peers were convicted of ill-treating and torturing a cat. I fancy that even my friend at Leeds to whose letter I referred, will hardly care to argue that such a game as the noble Earl and his companions engaged in should be permitted because the cruelty attendant upon stag-hunting and rabbit-coursing is not also within the reach of the law. It was proved that the three defendants took a cat into a field and set on a greyhound to capture it. A scratch was enough to make the greyhound bolt, and two terriers were then incited to worry the wretched puss, which, being seized by the fore and hind quarters, was torn and otherwise mutilated. Finally, these promising young sportsmen shot the cat with revolvers. The penalty imposed by Sir Warwick Morshead and his fellow Magistrates for this horrible cruelty was £1 each and costs.

Considering that the defendants are only youths—the Earl of Rothes, I believe, is sixteen—I am loth to say that they should have been committed to prison, and the Bench had not, of course, power to order a flogging, which would have been the most salutary punishment. But I am rather inclined to think that a spell of hard labour would have been the fate of the three young barbarians, in spite of their age, if they had been in a humbler social position. At all events, I observe that on the day Lord Rothes and his friends were thus leniently dealt with at Wokingham, another Berkshire County Bench, sitting at Maidenhead, sentenced Thomas Bowles, also sixteen years of age, to a month's hard labour without [the option of a fine for ill-treating two donkeys by violently beating them. Somehow the theory that the law is the same for the rich and the poor frequently gives way beneath the strain of practice.

The praiseworthy efforts of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children do not receive much encouragement at the hands of the Dover Magistrates. Last week a boatman was charged with neglecting his four children. The evidence left no doubt that he had neglected them, and that whilst they were without sufficient food he was spending money in getting drunk. It appeared also that many complaints had been made about his conduct, and that in consequence of his neglect his wife and two other children had gone into the workhouse. Most people will regard this as a case demanding some kind of punishment, but the compassionate Bench let the defendant off with a "severe caution." I fear severe cautions are not likely to have much effect in making drunken and neglectful parents care for their unfortunate children.

Before the Rochester County Magistrates the other day a young costermonger was convicted under the Lord's Day Act of Charles II. for publicly crying shrimps and winkles. The Bench ordered him to pay five shillings towards the costs, which were nine shillings, and considering that it was the first time the defendant has been out selling on the Lord's Day, one would have thought that the penalty was sufficiently heavy to satisfy the most exacting Sabbatarian. It failed, however, to satisfy Mr. J. Basset, the Clerk to the Gillingham Local Board, who prosecuted, and he pointed out the grievous fact that the remaining four shillings of the costs would fall upon the ratepayers. The Bench declined to alter their decision to suit Mr. Basset, but apparently they lacked the courage to thwart him a second time. He objected to time being given for payment of the five shillings, and the defendant was sentenced to seven days' imprisonment in default of the money being forthcoming before the rising of the Court.

A Suffolk coroner's jury have come to the conclusion that great carelessness and lack of judgment were shown in the recent removal of two aged and infirm paupers from Worlingworth to Eye Workhouse. The jury certainly appear to have had good cause for saying so. An old man of ninety, who was ill, and his aged wife, who had had her thigh fractured, were placed in a tumbrel and driven in this conveyance a distance of seven miles. It was a bitterly cold day, and owing, as it was explained, to the horse being an old one, the journey occupied no less than seven hours. Within a week or so after their admission to the workhouse both the old people died, and the jury were of opinion that in the man's case "very probably death was hastened by the removal." It is to be hoped that the Hoxne Guardians, whose officer carried out the removal, will take steps to prevent the repetition of such a scandal.

I have been taken to task by the Clerk to the Newtown Justices (Montgomeryshire) for a comment in TRUTH of November 2 upon a decision of the Bench. As the matter was represented in TRUTH, the Chairman, after a charge of indecent assault had been dismissed, told the defendant that his conduct had been "shameful," and that "had he been sent for trial, he would, no doubt, have been sentenced to a long term of imprisonment." On this I very naturally remarked that the man ought in that case to have been sent for trial, adding sundry observations on the mental capacity of the Magistrates who would discharge a prisoner while pronouncing him guilty. On November 9 the Clerk to the Justices wrote to tell me that the report was inaccurate, and to ask an explanation as to how it appeared in TRUTH. I replied that the facts which I mentioned and the words which I quoted were taken from a report of the proceedings in the Shrewsbury Chronicle. The Clerk replies that the report was inaccurate. I had perhaps better give his exact words :—

> That report is incorrect in stating that the charge was one of indecent assault. It was a charge of rape, which, under the circumstances, could not be reduced to the charge either of indecent assault or common assault, and the defendant fully admitted the immorality, but the girl, who resisted the attempt, had not screamed or given such an alarm as would have enabled the jury to convict.
>
> The Chairman said, on returning from the retiring-room, that the Justices "did not think that the evidence was such upon which a jury would convict, and it was, therefore, their duty to dismiss the charge."
>
> The Chairman added, at the end of his address, "had we committed you for trial, and had you been convicted by the jury there is no doubt you would have been sentenced to a long term of imprisonment."

I admit at once that this explanation entirely alters the effect of the report, and exonerates the Justices from any such imputation as that put upon them in my criticism of the case. I regret very much that the mistake should have been made. At the same time, it will be seen that it was due solely to the negligence and incompetence of the local reporter. Experience has taught me to receive the evidence of these gentlemen with suspicion, but in this particular instance the reporter did his best to disarm suspicion by reproducing the Chairman's remarks to the prisoner verbatim and in the first person. He will possibly say that he did not hear the important words, "had you been convicted by the jury," and, under ordinary circumstances, I might have been disposed to think that the Chairman had not said all that he intended to say or supposed himself to have said. In this case, however, the reporter has put himself out of court by his other blunders. He misstates—probably from motives of false delicacy—the nature of the charge, and he fails to mention that the case was dismissed because the Bench did not consider that a jury would convict upon that particular charge. Scarcely a week passes but what some comment in TRUTH upon provincial police-reports reveals in this way their gross inaccuracy, and although the Great Unpaid regard TRUTH as their deadly foe, I am inclined to think that they have far more dangerous enemies in some of the provincial papers, which profess to be their sincere friends.

The Bridgnorth Borough Justices were guilty of a gross dereliction of duty last week. Two Sergeants in the Shropshire Constabulary were charged on remand with inflicting grievous bodily harm on a labourer on September 16. When the case came on, the solicitor for the prosecution stated that he had had a consultation with the solicitors for the defence, and that "an agreement had been come to," and he asked to be allowed to withdraw the charge. The terms of the agreement were not mentioned in Court, but a newspaper reports that "both defendants have agreed to pay the prosecutor £40 and costs." Now, though it is quite conceivable that an injured man would rather receive a substantial sum as compensation than see his assailants sent to gaol, one would think that the biggest numskull on the Bench would realise that an accusation of such gravity against two police-officers ought not to be disposed of in this way. Instead, however, of insisting upon a full and open investigation, the Mayor of Bridgnorth and his colleagues, Messrs. J. W. McMichael and W. Rhodes, J.P.'s, complacently consented to the withdrawal of the charge. In the interests of the public, as well as for the reputation of the Shropshire Constabulary, it is to be hoped that the matter will not be allowed to end here, but that the conduct of the two Sergeants will be seriously considered by the proper authorities.

SHIRTS FOR EVENING WEAR, with Pique and Fancy Fronts. ressing Gowns and Jackets. At-home Dinner Jackets.— AMPSON & Co., 268, 270, Oxford-street, W.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S W[illegible] H[illegible] colour, [illegible] scalp.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. Amongst the several examples of misplaced lenity comprised in the list, I would particularly call attention to the utterly inadequate penalties imposed for most cowardly and brutal assaults at Wootton Bassett, Hungerford, and Gosport. The average J.P. seems to imagine that a more or less trifling payment in cash sufficiently expiates the worst acts of personal violence, though any slight offence against the precious rights of the property-owner or the game-preserver can only be wiped out by a term of imprisonment:—

East Dereham Petty Sessions. Before Colonel Gurdon, Lieut.-Colonel Hyde, Mr. W. D. E. Bulwer, and Sir Ralph Hare, Bart. David Mower and his wife, charged with ill-treating their niece, aged eleven. The child had been severely beaten with a stick and a strap, and a patch of her hair torn out. Although suffering from cataract she was struck in the eye, which was blackened. Fined £1, including costs.

Hungerford Petty Sessions. Before Major Aldridge, Hon. A. Dawson, and Mr. H. M. Appach. James Huntley, charged with assaulting his wife. He struck her across the face with a poker. She fainted, and afterwards went to a doctor, who said her face was covered with blood, and the upper eyelid cut through. The Bench thought there had been faults on both sides, but defendant had no right to use the poker. Fined 1s. and 20s. costs, and bound over.

Gosport Police-court. Patrick Charles, driver in the Army Service Corps, convicted of an entirely unprovoked assault on Emma Tompkins. He struck her in the mouth, knocking out some of her teeth, and rendering her insensible. Fined 5s., and 4s. costs.

Wootton Bassett Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. C. Wykeham-Martin, N. Story Maskelyne, and J. H. Sadler. Harry Cook, Frank Bunce, and Robert Bunce, charged with assaulting John Selby, and the first-named also charged with assaulting Selby's wife. Defendants attacked the husband, knocking him down, and most brutally ill-treating him. Cook then dragged the woman across a field, where he attempted to indecently assault her, and also struck her in the face, injuring her nose and blacking her eyes, and knocked her down. The Chairman said the doctor's evidence showed that if extreme care had not been used John Selby would not have survived, and the charge would have been manslaughter. Cook fined £3, including costs, Frank Bunce £5, and Robert Bunce £2. 10s.

Leominster County Police-court. Before Alderman T. B. Stallard and Mr. H. S. Newman. Sarah Nott, charged with ill-treating her child aged three years. The child, who was insured, was badly bruised, and the evidence showed that prisoner had on various occasions beaten him across the face, hands, and legs with her hands, with a switch, and with hop wires. She had also sometimes kicked the child and otherwise ill-treated him. Fined £1. 1s. and costs.

East Dereham Petty Sessions. Before Lieut.-Colonel Hyde, Mr. W. D. E. Bulwer, and Sir Ralph Hare. Henry Lebbell, charged with trespassing in search of game. Whilst driving along the road defendant got down, went into a field, and fired one shot at a partridge. His first offence. Fined £1. 3s. 6d., including costs.

Reigate Police-court. Before the Mayor (Alderman Brown) and Alderman Budgen. Martin Crump, charged with stealing threepennyworth of coke. Fine and costs £1. 4s.; in default, ten days. Time to pay refused.

Bury St. Edmund's Police-court. Frederick Moye, aged sixty-nine, charged with stealing meal, value one shilling. Six weeks.

Buckingham Divisional Petty Sessions. Before Mr. A. J. Roberts, Mr. H. E. Bull, and Colonel Neave. James Saving, charged with trespassing for rabbits. One month in default of paying £2. 18s. 6d.

Daventry Divisional Petty Sessions. William Mawby, signalman, charged with stealing 77 lb. of coal and a bottle of oil, the property of the London and North-Western Railway Company. Evidence was given as to the excellent character the prisoner had borne, and the Bench were asked to inflict a fine. One month.

Weston-super-Mare Petty Sessions. Before Colonel Turner, Mr. Mullins, Captain W. E. S. Battiscombe, and Mr. J. Jackson-Barstow. John Wingfield, charged with trespassing on the property of the Great-Western Railway Company. Fined £5 and costs; in default of distress, six weeks.

Wisbech Petty Sessions. Before the Mayor (Mr. A. W. May), Aldermen Groom and Goward, Messrs. J. Leach, W. M. Rust, W. S. Collins, and E. Dawburn. Mary Ann Holes, committed for fourteen days for failure to pay a fine of 2s. 6d. and 15s. costs for keeping a dog without a licence.

Croydon Borough Police-court. Before Mr. W. Duthi and Dr. T. R. Adams. John Ebbutt, convicted of assaulting his wife. After striking her a severe blow in the face with his fist, he hit her on the forehead with the butt-end of a stick. Seven days.

Monmouth County Police-court. Before Mr. G. Griffin, Colonel J. Davies, and Rev. L. A. Rees. James Pask, a powerful looking fellow, with six previous convictions for assault, and one for manslaughter, charged with assaulting two young men. One of the prosecutors was rendered insensible by a blow from Pask. Fined £2 and costs.

Bridgnorth Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor (Mr. W. Burton), Messrs. J. W. McMichael, and W. Rhodes. Charles Farrell, convicted of assaulting Edward Clarke. Defendant deliberately thrust his fingers into complainant's eyes, causing injuries which necessitated his seeking the services of a surgeon. Fined £1 and costs.

Epworth Police-court. Before Messrs. W. Stephenson and J. F. Watson. John Silvey, convicted of poaching. Three months, and a further six months in default of finding sureties.

St. Asaph Police-court. Before Mr. Walthall and Colonel Hore. Moses Williams, charged with poaching. Three months.

Croydon Borough Police-court. Before the same Magistrates. A wretched looking man, named Edward Thomas, charged with stealing a roll of flannelette which was exposed for sale. Fourteen days.

Monmouth Borough Police-court. John Williams and Edward George, convicted of stealing a duck. In default of paying £1. 1s. 6d. each, committed for fourteen days.

Newmarket (Suffolk) Petty Sessions. Before the Rev. W. Godfrey and Mr. O. P. Baldwin. Arthur Herrington, charged with stealing two partridges. Fourteen days.

Helmsley Police-court. Before the Rev. O. A. Manners. Thomas Clark and William Hill, charged with vagrancy. Fourteen days each.

An Eastbourne J.P. protests against the inclusion in the Pillory of the sentences on two tramps charged with refusing to perform their allotted task at Hailsham Workhouse. He says the culprits were two strong, able-bodied men, and that they declined to do any work whatever. My correspondent is in a better position than I am to judge of the character of the prisoners, and, upon consideration of his letter, I am disposed to think that the course adopted by the Bench was not, after all, exceptionally harsh. As a matter of fact, I intended the case to be taken more as an illustration of the treatment casuals receive at the hands of Bumble than as a reflection on the Magistrates. The men in question were called upon to perform a task of stone-breaking after a breakfast of bread and cold water. They objected to doing such labour on such a diet, and, though I acknowledge that the Bench could not disregard the breach of the regulations, I still consider that the objection was not unreasonable, and it ought to receive the attention of the Guardians.

A curious suggestion was made by Judge Turner during the hearing of an application in the Darlington County-court last week. His Honour was asked by the liquidator of a building society to sanction an arrangement for the sale of certain property under which the house agent and valuer was to be paid 1 per cent. on the purchase-money for introducing the purchaser. It was stated that, owing to the difficulty in finding purchasers, it would be to the advantage of the society to pay the 1 per cent. The Judge, however, considered the commission excessive, and suggested "that as the liquidator now knew the name of the purchaser, he could negotiate with him direct and leave the agent out in the cold." Seeing that the name had only been disclosed on the understanding that the commission would be paid, the liquidator did not feel justified in accepting this advice. It seems to me more worthy of a pettifogging practitioner than of a judicial dignitary.

The action of the Common Serjeant in ordering a dose of "the cat" for half a dozen ruffians convicted of crimes of violence has been adversely criticised in some quarters. Such sentences always evoke an outburst of maudlin sentiment, in which the criminal gets a good deal of pity that would be better bestowed upon the victim of his outrage. For my part, I think Sir Forrest Fulton deserves great credit for the course he has adopted. To be thoroughly effectual as a deterrent, however, the application of corporal punishment in such cases must be more certain and less dependent upon the different views of different Judges on the subject. As to the instrument to be used, I see no objection, as I intimated last week, to the substitution of something else for "the cat" if that is deemed too cruel. This might, indeed, help to allay the prejudice which some humanitarians have at present against corporal punishment. The main thing is that corporal punishment should be inflicted in a way disagreeable to the criminal.

With reference to the paragraph in TRUTH of November 9, in which the Midhurst Times was cited as stating that Colonel Lascelles adjudicated in a case in which he had a very close interest, I am informed that the report of the paper in question was erroneous. Colonel Lascelles very properly retired from the Bench before the case was heard. I may add that the sentence seems to have been by no means an unreasonable one. Two men were sentenced to a month's hard labour each for destroying gorse on a common. It was not a case, however, of poor villagers in the neighbourhood cutting a little gorse for their own use. It seems that gorse is used in the manufacture of golf clubs, and for this purpose raids are made on the commons by gangs of men, who send off the spoils to London. In this particular district irretrievable damage is said to have been done by these means; and these two particular men had been repeatedly warned without effect. I entirely agree that it is desirable to teach a lesson to such depredators, and I trust that the rural J.P.'s will now take equally strong steps against those who despoil our lanes and hedgerows in anticipation of the tomfooleries of Primrose Day.

Some extraordinary statements have been made in a Lewisham paper respecting the circumstances under which a man named J. Mariano Williams, who had just become an inmate of the Lewisham Workhouse Infirmary, was certified as insane and conveyed to Cane Hill Asylum. It is asserted that within two hours of his being certified as insane in the Workhouse Williams was examined by the Chief-Superintendent and another Medical Officer in the Asylum, and that these gentlemen failed to detect the slightest trace of insanity. This in itself seems, to say the least, to call for some inquiry, but the further allegations which are made render the matter far more serious. Williams, it seems, some time ago made certain charges against the management of the Workhouse Infirmary, and a correspondent of the Lewisham Independent bluntly declares that the "poor fellow was put out of the way simply because he rendered such good service . . . in exposing the horrible doings in this institution, and which were fully borne out by the report of the Local Government Board Inspector." It is almost incredible that anything of the kind can have happened, but such an accusation having been publicly made should be publicly answered.

Provincial papers might, at very little cost or trouble, make themselves much more useful than they are. Under the heading, "Is it a Swindle?" the Westmeath Independent gravely recounts "a sensational item of news" respecting the burying of £14,000 at Charleville, co. Cork, and then proceeds to unfold the story of some one in the neighbourhood who has been favoured with the attentions of our old friend the Spanish prisoner. "We are inclined," sagely remarks the Independent, in conclusion, "to the supposition that the affair is an advertising swindle." If my contemporary had glanced at almost any number of TRUTH published during the last two years he would have been able to make a guess even nearer the mark. I call attention to this matter because I notice that the majority of my provincial contemporaries republish every week for the edification of their readers extracts from the current issue of TRUTH. This compliment I much appreciate, but it seems to me that these extracts are, as a rule, very strangely chosen. I cannot help thinking that in every number of TRUTH there is a great deal of matter which would be of far more use to the provincial reader than information respecting the latest doings of the most exalted personages.

I would warn my readers against a begging-letter writer named Charles Lister, who at present dates from 64, Munster-road, Fulham. Here is a sample from one of his latest epistles, addressed to a Yorkshire baronet:—

> I am a son of a man, a member of a good old Yorkshire family, Major Thomas St. George Lister formerly of the 74th Highlanders, but at the time of his death of the 3rd Dragoon Guards.
>
> I am in great distress for a few pounds and if you are disposed to assist me I will lay before you all necessary proofs of my bona fides and great need. I have had more than my share of trouble, failing in business from insufficient capital, and, directly after, being worried by a bloodhound, I was financially and bodily incapacitated. I was attended by the late Sir R. Quain and Berkeley Hill during my illness. I have a boy of seventeen totally blind through that mishap (sic), and now I have one eleven lying in bed five months with tubes inserted in his lung, through his back, &c.

Why Lister speaks of it as a "mishap," that he was attended by "the late" Sir Richard Quain, or how this misfortune can have caused his son to be blind, I have not been able to learn. But I find that he is living in a comfortable little house in Fulham; that the bloodhound's attack has not, so far, incapacitated him as to prevent him getting about (for he was out when my representative called); and that the boy of eleven, with the tubes inserted in his lungs through his back, is on his legs, and to all appearance convalescent. When I add that Lister has been known to the Charity Organisation Society as a begging-letter writer since 1876, I hope I have said enough to show that he has no legitimate claims on the benevolent.

I have had a further letter from Dr. Arthur Welsford, of Dover, on the subject of quack advertisements, and several other communications dealing with other aspects of the subject have also reached me. As I have a good many other demands on my space this week, I think I shall be able to do better justice to my correspondents if I hold their letters over. I ought to mention, however, that I have received from Mr. Gliddon, of the Central Depot for Count Mattei's Remedies, a letter disputing Dr. Welsford's statements in regard to the Count's preparations. Mr. Gliddon asks to be allowed to state:—

1st. That Count Mattei does not sell any fluid as a cure for cancer. 2nd. That the liquids which he sells for the relief of cancer pains and for the purpose of arresting hæmorrhage were analysed in 1892 by Professor Casali, of Bologna, one of the ablest chemists in Italy. After an exhaustive analysis, the original report of which I shall be pleased to submit to you for your inspection, he declared that the liquids resembled aqueous solutions of vegetable substances. An analysis in 1893, made by Mr. F. C. Butterfield, F.C.S., F.I.C., harmonised with this.

I have no objection to state this much, in view of what was said in Dr. Welsford's letter; but I object emphatically to allow the Mattei question to be reopened at this date in the columns of TRUTH.

It is to be hoped that the police will soon find some ground for laying their hands on the man Maclean, for there seems no limit to his unscrupulous audacity. The following advertisement of his has been appearing in the Irish News:—

Members Wanted in Belfast and the North of Ireland for the British and Foreign Correspondence Association (Instituted June 1, 1882).

Advantages of Membership:—Social introductions at Home and Abroad. Facilities for Congenial correspondence on all subjects, Scientific, Commercial, and General. Encouragement of Literary Talent. Monthly magazines free to members. Hotel tariff privileges. Mercantile information from all parts. Influential support.

About 2,300 members enrolled in all parts of the world. Official magazine free to members monthly. Subscription, 3s. annually, with 1s. entrance fee. For further particulars enclose stamp to the Secretary, Mr. Angus Maclean, Temple Chambers, Victoria Embankment, London, E.C. Eighth year now beginning. Specimen copy of the magazine, 3½d., post free.

When saying a short good-bye to Maclean a few months ago, I remarked that if the scoundrel had still a few old circulars of the "British and Foreign Association" in his possession, we should hear of him again as soon as he could raise a few postage stamps, and persuade some confiding householder to let him a room for an office. He seems to have surpassed my expectations, for he has gone to work again even before the "British and Foreign Association" has been provided with a new office. It may be remembered that "Temple Chambers" was the original address of the concern, but Maclean has not returned there, and, so far as I can learn, no one on the premises knows anything about him. Probably, therefore, he has an arrangement with the Post Office that letters addressed to him there shall be re-directed. As this rascal seems to think that there is still a chance of obtaining a few victims in "Belfast and the North of Ireland," I mention again, for the benefit of that corner of the Kingdom, that the "British and Foreign Association," which was never anything but a device for putting half-guineas into Maclean's pocket, has for some time past consisted solely of Maclean himself, who, when last seen, was carrying on under this name in a back street in Westminster a fraudulent agency for robbing persons in want of employment. The Irish News, and any other Irish papers which may have published Maclean's latest advertisement, owe it to their readers to repeat this information.

With regard to what I said a fortnight ago as to the Parliamentary petition of the Domestic Servants' Union, I have received a letter from Messrs. Griffith & Gardiner, solicitors to the Union, which seems to show conclusively by extracts from text-books and legal decisions, that an employer is under no obligation whatever to give a servant a character. I also hear that the law was recently administered in this sense to a servant girl by one of the Metropolitan Magistrates. This seems to me both hard and unjust, and I think that all fair-minded men and women who keep servants will agree with me. I hope, therefore, that the petition for an amendment of the law will not go unheeded.

Another point brought under my notice by the Servants' Union is the cleaning of windows from the outside by female servants. Here, I believe, the law is already all that is required; and, if I remember rightly, it has been enforced before now by public authorities against those householders who put girls to this dangerous occupation. It needs enforcing, however, far more strenuously. During the present month—in fact, during one week—two fatal accidents from this cause in London alone have been reported in the Times, and I am told that as many as a hundred lives have been lost in this way per annum. If these figures can be verified, they deserve to be added to Mr. Burns's "death-roll of labour."

It seems necessary for me to again repeat that I cannot publish or notice in TRUTH anonymous communications. There seems to have been an epidemic of anonymity among my correspondents during the last week or two. If persons desire me to publish or otherwise deal with their statements they must either let me know who they are, or give me some means of verifying their allegations.

The coal dispute is over, thanks to Lord Rosebery having induced the disputants to take a common-sense view of the situation. At present prices it has been evident to all that no reduction of wage was needed in order to enable pits to pay, excepting those whose owners had entered into foolish contracts. During the truce I would have both sides meditate over the following considerations:—1. No trade can secure a fair living wage to all if the number of men in it is so great that a fair week's work cannot be given to all. Just now there are more pitmen than can find a week's employment. Reduce the work of each to four days, and give a fair weekly wage for those four days' work, and the result will be that many who now get a fair wage in other branches of industry for a full week's work will crowd into pit work, for all prefer to work four days in a week to working five and a half days when the wage in both cases is the same. 2. A minimum rate of wage can only be secured by making the wage independent of the selling price. A sliding-scale dependent on selling price is antagonistic to a fair minimum wage.

I do not believe in wage being dependent on sale price in any industry based upon the production of a necessity. It is necessary to build houses. But do wages of masons depend on the selling price of houses? In a colliery do the prices of the plant depend upon the selling price of the coal? One colliery may make much, another may make little, although the selling price of the product of both be the same. Ought there to be a difference of wage in these two collieries? A working man exchanges a certain amount of work for a certain amount of money. It is a business transaction on both sides. Whether the man with the money gains much or little by the transaction is his affair alone. He takes the risk of gain against the risk of loss. The efforts of working men should be concentrated on seeing that, in either case, they get their fair wage, no more no less, for more involves less. The proposition is so obvious in its truth, and the advantage of a fair living wage to the employed so clear, that I am surprised that they do not fight out the battle of labour on these lines.

In Bolton the Tories have adopted a wondrous system to ensure their political supremacy. They have a number of Conservative Sick and Benefit Associations. If a member of these Associations shows Liberal proclivities, he is turned out, without, so far as I can see, his subscriptions being returned to him. Here is a letter from the Chairman and Secretary of the Queen Victoria Lodge of the Bolton Sick and Burial Association:—

SIR, — We was inform at the Lodge night, Nov. 7, 1891, seen in the Bolton newspaper Nov. 6, that you have nominated a man for the Bolton School Board Election, name Joseph Shufflebotham (a Socialist), which, according to the rules of the above Lodge, you are not a member no longer, as you have broken the rules and the Declaration you agree to when you was made a member of the said Lodge. If you wish to appeal to the Lodge, you must attend at the next Lodge night, Dec. 5, 1891, at 8 o'clock, and state your case.

PETER INCE, Chairman.
JOHN BROADHURST, Secretary.

This letter is two years old, but I understand that this system of retaining working men in the Tory fold is at present flourishing at Bolton. The Conservative Associations, it is true, have a clause in their rules which pledges their members to Tory principles; but to make subscriptions to a benefit fund dependent upon "once a Tory always a Tory," is a gross abuse, and I recommend the matter to the next Trades Union Congress.

An Irish correspondent writes:—

What has become of the Nonconformist conscience? When Mr. Parnell broke the Seventh Commandment, it so raged that Mr. Parnell had to be politically ostracised by the Liberal Party. Now, a war has been brought about with the Matabele by a Company with a Royal Charter massacring a number of Matabele near Fort Victoria, who did not seek to defend themselves as their King had told them not to attack white men. Several thousands of Matabele have been subsequently murdered because their King would not surrender his country to this Company, as a punishment for his men having been shot down at Fort Victoria. The object of these nefarious and bloodthirsty proceedings has been to enable the Company to acquire a territory supposed to be rich in gold, but which no more belongs to them than it does to me. Is the Nonconformist conscience only tender in regard to the Seventh Commandment, or to breaches of the Commandments by Irishmen? Are the Commandments "Thou shalt not steal," "Thou shalt do no murder," expunged from its copy of the Decalogue?

Why so very wakeful in respect to Mr. Parnell, and so very fast asleep when Englishmen under a Royal Charter act in Africa in a manner that would make savages blush, and rob and murder for their base and sordid private interests? Poor Parnell! say I. He had a body to be kicked, and he was kicked into his grave. Had he been an Englishman, had he, instead of spending his life for his country, been some miserable Company-monger, and been able to interest a crowd of eminent financialists on behalf of his country's cause, he might—it would seem—have violated every Commandment without one word of rebuke from the Nonconformist conscience. I thought that Mr. Parnell had hard measure dealt out to him by the English Nonconformists, but I believed that they were at least honestly sincere. Can I believe it now?

The newspapers that have arrived from the Cape give accounts of the murder of Lobengula's Envoys from correspondents. It will be seen that the assertion that these two Envoys wounded the guard placed over them which figures in the official account was an afterthought. Here is the account published in the Star—a newspaper that is a warm advocate of the Chartered Company:—

The three (the Envoys) were en route for Palapye to despatch a telegram, they stated, to the High Commissioner. They were, on their arrival here, placed under arrest. About eight o'clock at night they broke loose, and, taking a bayonet from one of the men on guard, bolted. The two indunas were shot dead on the spot by the guard, and Lobengula's brother was captured.

Here is another account:—

One of them snatched a sword from a member of the police, struck one of his captors on the shoulder, and rushed to make his escape. The trooper who had been struck with his sword shot the native as he was running away. The other Matabele who attempted to escape was also shot.

Captain Wallace, Lieutenant of the Victoria Rangers, has replied in a South African journal to the letter of Mr. O. Davis respecting the treatment of the Matabele by the Chartered Company's forces at Victoria. His answer is a practical admission of the facts. What is it? "One of the indunas was distinctly disrespectful and impudent to Dr. Jameson." "The impi was given one hour to cross the frontier (a distance of thirty miles). In point of fact they had nearly three and a-half hours allowed them." "Mr. Davis states that 'he was sickened and ashamed of it all.' Subsequent to the 'disgraceful massacre' to which he lent a hand, he was always to be found armed to the teeth in the ranks of the men sent out to draw blood." The reply, therefore, amounts to this: That what Mr. Davis stated was true, but that he has no right to protest, as he took part in this devil's work. The first reply was, it will be remembered, that he was not present.

As there seems to be some question under what conditions Mr. Rhodes' patriots are shooting down Matabele, I publish the following extract from a letter written by one of the patriots, and published in the Potchefstroom Budget:—

I suppose you are aware how we fight after crossing the border—I mean under what conditions. They are these:—Each man to get a freehold farm of 3,000 morgen, fifteen reef claims, five alluvial and a share in the loot, which is to be divided half to the Company, and the other half to be equally divided

---

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is, 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

amongst officers and men. We have to pay 10s. per annum. Of course, that is if we go and fight and conquer. Those who go, do so as volunteers, as we are only taken on for two months, or more, if required, but no pay after crossing the border. Some men in town are offering already £50 cash as soon as the border is crossed. I wouldn't take £5,000 cash if I had the farm. One good condition we have is this. The Company has to buy all the ground at £3 per morgen should they wish to have any of it after the war. Of course, if a man likes to sell half, if the Company wants half, then he can please himself. They have to buy the whole if they want any at all, should it please you. As I say, it remains to be seen whether we ever go in. The conditions we have in black and white. I have come up here to play my last card. It is "do or die" this time. I am not going to leave this country without money, whether I have to slave all my life for it.

The Duke of Fife, at the meeting of the S. A. Chartered Company on Monday last, stated that the only critics of the Company were the "Little England Party," and that its great work would aid in the prosperity of Great Britain. In reply, allow me to ask the Duke of Fife what has been his personal profit as a Director and shareholder of this Company. His salary—and the Directorship to last for life—is, I believe, £1,200. But the price of shares has varied from £6 to 15s. since this "Great Englander" vouchsafed to sit on the Board of the Company. Has the Duke made anything, either by trafficking in the shares in his own name or in the name of some one else—say Sir Horace Farquhar? Did he obtain an allotment of shares at par when the second issue took place, and the shares stood in the market (as stated at the meeting) at £3 premium? Has he got them all now? I ask the question in fear and trembling, as reverence for Dukes and such-like hereditary personages is abnormally developed in my case. Still, when this Duke prates about his labours to develop the Empire, I venture, in the most respectful and humble terms, to inquire, whether this labourer in the field of Imperialism has secured his hire, and what that hire may precisely be. As it is, it seems to me that, whilst Dukes, and Rhodeses, and Beits, and other august persons, who I see are called in the newspapers attached to them "Elizabethan statesmen"—whatever that may mean—get all the profit of filibustering, it is somewhat hard, looking at the matter from a strict business standpoint, that the Empire should only come in for a share in the infamy of such proceedings.

In the meanwhile, I receive by every post anonymous letters denouncing me as a wretch unworthy to breathe the air of Heaven, for daring to call in question the virtues of this Ducal Company. Whether they are written by Dukes or by humbler shareholders of the Company I know not. A lioness reft of her cubs is not more enraged than a shareholder on the "Bull" tack when any one interferes with his object. Here is a specimen:—

> Well, old froggy, go and hang yourself again, miserable coward. Everyone knows that you are a Frenchman, and paid by the French to belittle England. You will find out to the cost of your wretched limbs very soon what it is to take blackmail against the English. You are not an Englishman, but a miserable Frenchy blackmailer.
>
> What an infernal arrogance of such a tottering pariah to attack people who would be ashamed to be seen a hundred yards near such a blackmailer.
>
> Do a good turn to England and poison yourself!

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.—Patterns are now ready, & will be sent post free, of these new & fashionable Cards for Christmas (specially printed). A most complete collection, comprising many striking novelties.—PARKINS & GOTTO, Court Stationers, Oxford-st., Londn.

In the last two numbers of the Century there is a curious diary of the Surgeon of the Bellerophon, the ship that took Napoleon to St. Helena. The Surgeon's diary tends to show how monstrous our conduct was to our captive in small details, and with what dignity he submitted to the inevitable. On the ship he was treated as a General, but he seems to have been indifferent to this, and played every evening at a noisy game of cards, and during the day was ready to talk upon every event in his career with any one. On arriving at St. Helena, when he was lodged for some months in an outhouse to a cottage of a Mr. Balcombe, he used to play with the daughters of this gentleman, and he became on such friendly terms with these girls that they called him "Boney." The Surgeon's description of St. Helena is that it is so pestilential a place for Europeans that all the children brought up there are sickly, and that several of the ship's crew contracted liver complaints during the ship's sojourn in its waters.

I have often wondered, in reading the accounts of the treatment of Napoleon, and of many other such incidents in our history, how it is that men, individually very probably not worse than others, when brought together collectively as a Government ignore the most elementary principles of morality, and become cruel and false, but I think that I have found the key to this strange phenomenon. The members of a Government—if I may be allowed the expression—pool their consciences. Each one throws responsibility upon all. Take, for instance, this Matabele war. Probably no member of the Cabinet would dream of justifying, still less of approving, acts which are deserving of the highest reprobation. Not one of them is blind to the iniquity of allowing a gang of speculators to break loose into a country, and then to murder its owners with a view to appropriating the country, because there is a rumour that gold is to be found in it. English public men—whether of one Party or of another—are scrupulously disinterested so far as regards money. They would regard as an impeachment of their honour the mere suspicion of private gain being at the bottom of their public actions.

Yet what do we see? Collectively they applaud murder for the sake of lucre, and laud to the skies a Colonial Statesman for doing what, in their own cases, they would deem dishonourable. I have always thought that the collective approval of the very vilest crimes, and indeed their collective perpetration on the part of men individually honest and honourable, is one of the most strange of mental phenomena.

So it is with the country at large. Collectively we condone and encourage what individually we should reprobate. We have a general idea that the British Empire was built up in a somewhat questionable fashion, and we think it as well that we should have a blind eye to any iniquity that may increase its area. This is why other countries regard us as a nation of hypocrites. We are accustomed to portray ourselves under the likeness of a farmer, fat and bluff, clothed in top boots and a broad-brimmed hat, and looking more honest than it is possible for fallible humanity to be. But what is this farmer really? The sort of theatrical personage that is the associate with the knave who performs the three-card trick on a racecourse, and who swears to the honesty of the knave. No one really believes in this farmer; he is a mere theatrical property that is himself portrayed in the pages of Punch. But we consider that we have done all that morality can exact, when we tell the world that he really is a typical Englishman, although the world, judging by our acts, may not be aware of it.

SUCCESSFUL BECAUSE OF SUPERIOR MERIT.—Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer has immense sales everywhere. It never fails to restore grey hair to its natural colour and beauty.

Joshua claimed to be an instrument of Providence when he destroyed the Canaanites, and looted their property. What would have been thought, even in his day, if it had been discovered that Joshua was the head of a Canaan Land Company; that he had already made money on the Stock Exchange of Memphis by selling shares of this Company to Egyptians; and that he and a few financial friends had so arranged, that they were to put into their pockets a further million or two as founders of the Company, if the Israelites succeeded in slaying the inhabitants of Canaan, and thus acquiring that country? Judging from the very drastic modes of punishment usually adopted by the Israelites, Joshua and his friends would at once have been stoned to death by them. We deal differently now when a like case presents itself. We laud the financing filibuster, and declare that it is only fit that he should enjoy the proceeds of his enterprise.

It has always been a matter of surprise to me that a man so clever as Mr. Chamberlain in debate should perpetually be "giving himself away." He has just returned to England and has confided his views on things in general to an interviewer. That he objects to the Employers' Liability Bill and to the Parish Councils Bill I can understand, for Heaven has cast his mental apparatus in such a mould that he never can see good in any Bill without the imprimatur of Chamberlain on its back. But his main complaint is that these Bills are likely to be carried by the Irish vote. Now he voted against the first Home Rule Bill because it did not allow the Irish to sit and vote on all matters, and he voted against the second Home Rule Bill although it allowed them to vote on all matters. His present opinion seems to be that Irish Home Rule, whether the Irish do, or do not, vote on British issues, ought not to be granted. But if they remain in the Imperial Parliament as full members, what would he suggest? The collective Parliamentary majority must rule, irrespective of the question from what sections of the United Kingdom its component parts proceed. Is Mr. Gladstone to say: "The majority of the House is for a certain measure affecting Great Britain, but the British majority is against it, therefore I will stand by the minority rather than the majority"? If Mr. Chamberlain can explain how, under these conditions, a Government which exists because it has a Parliamentary majority is to carry on the business of the nation, I shall be glad to hear the explanation. I, like Mr. Chamberlain, object to the local affairs of England, Ireland, Scotland, or Wales being decided against the wishes of the majority in those respective sections, and it is because I do so that I am a Home Ruler all round. Is Mr. Chamberlain? If so, will he join those who take this view?

After the vigorous language of Mr. Morley which was quoted by Mr. Digby in the House of Commons, and the approval which the entire Liberal Party expressed of this language, it is to be hoped that there will be no more shilly-shally, but that the coup de grâce will at once be administered to that pernicious Assembly, the House of Lords. When a Cabinet Minister, speaking presumably for his colleagues, declares that one House of the Legislature is prejudiced, passionate, actuated by Party spirit, beyond the reach of reason, and impenetrable to argument, the Government of which he is a member is criminal, if it does not take immediate steps to relieve the country of this incubus. In this Assembly, representative as its adherents say of the country, there are not above forty Liberals, most of these being kept Liberal by salaries. If it could be saved by the production of three Radicals, its fate would be that of the Cities of the Plain. I really only know of one Peer whom I should call a Radical. He is in the Cabinet. But which of the Cabinet this enlightened Peer is I shall not say.

The question of the County Magistracy is simple. The Lord-Lieutenants are mostly Tories, and the Bench in almost every county was packed by them with Tory Squires and Tory Rectors. When the Liberals came into office last year, the proportion of Tories to Liberals on the Bench was about ten to one. Lord Herschell was urged to rectify this, and to make fresh Magistrates in order that all classes and all phases of political thought should be fairly represented. He felt that he could hardly interfere with the Lord-Lieutenants without a resolution of the House of Commons. The resolution, therefore, was passed. But the Radicals complain that the Lord Chancellor has not taken such full action as was contemplated by the resolution. Lord Herschell has not, they consider, realised that it was intended that he should rectify the balance, and that, in so doing, he should no more trouble himself as to the views of the Lord-Lieutenants than of their footmen. A Lord-Lieutenant—beyond having illegally drifted into the sole right to propose men in his county as Magistrates, and, if they behave themselves as he would have them do, to allow them to wear a Colonel's uniform as Deputy-Lieutenants (which suits them as little as a ballet-girl's petticoats would)—is merely the social head of county Squires. Probably he might be able to give a valuable opinion upon the merits or demerits of the Squires, although even in this he might be biassed by political opinion. But what does he know of tradesmen and other such folk? Nothing; and to ask him to express an opinion as to their fitness for Magisterial duties merely results in his applying to some one else for the information—his agent, or his butler, or his solicitor, or his toady.

I should be glad to see, either unpaid Magistrates replaced everywhere by Stipendiary Magistrates, or that the unpaid should only be appointed on the recommendation of the Local Authorities. As for Lord-Lieutenants, I would abolish them. They are an anachronism in a Democratic country. But awaiting these reforms, I think that we have a right to demand that the Magistracy should no longer be a preserve for the Tory squirearchy.

Lord Herschell, in his speech to the Radical deputation said that he might be led, were he to act precipitantly, into appointing men who might say foolish things. Very possibly, being human, he would occasionally make a bad selection. But what is the Bench now? As in the days of Shakespeare, Justice Shallow not only often talks foolishly, but often acts foolishly. Of course, amongst the Magistrates there are useful public servants, but the majority of them take their law from their Clerks, are narrow, bigoted, and prejudiced, especially when they have to try offences which concern their own property, and they look upon the shooting of a pheasant or the theft of a pheasant's egg as a greater crime than staving in the head of a wife. I do not believe that they are intentionally unjust, but their minds are so constituted that they cannot understand what justice really is.

I do not know what are the intentions of the Conservatives in regard to Parish Councils, but it looks as if they contemplated obstruction. I see it stated that if the Bill be not carried before Christmas the Session will be carried on into next year after a fortnight's holiday. I should have thought that the better plan would have been to have carried over the Bill to next Session, for I never yet have understood the objection to this course. If the present Session goes on in January, and the Bill is sent up to the Lords at the end of that month, these hereditary obstructors, who exist alone to play the Tory game, will potter over it for weeks, then send it back to the Commons with a mass of amendments, which the Tories in the Commons will discuss. When, then, will the next Session begin?

Very probably the Tories may have it in their hearts to wreck the Session of next year. There would be a holiday of a fortnight at Christmas; the present Session would recommence about the middle of January; the Bill would not go to the House of Lords before the end of that month. The discussion in the Lords, and that in the Commons upon the Lords' amendments, would bring us nearly to the end of February; so that, allowing only a fortnight for the interval between the two Sessions, next year's Session would not commence before the middle of March, when, what with the Queen's Speech and finance, we should not be able to get under legislative weigh this side of Easter. All this, no doubt, has occurred to the Tories, and were they able to keep the noses of their men to the grindstone, they would devote themselves to this campaign of obstruction. But, with the best—or, as I should put it, the worst—intentions, their men are amateur politicians, fond of shooting, hunting, running over to the Riviera, paying visits in country houses, and consequently can only with difficulty be kept togother at this time of the year, whilst even those who are present and who have every desire to obstruct are poor hands at their own dirty business. The odds, therefore, are that the Bill will have passed through all its stages in the House of Commons even before December 15.

I cannot avoid repeating what I have so often said: Until Parliament is relieved of two-thirds of its duties by the creation of subordinate Parliaments, we shall everlastingly be engaged in the impossible task of getting a dozen pints of liquor into one quart pot. This may suit the Tories, who object to the liquor, but it cannot suit us.

As it is, any Bill brought in by a Liberal Government is a compromise between what they want to do, and what the Tories will allow them to do. Every Bill, therefore, is a mere approach to what is needed. The Parish Councils Bill is drawn up on these lines, and good, as it is so far as it goes, it needs democratic expansion.

The theory that the Radical Party should accept with grateful thanks any Bill that a Liberal Government proffers, and that it should be told that it must take it or leave it, is one to which no Radical should assent. Every amendment, if good in itself, should be accepted. This "be thankful for small mercies" doctrine reduces Members of the House of Commons to the position of mere pawns. In the present Parliament there is a great deal too much of this doctrine.

SCRUTATOR.

BALDWIN, "BORDERLAND," &c.

I HAD hoped this week to have been enabled to clear up the mystery which, owing to the conduct of certain parties concerned, has gathered round the "occult" séance described in the current number of Borderland. I have at last received from the reverend author of the Report on that performance a letter for publication, giving his answer—such as it is—to what has been said in TRUTH. As, however, I also have something further to say on the subject, and this letter only reached me on Monday morning, I shall defer its publication for another week. TRUTH is not a daily paper, and on the eve of going to press I have too many subjects calling for attention to be able to deal with matters which require time and thought and care in the handling. I mention this for the benefit of other correspondents, besides the reverend gentleman who has so tardily answered the questions raised by the explosion of his Baldwin bubble.

Although it has taken so long to get an answer out of this gentleman, Mr. Baldwin himself is much less retiring, and I have had another letter from him since the one I mentioned last week. This also must stand over.

"GRATEFUL and COMFORTING for BREAKFAST and SUPPER is EPPS'S COCOA, made with boiling water or milk. Sold in packets labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

CORNS.—Wasmuth's Corn-Rings (in the watch) remove pressure and corns painlessly in two or three days. 1s. 1½d., of all Chemists, or post free, 1s. 3d., of WARRICK BROS., Old Swan-lane, London, E.C.

"USING THE MAILS FOR FRAUDULENT PURPOSES."

Readers of TRUTH—more particularly in the United States—may remember the name of "William Lord Moore," alias "Felix Howard," against whose next-of-kin trick I have published several warnings. Moore's was mainly a swindle run by Americans for Americans. At the time when I last called attention to his proceedings he was located at addresses in University-street and Shepherd's Bush. His modus operandi was to address letters to persons in different parts of America informing them that they were heirs to vast properties in Chancery, in recovering which he desired to act for them. This preliminary fiction was followed up by a communication from "the official representative of the Court in America," Mr. "Joseph Leger," of 451, Eighth Avenue, New York, who enclosed an original decree of the Court, with an imposing gold seal, authorising him to collect "taxes on legacies and bequests" and give the happy heir possession. For his own remuneration Moore used to ask for a small preliminary fee as a retainer, the victim being further asked to sign an agreement under which Moore was to have 1 per cent. on the value of the estate—when it was recovered. There can be no doubt that Moore and his confederates netted very large sums at this game, and that the Chancellor of the Exchequer is entirely innocent of having received any share of the "taxes on legacies and bequests" which these worthies collected. But I am glad to be able to report that this game is now up. Moore is at present awaiting trial at Jackson, Tennessee, under the name of G. F. B. Howard. I understand that he has lately earned some distinction at Jackson as a Baptist Minister; but as there are now eight indictments against him, and an officer from Scotland-yard is one of the witnesses, it may be hoped that America will at last be able to do justice to his distinguished merits.

I give special prominence to Moore's case on account of the offence with which he is charged. This is described in the Nashville Daily American as "using the mails for fraudulent purposes," and I understand that all the eight counts or "indictments" preferred against Moore fall under this head. Nothing that I have yet seen has more impressed me with the superiority of the American Constitution over our own than this crime of fraudulently using the mails. Consider what it means. At least one-half—I should say more—of the swindles that are from time to time shown up in TRUTH are carried on through the post. There is, indeed, hardly any form of fraud in the accomplishment of which the Post Office must not sooner or later be employed; while the number of attempts that are made to entrap people by letters and circulars, the majority of them doubtless without success, is simply incalculable. I do not say that there is no law in England to touch these offences. The law in regard to obtaining, or attempting to obtain, money by false pretences is fairly wide, though hampered by a good deal of needless technicality. But I say with the utmost confidence that ninety-nine out of a hundred of such offences go unpunished simply because it is nobody's business to set the law in motion. It is here that the beauty of the American procedure becomes apparent. By the simple process of making it a crime to "use the mails for fraudulent purposes" every one of these swindles, which are now carried on with impunity, becomes an offence against the State, which it is the business of the Post Office to deal with. Why have we no such provision for the public protection in England? It is obviously sound in principle; for, as I have repeatedly endeavoured to impress upon St. Martin's-le-Grand, the Post Office has no business to be the agent in perpetrating any breach of the law, and it consequently has the right to take any measures which may be necessary to prevent or check such an abuse of its agency. As for the expediency of its taking such measures, that is simply a question for the public, which will have to pay the piper, and the public, if it considers the matter intelligently, will not hesitate for a moment. The Postmaster-General already performs a dozen miscellaneous functions for the public, besides that of collecting and delivering letters. Why should he not undertake yet one more—that of a Public Prosecutor? It is certain that, if he did, some of the biggest rogues that have ever been convicted, and plenty more who are still at large and in full activity, would have been clapped into gaol before they had done any serious mischief. Wells of Monte Carlo, Morland the Oxford blackmailer, Walter Austin the swindling philanthropist, Morgan, Campbell & Co. the literary fraud gang, Stockham, the bogus house-agent, Beresford the free-portrait pirate, Angus Maclean, Ernest Day, Captain MacVeigh—there is not a member of all the distinguished fraternity known to the readers of TRUTH, who could not have been convicted and sentenced at an early stage of his career of the simple and beautiful crime of "using the mails for a fraudulent purpose." Here is a chance, then, for the present Postmaster-General to immortalise himself.

While on the subject of William Lord Moore's case, I would take the opportunity of giving a general warning against all advertisements, circulars, and letters from disinterested strangers, with reference to next-of-kin who are supposed to be wanted—at any rate, when anything in the nature of a cash payment is made a condition precedent to doing business. Most of all are communications of this nature to be distrusted when they emanate from the Colonies or America for the benefit of next-of-kin in the United Kingdom, or vice versâ. The latest performance of Colonel Barron, now engaged in a weekly interview with the presiding Magistrate at Bow-street, affords an illustration much to the point, but circumstances unfortunately (for Barron) prevent my enlarging upon it. Another has just been brought under my notice. A firm (or individual) in London is in the habit of advertising in the Colonies lists of names supposed to be those of claimants to large sums who are "wanted." Any one desiring further particulars must forward £1 to the advertisers. The most he gets for his £1 is some MESSRS. HARBOROW, Hosiers, Glovers, and Shirtmakers by appointment to the Royal Family, have opened new premises, 6 and 7, New Bond-street, in connection with their old-established business, 15, Cockspur-street.

MAJOR HOWE & CO.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

other advertisement in which a party of the same name is asked after, and occasionally he does not get even that until he has written two or three times. It rarely happens that genuine inquiries are made after missing claimants to property except through solicitors, and replies to all such inquiries are best made in the same way. To pay money on speculation in answer to such advertisements is the blindest folly, though it seems to be a form of folly very widely practised.

"THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL."

We have all heard of Hamlet without the Prince of Denmark, but very seldom of Lady Teazle without the "School for Scandal." Yet this is precisely what Mr. Daly gives us: Miss Ada Rehan, with her dozen or so of dolls! I doubt if the modern generation has ever seen a better Lady Teazle, or, indeed, one nearly so good. She is just what Sheridan described her—a country girl free from the trammels of stiff and stereotyped country life, emancipated from the duties of combing my Aunt Deborah's lap-dog, and playing Pope Joan with the curate, cast like a wild, unbroken thing into the stiff and affected artificiality of London life, and metaphorically kicking up her heels like a young colt on a common. According to Miss Ada Rehan—surely the Peg Woffington or Mrs. Abingdon of the modern stage—Lady Teazle, when by her marriage she is introduced to a society quite unfamiliar to her, experiences little else than the mere joy of living. She has been in a wicker cage so far; now she is free. Her success with those tittle-tattlers and scandal-mongers is purely imitative. She has natural humour, and she cannot repress it. Probe this merry light-hearted thing, and you will find no spite or guile in her. She scarcely understands the subjects she discusses. In the midst of all these roués and demi-reps Lady Teazle is all innocence. After all there is no very great depth in her nature. She admires Charles Surface for his person; she is flattered by Joseph on account of his insinuation and force of character. She is a pretty woman married to a man old enough to be her father, and, like all pretty women, she loves to be admired. Her tiffs with Sir Peter are, after all, the mere gambols of a schoolgirl. She cannot afford to be serious yet awhile, even for a minute. She is a kind of society Vivien to this crabbed old Georgian Merlin. She plays about him, coquets with him, teases him, plagues him, flatters his vanity, and her reward is to be, not the magician's secret, but a handsome cheque and a new gown. Sir Peter is enamoured of her youth; she on her part is flattered by his position. When Lady Teazle consents to visit Joseph Surface at his bachelor apartments, she does so without in the least comprehending the gravity of her social offence. She compromises herself like an unsophisticated girl. It is a long time before she can even understand the depth of the design of "good Mr. Hypocrite." Her only guide and counsellor is her woman's nature, and the scales fall from her eyes only when Joseph becomes too impressive. The falling of the screen is, as it should be, the climax of the comedy. Here comes the tragic note of the play. We can imagine how Lady Teazle has been awakened to her false position as she listens behind that screen. She hid behind it an innocent, trusting girl; when it falls she comes forth an awakened woman.

Here, at any rate, is a consistent Lady Teazle, a woman that appeals to our reason. The actress in this instance discards the conventions of the stage. She refuses to be influenced by mere point-making. She conceives a Lady Teazle, and she illustrates her in her own way. Conceive then such a Lady Teazle by the side of the present Sir Peter, for the stage has no better one than the son of the older Farren, with Charles Coghlan as Charles, Beerbohm Tree or Kyrle Bellew as Joseph, Mrs. Bancroft as Mrs. Candour, F. Everill as Sir Oliver, and Mrs. Tree as Lady Sneerwell, and we should obtain a rare comedy combination. But it is the harmony of comedy that we do not get this time. The Charles is far too modern, the Joseph far too conventional, the Mrs. Candour and Moses both colourless, and the whole thing ambitious but without a trace of the Georgian style that it obtained with the Bancroft revival, or of the comedy colour that we found at the Vaudeville under James and Thorne.

The arrangement of the old play is not new, for, as Mr. Bancroft points out, all its best points, minuet and everything else, were found at the old Prince of Wales' Theatre. In editing the Sheridan dialogue Mr. Daly has surely been a little too squeamish, for though in America the good ladies may faint and squirm at such an honest old English word as "wench," we don't do so at home. As the ear misses some of the familiar sentences we are constantly reminded of the nasty-minded goody-goody lady who puts the legs of the piano into pantalettes, or the famous Lord Haddo who innocently proposed to drape the statuary at the Crystal Palace. In reviving the stage "gags" Mr. Daly has been admirably discreet, but at the fall of the screen he might have gone back to Sheridan with advantage. As already pointed out, in the Sheridan text Joseph Surface does not utter a word. Why should he? The surprise is on the part of Sir Peter and Charles, who had no idea that the woman concealed was any other but the "little French milliner." Why should Joseph Surface observe, "Lady Teazle, by all that's horrible"? He knew that Lady Teazle was there, and he knew also that both Sir Peter and Charles also knew that he knew it!

Still, when all is said and done, the old play is always worth seeing, whether we happen to have views on the subject or not. Miss Ada Rehan has, at any rate, given a lead to the Lady Teazles of the future. She has started convention on a new scent.

"GUDGEONS."

I have not as yet seen it observed in connection with this clever play that there was once upon a time an author called Charles Dickens, who invented several aristocratic swindlers of the exact pattern of James Ffolliott Treherne, or that a Dickens examination paper would reveal a generally cowed and "sat upon" wife of the same fashionable adventurer, who said something suspiciously like "James! You are wonderful!" Nor have I seen it commented on that the modern stage, through the assistance of one James Albery, who was an obvious admirer of Charles Dickens, gave us, in "Two Roses," a gentleman by the name of Digby Grant. No doubt we cannot have too much of a good thing, but I fail to see the difference between Digby Grant and James Ffolliott Treherne, except that there is variation in the moods and in the incidents of the life of Digby Grant, but very little variety in that of the new Treherne. It is not the fault of Mr. Herbert Waring, who plays the part admirably from end to end. He can only do what the authors requested him to do, and he does it in a style, a nature, and a consistency beyond all praise. He has to play the same man for three acts—the same man, unvaried and moodless—and he becomes the man in every tone, lineament, and feature. No better bit of sound and sincere character-acting can be found just now in London. I could only wish there were greater variety in the play and in the part. The play is excellently written, the part thoroughly well played. Quite as good in its way is the crushed wife of Miss Janette Steer, who is artist enough to raise an insignificant part into significance by observant art. Nine-tenths of our silly actresses would have turned up their pretty noses at Mrs. Ffolliott Treherne as giving them no chance. Not so Miss Janette Steer, who shows here a delicate sense of humour as well as a keen sense of character. In her heart of hearts the crushed woman knows that her husband is a humbug. But she accepts the humbug for the sake of peace and quietness. Her humility has a vein both of humour and tragedy in it. She sees the comicality of the situation, although she winces under it. There is no sense of sameness in her reiterated remark, "James you are wonderful"; only a humorous depression and satirical sense of fatigued admiration. It is a first-rate touch of genuine comedy. The comedy trio is completed by Mr. Murray Carson, who has the art of disguising his identity in a wonderful manner. Many actors, by the art of make-up, look another man, but this actor becomes another man. There is not a trace of Murray Carson left in this jovial Yankee. The sonorous voice, the dignified elocution, the solemn manner, have all disappeared, and we behold instead a smart, pushing, energetic, commonplace American tradesman.

HOUSE DRAINAGE.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

If the young people of the play had been as good as their elders there would be nothing to complain about in the acting. Unfortunately, they are not. Their lightness of relief is desperately heavy. They should be boys and girls, not serious young people playing at boys and girls. What would Irving's Digby Grant—or "The Two Roses," for the matter of that—have been without the impulsive charm of Harry J. Montague or the girlish gush of Amy Fawsett? But Amy Fawsetts and Harry Montagues are rare among our serious young men and women. They are not at ease when they are Pips or Herbert Pockets, or Westbrooks, or Ruth Pinches, in the courts and green gardens of Barnard's Inn and the Temple. They are modern, and, being modern, are dreadfully serious and heavy-handed. No doubt the boy and girl of to-day are what our grandfathers and grandmothers used to call "sobersides;" but cannot they, being actors and actresses, pretend to be the light-hearted, impulsive young people that the author paints for them? It is "serious lightness" indeed

NOTES FROM PARIS.

MISTRESS, MAID, AND MARQUIS.

A VERY Parisian suit was brought last week to an issue before the Civil Tribunal. The pursuer, as the Scotch would say, was a certain Suzanne Tarit, calling herself Yunca. She sued jointly a professional beauty, Madame Liane de Pongy, of whom she was for two years the femme de chambre, and the Marquis de MacMahon, grand-nephew of the Marshal, who, she alleged, had promised to make good to her the wages earned in that period, and certain tradesmen's bills that she had settled out of her own pocket on behalf of her mistress. Suzanne, as the pleadings on both sides show, is the type of soubrette of the French comedy—clever, corrupt, inventive, impudent, tactful, skilled in softening the anger of importunate creditors, and in getting aid without giving offence to visitors whom her mistress does not wish to see. She alleged that she never once during the time of her service received payment of her wages—80 francs a month—or of one of the many bills she paid. The total of her claims amounted to £700, a really moderate sum under the circumstances, had her story been true. But was it? It was at any rate clear that the Marquis had given her far more than she claimed in return for her undertaking to do her best to induce her mistress to smile on him. All, however, that he obtained by these douceurs was to be allowed thrice to gaze on Liane, when she was supposed to be ill and asleep from doses of morphine. On being ushered into her room, he knelt down, and tenderly and delicately kissed her hand. This done, he stood up, gazed on her as if she were the corpse of a beloved wife, and retired in a reverential manner. Suzanne also admitted that Liane constantly ordered dresses at prices varying from 13,000 francs to 16,000 and more, which the Marquis was asked to pay and cheerfully paid. She sometimes got out of conceit with them when they were brought home, and would not wear them. She sometimes wore a dress once or twice. In both cases the gown was passed on to Suzanne for 500 francs and sold by her for never less than 2,500 francs. It was also admitted by the plaintiff that, Madame de Pongy once wanting 2,000 francs for a person she liked better than the Marquis, Suzanne in complicity with her added 4,000 francs to the household bills, which he vaguely promised to pay, and did pay. The two women afterwards shared the plunder.

Madame Liane was not misnamed, when called after a creeper which twists itself so tight round the forest trees supporting it as to squeeze the life out of them. She squeezed wealthy admirers, but did not like the process when applied to herself by her femme de chambre. In Paris the femme de chambre is not only the dresser of the lady of quality, pretty actress, or brilliant cocotte, but supplies materials for frippery and often for the more serious finery, such as the silks, tulles, laces, brocades, and what nots, with which dinner and ball dresses are made. The visiting dress is of too difficult achievement to be undertaken by any but a professional couturier or couturière. But taste in trimming being what is most requisite in the ball dress, it can be left to the femme de chambre. This servant is also in a degree the banker of her mistress, she being constantly asked to pay bills and make small loans.

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

The abigail and the professional beauty were in Court. The bar was empressé in its civility to the latter, whose soft and sumptuous raiment filled the Court with the perfume of millefleurs as she advanced to a place behind her advocate. Judging from her soft, but, as it subsequently appeared, deceptive graces, she might have been a Creole. She was discreetly made up, and might have served as an understudy for the part of the Empress Josephine in which Sarah Bernhardt is to act one of these days. Her dress was subdued in its general tone, with here and there a daring note, as in the trimming of a plain little bonnet and the inordinate depth of the marabout feathers of which muff and boa were made. The abigail was a neatly-attired respectable-looking person, with an eye, however, that showed experience in "taking stock" at a glance, when votaries came to present gifts at the Cytherean altar that she served. She was in court to re-instruct Maître Meurgé, her advocate, who could not be expected to be well up in feminine affairs of a peculiarly scabrous nature. The line he took was this: £600 might seem to the Tribunal an extortionate bill for a femme de chambre whose wages did not exceed 80 francs a month. But was she merely a femme de chambre, and were the 80 francs more than the merest nest-egg round which other profits were to gather? She had by agreement, for instance, the cast-off clothes of Madame Liane, who held in horror anything that was not in its first freshness. Votaries of professional beauty knew that the serving-priestess should live by the altar. Their gifts amounted to a small fortune, and enabled the servant to be a banker. In short, her mistress kept an account with her to avoid being herself pestered with the payment of tradesmen's bills, or of subscriptions for charitable purposes asked by reverend gentlemen, sisters of charity, and benevolent ladies who ignored the professional aspects of Madame Liane de Pongy's beauty. Ladies who live by their charms are beset by philanthropic beggars. Suzanne had orders to deal with those who came knocking at Madame de Pongy's door. She was always lending pocket-money to her employer. No doubt, answered counsel for the other side, his client quite admitted all that had been pleaded, but wanted to know where the vouchers were for the sums which Suzanne said she had spent in shops and in the payment of bills. Suzanne had produced a book in which she entered her expenses day by day, but that was nearly all she had to go upon. It was too funny to be taken seriously, on hearing which Maître Meurgé asked whether Madame de Pongy did not belong to le monde où l'on s'amuse? It was un monde folichon, and the Tribunal should take it as it found it. Thus prepared, the Judges heard extracts read from the entries in Suzanne's book. For a repoussé silver bell for the neck of the Angora cat, 113 francs; for a scented bath for Athos, the dog, 3 francs; for a cage for Baucis and Philemon, the canaries, 45 francs; for an alms to a beggar, 10 francs; for Madame Jeanne, the fortune teller, 35 francs; ditto, 100 francs; ditto, 35 francs. Why, asked Madame Pongy's advocate, these different prices? The femme de chambre whispered to Maître Meurgé, who repeated what she said: "There are cheap days of the week, dear days, and very dear days. Wednesday is a dear day, and Friday a very dear day for "occult" reasons. A séance at a high class tireuse de cartes, like Jeanne, costs on ordinary days 35 francs. Then, how could vouchers be had for sums of 115 francs, or 300 francs, borrowed in haste, as Madame de Pongy was hurrying to the opera? The business of the femme de chambre was precisely to keep business papers out of that pretty person's sight. Her horror of them alone explains why she let Suzanne's accounts run on for two years. In that time the Marquis de MacMahon, nephew of the Marshal, had flung away 1,000,000 fr. to prove his devotion to Madame de Pongy, who, however, had not seen why this general retainer should oblige her to refuse other retainers. As to the item, "To a journalist at Spa, 1,978 fr.," to which an objection had been made, it was paid for a puff at the height of the Spa season. Just fancy the advantage to a pretty Parisienne of being brought into a journalistic salmi in which the other ingredients were the Queen of the Belgians, the Princess Clémentine, a Queen's ponies and "trap," the losses of an Austrian Archduke at baccarat, and the Norwegian trip of Stephanie, widow of the Crown Prince Rudolph. The femme de chambre bargained for the price of the réclame, and it was cheap at what she paid for it. Spa is an expensive place at all times, but dreadfully so when Royalty and races attract rastaquouères there from all parts. The hairdresser's bill, the skin-softening pastés, the scented bran baths for Madame, the masseuse, the pedicure, the manicure, the job carriages, and other such trifles, had come to 500 francs—and cheap at the money. A judge remarked that these were professional expenses, and that the visit to Spa would be fruitless if they were not incurred. But was it credible that a sharp soubrette would have so long allowed them to remain unpaid, or unacknowledged in black and white, by her mistress?

The Marquis de MacMahon is undeniably his uncle's nephew. The honest Marshal could not have acted with more chivalrous punctiliousness. In spending the 1,000,000 fr. on Liane, he did not secure even the pretence of her gratitude, but went on trusting to her "sentiments" and would never suffer the maid to importune her for his sake. If he called and found she had given "not-at-home" orders, he begged of Suzanne not to say he had come, and went away on tip-toe. After the rupture, which was Madame de Pongy's doing, the unfortunate Marquis wrote:—"Liane is not a bad sort, but she has evil advisers, who set her on to tell lies to me, and play me false. That she does play me false I well know." The Marquis used to sit for hours at night on a bench in the avenue opposite the house where Madame Liane lived. If he saw her flitting past a window he went home happy. His love was that of Dante or of Michael Angelo for the mistress of his soul. One, indeed, feels provoked to think how misplaced his passion was. Liane, to do her justice, never deigned to express herself sensible to his devotion. He accepted the bargain she made when she wrote: "Since your love is so absolute and utter, love me as an idol before which the faithful burn incense and heap up ex voto offerings, but which they never touch." He made her acquaintance at the house of a lady who was niece of one of his great-uncle's ministers plenipotentiary, and who, having made an unfortunate match, kicked over the traces, and successively captivated at Aix-les-Bains a South-eastern King and the son of a great Paris jeweller. The latter ended by absconding with his innamorata to Brussels and taking with him nearly 1,000,000 f's. worth of diamonds belonging to his mother. This Traviata was the Marquis's first flame, but she paled in his eyes beside the graceful Liane. From the time Liane authorised him to visit her until he broke the chains in which she bound him, he only saw her to speak to three times.

FUR-LINED OVERCOATS, ULSTERS, OVERCOATS, and CAPES are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

You may fancy the Marquis is a prototype of the old senator in "Venice Preserved." Not at all. He is, what none of the counsel said, only thirty-five years old, and one of the most charming men in France, looking like his great-uncle, but handsomer. I wonder he is not known as le beau MacMahon. The Marquis has the Marshal's straight but not stiff carriage, his fresh complexion, and a pair of sunny, honest, sweet blue eyes, with a twinkle that shows a sense of fun. He was brought up by the Jesuits. Before and long after his marriage he was held to be the purest of the pure, being the beloved pupil and penitent of Father Dulac de Fougires; and he is son-in-law of M. de Vogüé, who was his uncle's Ambassador to the Court of Vienna.

The Judges took a fortnight to consider their judgment, which was dead against the soubrette. They agreed that the Marquis was "un trop galant homme," and that he was the victim of his own singular generosity and of an impudent attempt to blackmail.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

WE hear perpetually now, dear Lady Betty, of the depression of trade, but no one ever refers to the depression of pleasure, which is an equally important matter. Where our system of civilisation is so erroneous, is that it tends to increase labour, whereas a correct civilisation should diminish it to the irreducible limit. The more that we get to know the more do we appear to become the slaves of our own contrivances. Science, machinery, and education have only intensified competition, and have made the struggle for existence fiercer than it was before.

If it was so great a transgression to strive after knowledge in the year one that it necessitated the severest punishment, why is this the less so now at the close of the Nineteenth Century? Adam and Eve tasted of the Tree of Knowledge, and in an instant they forfeited Paradise. Surely their disastrous example, at the very outset of human history, should have warned us against ever meddling with knowledge again? And yet here we are striving with might and main to educate everybody to a super-exalted standard!

Of recent years we have become so absorbed with work that we are apparently losing even the instinct for amusement. Instead of the former cheerful, chatty, cultivated conversations in Society and at the clubs, men now gather together in gloomy clusters, and with careworn faces they discuss the fluctuations of stocks or the developments of the latest disaster. A joke is as scarce as a Dodo bone or as a Great Auk's egg. There was a time when every season added some standard work—and often two or three—to our library. Now solid groups of years elapse without one really material work in serious, frivolous, or even comic literature being added to our store. So is it also with music.

And a significant symptom that has apparently escaped notice is the increasing inclination to obtain amusement through the eye without taxing the intelligence. Illustrated newspapers and the extraordinary importance attached to scenic effect in theatricals are instances in point. The minutely analytical article, the brilliant dialogue, and the ingenious plot are no longer popular. Modern men and women are too greatly exhausted by their private labours to afford the co-operative exertion which the appreciation of these require. They do not wish to think, they wish to see.

This is altogether wrong.

Society is disorganised; the City is rotten; the clergy tell us that disbelief is upon the increase; and Art is at its worst. These are surely grave symptoms that must not be disregarded?

* * * * *

The West-end is in a very irate mood just now. It had travelled down East to the City to make money, and it has returned ruined. The unexpressed idea was that social influence would secure for us financial favour. So far as money matters were concerned it was to be "Heads, I win; tails, you lose." It was supposed that, eager to obtain West-end recognition and admission into West-end clubs and Society, financial men would, in return for our assisting them in these matters, make fortunes for us without our running any risk of losing what we already had. We metaphorically held pistols to their heads and said: "We have Court and social influence; we can either make or mar you. Let us have money—then we will assist you in your swindles—and we will glorify you in Belgravia."

But the City has been very much too clever for us. It has got all that we had to give, and it has taken besides whatever we had to take!

The West-end people now roam around the town calling their City accomplices scamps, scoundrels, and swindlers. So they may be. But we, too, have been just as bad. Employing our social influence to obtain money from our social inferiors was a very villainous kind of fraud, and the less we say about it, then, the better.

* * * * *

I hear that Colonel William Colville, Comptroller and Treasurer to the Household of the Duke of Edinburgh, will probably be appointed Master of the Ceremonies in succession to the late Sir Christopher Teesdale. Colonel Colville has been attached to the household of the Duke for over twenty-two years. It is, therefore, only natural that the Duke now, when he is about to disestablish his English household, in consequence of having succeeded to the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg, should provide for so old and so faithful an attendant. This appointment will be welcomed by the Corps Diplomatique, for Colonel Colville is very popular with the members of this body. Colonel Colville is a good linguist, he is an artist, and his experience of Court life and knowledge of Court etiquette admirably fit him for the post.

The late Sir Robert Morier, whose death occurred last week at Montreux, was a great Ambassador. Sir Robert Morier and Prince Bismarck had many characteristics in common. A determined, ambitious, autocratic man, the late Sir Robert possessed strong likes and strong dislikes. He could be very genial, and he could be almost brutal. His cast of mind was mostly German, and all his earlier education he received in Germany. When he first went to Balliol he failed to pass the examination, his classical acquirements being extremely weak. With dogged perseverance he withdrew for six months, returned to Balliol, passed, and eventually took a second class.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

The Queen and the late Prince Consort happening to visit Coburg, Mr. Morier—as he then was—had frequent conversations with the latter upon the politics of the day. So much did he impress the Prince Consort by the views he expressed, that the Prince afterwards asserted that Mr. Morier was the only man, except himself, who thoroughly understood the German Question. This opinion the Queen never forgot, and to it, no doubt, Sir Robert originally owed the great influence which he acquired at Court. It is impossible to exaggerate the loss which the nation suffers through his death. He possessed a statesman-like mind, took a large view of things, and as a diplomatist always behaved with great fairness to the country to which he was accredited, never trying to snatch an undue advantage from his opponents. He was a good conversationalist, told an anecdote well, and was a terror to the heads of departments at the Foreign Office, who could not attempt to grapple with the masterful, domineering character of this eminently capable diplomatist.

The late Sir Robert was a son of James Morier, the novelist, author of "Hajji Baba," one of the most amusing books there are in the language.

Very much has already been said, and very little need, therefore, be said now, about the late Prince Alexander of Bulgaria, who died last week in Vienna. In the early days at Darmstadt, soon after the close of the Franco-German war, when I knew the late Prince and his brothers well, it was impossible to have foreseen the distinguished parts that they were destined to play in the great world beyond. Quiet, unassuming, good-looking youths, with singularly fascinating manners, there was nothing whatever to indicate that they would ever make any serious mark in life. The late Prince Alexander is another victim to be added to the list that Prince Bismarck has some day to answer for. When the question of the proposed marriage between a daughter of the Empress Frederick and Prince Alexander arose, Prince Bismarck circulated the foulest calumny about the Prince which it was possible to concoct. It answered the purpose for which it was intended, and it also helped to ruin the life of this young Prince.

* * * * *

Since I gave, some few weeks ago, two or three stories told by the late Baron James de Rothschild, others have poured in upon me with alarming frequency. The following are amongst the best of them:—

Baron James meets Prince Paul of Würtemberg at a party.

"Bonjour, Paul," observes the Baron.

"Bonjour, M. le Baron," replies the Prince. "Je suis fâché de ne pas pouvoir vous appeler aussi par votre nom de baptême."

A certain Comte de Z—— is one day shown in to Baron James, in the counting-house. The Baron, being very busy, looks up for an instant and says, "Bonjour; prenez une chaise," and continues his work.

After a few moments, the astonished visitor remarks, "Probablement on s'est trompé en m'annonçant. Je suis le Comte de Z——."

Without interrupting his writing, Baron Rothschild replies:

"Pardon, M. le Comte ——. Prenez deux chaises."

* * * * *

This, too, deserves telling:—

A certain M. Constant, after returning from the funeral of his wife, is consoled by a friend, who finally asks him: "Comment vous trouvez vous à présent?"

"Merci, mon ami," he replies, "merci; je trouve que cette petite promenade m'a fait du bien."

* * * * * *

I have been asked to say that a collection of the principal works of the late Albert Moore will be exhibited at the Grafton Galleries at the exhibition which will open there early next January. A room will be especially devoted to this collection, and many of the artist's best works have been promised to the Directors for the occasion.

That the hansom cab is the most dangerous and disagreeable conveyance in the world is admitted by most. It has, however, recently developed an altogether new danger. Several hansoms now have an oil-lamp attached inside, and, a few days ago, one of these, being jerked out of its socket by the jolting of the cab, fell upon a lady and set fire to her dress. To presence of mind and prompt action she alone owes her escape from being burned alive.

It seems to have entirely escaped notice that it was Mr. Bayard, the new American Ambassador to London, who insisted some years ago upon the recall of Lord Sackville, the then British Minister to the United States. The incident has only to be mentioned to be remembered. That the British Government should have sanctioned the appointment of Mr. Bayard under these circumstances proves that we are a forgiving race. Beyond, however, making somewhat too lengthy speeches, Mr. Bayard has made himself a persona grata here.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

TWO useful practical lessons, which have often been taught in vain, may be learnt from the race for the Derby Cup. The one is that it is good policy at the back-end meetings to follow a winning form. Best Man commenced the autumn by winning the Great Eastern Handicap at Newmarket, and he had since won the Great Tom Stakes at Lincoln, beating a fair field, and carrying a respectable weight, only a fortnight before he ran at Derby, and yet he was allowed to start at the extravagant price of 33 to 1. How it could be supposed that Raeburn was going to give 10 lb. to a horse which had so recently shown such excellent form over the same distance it is impossible to understand. People utterly neglected this recent winner to rush on the over-weighted Raeburn, and (more justifiably) on Harfleur II., who had been well tried, and on the bottled-up and over-rated Gangway. The other lesson is not to attach any importance whatever to the placings in races which have been won with extreme ease. Raeburn's second in the Cambridgeshire must have cost the gullish herd a large sum, for it was solely on the strength of that misleading form that he was made favourite at Derby. The fact is that Molly Morgan having palpably the race in hand at the Bushes, several horses which were then going well were very properly eased, notably Le Nicham, and my own opinion is that if Lord Dunraven's mare had been out of the way, then either Baron Rothchild's horse or Callistrate would have been the winner. Raeburn and Le Nicham are certain to meet again next season, in which case the Duke of Portland's horse is sure to be favourite, and then I hope that my speculative readers will back his opponent. If the Duke of Portland is well advised, he will try and win the Lincolnshire Handicap with Raeburn. The course and the distance would exactly suit this horse, and Lincoln being the Duke's home meeting, he would be peculiarly gratified by winning the great race there.

It is curious that when an owner lays himself out, as it were, to win races at a particular meeting, his horses are tolerably certain to be unfortunate. Several of the Duke of Devonshire's horses had been all the autumn in careful reserve for Derby, and his colours were carried in many races during the meeting; but not once were they successful. Many years ago the horses in one of the largest and most powerful stables at Newmarket were kept quiet for months in order that they might show to advantage at a certain "back-end" meeting. About twenty horses were sent to the meeting, half of which were regarded as certainties for their respective engagements, and, indeed, several of the handicaps were "made for" representatives of this stable. The horses were "slipped" in race after race, and, so far as I remember, they ran second twelve or fifteen times during the week, but not a single stake was won. The good things were all ruthlessly overthrown, the result being that the two leading owners in the stable lost upwards of £30,000, and another of its patrons was irretrievably floored, as also were several other followers who had not realised what must be the inevitable result of the attempt of earthen pots to sail in company with brazen vessels.

KINAHAN'S LL WHISKY.—"The Cream of Old Irish Whiskies." Kinahan's LL Whisky. Gold Medal Paris Exhibition, 1878. Kinahan's Glenisle Whisky. The Finest Scotch Whisky sold.

Delphos has won more money than any other two-year-old of the season, the six races which he carried off being worth just £9,000. He has not a single engagement next year, and it is strange that he has not been entered for the Ascot Biennial, a rich stake which closed the other day. I see it is stated that Delphos was not engaged in the Derby because his breeder, Mr. Blake, had a still better yearling, which afterwards met with an accident and could not be trained. This tale is evidently inaccurate, for I have examined the original entry for next year's Derby, and Mr. Blake did not engage either the "much better yearling" or anything else.

An unprecedented number of famous horses are retiring from the turf to the stud just now. Sir Hugo, who was expected to enjoy a lengthened and brilliant racing career, never recovered from the effects of his race for the Newmarket Triennial last April, when the ground was dreadfully hard, and, although it was hoped that he would stand another preparation, and indeed he was the summer favourite for the Cesarewitch, it was found necessary to turn him out of training. This was a most unfortunate collapse for Lord Bradford. Sir Hugo's fee is to be 150 gs., which seems a preposterously high figure, and in my opinion 50 gs. would have been quite enough, all things considered.

St. Damien has quitted the turf, and his fee is only 25 gs., at which price he is about the cheapest horse now at the stud. St. Damien was one of the most unlucky horses on the turf that ever was foaled. He was most unfortunate in his races for the Newmarket Stakes and the Derby, and it was perfectly palpable to every rational speculator that last year he ought to have won the Eclipse Stakes instead of Orme. It was never expected that St. Damien would stand training as a four-year-old, and last January he was struck out of the Eclipse Stakes.

Orvieto, who was at his very best when he won the Kempton Park Jubilee Handicap, is another victim of the hard ground at Ascot, and he seemed dreadfully groggy when he was injudiciously started for the Dullingham Plate at one of the Newmarket July Meetings. He will stand next season at Newmarket, and at 50 gs. so handsome, so smart, and so well-bred a horse should command plenty of patronage.

Orme, about whose superlative merits there was such a chorus of crackbrained jargoning during the summer, will be remembered on the turf as a great miler. His running at Doncaster conclusively proved his lack of stamina, and his frantic horde of eulogists ought to have been convinced by his subsequent form that, although he was Gulliver in Lilliput over eight furlongs, yet he became Gulliver in Brobdingnag over twelve. Backers were saved last year from a dreadful crash by Orme's illness. If this horse had kept well he would have won the Two Thousand by many lengths, and would have become the hottest Derby favourite ever known. The result would have been his defeat at Epsom, as he would certainly have failed to stay the Derby course, just as he collapsed at Doncaster in the Leger. Orme is splendidly bred both for speed and for stamina, and he is a beautiful horse, and perfectly sound in his wind, so the Duke of Westminster has not found it necessary to advertise him, but has, indeed, refused a shoal of applications from owners.

Chesterfield has been sent to France, and he is retiring to the stud, and so is May Duke. M. Lebaudy's horse was very smart when he was in the humour to do his best, and he could stay well, but he was fearfully uncertain. May Duke was a good, but on the whole a decidedly unlucky, horse. He walked in for the Ascot Triennial, but that race was his last, for the hard ground settled him.

There is an excellent acceptance for the Manchester Handicap, which is to be run on Saturday, and a large field may be expected. There has already been a good deal of betting on the race, but genuine stable commissions are not likely to be executed until Friday at the earliest, and all prudent people will defer their investments until the latest possible moment. La Flèche has been the nominal favourite ever since the acceptances were published; but the ground is likely to be very heavy, and I expect that Cereza will ultimately prove to be the best from this stable. A great deal of money has been lost over Aborigine during the autumn, and he was practically left at the post at Liverpool, where he was handicapped with La Flèche at 39 lb., whereas on Saturday they will meet at 46 lb. Seaton Delaval and Golden Drop are both great tips. I shall predict the victory of either Cereza or Xylophone.

Judging by the recent weather the Metropolitan Skating Association has been none too early in publishing its figure-skating tests. I was appalled at the requirements for the different classes, but one of the gentlemen who drew up the regulations assures me that there is scarcely anything new in them, and the object has been to limit the discretion of the judges who were sometimes inclined to be too lenient. This is a step in the right direction. He also tells me that at Wimbledon this year a portion of the nursery will be roped off for figure-skaters who are not members of the club.

I recently drew attention to the unnecessary dangers of hockey, and Mr. Stanley Christopherson, the Hon. Secretary of the Hockey Association, has written a letter, the gist of which is that "it is not the style of the ball which is to blame, but the vast improvement in the style of the sticks, which comply with the rules and are in shape and weight similar to those used some years ago, but in consequence of the improvements the driving power is infinitely greater, and hence the increase of danger. The prevailing idea seems to be that legislation with regard to the sticks will do away with any unnecessary danger. In the meantime, a strict observance of the rule that the sticks must never be raised above the shoulder would go a long way towards the desired end." Whatever may be the views of the Hon. Sec., it is ridiculous to say that sticks are improved when the result is an increase of danger. And then the placid way in which he speaks of the "meantime" without holding out any prospects of immediate legislation is worthy of the Premier of a Tory Cabinet.

Last Saturday will be a record for football. Nearly all over the country, especially in the West, matches had to be abandoned owing to the gale that was raging. The best result was Devonport Albion v. Wellington, which read:—"Match off. Grand Stand blown down." In the Rugby matches the game was confined to the forwards, and so St. Thomas's scored a win over the Scottish, who, if they had a bit more strength forward, would be the strongest team in the South. The weather prevented any line being drawn as to the strength of the Dark and Light Blue teams from the matches with Richmond and Blackheath. Apparently the Cambridge team is better forward. The Woolwich and Sandhurst matches were spoiled, but so long as the college and the shop turn out such teams the Army is a good way from the dogs. By the way, the increase of football in the Army has done more for recruiting than anything else. There is already an Army Cup, and I suggest a senior and junior competition. The Association game between London and the two Universities ended in a draw. The circumstances under which matches were played makes any notice of individual play impossible.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. It is the best that money can buy.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Has been awarded Five Gold Medals.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Guaranteed to be free from alum.

How can a billiard player help being Roberts mad! One follows him as one does the price of shares in the American Market. He drops points off his handicap. His position seems hopeless, and then the spectator goes in to see him with a certainty of a rise. On Thursday Roberts's chances were not rosy, but in the evening he scored thrice as fast as Mitchell. On Friday, Mitchell went well ahead, and looked a certain winner. He required about fifteen hundred to win, and the champion was nearly twelve hundred behind him. But Roberts was equal to the occasion; he practically monopolised the table, and although Mitchell put in a fine break of three hundred, the scratch man scored century after century, and won by over a hundred. Coles in his match with Dawson was certainly disappointing after his display the previous week.

Last week Linton, the bicyclist, tried to lower the 100 miles record, which he holds, at Herne Hill. He failed in his attempt, except from fifty-five to sixty-three miles. He had to find his own pacemakers. Those who on previous occasions had been expected to help him did not turn up. The reason was that the firm whose machine he rides supports the Stanley show, and so it is boycotted by other firms. The makers' amateur is therefore forbidden to turn out to help a rival firm by puffing its machines just before the show. The N.C.U. professes to support amateur riding. And yet it allows riders to go down when they please and cut records. A record should only be allowed to be made in a race. The present system affords the best means of advertising what manufacturers have, and so long as it lasts the makers' amateur will flourish, and the N.C.U. will be powerless to check him.

For flagrantly infringing the rules as to professionalism the Huddersfield Football Club has been suspended until the end of the season. Considering the open avowals of the existence of rampant professionalism in Yorkshire, which the county delegates made at the general meeting, the Rugby Union should have expelled the club. By this means they would have got rid of the Yorkshire clubs, as there would have been a general secession. This is exactly what is wanted. If there was enough evidence to warrant suspension, there was sufficient for expulsion.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—At last the air is clearing, and there seems to be reasonable grounds for looking more hopefully into the future. It is true that we have the troubles of the Trusts Companies still with us, but, as I explained last week, the losses which have been made by these are more than discounted in the present low prices of their securities. In fact, if reasonable action is taken by the shareholders in these Companies, and if the noisy wreckers do not get their way, I should think that a recovery in a good many of these stocks was probable, now that an improvement of trade promises to follow the termination of the coal strikes.

A more Hopeful Outlook.

The end of the coal war is, of course, a most important event. The disastrous struggle commenced on July 28, and has therefore lasted nearly four months, materially deepening the depression already existing. In the light of the immediate favourable result of the intervention of the Government, it is to be regretted that this step was not taken at an earlier stage of the trouble, but Ministers are, all the same, to be congratulated upon their success. The heavy losses caused to our industries and to our railways cannot, of course, be recovered to any great extent, but there is, at least, every prospect of a revival in business. The last few Board of Trade returns indicated distinctly that a tendency to improvement was in existence, which would, without the coal trouble, by now have found expression in increased exports and imports. We may, therefore, now look for material progress. There are other hopeful signs. The position in the United States is rapidly improving, and the plethora of money in the chief financial centres, especially in New York and Chicago, points to an early revival in the Wall Street market. With reference to the Romero Rothschild convention for the settlement of the Argentine Debt, I am informed that it will be ratified by Congress this week, and although the civil war in Brazil drags on its weary length, there are symptoms of some decisive action. Again, money is very plentiful here, and although gold dribbles away to the Continent, there seems to be no fear at present of any heavy drain. The forthcoming conversion of French Rentes is also a favourable feature. With a considerable "Bear" account open all over the Stock Exchange, it wants but a return of confidence amongst the public to bring about a very sharp recovery; and I may tell you, Ben, that I have of late heard the view confidently expressed by long-headed men, who are not usually given to illusions, that we are at present on the threshold of a marked and lasting upward movement. With reference to the rumours connected with the Bank of England, which have again been so widely discussed, the matter is of no importance to the general public and has no bearing upon the markets. I incline to the opinion that Mr. Frank May, the late chief cashier of the Bank of England, has been made a scapegoat, and that the impression which prevails, that the responsibility really rests upon two of the directors, is well founded. It is, moreover, a well-known fact that all important loan transactions are submitted to a committee of directors. But what does it matter to the world at large, if the Bank of England should make a loss over such a transaction? It is chiefly a question for the shareholders in the Bank, who may have to submit to a small reduction in the dividend. As to the tales of wealthy clients rushing up to town to inquire of their solicitors and others, if their large balances at the Bank of England were safe, they may be true enough; but they only prove how unreasonable the prevailing distrust is and how flimsy are the pretexts upon which people allow themselves to be scared nowadays.

Home Rails Revive.

The termination of the coal strike has brought about a moderate rise in English Railway stocks. It was shown at the settlement last week that no real stock had come out, rates being easy all round, with stiff backwardations, especially in the case of Brighton "A," Metropolitan, Dover "A," and Great Eastern. Small backs also ruled in the heavy stocks, with the exception of North-Eastern. The view taken in the "House" is that some large amounts of the latter stock have been marketed of late by the Hull Docks Company, and that this was the reason of the dulness which has prevailed recently. Great Western are up 1½, Midlands and North-Western, ½. The two last-named lines have suffered severely from the coal strikes, the traffic decrease of the Midland for the nineteen weeks of the current half-year having been £745,407, that of the North-Western £416,425. Although considerable savings have been effected in working expenses, a large proportion of these decreases will work out to net losses, even though some part will probably be recovered through the large quantities of coal which will now pass over the lines. Such is, in fact, the coal famine that the increase in the traffics may be expected to extend well into the coming year. Investors having disregarded the heavy decline in earnings hitherto, it would appear that they will face the reduced dividends in January as philosophically. Great Eastern have improved 2 points on "Bear" closing. I have pointed out for some time that the account in this stock was greatly over-sold, a statement which was fully confirmed by a back of $\frac{1}{16}$ exacted at the settlement. The dividend outlook for the Ordinary stock is, of course, very unpromising, as will be seen from the following estimate :—

Rational Dog Feeding.—Give wholesome and nutritious food (Spratt's Patent Meat Fibrine Dog Cakes). Do not give tit-bits and dainties because your dog, like a spoilt child, prefers what suits his palate. See that the Dog Cakes are stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "×," as cheap and innutritious imitations are often substituted for extra profit. Pamphlet on Canine Diseases post free, Spratt's Patent, Limited, Bermondsey, London.

Traffic decreases to date		£139,106
Extra Preferred and pre-Preferred interest		15,000
		154,106
Deduct larger balance brought forward ...	£2,960
Estimated saving in working expenses... ...	46,368
		49,328
Net decrease to date		104,778
1½ per cent. on Ordinary		94,296
Smaller carry forward		10,482

	First half.	Second half.	Year.	Carry forward.
1892.....	¾ ...	3½ ...	2¼ ...	£40,000
1893.....	¾ ...	2 ...	1⅜ ...	£29,500

The result of this calculation is therefore a dividend at the rate of 1⅜ per cent. only, against 2¼ per cent. last year, with a considerably smaller balance to carry forward ; but it may be that a few traffic increases from coal will yet improve the position somewhat during December. However that may be, the shareholders have stuck to their holdings so tightly during the coal war that the "Bears" have not much to hope from them. Dover "A" have improved 1, as recoveries in traffic are now also looked for on the South-Eastern. I drew attention last week to the reopening of Olympia with the end of the year as likely to benefit the Metropolitan and Metropolitan District lines. To this prospect has been added an impending advance in long-distance omnibus fares, while the Metropolitan will now pull up some of its losses in coal traffic. No wonder, therefore, that Metropolitan has risen nearly four points, and Districts two, to 27. On Metropolitan, as much as ⅜ back was paid at the settlement, and there is hardly any stock to be got. Great Northern Deferred have risen 3 points on the improved outlook with respect to coal traffic. The Scotch stocks are dull, as the coal strike in the Midlands had benefited them rather than otherwise, but they will after all participate in any general revival, and should certainly be held.

Brighton "A" and the Bears.

The time is now approaching when the tussle with the bears of "Berthas" will cause some diversion in the Brighton market. The notice of a bill in Parliament applying for further capital powers for the purpose chiefly of doubling the line between Croydon and Red Hill, which has just been advertised, was the last point on which the ursine party had relied. The outlay for this work is, however, estimated at only £350,000, and will be distributed over a considerable time, so that it will not affect the financial position of the Company in 1894 to any extent. I have already explained that holders of Brighton "A" must make up their mind to a dividend of only 5½ per cent., on which basis the yield is less than 4 per cent. per annum on the investment. This is how this dividend estimate is worked out.

Balance brought into the account				£42,539
Revenue available for ordinary dividend :—
July ...	£77,193	a decrease of	£22,700
August ...	84,227	,, ,,	18,100
September ...	48,839	,, ,,	24,000	(estimated)
October ...	27,125	,, ,,	16,000	,,
November ...	16,684	,, ,,	8,000	,,
December ...	10,461	,, ,,	5,000	,,
	£307,068
	291,410	a dividend of 7¼ per cent.
	£15,658	balance forward.

Dividend on Brighton Ordinary Stock : First half, 4¼ ; second half, 7¼ per cent., leaving 5½ per cent. for Brighton "A."

According to my information, however, the stock of coal along the whole line is so reduced that within a fortnight from the end of the coal strikes traffic increases may be expected, recent decreases having been almost entirely in coal. That would mean that, instead of a net decrease of £5,000 in December, there might be an increase, which would make all the difference. The line will, moreover, derive increased traffics from coal during part of next year, thus providing a set-off against the large passenger takes of the first half of the present year, when the sun favoured the passenger movement so exceptionally. In the second half of 1894 there would then be the comparison with the wretched returns of the corresponding period of the current year. Real holders of Brighton "A" have stuck to their stock with marvellous fortitude during the bad times, and so scarce was stock at the last settlement, that the backwardation ran up from ⅜ to ⅞. Is it likely, therefore, that they will now sell out when prospects are brightening, and they may anticipate for 1894 a return to the old fat dividends ? The "bears" have had their innings, and they will probably have to face a mauvais quart d'heure before long.

Yankee Prospects.

On the whole, prices of active American Railroad stocks have advanced to a moderate extent during the past week in the face of considerable "Bear" pressure, which has again increased the "short" account both here and in Wall Street. Traffics, although still showing decreases, are improving in many instances, especially in the case of the Atchison line, the weekly decrease of which has now fallen to 46,500 dols., which is again an improvement on the October returns, and Atchison Second Mortgage "A" bonds have been one of the firmest stocks in the market. The last New York Bank statement is again very satisfactory, the surplus above legal requirements of 65,500,000 dols. being larger than ever before, and although a commercial failure caused some temporary nervousness, there does not appear reason to anticipate any crop of such disasters. On the other hand, mercantile paper is now in better request than it has been for a long time, consequently affording merchants all the relief they require ; and savings banks which have had their funds, amounting to nearly 200 millions, locked up, are soon expected in the market seeking investments. The view is taken also in some quarters that the American public will shortly enter the market for their own Railroad stocks ; and considering the plethora of money in New York, Chicago, and other financial centres, this is a reasonable anticipation, especially if trade should go on improving and traffics increase. The carriage of grain may also be relied upon to help the Railroads now that the lake traffic comes to an end. The records of grain receipts kept by the New York Produce Exchange show that for five months of the canal season this year the receipts of wheat by canal have been 24,102,000 bushels, compared with 11,426,000 bushels last year, and of corn 4,118,200 bushels, compared with 625,000 for the same period of last year. These figures are a sufficient answer to those who attempt to ignore the importance of the canals as a factor in the great grain traffic of the country, and as a regulator of railroad rates. The last batch of traffic returns for the second week of November is very promising, the Louisville showing a decrease of only 24,000 dols., the Norfolk and Western 12,000 dols. increase, the Missouri, Kansas, and Texas 50,000 dols. increase. Time is, of course, working in favour of holders of Yankee Rails, which are certain to benefit by the recovery of the country from the crisis through which it has passed. Milwaukees, Louisville, Atchison, and similar stocks should under these circumstances advance materially, if gradually. I said last week that even Denvers and Denver Prefs. had seen the worst, and there has been a marked improvement since. There has also been a better demand for Railroad bonds, gilt-edged, such as New York Central Fours, and good second-class bonds, such as Louisville Unified, Denver Fours, Northern Pacific First Mortgage bonds, &c. A very good reception has also been accorded to the new issue of Baltimore and Ohio South-Western Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Gold bonds (guaranteed by the Baltimore and Ohio), which have all been placed and are a really gilt-edged security, which is excellent value at 101. Now that the "Toilet Lanoline" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d. and 1s. ; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depot, 67, Holborn-viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

Six per Cent. Atchison Guarantee Fund Notes have been popularised in the market it has been decided to deal in them in future "clean," viz., not plus accrued interest as heretofore, but on the condition that whatever interest accrues is included in the price. As soon as the necessary documents come to hand from Boston, application will be made for an official quotation on the London Stock Exchange, and I am told that Messrs. Hope & Co. have already applied for a quotation in Amsterdam. The price on the new terms is 97, at which these notes yield 7 per cent. per annum on the investment. Canadian Pacifics, which were also heavily oversold, have moved up sharply a point or two on the publication of favourable statements in a letter from the President, Mr. Van Horne. Grand Trunks have fluctuated, but will hardly recover to any marked extent until the next monthly statement is published, another disagreeable surprise being within the range of possibility.

The Argentine Convention.

The long-expected news of the ratification by the Argentine Congress of the Romero-Rothschild convention for the settlement of the Argentine Debt will, according to reliable cablegrams, arrive this week, and the market for Government stocks has braced up in anticipation of the event. It is, in fact, reported that Congress in a fit of generosity intends to add a clause to the effect that, if the revenues exceed 125,000,000 dols. national money, half of the surplus will be applied towards increasing the dividend on the loans, which are to receive only 60 per cent. of their original interest until their dividend becomes equal, proportionately, to that of the preferential loans. I do not think much of the suggestion, even if it should be adopted, as these surpluses can rarely be relied upon, and especially not in this case, as the railway guarantees have yet to be settled. It will be useful to show the position and the comparative yield in the following table:—

Argentine Government Bonds.

—	Interest per cent.		Highest in 1892.	Lowest in 1892.	Present Price.	Yield per cent. per annum.
		Temporary Adjustment.
Argentine, 1886	5	4	76	58¼	65	£6 4
Argentine Funding ...	6	5	73⅞	49	69½	7 4
*Argentine 1884	5	3	48	30	41⅛	7 5
*Argentine 1887 Treasury	5	3	44¾	30½	40	7 10
*Argentine 1888 Sterling External	4½	£2 14	41½	28¼	39½	6 17
*Argentine 1889 Sterling External	3⅜	£2 2	33¾	22½	29	7 5
Buenos Ayres Water Supply and Drainage Works	5	4	—	—	53	7 11

The loans marked with an asterisk are those which will receive only 60 per cent. under the Rothschild Convention. It will be seen that the Buenos Ayres Water Supply and Drainage bonds, which are also Government bonds, with at least equal security to the others, return the highest yield. There is obviously a considerable margin for a rise in these bonds, paying from £6. 17s. to £7. 11s. per cent. per annum, with the prospect of a return to the original rate of interest after six years. The 1886 loan has, of course, the additional right to a return of the 1 per cent. per annum which remains unpaid during the period of temporary adjustment.

South American Railway Debentures.

The final settlement of the Argentine Debt will, no doubt, lead to an advance in Argentine Railway stocks, which will probably communicate itself also to other South American Railway securities. The improvement should, as usual, commence with the gilt-edged, and then spread to the more speculative stocks. I propose supplying some information upon these various classes of securities for the use of investors, and I herewith give a tabular comparison of the yield of the Debentures of leading South American lines:—

—	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Four per Cent. Debentures .	96½	90	96	4	£4 4
Antofagasta Six per Cent. Guaranteed Capital stock ...	119½	110	106½	6	5 13
Buenos Ayres Great Southern Four per Cent. Debenture stock	107	98	104	4	3 17
Buenos Ayres and Rosario Four per Cent. Debenture stock ...	95¾	80½	93	4	4 6
Costa Rica Six per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures ...	96	73	86½	6	6 19
Central Argentine Six per Cent. Debenture stock	136½	100	138	6	4 10
Central Uruguay of Monte Video Six per Cent. Debenture stock	129	114	120	6	5 0
*Cordoba and Rosario Five per Cent. Debenture stock ...	74½	59	52	—	7 14
Mexican Railway Six per Cent. Perpetual Debenture stock ...	129	112½	111	6	5 8
Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds (1923)	109¾	97	111	5	4 10
Nitrate Railways Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds	98⅞	90	96	5	5 4

* The interest actually paid for the half-year ended August 31 was as to half in cash and half in deferred warrants, equivalent to 4 per cent. cash for the year.

There has been an advance of from 2 to 4 points in all these securities since I last published a list of them some six weeks ago (Truth, October 5). The highest class Debentures in this list are those of the Buenos Ayres Great Southern, and of the Antofagasta (Chili), and Bolivia, the latter of which yield the best return. Interest on the Costa Rica First Mortgage Debentures will be resumed in cash on January 1. For the purpose of making sound and progressive investments with every safety, an excellent selection can be made from the above tables.

Kaffir and Other Mines.

The state of the market for Chartered British of South Africa shares has been very unsettled during the week. Not only is the campaign in Matabeleland apparently far from over, but the new issue of 1,000,000 shares in connection with the United Concessions raises fears of the market being swamped again. Yet I really do not see why the nervousness of investors concerning Chartered shares should in any way interfere with the shares in Land and Mining Companies, the properties of which are situate many hundred miles from the seat of war in Matabeleland. Why, for instance, should the Witwatersrand Gold Mining shares be in any way affected by the Chartered troubles. It really is time that the Mining market should shake itself free from this baneful influence. In the meantime, changes in South African Gold Mines have mostly been in the downward direction, Rietfontein, City and Suburban, and Meyer and Charlton leading the way. It remains now to be seen, if the November crushings will infuse some life into the Kaffir Circus. Advices from the South Simmer and Jack Mine are to the effect that the shaft is down 125 feet, and work is going on steadily. With the rock-drill, which has been ordered, it is hoped to strike the south reef in six to eight weeks. The market has been firm, and dealings have taken place at a small premium, viz., $1\frac{1}{16}$. Amongst Indian Mines a firm tone prevailed at one time on advices according to which the Balaghat-Mysore had apparently met with the continuation of the Champion Reef in its property, but prices do not close at the best. American Mining shares are steady, with a slight increase in dealings. Poorman and De Lamar have recovered, while Tolima "A" and "B" have relapsed. The Idaho Exploring Company—a reconstruction of Idaho Mining Company—appears to have some promising opportunities for the acquisition, amongst others, of the Barranca del

Oro and Republica Gold Mines, the ore in which is stated to run to 3 oz. to the ton, in addition to which it has the Idaho mill and machinery worth, at auction prices, between £7,000 to £8,000, which should prove valuable in this mining district. This in reply to several inquiries from shareholders in the old Company as to whether they should take up their shares in the new undertaking. It seems to be a fair mining risk. Don Pedros are easier, but Elkhorn are the turn firmer. The negotiations to which I referred as to an important deal of the Caratal Company regarding the McArthur Forrest process are now taking practical shape, and an early announcement is expected, which should be good news for the shareholders. The latest advices from the Macate Gold Mining Company show that the property is being vigorously handled, for the lodes are increasing in width and value, and news of crushings is daily expected. The shares are quoted 2s. 3d. to 2s. 6d. with a fair amount of business. In the Australian section moderate dealings have taken place in Aladdins and Wentworth, but the tone is rather dull. Achilles Gold Fields shares have been dealt in at 1-1$\frac{1}{16}$. This Company has taken over the well-known Phœnix Gold Mine in New Zealand, on which a large body of ore running 1 oz. to the ton is stated to be ready for the 30-stamp mill now at work. Advices of the first clean-up are shortly expected, and there is an impression in the market that the price of the shares will advance sharply. Carringtons are firm at 3s. 6d.-4s., and there are hardly any shares in the market. It is confidently anticipated that the Company will get the same rich stone as the Victoria Gold Mining Association, which owns an adjoining property and pays 6d. regularly and an occasional 1s. per month on the shares quoted at 17s., and has last announced a crushing of 259 tons for 480 oz. for the fortnight. The Brilliant Block Gold Mine announces a crushing for the fortnight of 169 tons for 273 oz.

Important to Oceana Shareholders.

Although the report of the Oceana Transvaal Land Company for the year ending June 30 contains many favourable references, such as those to the prospect of sales of stands for the new township at Sedan, the proclamation of a farm contiguous to the Company's property, Buffelsfontein, as a goldfield, and the programme of railway extension in the Transvaal, comprising some 1,200 miles, notably the approval of the line from Pretoria to Pietersburg, promising the opening up of the Company's properties in the Central and Northern Transvaal, the shareholders are greatly disappointed that no dividend or bonus is paid to them, as had been foreshadowed, and might, moreover, reasonably have been expected. The Company effected during the year under review the sale of the farm Riversdraai to the Oceana Transvaal Coal Company against £500 in cash and £12,666 fully-paid shares of £1 each, and as holders of 39,038 Oceana Development shares it is entitled to a portion of the shares in the Coal Compamy, which the Development Company is about to distribute to its shareholders as a bonus. Together, these would represent some 22,000 Coal shares, the bulk of which, or say 20,000 shares, would work out to 10 per cent. on the Oceana capital of £20,000, and they ought, in my opinion, to be distributed as a bonus to the shareholders. The Directors, it appears, somewhat old-fashioned in their notions, argue that they are not permitted to pay a dividend, as there is a debit balance standing against the Company in the balance-sheet of £43,700. But against this sum there figure in the balance-sheet as assets, the £39,038 in Oceana Development shares above referred to, and some blocks of New Belgium and Silati River shares, for which no credit has been taken, and which more than compensate for the amount of the debit balance. Why, then, should the shareholders now allow the Coal shares also to be bottled up in the accounts in this same extraordinary fashion? The Oceana Company has ample cash assets, as it has since the issue of the report received calls on the new shares amounting to £25,000, in addition to £7,300 investments, £8,171 sundry debtors, and £6,000 cash in hand, making a total of over £46,000; while the extensive properties held by it stand in the books at the cost price—viz., £105,103, although, in view of the development going on in the Transvaal, they are worth a great deal more. It is, therefore, quite time that the shareholders should see some kind of return for their money, and I strongly advise them to insist at the meeting to be held on Thursday, November 23, upon the distribution of a 10 per cent. bonus in Coal shares. Of this, 6 per cent., or 12,000 shares, could be distributed at once, and the remaining 4 per cent., or 8,000 shares, when the Oceana Development Company issues its accounts and pays its bonus in Coal shares, which I understand will take place very shortly. The partly-paid shares in the Coal Company stand at "par," and the news from the coal property is excellent; so that the fully-paid shares referred to represent a valuable security.

For Mutual Life Assurance. The Scottish Widows' Fund Society. Accumulated Funds £12,000,000. Special Notice. Assurances to participate in the next Division of Profits in respect of the year ending December 31, 1893, should be applied for now. Full particulars of this great Mutual Life Office may be obtained on application to London Office, 28, Cornhill, E.C.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Moonstone.—There is no newspaper which publishes the numbers of all the drawn Lottery bonds, but you can subscribe to some agency which furnishes the information. If you wish it, I will obtain name and particulars. Ulysses.—Mexican things are looking up, and City of Mexico bonds are a fair venture. There is a marked recovery in the Government stocks. J. R., Westminster.—Certainly hold the bonds and buy more to average. S. American.—Most decidedly, hold Nos. 1-4. Affairs in Mexico are improving, while silver is better. The dividends of Nos. 2 and 3 are also pretty safe, and No. 4 should take a turn eventually. W. H.—An arrangement has been made by the State of Virginia with the bondholders under which reduced interest is paid. Ignoramus.—These Lottery bonds are safe enough but the yield is very small, and they are not dealt in here. Plym.—1. An arrangement is in course of ratification under which payment will be resumed in currency. 2. There is no reason to suppose that the City of Mexico will not keep up interest. M. S. T.—I should not advise you to make the investment.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

T. B., Madlock Bridge.—You should hold both the Bank shares and the shares in the Trust Company. The scare is nearly over. Spes.—The Bank is apparently going on all right, and should benefit by the improvement in Argentina. There is no market for the shares of the publishing Company, and I should not advise you to touch them. Exsul.—Yes, the shares of the Bank of New South Wales are a good investment. It is one of the three best Australian Banks which have weathered the recent crisis well. Parachute.—I do not advise you to deal through this Paris firm, neither are these Lottery bonds at all tempting, as they yield very little apart from the chance of drawings. If you wish to buy them, do so through a respectable banker. Confidence.—I advise you to deal with members of the Stock Exchange only. Avis.—1. A wealthy American office. 2. Yes. 3. Try the Sun Life Office. 4. Doubtful. Observer, Malton.—If you are a holder, keep them; but do not buy at present. Inscientia.—1. Have nothing to do with the firm; their system is unsatisfactory, and you can buy these bonds at a much lower price in the market. 2. You can buy them through your bankers. 3. No. 4. Your bankers ought to be able to recommend you a stockbroker.

Home Rails.

R. T.—You should hold the American Rails Nos. 1 and 3, also Canadian Pacifics (2). It is believed that the Hull Dock Company has sold its holding of North-Eastern Consols, and that this accounts for the recent dulness of the stock.

American and Foreign Rails.

A. H.—Certainly, Atchison "B" bonds should be held. They are very cheap, and at 43 yield about 9¾ per cent. per annum. Whenever Dutch holders, who had to sell some blocks in order to meet their losses in the various Union Pacific bonds, which were defaulted upon, turn round, there will be a sharp recovery. A. R. C.—You should hold your Northern Pacific bonds, measures are being taken in the interest of the holders. Light.—1. There is no option but to hold Manitoba and North-Western Debentures, and I have always warned my readers against these small Canadian lines. 2. I think you had better sell Pahang Corporation. Acero.—Hold all your American Rails, Nos. 1 to 4. It is a pity that you did not sell your Louisville at 56 to 58, when I so strongly advised it, and purchased again when they dropped to 45. But they ought to be held now. Cornwall.—The fear that eventually interest might be passed appears to have depressed these shares, but default does not seem probable. E. J. D.—

There does not appear to be much prospect of any substantial progress for the present, and, as you can do much better elsewhere, you should sell out and repurchase—say, Atchison Guarantee Fund Notes at 96½, which yield 7¼ per cent. per annum, Atchison Second Mortgage "A" bonds, which will eventually yield 10 per cent. on present price, or, say, Antofagasta Six per Cent. Capital stock, at 107, yielding about 5½ per cent. per annum. Bishop.—The time of Texas "B" will come shortly. Hold. B. Mc.—There is no reason why you should not average the American Railroad bonds and the Bank shares. Personally, however, I should prefer the Atchison Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund Notes at 97. H. K.—It is a great pity that you did not follow my advice to sell Louisville at 56 65, and repurchase again at 45. They should now be held for a recovery. The new issue of shares will not for the present be made, as they will be kept in the Treasury, and if traffic should improve a considerable advance is probable. H. K. V.—I do not advise the investment in this railway. Corinthian.—1. I gave last week, in reply to "Dora" (page 1,055), the exact security of the Atchison Guarantee Fund Notes on the authority of a firm of New York solicitors. 2. These bonds are no catch. 3. Hold these bonds, they will recover. 4. A fair mining risk. A Small Investor.—1. It is quite correct that the Atchison Guarantee Fund Notes are all in the denomination of 5,000 dols. In Amsterdam the "Administration" has arranged to issue its own certificates of 500 dols. and 1,000 dols. against the deposit of the Notes, and it is to be hoped that some such arrangement will also be made here. 2. I do not consider the Railway investment mentioned by you is sufficiently safe. Modicus.—Certainly hold Cordoba and Rosario Debenture stock. They will rise with the rest of the Argentine market. Sussex.—The advice applies for any day, as my remarks are not based only on daily occurrences. A Country Broker.—The New York Central has a better hold upon its district. The Ontario has had a larger coal traffic, and the Norfolk and Western extensions are at last becoming productive. You will find that traffics will also gradually improve on the other lines. R. W.—The Atchison requirements for January have, according to cable advices published in the press, all been arranged. The South American investments, Nos. 1-5 and 7, should be held for a recovery, which is probable. The Bank shares, Nos. 6 and 8, are first-class.

Mining Shares.

Winkle.—A reconstruction will probably be necessary, for which reason I cannot advise you to buy now. Brojin.—1. Whenever trade in Chili improves and the exchange rises, Arancos will recover. 2. Oceana should be bought on the relapse as well as Oceana Development shares. See remarks under "Important to Oceana Shareholders." Paul Jones.—Hold Glencairns and Shebas. It is impossible to recommend to you, as you desire, some cheap shares that will have a substantial rise in a few weeks. Any one operating in Mines must have patience, a rise comes about often very suddenly. The only course is to buy promising shares and to put them by. The remarks under "Kaffir and Other Mines" will give you the necessary information. Langley.—It is a fair Mining risk. Ajax.—The Glencairn Mine is doing exceedingly well, and some time next year, when dividends are paid, they will stand much higher than now. Hold also May's Consolidated now. D. S. and P. R.—Yes, you should give the Idaho reconstruction at once, if still in time. See under "Kaffir and Other Mines." Espérance.—Yes Achilles Gold shares are very firm at par (£1 share, fully paid), and the market expects a sharp rise. Cambrian.—Some of the mines referred to in the report in question from Bendigo are good investments, but they would have to be selected with great care. There is no market for them here. Ink Pot.—You must give me full particulars of the contract, &c., before I can advise you. Merton.—The stocks No. 1-3 should now be held, as the depression will probably pass away. 4. As the calls on Glenrock for the next twelve months are not to exceed sixpence per share, it may be policy to take your proportion in the reconstructed Company, but sell on any fair advance in the price of the new issue. Sell Colon, Tetuan, and Wheal Grenville (5-7). Hold the Uruguay Railway stock. Veritas.—Hold all the mines Nos. 1-2, 4, 6-8. Sell Nos. 9 and 5. When the conversion is effected sell No. 3. Do not average yet. Afrikander.—The outlook for Clewer Estates is considered good, and Roodepoort United Main Reef is a fair mining venture. Hold for a recovery in the South African market. Jersey.—Hold Nos. 1 and 2. Sell Eberhardt (3). Prospects of the Del Rey Mine are considered favourable, but the shares appear to be quite high enough for the present. 5. Yes, the reconstruction took a long time, but the shares should be held now—in fact, there is no option but to do so. Hold No. 6 at present price. Yes, as to No. 7. Write to the secretary with regard to 8. Certainly hold Caratal (9), satisfactory advices are expected. 10. I have no information on this matter, but I should say that it is a very disastrous bankruptcy. M. N.—Considered a promising property, but no market for the shares. No option but to wait.

Industrial Companies.

Ed. E., Paris.—The prospects of this Company should be reasonably satisfactory. But you had better write to the Secretary for information. J. A., Passage.—A fair industrial investment, but no catch. You can do better amongst the securities mentioned by me to-day. G. W.—These shares ought to be held, as the Company appears to have turned the corner.

Mixed Investments.

S. S. C.—1. Hold Argentine Great Western Debentures; whenever a settlement of the Railway guarantees is made, which is promised for this year, the price will advance. 2. Hold Chathams, speculation may possibly revive shortly. 3. No option but to hold, but you did not need to have bought into these small Canadian lines. Margin Lagniappe.—For the investment of your £2,500 you might make a very suitable little Trust for yourself by spreading it over Baltimore and Ohio South Western Four-and-a-Half per Cent. First Mortgage bonds, guaranteed by the Baltimore and Ohio, at 101; Atchison Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund Notes, at 97 (see remarks under Yankee Rails); also from to-day's lists of South American Debentures: Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds (1925), at 111; Antofagasta Six per Cent. Guaranteed Capital stock, at 106½; and Nitrate Railway Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds, at 96. Neptune.—The above mentioned stocks recommended to "Marine Engineer" should also suit you, or else you can make a further selection from the stocks mentioned under "South American Railway Debentures." I do not like the Debentures mentioned by you. W. B. Shrew.—You should hold the shares in the Industrial Company, but it is hardly worth while to buy more, when there are so many other tempting investments offering. The stocks mentioned by you under No. 1-5 will do very well for the investment of your £2,000. Winter.—No reason to sell the American Railroad stocks No. 1-4. The market is likely to improve considerably. Hold the Brewery stocks No. 5-9, also No. 10. Hold No. 11. Also hold Caratals (12), concerning which favourable news is expected, and Holcombe Valley (13). Baker's Creek shares are a good purchase. With regard to the Phœnix Golden Pile, last advices state that the reef is opening up well, and it appears safe to predict that the mine will pay regular dividends when properly developed, but the Gympie Goldfield is so patchy that it is not until a mine is fully opened out that one can, with any safety, foreshadow what it will ultimately turn out.

Various Investments.

An important change came at one time over the silver market, the price, after a further decline to 32 1/16d., having recovered to 32¾d, but a relapse to 32 5/16d. has since occurred. An advance in the Indian exchanges and sales of bills for some forty lacs of rupees on India at 1s. 3¼d. have given rise to the hope that the India Council will be able to get along for some time without a new loan, and that its Micawber-like policy of waiting for something to turn up will, after all, meet with some limited measure of success. Silver securities, as far as they are connected with Mexico, are distinctly firmer. Mexican Six per Cent Government stock having risen a couple of points, and Mexican Railway First Prefs. have recovered over three points to 62¾ x.d. The Second Prefs., however, have improved only one point. The impression is growing very generally that affairs in Mexico are mending as regards trade, and that larger railway traffics may be looked for. In the meantime no doubt is being entertained that the Mexican Government will meet the January interest in full in cash. The directors of the Trustees, Executors, &c., Corporation have made a call of £2. 10s. per share, payable as to one half on December 20 and February 28 next; but a further call of £2. 10s. will no doubt be made, as the Debentures amounting to £500,000 have the security of the uncalled capital, and the holders have the right of insisting upon being repaid in the first instance. I fully explained the position of these debentures, when publishing on 2nd inst. my last table of well-secured investments. Holders have the option to call in the money in three years from April 1, 1892, viz., on April 1, 1895, at 101½, while the Corporation reserved the right of paying them off at any time at 103, at which they would, in fact, be payable at the end of six years. In the present case the Corporation will, no doubt, have to exercise this right. Hence the rise in the Debentures from 95, at which they stood when I mentioned them, to 99. The approaching Conversion of the Four-and-a-half per Cent. Rentes is likely to keep the Paris Bourse in good humour for some time, and will act as a support for Foreign stocks here, amongst which Italians and Spanish have rallied. The action of the Greek Government in stopping the Funding arrangement without condescending to state what it will substitute for the same, has caused a good deal of dissatisfaction. At the same time, it is hoped that M. Tricoupis will not lend himself to any measures which might altogether destroy the credit of Greece. A loan of £2,000,000 is talked of, to be applied to the strengthening of the currency and a fresh arrangement with the creditors on a cash basis. Nitrate Rails have improved to 15⅝, as I said they would. Although the traffic increase for the fortnight ended November 15 was only £3,686, larger increases are now looked forward to.—Your affectionate uncle,

Minton's (Limited). Minton's China.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

BATESON & CO., MONEY-LENDERS.

JOSEPH GRAMSON, ESQ., J.P., of Hawks Hall, Hawkstone, Bucks, possessed two very pronounced characteristics—impressive middle-class respectability and imperturbable gravity. When, therefore, he one morning at breakfast suddenly left the table and retired to his pretentious library, the family concluded that something very much out of the ordinary was contained in the letter he had carried off with him.

For once the consensus of domestic opinion was right. The letter was very much out of the ordinary. This is what it said:—

DEAR G.—Enclosed appeared in Evening Argus to-night. We now have the blackguards on the hip. Fire a writ for libel into them without delay, otherwise you are a ruined man. Will be at usual place to-morrow afternoon to see you and talk over plans.—Yours, B.

P.S.—Destroy this.

The enclosure was a newspaper cutting, headed "Bateson & Co., Usurers. Who is the Co.?" It was one of a series of articles that were appearing in the Argus, exposing the rampant roguery of a notorious money-lender of the worst stamp, who, under the name of Bateson & Co., had rendered himself infamous by his extortions. One portion of the article was marked with blue pencil. Mr. Gramson read it again and again, while the damp on his forehead became a cold dew:—

It seems that Bateson, like most of his type, is merely the tool of another. The actual founder and proprietor of this firm is one Gramson, a person who some years ago gained notoriety in connection with a more than usually discreditable money-lending transaction. Since then Gramson has grown rich and respectable. He is a person of some consequence in the village of Hawkstone, and has been deemed worthy of holding her Majesty's Commission as a Justice of the Peace. We need scarcely add that he is also a pillar of the Church, and an ostentatious parader of all those virtues which men of his stamp are ever the first to champion. In our next article we shall have something more to say about this money-lending J.P.

Had some of the admirers of Joseph Gramson seen him after the sixth or seventh perusal of that bit of print they would never again have regarded him as a marvel of cool-headedness. And it would have been surprising had Mr. Gramson been less excited than he was, for he was passing through one of those supreme experiences that sooner or later come to all who lead a double life.

After years of careful concealment, in spite of the most elaborate precautions that ingenuity and money could supply, the skeleton in his cupboard had been discovered and released, to the amusement and disgust of the world. No one knew better than Joseph Gramson how intense is the prejudice in every class against the money-lender, and particularly the successful one. It is the only disreputable business that success does not palliate and gild.

The J.P. spent an hour in turning over all sorts of schemes for averting the blow. Never a clever man, always dependent upon the brains of others, he now felt crushed and helpless, and waited impatiently for the time when he could meet Bateson and hear what plans he had matured for repelling the attack of their common enemy.

The Argus was scarcely correct in describing Bateson as the tool of his employer Gramson. It was quite true that it was Bateson's untiring industry, combined with his matchless rascality, that had enabled the J.P. to enjoy the fruits of the nefarious business without suffering any of the obloquy attaching to it. Bateson was a very willing tool, yet, strangely enough, up to the present he had played quite fairly. In a cautious way Gramson trusted the man; to-day he looked to him as his saviour.

It seemed to him weeks before Mr. Gramson got up to town, and slipped furtively by means of his own key into the private room of a little office in a Queen Victoria-street Mansion, where Bateson & Co. ran another "show" under an alias.

Bateson, smart, well-dressed, and looking anything but a low-class usurer, rose from a cosy chair to greet the "Co." of his firm. The two conspirators wasted no time in generalities, but came to the point at once.

"Nothing could be better," said Bateson, emphatically. "They've given themselves away gloriously. If they'd confined themselves to proving your connection with the show they might have scored; but in mixing you up with Jim Gramson and that Lord Carton business they've done for themselves."

"Yes," replied the Co., dubiously. "No doubt we can easily prove them wrong over that, but what about my connection with you? I can't get over the idea that they know a bit more than we think, or they wouldn't be such fools as to commit themselves."

Mr. Bateson smiled the superior smile of the man who has to deal with a childish objection.

"Listen. I've thought this business out well, and have got it all cut and dried. We've got the Argus lot on toast, and it's worth £5,000 to you. Just make a note of these points." Mr. Bateson proceeded to tick them off on his fingers as he catalogued them:—

"First score: They leave off shying at me to have a cut at you. They make two distinct charges against you. One is true, the other only partially. So long as they attacked me we could do nothing, as I couldn't go into the box. They have rendered it unnecessary for me to do so. Score number two: You are friendly with Jim Gramson now. He will swear that he was the person who got into trouble over the Carton case, and as the prosecution couldn't connect you with Jim Gramson fifteen years ago, I don't think these newspaper chaps will succeed where the Government failed. Score number three consists in your irreproachable character and your position in the parish, the church, and, I may say, on the county Bench."

Mr. Bateson waited for some sign of approval from his employer, but that worthy was not quite satisfied.

"There's one weak point in our case that you seem to have overlooked," said he. "I feel certain that somehow they have got hold of the fact that I paid you that cheque for £5,000 we started business with. I was a great fool to have given you my own cheque, and I have never felt comfortable over it. Probably some clerk in the bank has been got at."

Bateson looked at his employer reproachfully.

"I'm sorry you have such a poor opinion of my judgment," he said. "Is it likely that I could forget such a point? I have fully prepared to meet it. You must go into the box ready to admit, if necessary, that you have paid me £5,000."

Gramson could hardly believe his ears.

"Oh, yes," Bateson continued. "There's nothing like frankness; it always go down with Judge and Jury. The man who admits one point against himself gets credit for speaking gospel truth the next time he lies. That £5,000 was paid to me as your broker for the purchase of certain shares. See?"

Mr. Gramson did begin to see daylight.

"Yes, but what about the shares?"

"I've got them all right. I've a lot of old scrip in the Martinquez Gold Mine. It's wound up now, so there's no risk. I can arrange the transfers. Leave that to me. Meanwhile, you go and instruct Skinner to proceed."

Had it not been for Mr. Gramson's invariable rule never to be seen in public with his co-conspirator, he would have expressed the satisfaction he felt by standing him the best dinner money could buy. But self-preservation being the first law of Mr. Gramson's nature, he repressed his generous instincts, and dined with his solicitor instead.

Next day Skinner & Co. served the proprietors of the Argus with a writ claiming £10,000 damages for libel, and at the same time took the necessary steps to restrain the threatened publication of further particulars.

The revelations of the Argus caused a tremendous sensation in Hawkstone and its environs. The acquaintances of the man attacked at once resolved themselves into two parties. One set were satisfied that the Argus was right, since they had all along suspected Gramson of having a shady record. The other faction, while having no doubt as to the truth of the charges, were strong in their denunciations of the scurrilous rag which dared to rake up such private matters. Those who had private skeletons of their own expressed kindly hopes that Mr. Gramson would completely crush out the Argus, which was not fit for handling without the assistance of tongs; and by way of having some sort of justification for their opinions as to the character of the paper they took special pains to see every edition of it so long as further particulars were expected.

Meanwhile, Gramson's solicitors pushed the case on briskly. Skinner & Co. were a smart but shady firm who had nothing to learn in the art of cost-making. Few knew better than their managing clerk how to harry the other side with the hundred and one petty preliminary skirmishes which, under the guise of clearing the ground, enables an unscrupulous and wide-awake solicitor to begin to score before the fight is half begun.

When the case eventually came on for trial, the friends of Mr. Gramson noted with satisfaction that he was to be represented by Mr. Bands, a Q.C. whose reputation for piety was in itself a guarantee that his side was that of truth and justice. Satisfied as Gramson's partisans were on this point, both he and they were more convinced of it after hearing Bands' opening address. How the people with private skeleton cupboards gloated over and furtively applauded the withering denunciation of that loathsome sheet that made wealth for its unscrupulous proprietors by pandering to the lowest tastes of a depraved but, unfortunately, large circle of readers! They had known all along that the Argus was a despicable rag, but until they heard Bands' speech they had never realised how infamous a production it was, or how noble a creature was the ill-used, martyred Gramson who, the picture of unassuming respectability, sat, more sorrowful than angry, by the side of Mr. Skinner.

The first important witness called was one James Gramson. He admitted, with charming frankness, that it was he and not the plaintiff who had been connected with the disreputable money-lending scandal laid to the charge of the injured innocent Joseph, whom he knew only through these articles, despite the striking family likeness that existed between them. Defendant's counsel attempted in a mild way to shake the testimony of this witness of purity and truth, but in vain. It was evident that the Argus people had made a grave error here, and there was nothing left but to abandon this part of the defence.

Mr. Joseph Gramson was the next witness. On this occasion he did not belie his reputation for coolness. A more self-possessed witness never faced a jury. He answered the questions of Counsel with commendable freedom from anything that could be construed into feeling against those who had done him so base a wrong.

"And now, Mr. Gramson," asked Bands, "Is there any truth in the statement that you are in any way connected with this business of Bateson & Co.?"

"Not a word," answered the old gentleman, with a quiet emphasis that carried conviction, and caused the Judge to nod his head approvingly as he took a note of the answer.

At length came the eagerly-waited-for cross-examination. Defendant's counsel put a few unimportant questions before he fired his first telling shot. "Are you prepared to swear," he asked, "that you have never paid any sums of money to Bateson?"

"No, I am not," answered Gramson, and a deep silence fell on the Court.

"Have you ever paid him by cheque a sum of £5,000?"

"I have," answered Gramson, calmly.

"What was that for?"

Gramson proceeded with provoking coolness and deliberation to explain the matter on the lines laid down by his confederate. When he produced the certified transfers for the shares there was not a person in court who did not feel that the case had been won. Counsel took the documents, glanced over them, and passed them to his juniors, who immediately looked very wise as they proceeded to submit the papers to a close scrutiny.

Counsel pressed for a few more particulars about these Stock Exchange transactions and got them. So far there was no question that Gramson had scored heavily. Presently there came a question for which he was evident quite unprepared.

"What was Bateson's name before he was a broker?"

Mr. Gramson looked perplexed. Had he not been an habitually slow and deliberate speaker the pause would have told against him.

"I have never met him either before or since he was a broker."

The next question was not quite unexpected.

"Have you ever drawn or held bills of exchange accepted by Arthur Bates Smith?"

Mr. Gramson again paused. To the onlookers it seemed as though he were trying to recall from amid the multitude of his financial transactions the one referred to. As a matter of fact, he was wondering how the other side had got hold of the important fact that these bills represented the only security he held over the head of Bateson alias Bates Smith for the money he had advanced for the business

While glancing round the Court for inspiration, his eye lighted on Bateson sitting unostentatiously in a back seat. His expressive face was signalling "Say No." Gramson fully realised that he was making a desperate plunge, but there was no help for it. He said "No."

Counsel continued, insinuatingly: "Then, Mr. Gramson, if it should happen that such bills do exist purporting to bear your name, they are forgeries, so far as you are concerned?"

Strong in his knowledge that those bills were safe at home and could never be produced to his confusion, he answered, "Undoubtedly."

Mr. Bateson's face immediately put on an expression of ill-concealed delight.

Mr. Gramson left the box, feeling that he had given much more satisfaction to others than to himself. His replies to the last two or three questions caused him grave uneasiness, not on account of the perjury he had committed, but on other grounds.

Contrary to expectation, counsel for the defendants called no witnesses, but immediately addressed the jury in mitigation of damages, but the effect was such that, without leaving the box, they found a verdict for plaintiff, damages £5,000. His Lordship, evidently anxious to appease any misgivings the jury might have as to the smallness of the amount, assured them that he quite approved their verdict, and peremptorily refused an application for a stay of execution.

Mr. Bateson was not amongst the crowd who crushed round the triumphant Gramson to pester him with their insincere congratulations.

When next Gramson heard from his clever henchman it was by letter. It ran:—

"DEAR G.,—Accept my congratulations on having cleared yourself of the imputation that you were connected in any way with me. Nothing gave me greater pleasure than to hear your denial given on oath. I was equally gratified to learn on the same unimpeachable authority that those bills accepted by James Bates Smith and drawn by you are forgeries. As you are well aware I have never been able to draw sufficient from the business of Bateson & Co. to recoup myself for my really hard work. Thanks to you I shall now be able to enjoy the fruits of my labours, since I am now relieved of a partner who absorbed the lion's share. I do not ask you for any portion of the £5,000 I enabled you to earn. I will consider the cash in hand to the credit of Bateson & Co. a sufficient equivalent. As those bills can now be only a source of annoyance and possible danger to you I would suggest that you destroy them or forward them to—Yours truly, JAMES BATESON.

It was a big shock, but Gramson felt he had got out of a troublesome business fairly well considering that he had £5,000 to draw from the Argus proprietors. When he got over his first burst of indignation he was bound to admit that Bateson had neatly entrapped him into a repudiation of the only hold he had upon the rascal.

A few days later Messrs. Skinner wrote to the Argus solicitors demanding a cheque for the damages under threat of prompt execution. The reply they received was this:—

Re "Argus."

Dear Sirs,—We have purposely delayed sending on cheque for damages herein for reasons you will probably appreciate when you learn that we are busy making arrangements for prosecuting your client, Mr. Gramson, for forging the certificate attached to the transfer of shares put in as evidence in this action. . . .

The proprietors of the Argus never had occasion to sign that £5,000 cheque. Neither did Mr. Bateson continue the business. His present address is believed to be South America, while a sudden change in the heretofore salubrious air of Hawkstone has necessitated the breaking up of the Gramson establishment.

MUSIC.

THE WITHDRAWAL OF COWEN'S "SIGNA."

THE sudden withdrawal of Mr. Cowen's opera "Signa" from the Teatro Dal Verme, Milan, has been made in certain quarters the occasion for much wrath and froth, which Signor Sonzogno as a wise man will probably ignore. At any rate, it will be tolerably clear, even to those who think this kingdom might profitably be ruled by "Our Special Correspondents" from Continental cities, that the Mediterranean fleet will not be ordered to Civita Vecchia because the manager of the Teatro Dal Verme refuses to give, without pecuniary guarantee, a third representation of "Signa"—three performances, as we are gravely told, being the minimum to mark an "enormous success" in Milan. Signor Sonzogno may also take it for granted that whether "Signa" were withdrawn or whether it ran for a twelvemonth, the operas which he produces and publishes from the pens of Mascagni, Leoncavallo, or anybody else will be treated by every reputable English newspaper exactly on their merits, praise or blame being accorded with absolute impartiality. It would in this country hardly seem necessary to state this self-evident fact at all; but different ideas appear to prevail in Italy, and to point out the truth will therefore not be out of place. We have yet to hear Signor Sonzogno's version of the affair, and a statement is, I learn, expected on his behalf on Wednesday. But even if the assertions of the other side be correct, the incident is merely one which again brings up the question of the manager's right to terminate a "run" whenever he pleases. Signor Sonzogno, it should be recollected, is not only impresario of several Italian opera-houses, but is also a music publisher in a large way of business, an extensive opera copyright-holder, and proprietor of the Secolo, one of the leading newspapers in Italy. Cowen's "Signa" was originally written for Mr. D'Oyly Carte, who has paid certain sums and still has rights in it. Mr. Carte's English opera-house, however, collapsed before the work could be brought out, and Mr. Cowen resolved to take it to Italy. The risks involved in such a course were obvious to any person of experience. Mr. Cowen first placed the opera in rehearsal at Genoa, but himself withdrew it because he was not satisfied with the cast. Then he voluntarily took it to Signor Sonzogno, who courteously agreed to mount it. I say "courteously," because Italians music-lovers have no faith in English opera, so that the acceptance of such a work might imply a loss. At any rate, it must have been a mere speculation, if only because no new opera by a Briton has been produced in Italy within our time. Preparations were, however, begun for its production, but a new Italian libretto was deemed advisable, for which, of course, Mr. Cowen had to pay. The absurdity was then recognised of attempting to produce such a work when the Milanese season was over, and accordingly it was postponed till the early winter. It was duly produced, in accordance with Signor Sonzogno's promise, on the 12th inst., and was well received by the critics, including the critic of Signor Sonzogno's own paper, the Secolo. It is, however, admitted that the audience on the second performance was a small one, and Signor Sonzogno has absurdly enough been blamed by one writer for not "papering" the house. The only reason for "papering" a house on the second night of an operatic run must be to deceive the public, and to complain because Signor Sonzogno declined to do so seems to be the sublimity of impudence. The manager then refused to give the third performance without a cash guarantee of £240 (it looks a more imposing sum in francs), and as this was, of course, not agreed to by the composer, it is difficult to understand how the manager is to be blamed. But, it is declared, Signor Sonzogno was angry at a certain not absolutely laudatory criticism of Leoncavallo's "I Medici," which had been sent by a correspondent (not its regular critic) to one of the London papers, and it is alleged the manager believed Mr. Cowen had instigated the criticism in order to boom "Signa." If Signor Sonzogno ever harboured so absurd and unworthy a thought, he would do well to dismiss it at once from his mind. English journalists are not the sort of people to allow considerations of this character to influence them, and whatever opinions were expressed in the article in question were, he may take it for granted, written in all good faith. This, however, is quite a side issue, and, so far as I can perceive, the only point in question is the right of a manager to run his own theatre in his own way. A premature withdrawal of a piece always occasions a great deal of very natural soreness on the part of the author. Last summer "I Rantzau" was a case in point. The fact that Mascagni's opera was not repeated after its first production at Covent Garden caused much annoyance among the Italians, but nobody ventured to question Sir A. Harris's right, short of an absolute contract to "run" the piece, to take it off the boards whenever he deemed best. There is another point, too, in regard to "Signa." It is admitted that even now the opera is capable of improvement, for the second act is not strong and the work is still too long. It was recently cut down from four acts to three, and Sir A. Harris has proposed to Mr. Cowen, who has now returned to England, some pretty extensive alterations which will probably further reduce the work to two acts. In this form it will be produced by the Covent Garden manager next summer, when it will, of course, have its full chance.

The new Queen's Hall will be inaugurated with a conversazione or "private view" on Saturday evening. The hall is somewhat smaller than was expected, as a difficulty occurred about light and air questions. It will now hold 3,000 people, besides a band and chorus of 400, and although the building would have been far more useful for cheap oratorio and orchestral performances if it had accommodated 1,000 more people and 100 more executants, it will, nevertheless, be a handsome addition to the concert rooms of London. A good deal of space seems to have been devoted to the vestibules, corridors, and lobbies, which, it is said, will themselves hold 3,000 persons, and there is also a smaller or recital hall accommodating 500, a restaurant, and so forth. In the new hall it is proposed to make the grand tier the best seats, as at the Albert Hall, and, indeed, the modern idea of charging the highest prices for places near the orchestra is a quite preposterous one. There are nearly 600 arm-chairs in the grand tier of the Queen's Hall, and in the centre is the Royal box, with its adjacent ante and smoking rooms. As Mr. Newman wisely proposes to let this magnificent new building for £28 per night, or a good deal less than St. James's Hall, I have little doubt that the Directors of the Regent-street Hall will more diligently seek to discover a method of warming and ventilating it without letting in those terrible draughts. In short, competition in concert rooms is likely to be as excellent a thing for the public, as competition in opera.

I am asked to mention a fact which has already appeared in several of the papers, that Mr. Isidore de

To Overcome Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Nerve Debility. Pepper's Tonic. Kept everywhere.

Lara's "Amy Robsart" will be given at Monte Carlo during the coming season. The composer has the best reason to hope that Madame Sembrich will sing the part of the heroine.

M. Sevadjian, who gave a recital at Prince's Hall last week, is an Armenian pianist, who has studied at Vienna and Venice and who made a tentative appearance at Steinway Hall last season. He has a pretty touch, but is rather a mild player, and he is hardly likely to prove another Paderewski. M. Siloti, who played at the Crystal Palace on Saturday, is a performer of altogether another grade. A pupil of Nicholas Rubinstein and Liszt, he is a very brilliant executant, particularly in the music of Liszt and in Russian works, several unfamiliar examples of which he proposes to produce at his recitals. Miss Gérardy, an elder sister of the young violoncellist, has also just come out as a pianist.

Mrs. Arthur Hervey, the clever wife of the musical critic, is the librettist of the two new operettas which Signor Tosti has just written. They will be produced by the younger members of the Royal Family at Osborne at Christmas.

The veteran Mr. Kuhe is to have a testimonial on his seventieth birthday, which happens on December 10. As his life has for so many years been bound up with Brighton, where between 1870 and 1880 he directed the Musical Festivals, and where also he was a busy teacher, it is natural that recognition of his services should mostly come from that quarter. But his London friends will also join in the affair, which will be a well-deserved compliment to an old public servant.

Oxford will not try another Greek play for a twelvemonth to come, and the University Dramatic Society are now hard at work rehearsing Shakespeare's "Tempest," which they propose to give at the end of January. It was at first proposed to use Sir A. Sullivan's "Tempest" music, but as the band employed must be a limited one, Mr. F. C. Woods, organist of Exeter, has specially written incidental music for a small orchestra—that is to say, strings, single wind, and drums. The music comprises a dance of reapers and a dance at the banquet in the third act, an overture in strict form, the storm music, and the usual entr'actes. The vocal music will, however, be the traditional settings of Arne, Linley, and Purcell.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—"China and her Neighbours" (1) is a most interesting, opportune, instructive, and (may I add?) amusing book. Most Englishmen on reading the work would be perplexed to discover the joke, but to the French and Russians, and to Europe and Asia generally, it will be palpable and irresistible. For again and again it protests with a righteous and wrathful vehemence against the wrong and robbery of Russian and French annexations in the East. Why? Because England is there. But what brought England there? Doubtless deputations from India, Burmah, &c., adjuring that Christian nation, as St. Paul was adjured of old, to "Come over and help us!" England, with this great and exceeding bitter cry of the heathen ringing in her ears, went to the East solely on a civilising and Christianising mission, and with the Bible in her hand open at the Sermon on the Mount, she has annexed province after province in the unselfish, exclusive, and eternal interests of their benighted inhabitants. Ah, how different the end and aim of that eldest son of the Western Church, France; how different the motive of the Pope of the Eastern Church, the Czar! Has England, for instance, ever avowed the monstrous motive for any Eastern annexation that the Intransigeant alleged but yesterday with a cynicism which horrifies Mr. Gundry: "We are going to Siam under pretext of avenging an insult to our flag, but really with the idea of a new conquest." Has England, I ask, ever in her whole history made such an admission? It is the barest justice to her to say she never has. And this is where the joke comes in for Russia, France, India, and Burmah. It is the eternal and exemplary disinterestedness of England in all her annexations which exposes her to the profane scorn of the Publican peoples of Europe and Asia. Do you remember an apt illustration of Swift's:—

> A selfish man always complains most of selfishness in others; just as the fat man in a crowd complains most of the crush to which he contributes most.

This, I regret to say, is the interpretation France and Russia and the East put upon such vehement protestations as Mr. Gundry's against England being jostled by the elbow of any other Power at any angle of her vast Indian Empire. Can you not imagine a Voltairean Frenchman, upon reading Mr. Gundry's plaintive appeal, "India asks nothing but to be let alone," quoting the querulous millionaire Fermier-Général who, when all France in 1778 was crying out for the amelioration of the lot of the peasant, exclaimed, "Mais pourquoi donc changer? Nous sommes si bien." By the way, this whole passage of Mr. Gundry's is worth quoting for its ingenious analogy between the strained conditions of the East and of the West at this moment:—

> In sum, therefore, we find a remarkable similarity between the political conditions in Asia and Europe. India and China, which ask nothing but to be let alone, are confronted by Russia and France, much as Germany and Austria are confronted in Europe, and their common interests must tend to ally them in an attitude of mutual defence which would probably command in an emergency the sympathy of Japan. For it is evident that, by exercising alternative or simultaneous pressure in the North-west and South-east, the two great Western Powers might create a degree of military tension and political unrest as exhausting as, and even more intolerable than, that existing in Europe. Even neutral Belgium has an Eastern representative in Korea; and the position of England in Europe finds a not inapt parallel in the considerable power of Japan.

An admirable selection from Wordsworth, "For the Young" (2), sumptuously got up, can now be had at the modest price of 1s. 6d. But surely no child of an age to care for these poems needs such grandmotherly notes as "Cleaving—i.e., sticking closely," "Lusty—i.e., possessing vigour," "Comely—i.e., handsome,' "Woeful—i.e., full of woe." By the way, talking of poetry, has it ever occurred to you to wonder why Wales, being purely Celtic, and, therefore, presumptively "of imagination all compact," has never produced a modern poet, or, indeed, made any contribution of distinction to English literature? More perplexing still, perhaps, is the blank barrenness of this music-mad Principality of composers of any note. I fear "Glimpses of Welsh Life and Character" (3) will not raise the intellectual character of the Principality, since anything more inane than its instances of Welsh wit can hardly be imagined. Here is an average specimen:—

> A well-known Welsh gentleman once caught on old woman stealing potatoes. "Why, Mary, is it you?—and stealing potatoes," he said.
>
> "Dear de helpody well," replied Mary. "An' dost thee call it stealin' to take a couple of 'tatoes?"

I can only hope that the dedication of the book by permission to the Duchess of York and the solemn certificate of the Heralds' College in its preface to the genuineness of the copy of the "Red Dragon" upon its cover may do something to sell the work. Inexpressible was the relief in turning from it to Mr. Anstey's "The Man from Blankley's," &c. (4), reprinted from Punch. Mr. Anstey is incomparably the raciest humorist left to us. —Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, very sincerely yours,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

(1) "China and her Neighbours." France in Indo-China, Russia and China, India and Thibet. By E. S. Gundry. With Maps. (London: Chapman & Hall.)
(2) "Wordsworth for the Young." With Introduction and Notes by J. C. Wright. (London: Jarrold & Sons.)
(3) "Glimpses of Welsh Life and Character." By Marie Trevelyan. (London: John Hogg.)
(4) "The Man from Blankley's," and other Sketches. (Reprinted from Punch.) With Twenty-five Illustrations by Bernard Partridge. (London; Longmans, Green, & Co.)

SANITARY SURVEYS.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—It was pleasant to see a smart wedding again, after so long a time, and Miss Borthwick's certainly deserved that fashionable adjective. The bridesmaids were perfectly charming in thick ivory-white bengaline trimmed with beaver and pale blue velvet. The latter was arranged in rosettes up each seam, and also composed the folded yokes. The hats were in beaver-coloured felt with feathers in blue and beaver colour. Was it not all pretty? And an added touch of charm was found in the bouquets of pink carnations, with long trails of the flowers and leaves. I do not think I have ever seen more successful bridemaidenly dresses. The solo played by M. Johannes Wolff was simply enchanting. He can make his violin do anything; speak, sing, pray, woo deliciously, and even laugh in falling cadences like a mountain rivulet.

We went to the private view at the Grafton Galleries on Friday, and found a very smart assemblage, including a number of pretty women, and not a few men of unusual height. One of the best-dressed of the former was Mrs. A. Stuart-Wortley, in a long coat of green brocade, trimmed with sable, and falling in straight folds from the shoulders. Mrs. Pocklington looked handsome in a gown of rough green cloth, and a most covetable long sealskin cape. With her was Lord Granby's little daughter, somewhat puzzled by a few eccentricities among the pictures. Mrs. Robert Webster wore one of the most successful toilets, the principal item consisting of a very long black satin pelisse, trimmed with bands of sea-blue velvet, covered with fine embroidery. Another charming costume was carried out in green velvet. Every one was asking who the lady was who wore this, but no one seemed ready with an answer. She carried a large bunch of violets. A rather eccentric cape was furnished with a collar trimmed with extremely stiff white bands, dotted with black. A tall girl wore a three-quarter cloak of black moire, made with full skirts and large revers in front. Brown cloth and red velvet, with bands of fur, were the ingredients of a good costume, the velvet forming the bodice, while the skirt and sleeves were in the cloth.

We had tea in the banqueting-hall, a very fine room, decorated most tastefully. Benoist is sole caterer for the Galleries, which are admirably adapted for entertaining. A ball would be delightful here, and couples sitting out could find no more ideal spot for a flirtation than the long dim room at the further end of the suite. On Friday it was in artistic obscurity. We delighted in the very last window, representing a blue river winding among green fields, and in the space of one small window giving the impression of hay-fields, pastures, and open air. It is copied from a Japanese kakemono. I should like to live with that window.

You would enjoy the etchings, would probably shudder at the "Coins de Paris," and would want to bring away with you some of the lovely cups and saucers and other ornaments.

I am sending you Redmayne's autumn and winter catalogue. You will find it immensely useful, as you live in the country so far from shops and shop-windows. The illustrations show all the latest styles of winter coats, morning and evening dresses, dinner and tea gowns, children's dresses and underwear, as well as millinery of every sort, blouses for morning and evening, hosiery and gloves. This is comprehensive, you will say, and you will certainly be right. It is sent post free on application. The beautiful feature of it is that the price is given under each illustration, and you will find that some of the things are surprisingly inexpensive, as well as smart. One of their novelties is remarkably convenient and useful, especially for travelling. It is called the "Braemar" or "Glencoe" travelling overall. The skirt can be worn either with or without the ordinary dress skirt, and can be slipped on in a moment, without passing over the head, as it fastens down one side by means of four large buttons. It is so well cut that it sits to perfection, whether another skirt be under it or not. The little coat can be worn either open or buttoned across to the left, like the skirt. The "Braemar" is made of cloth trimmed with braid, and the "Glencoe" is in Harris tweeds and Scotch homespuns, finished with rows of stitching. The "Shamrock" is one of their smartest gowns, and is made in serge, black, navy, olive green, brown, and so on. The double skirt is fastened on to the waistband, and can be removed in a moment if not needed. The coat is double-breasted, and is really only a bodice, though with the double skirt it has all the effect of a full-length fashionable coat. Of their dresses I do not know which you will prefer — the "Carnation," with its pretty drapery; the "Jessamine," with a gathered bodice and short simulated paniers; the "Diamond," in chiné moire antique, with bodice of pink velvet and Mechlin lace; the "Hyacinth," in fancy brocade, with full velvet basque and a full berthe of Venetian point; or the "Mother-o'-Pearl," an iridescent moire antique, trimmed with shot velvet, tinsels of palest tone, and jet. This is a very handsome dress. There is even an illustration of a bridal gown, with prices according to the quality of material and character of the trimmings.

Several sketches show suitable dresses for brides' maids. These also are named after flowers. There is the "Buttercup," in crépon and guipure, and the "Marguerite," in veiling and guipure. Tea-gowns have several pages devoted to them, and tea-jackets meet with the attention that these pleasant little garments deserve. The "Rhododendron" is, to my thinking, the very prettiest, being made of brocade, with a finely pleated front of satin and a jabot of lace. Comfortable winter petticoats are shown on page 57, in cloth frilled with silk, in satin lined with veiling or flannel, and in brocade with a deep lace flounce. There is a list of trousseaux, prices from fifteen to a hundred guineas, which ought to be extremely useful to a prospective bride, whether her exchequer be of a satisfactory sort or otherwise. The children's dresses will give you a very good idea of what sort of costumes are now worn by the youngsters. These, again, are named after flowers. The "Lobelia" is a perfectly sweet little paletot in cloth or serge, with revers and bengaline shoulder cape, edged with beaver, and full sleeves ending in pointed cuffs, hemmed with the fur. The skirt is all pleated.

A man friend of Charlie's has been endeavouring to impress on me how well some women look to what others do in evening dress, and has been raving about a "lovely creature" he met an evening or two ago. He says, "She had on a 'yellow suit'—a sort of shiny stuff—kind of bed-furniture arrangement — with something 'transparent above,' a mosquito-curtain affair.'" Is not this a refreshingly novel style of criticism?

* I hope your little sisters wear gaiters in the cold weather. I often pity children whom I see in the streets, with stockings that are far from thick, and no other protection for the unclothed little legs. I frequently see little girls out in the bitter weather with shoes instead of boots. This seems to me to be absolute cruelty.

Some people take more care of their dogs than others do of their children. Lina has just been telling me that she saw at the dog show at the Crystal Palace three little Maltese terriers wearing warm little cosies for their paws, made, she thinks, of wool, either crocheted or knitted. One doggie had a pink set, and the two others had selected pale blue. I hope you like this idea. I asked Lina if the doggies seemed comfortable in their quadruple chaussure, and she declares that they appeared to be quite happy. She says their owner took them out for a short promenade, all of them on a string together, and that the twelve little feet pattering along in these muffetees looked the funniest thing imaginable. Usually, dogs are very much embarrassed when anything novel is added to their attire. They feel as shy and ashamed of themselves as men do when they display anything unique or unaccustomed in their garb. I think men are very amusing, don't you? They cannot carry off anything fresh or out of the common with the same boldness as we can.

HUNTING SEASON, 1893-4.—Busvine's new designs and materials for this year include several special novelties in Riding Habits, Coats for Walking and Driving, Walking Jackets, Gowns, &c. Can be seen at 4, Brook-street, or will be sent by return of post.—JOHN BUSVINE, by special appointments to the Princess of Wales, the Empress of Germany, the Empress of Austria, &c., &c.

MESSRS. REDFERN beg to announce that the models of Gowns, Coats, Mantles, &c., designed and prepared for winter wear, are now ready, and display the combined ideas of the latest London and Paris Houses.—27, New Bond-street, W.

Charlie has just told me that at last year's Dog Show at the Crystal Palace there was a pampered quadruped exhibited who had taken several prizes, and whose dinner, consisting of chickens' livers, was brought to him every day from town by a footman. How heartily some poor children would envy that little dog, would they not?

We turned into Redfern's the other day, attracted by the sight of a perfectly lovely hat in the window, in white felt, with grey and white feathers, a twist of white velvet, and a glorious bow of mirror velvet in a shade of damask rose. When we got inside we fell in love immediately with a black satin cape made with deep-pointed pieces of velvet let in, braided with black and green, each piece being bordered with skunk. The cape was edged with a narrow band of skunk, and above the fur was a row of the black and green braiding. The cape was lined throughout with green satin. It combined the qualities of comfort and smartness to quite a remarkable degree. Round the shoulders was a deep frill of black velvet, lined with green satin. A sealskin cape with sable tail was one of those things at which one looks with the desire "of the moth for the star; of the day for the morrow." A long cape of fluffy astrakhan with pelerine ends struck us as being most protective this cold weather. A coat of grey beaver cloth was trimmed down the front with Persian lamb. A very light design, in which straight upright lines curved at the top played a prominent part, was carried out in black braid upon the fronts and across the shoulders at the back. Straps of pleated braid fastened across the front. The puffed sleeves were gathered into cuffs of Persian lamb.

A couple of dolls were dressed elaborately in evening costumes of brocade, satin, lace, pearls, &c.; and we were amused at being told by one of the assistants that whenever a child comes into Redfern's with her mother she immediately wants one of these dolls. They are costly little articles, I believe, for not only are the dresses exquisitely fitted to the little models, but they are of very fine materials, and the trimmings are of the best. Some of the mothers even give a hint that they should like very much that one of these dolls should be presented to the admiring child. Mothers certainly are rather unreasonable occasionally. They seem to think the world was made for their little ones. However, this is better than thinking, as some women do, that the world was made for themselves alone. You would have gloried in a long mantle in red and black fancy cloth, with large black plush sleeves and a cape bordered with bear of the darkest brown. The plush yoke was edged with bear. In front the plush cape extends in pointed ends made with sufficient fulness to give the edges a wavy outline. This was a very becoming and handsome garment. Another was in brown ondine silk with a velvet cape edged with sable gill bordered with wolverine. The ends were in front gathered into brown-gold beads. The collar was square, and made of wolverine. A dress of black vicuna had a full skirt with lilac velvet and bands of mink fur being arranged very becomingly on the bodice which had a smart crossover front of the cloth. The sleeves were in the vicuna with two frills of velvet at the shoulder, each jetted. The yoke and collar, both of lilac velvet, were covered with an openwork of black jet. You cannot imagine what a pretty and becoming dress this was.

The dates of the two Prince's Cinderellas are now fixed for Thursdays, December 14 and January 11. These dances, as you know, are in aid of the Chelsea Hospital for Women.

I see that Mr. Harrison Watson is giving two private subscription dances again this year in aid of the fund which provides dinners for the poor of an East End parish. This is now the sixth season of these pleasant dances. They are to take place at Chelsea Town hall on Mondays, November 27 and January 8. For the same "gentle cause" there is also to be a café chantant under the same management on the afternoon of Monday, December 11, when a most attractive programme will be gone through, so many clever people having volunteered their services, including Miss McIntosh, the Savoy prima donna; Miss Phyllis Broughton; Mrs. Vincent Glass's Minuet Party; Madame Hope-Glenn; Miss Jessie Bond; Miss Cissie Loftus; and "Gus Elen," the coster singer. It is a good idea to include the cost of tea in the price of the tickets. A bevy of young ladies will act as waitresses. They are to wear short black skirts, écru muslin aprons, pale pink or blue crêpe blouses, and Alsatian head-dresses. There is to be no teasing to buy, the affair being a regular variety show. There are to be special attractions for children, including Punch and Judy.

Ursula writes from Edinburgh:—

I am inclined to think that Lord Roberts will find British ovations and British hospitality, with the accompanying speeches, even more trying and exhausting than Afghan wars, and "kind only to be cruel" is the general motto at present so far as he is concerned. In company with other Northern cities, Edinburgh has been trying this week to do honour to her latest distinguished guest, and his short stay is crammed with engagements. To-day, for instance, the much-enduring officer, at eleven o'clock, is to receive the degree of LL.D. at the University; at three o'clock he is to be presented with the Freedom of the City; at 3.45 he is to witness a musical ride by the Lothians and Berwickshire Yeomanry; at five o'clock he presents prizes to two Volunteer regiments; and at seven o'clock he is to be the guest of the Royal Scottish Geographical Society at a dinner in the Waterloo Rooms. One interesting feature of ceremony number two is a guard of honour composed of a hundred and twenty veterans who have served under Lord Roberts on different occasions. Last night the winter session of the aforesaid R.S.G.S. was opened by the gallant General with an address on "India, a Retrospect," and the Synod Hall was filled with a very enthusiastic audience. A large bouquet was presented to Lady Roberts, who was in black, with a lovely diamond ornament in her hair, and near her sat a very interesting Edinburgh bride, Mrs. Wauchope, the wife of Mr. Gladstone's political opponent in Midlothian.

Miss M. L. Allen has just published another little shilling "Book on Cookery," and this time she has confined it to soups, broths, and purées. It is a wonderful shillingsworth, and, next to her "Book on Sweets and Savouries," it is, I think, the most useful one she has written. In it she gives about fifty different recipes, all of a very inexpensive nature. The most extravagant soup, I find, costs at the rate of 2s. 10d. a quart, while excellent clear soup can be made for 6d., 1s., and 1s. 6d. a quart. For those who have an unlimited supply of vegetables, one French recipe seems especially useful; so, as I know you are in the land of vegetables, I give you the recipe:—

One quart of water in which half a pint of lentils and half a pint of haricot beans have been boiled, ½ lb. of fresh butter, 4 carrots, 1 large white cabbage, 1 lettuce, 2 turnips, 2 heads of celery, 2 sprigs of parsley, 2 large onions, salt and pepper.

Miss Allen also gives some very valuable hints on making stock and economical gravies, and she is most emphatic about the formation of the stock-pot, and explains in the preface of her little book how much waste would be avoided if, regularly every morning, all scraps, pieces of bone, and trimmings of cutlets, &c. (that are usually called "waste"), were collected and simmered down for a few hours ready for the next day's use. Of course, many cooks protest against the use of bones and such "small fry" for the manufacture of clear soup, and declare that it is impossible to clear the stock without pounds of fresh meat. They should remember, however, that a great many bones contain a large quantity of marrow, which tends to thicken the stock, and this ought to be removed before the bones are introduced to the stock-pot.

I am giving you a plum-pudding and a mincemeat

RIDING HABITS.—A speciality in Riding Habits. Has been declared the best, without exception, by all ladies who have seen it. Quite new. Patented. Made only by G. S. WOLMERSHAUSEN & CO., LTD., 16, Gt. Marlborough-street, Regent-street, London, W.

The most beautiful of Winter Garments are those of Nature's own production—FURS. For an elegant fit, genuine and best furs, go to NICHOLAY'S, Manufacturing Furriers, 170, Oxford-street, London. Seal Jackets re-made to fashionable shapes. Moderate prices.

recipe in good time this year. They have both been strongly recommended to me; but later on I shall give you my recipe for plum-pudding. For plum-pudding shred suet is more economical and much lighter than the old-fashioned plan of chopping, while there is no possibility of the disagreeable lumps one so often meets with in any pudding of which suet forms an ingredient:—

One pound of bread-crumbs, ½ lb. of flour, ¾ lb. of shred beef suet, 1 lb. stoned raisins, ½ lb. cleaned currants, ¾ lb. picked sultanas, ½ lb. mixed candied peel (shred fine), ½ lb. Demerara sugar, ¼ lb. blanched and pounded almonds, a teaspoonful of mixed spice, the grated peel of two lemons, six eggs, a gill of Liquid Sunshine rum, a small teacupful of milk, and a saltspoonful of salt. Mix the whole of these ingredients thoroughly together, and put them into a large, well-buttered basin, tie a pudding-cloth tightly over, place it in a saucepan with water to reach half-way up the basin, and keep it boiling constantly for ten or twelve hours. When it is turned on to a dish pour a little brandy over, and ignite it at the moment of serving.

Serve the following sauce in a separate boat:—Beat 2 oz. of fresh butter with 5 oz. of pounded sugar together in a basin until white; add 1 small egg, still beating, then put it into a bain-marie with half a gill of Liquid Sunshine and half a gill of boiling water, and stir it in a stewpan of boiling water until it is quite creamy.

We find that six hours' boiling when made, and four hours more on the day when it is served, are sufficient. The pudding should be hung up in the larder in the interval.

This mincemeat is particularly good, and will keep for any length of time:—

Three pounds of stoned raisins, 2 lb. of mixed candied peel, 1 lb. of sultanas, 1 lb. of currants, and 4 lb. of apples pared and cored. These ingredients must be passed through the mincing-machine separately, then passed again, mixing the apple with the other ingredients as you proceed, which will more effectually amalgamate them than any other way. Put all together into an earthen pan and add 2 lb. of shred beef suet, 1 lb. of sultanas, 1 lb. of currants, 1 lb. of sugar, 1 oz. of mixed spice, the grated peel and the juice of three lemons. Mix thoroughly together, adding one pint of Liquid Sunshine and half-a-pint of sherry. Put it into jars, tie down with bladders, and keep them in a cool place.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

CIGARES DE JOY cure ASTHMA.

JOY'S CIGARETTES afford immediate relief in cases of ASTHMA, WHEEZING, WINTER COUGH, and HAY FEVER, and, with a little perseverance, effect a permanent cure. Universally recommended by the most eminent Physicians and Medical Authors. Agreeable to use, certain in their effects, and harmless in their action, they may be safely smoked by ladies and children. All Chemists and Stores; Box of 35, 2s. 6d., or post free from WILCOX & CO., 239, Oxford-street, London, W.

MOURNING FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR.

Messrs. JAY'S

Large and well-assorted STOCK includes a choice and varied selection of COSTUMES, MANTLES, and MILLINERY, suitable for any degree of Mourning, and ready for IMMEDIATE WEAR. Orders to special instructions are executed in a few hours, and Ladies are Waited Upon in any part of the country without any extra charge whatever.

JAY'S,
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY.
Show Rooms—112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supply the Public Direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving Purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Fine Diamond Half-hoop Rings, from £15 to £200.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £8.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
THE
GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE LTD.
(A. B. Savory & Sons), late of 11 and 12, Cornhill, E.C., is incorporated with this Company, and the business is transferred to the above address.

Fine Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Ring, £18 10s.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

The Largest and Choicest Stock in the World of Novelties specially prepared for WEDDING & COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTS.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Border Ring, £23.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Bracelet, £35.

REGISTERED DESIGN
Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Diamond Cluster Ring, £25.

REDMAYNE & Co., Ltd., NEW BOND ST., and CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.
High-Class Goods at Popular Prices.

SPECIALTY: Black Cashmere Hose, Embroidered Fronts, 1/11, 2/6, 3/3 per pair.
Black Lisle Thread Hose (the new sanitary dye) with Embroidered Fronts, 1/11, 2/6, 3/6 per pair.
Plain Black Spun Silk Hose, 2/11 per pair.
Pure Silk Open-work Hose, in the newest designs, 10/6, 12/6, 14/6 per pair.

Redmayne's New Illustrated Catalogue and Fashion Book (92 pages), specially prepared to assist Ladies in "Shopping at Home," is now ready, and will be sent, post free, on application.

ALICE HILL.
SMART EVENING TOILETTES from 5 guineas.
TWEED GOWNS from 3½ guineas.
Stylish Parisian Millinery, Trousseaux, and Corsets.
22a, LOWER PHILLIMORE PLACE, KENSINGTON.

MISS WESTROPP-DAWSON,
Court Milliner,
43, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON (over the Kettledrum Tea-rooms).
FRENCH and ENGLISH MILLINERY, also MANTLES, JACKETS, and TRAVELLING GARMENTS, at extremely reasonable prices.
Things sent on Approval on receipt of Tradesmen's Reference.

THE CRITERION RESTAURANT, PICCADILLY CIRCUS.
DINNERS AND SUPPERS A LA CARTE IN THE CELEBRATED EAST ROOM, AND AN EXCELLENT 4s. SUPPER is now served from 10.30 to 12.30 in the West Room, BOTH ACCOMPANIED BY INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL.

Prevents the hair falling off or becoming dry. It is the best preserver and beautifier of the hair of children and adults; prevents it falling off or turning grey, eradicates scurf and dandruff, and is also the best brilliantine for ladies' and everybody's use, and as a little goes a very long way it really is most economical for general use; is also sold in a golden colour for fair-haired ladies and children; it contains no lead or mineral ingredients, and being most beautifully perfumed it is a perfect toilet luxury for all who desire silky and luxuriant hair.

Sold by Chemists, BOTTLES, 3/6, 7/-, 10/6.

Equal to 4 small.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO.

A PURE, FRAGRANT, AND NON-GRITTY TOOTH POWDER.

An antiseptic preservative, and aromatic dentifrice, which whitens the teeth, prevents and arrests decay, and sweetens the breath; it contains no mineral acids, no gritty matter or injurious astringents, keeps the mouth, gums, and teeth free from the unhealthy action of germs in organic matter between the teeth, and is the most wholesome tooth powder for smokers; it has a most exquisite perfume, and is a perfect luxury for all who value the appearance of their own and their children's teeth.

Ask anywhere for ROWLAND'S ODONTO, 2s. 9d. box.

HOWARD & SONS

FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS.] 25, 26, 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W. [SPECIMENS AT WAREROOMS.

EASY CHAIRS EASY CHAIRS EASY CHAIRS A SPECIALTY.

WOOD TAPESTRY.

WALL DECORATIONS.

IMPERVIOUS TO DUST.

PARQUET FLOORING PARQUET FLOORING PARQUET FLOORING A SPECIALTY.

25, 26, & 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.

THE NEW PATENT

TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE.

NO. 20,778.

For Ladies and Children.

These goods are spliced at the instep, where, in the case of lace-up boots and shoes, stockings first show signs of wear. In the heels and feet there is also a splicing thread more than is found in ordinary goods. Thereby the wearing power is doubled without the slightest clumsiness or discomfort. The improvement is particularly advantageous in the thinnest summer makes of stocking, where the extreme fineness of the yarn makes the ordinary goods very apt to wear out almost immediately.

Made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

See Reg. Trade Mark "MUSA DYE" on each pair.

To be obtained of all the best Hosiers and Outfitters in the United Kingdom, and

Wholesale only of the Patentees:

DEBENHAM & FREEBODY,
FLETCHER GATE, NOTTINGHAM.

MORANT & Co.

DECORATORS,

91, NEW BOND STREET (4 doors from Oxford St.)

Makers of Venetian Seats, Henri II. Benches, Louis XIII. Sofas, Louis XV. and XVI. Furniture in great variety, not to be seen elsewhere. Chaises Directoire from old models.

The CLARET of the SEASON.

CHÂTEAU LA MARNIERE

(VINTAGE 1888, BLANQUEFORT.)

21s. Cash, delivered. Sample bottle, 2s. by post.

Order through your Wine Merchant or Grocer.

SOLE PROPRIETORS:

ARNOLD, PERRETT, & CO., LIMITED,
WINE MERCHANTS,
7a, Lower Belgrave Street, S.W. & Country Branches.
PRICE LIST OF CHOICE WINES AND SPIRITS POST FREE.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.
300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

Chatto & Windus's New Novels, &c.

JUSTIN McCARTHY'S New Novel, "RED DIAMONDS," is now ready in 3 vols., at every Library.

MACLAREN COBBAN'S New Novel, "THE BURDEN OF ISABEL," will be ready immediately, in 3 vols., at all Libraries.

Vashti and Esther: A Story of Society To-Day. By the Writer of "Belle's" Letters. 2 vols.

"'Vashti and Esther' will presently, I imagine, cause excitement in circles which were lately stirred by 'Dodo.' Everyone will read the book, which will pretty surely be talked about; for the writer has been daring enough to put into his story some very well-known persons."—Vanity Fair.

Outlaw and Lawmaker. By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED. 3 vols.

"A highly interesting story, very charmingly told."—Scotsman.

To His own Master. By ALAN St. AUBYN, Author of "The Old Maid's Sweetheart," &c. 3 vols.

"The book is brilliantly written."—Scotsman.

A Wasted Crime. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat," &c. 2 vols.

"Takes a high place, not only among the novels of the year, but among the achievements of the admirable writer from whom it comes."—Daily Chronicle.

The Woman of the Iron Bracelets. By FRANK BARRETT, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c. 3 vols.

"A lively story vividly told."—Westminster Gazette.

The Rebel Queen. By WALTER BESANT, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." 3 vols.

"A remarkable work. It is fascinating as a fiction, and instructive and suggestive as a study."—World.

Woman and the Man. By ROBERT BUCHANAN, Author of "God and the Man." 2 vols.

"The picture of a brave, pure woman is winningly delineated."—St. James's Gazette.

The Gun-Runner: A ROMANCE OF ZULULAND. By BERTRAM MITFORD. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"An intensely exciting story. The author writes from a fulness of experience."—Review of Reviews.

The Luck of Gerard Ridgeley: A TALE OF THE ZULU BORDER. By BERTRAM MITFORD. With a Frontispiece by STANLEY L. WOOD. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

The Days of His Vanity: a Passage in the Life of a Young Man. By SYDNEY GRUNDY. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.

The Red Sultan. By J. MACLAREN COBBAN. A new Edition. Crown 8vo., cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"Comparisons are odious, and therefore we will not say that in 'The Red Sultan' Mr. Stevenson's 'Kidnapped' has found its superior, but we will say that it has found a worthy peer."—Daily Chronicle.

The Antipodean. AN ILLUSTRATED ANNUAL. Edited by G. ESSEX EVANS and J. TIGHE RYAN. Containing a Poem by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, with Portrait and Illustrated Interview. With 94 Illustrations. Price 1s.

Burgo's Romance: By T. W. SPEIGHT, Author of "The Mysteries of Heron Dyke," &c. (This Story forms the GENTLEMAN'S ANNUAL for 1893.) Demy 8vo, pict ro cover, 1s.

The Making of a Novelist An Experiment in Autobiography. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat." With a Portrait. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. [Shortly.

Emile Zola. A BIOGRAPHICAL AND CRITICAL STUDY. By E. H. SHERARD. With Portraits, Illustrations, and Facsimile Letter. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s.

"An admirable book . . . A model of what a biography should be."—To-Day.

From Paddington to Penzance: THE RECORD OF A SUMMER TOUR. By CHARLES G. HARPER, Author of "The Brighton Road." With 105 Illustrations by the Author. Demy 8vo, Irish linen, 16s.

"A lively book of home travel, with fascinating and practicable suggestions . . . . . good natured and amusing. But the pictures are the real feature. All are strong and suggestive, and admirably reproduced."—Sketch.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

Cloth, price 2s. 6d., post free.

RHEUMATISM and SCIATICA, their Nature, Causes, and Treatment. By JOHN H. CLARKE, M.D.

London: JAMES EPPS & CO., Ltd., 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

Prince Henri d'Orléans.

Around Tonkin. By PRINCE HENRI D'ORLÉANS. With 28 Illustrations, demy 8vo, 14s. [This day.

William Harbutt Dawson.

Germany and the Germans: Social Life, Culture, Religious Life, &c. By WILLIAM HARBUTT DAWSON. In 2 vols., demy 8vo, 26s. [This day.

Frances Minto Elliot.

Old Court Life in Spain. By FRANCES MINTO ELLIOT, Author of "Old Court Life in France," "Diary of an Idle Woman in Italy," &c. In 2 vols., demy 8vo, 24s. [Ready.

Major Arthur Griffiths.

Secrets of the Prison-House, or GAOL STUDIES and SKETCHES. By Major ARTHUR GRIFFITHS, H.M. Inspector of Prisons, Author of "Chronicles of Newgate, &c. With numerous Illustrations by George D. Rowlandson. In 2 vols., demy 8vo, 30s. [Ready.

R. S. Gundry.

China and her Neighbours: France in Indo-China, Russia and China, India and Thibet, &c. By R. S. GUNDRY. With Maps, demy 8vo, 9s.

Lady Burton.

The Life of Sir Richard Francis BURTON, K.C.M.G., &c. By his Wife, ISABEL BURTON. With numerous Portraits, Coloured and other Illustrations, and Maps. 2 vols., demy 8vo, 42s.

D. Oliver, LL.D., F.L.S., F.R.S.

Illustrations of the Principal NATURAL ORDERS of the VEGETABLE KINGDOM, prepared for the Science and Art Department of Council of Education. By D. OLIVER, LL.D., F.L.S., F.R.S. With 109 Coloured Plates by W. H. Fitch, F.L.S. New Edition, royal 8vo, 16s.

Charles Ryan.

Egyptian Art. By CHARLES RYAN, late Head-Master of the Ventnor School of Art. With 56 Illustrations, crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. [SCIENCE AND ART SERIES.] [This day.

Richard G. Hatton.

Elementary Design: Being a Theoretical and Practical Introduction in the Art of Decoration. By RICHARD G. HATTON, Durham College of Science, Newcastle-on-Tyne. With 110 Illustrations, crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. [SCIENCE AND ART SERIES.] [This day.

New Novels and Stories.

Edward Hartington.

The New Academe: An Educational Romance. By EDWARD HARTINGTON. Crown 8vo, 5s. [This day.

Canon Knox Little.

The Waif from the Waves. A Story of Three Lives, touching this World and another. By CANON KNOX LITTLE. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. [Ready.

R. Ward.

Supplejack: A Romance of Maoriland. By R. WARD. With 8 Illustrations, crown 8vo, 6s. [Ready.

W. Clark Russell and Others.

Miss Parson's Adventure. By W. CLARK RUSSELL; and other Stories by W. E. NORRIS, JULIAN HAWTHORNE, Mrs. L. B. WALFORD, J. M. BARRIE, F. C. PHILIPS, Mrs. ALEXANDER, and WILLIAM WESTALL. With 16 Illustrations, crown 8vo, 5s.

Captain Woodes Rogers.

Life Aboard a British Privateer in the TIME of QUEEN ANNE. Being the Journal of Captain WOODES ROGERS. With Notes and Illustrations by ROBERT C. LESLIE. New and Cheaper Edition, crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

CHAPMAN and HALL, Limited, London.

DR. SMILES'S WORKS.

LIVES OF THE ENGINEERS.

Illustrated by 9 Steel Portraits and 312 Engravings on Wood. 5 vols. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. each.

1. VERMUYDEN, MYDDELTON, PERRY, BRINDLEY.
2. SMEATON and RENNIE.
3. METCALF and TELFORD.
4. BOULTON and WATT.
5. GEORGE and ROBERT STEPHENSON.

[The volumes may be had separately.]

LIFE OF GEORGE STEPHENSON.

With Illustrations. 21s.; 7s. 6d.; or 2s. 6d.

JAMES NASMYTH, ENGINEER.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY. Illustrated. 6s.

A few Copies of the large paper Edition, with Portrait etched by RAJON, 8vo, 16s., may still be obtained.

JASMIN:

BARBER, POET, PHILANTHROPIST. Post 8vo. 6s.

LIFE AND LABOUR;

OR, CHARACTERISTICS OF MEN OF INDUSTRY, TALENT, AND GENIUS. 6s.

MEN OF INVENTION AND INDUSTRY. 6s.

6s. each.

SELF-HELP.	THRIFT.
CHARACTER.	DUTY.

SELF-HELP IN FRENCH, 5s.

INDUSTRIAL BIOGRAPHY. 6s.

LIFE OF THOMAS EDWARD,

SCOTCH NATURALIST. Illustrated by Sir George Reid, P.R.S.A. 6s.

THE HUGUENOTS:

THEIR SETTLEMENTS, CHURCHES, AND INDUSTRIES IN ENGLAND AND IRELAND. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

ROBERT DICK:

BAKER OF THURSO, GEOLOGIST AND BOTANIST.
With Portrait etched by RAJON, and numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 12s.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

NEW NOVELS.

Paul Romer. A Novel.

By C. Y. HARGREAVES. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"A pretty and wholesome story, with much quiet power."—Observer.

"We could welcome more such stories, interesting and thoughtful, and written in the sure and refined English of a thorough gentleman."—Literary World.

"A more wholesome and fascinating tale than 'Paul Romer' has not been told in print for many a day."—Daily Telegraph.

The Curb of Honour.

By M. BETHAM-EDWARDS. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"A delightful account of life in Pyrenean valleys, and some excellent studies of character."—Observer.

"Miss Betham-Edwards's new book contains some excellent descriptions of Pyrenean scenery and of life in one of the remote mountain valleys on the borderland between France and Spain."—Athenæum.

"Of course the story is painful, but it is told with great tact and restraint, and in its final chapters it has undeniable pathos."—Woman.

Margaret Drummond,

MILLIONAIRE. By SOPHIE F. F. VEITCH. 3 vols. Crown 8vo.

"A novel of real excellence."—Spectator.

"A strong and clever story, readable and bright from end to end."—Daily Telegraph.

"A very thorough and earnest piece of work."—Daily Chronicle.

NEW EDITIONS.

A Tangled Web.

By LADY LINDSAY. Price 6s.

One Virtue: a Fiction.

By CHARLES T. C. JAMES. Price 6s.

The Last Touches.

By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD. Price 3s. 6d.

The Dryburgh Edition of

THE WAVERLEY NOVELS. Vols. 1 to 13 now ready, illustrated by CHARLES GREEN, GORDON BROWNE, PAUL HARDY, LOCKHART BOGLE, WALTER PAGET, FRANK DADD, WILLIAM HOLE, R.S.A., JOHN WILLIAMSON, H. M. PAGET, and W. H. OVEREND. Crown 8vo. Price 5s. each.

"When complete, this will be the best popular edition in existence."—Christian World.

"This edition appears to improve as it goes on."—Athenæum.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, W.

CAPTAIN LUGARD'S WORK ON BRITISH EAST AFRICA.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED,

THE RISE OF OUR EAST AFRICAN EMPIRE:

Early Efforts in Nyasaland and Uganda.

BY

CAPTAIN F. D. LUGARD, D.S.O.,

HON. F.R.G.S.; DIPLOM. F.R.S.G.S.

With 130 Illustrations from Drawings and Photographs under the personal superintendence of the Author;

Also 14 Maps, specially prepared for the Work by E. G. Ravenstein.

2 Vols. Large demy 8vo, 42s.

SUMMARY OF CONTENTS.

VOLUME I.

CHAPS. 1 to 6.—Start for Africa—The Campaign against the Slave-traders in Nyasaland—Return to England—Subsequent developments in Nyasaland, and present position.

CHAPS. 7 and 8.—An examination of the African Slavery question and the means of suppressing the Slave Trade—Arms and Liquor Trade.

CHAPS. 9 to 14.—Return to Africa—Travel—Descriptive Scenes and Adventures—Daily Life in Africa—Arrival in Uganda.

CHAPS. 15 to 18.—Commercial possibilities of the Country, with references to previous writers, &c.—African Transport—The question of a Railway—The African Labour Supply.

CHAP. 19.—The Domestication of the Elephant, Zebra, and other Animals.

CHAPS. 20 and 21.—Sport—African Animals.

VOLUME II.

CHAP. 22.—History of Uganda, and position on arrival of the Company.

CHAPS. 23 to 26.—Administration and War against Mohammedans.

CHAPS. 27 to 31.—The Relief of the Sudanese, and Settlement of Toru and South Unyoro.

CHAPS. 32 to 40.—Administration—Outbreak of War between the Factions—Settlement with the Roman Catholics—Repatriation of the Mohammedans—Return to England—Position of Missionaries.

CHAP. 40 (Note).—Sir Gerald Portal in Uganda.

CHAP. 41.—Considerations for the Retention of the Country.

CHAP. 42.—Origin of the British Sphere—"Methods of Dealing with it through Zanzibar or otherwise"—Treaty conditions affecting it—Political development in the Nile Valley.

CHAP. 43.—Methods of Administration, Past and Future—Estimates of Cost, &c.

APPENDIX.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

NEW NOVELS AT THE LIBRARIES.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE DANVERS' JEWELS."

DIANA TEMPEST.

By Mary Cholmondeley.

Author of "Sir Charles Danvers," &c. In three vols., crown 8vo.
"One of the brightest novels of modern life that has ever been written."—Lady.

NOW READY.

TEMPE. By Constance Cotterell, Author of "Strange Gods." In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

The SWING of the PENDULUM. By FRANCES MARY PEARD, Author of "The Baroness," "The Country Cousin," "Paul's Sister," &c. In two vols., crown 8vo.

A NEW EDITION NOW READY.

LOVER OR FRIEND? By Rosa NOUCHETTE CAREY, Author of "Nellie's Memories," &c. In 1 vol., crown 8vo, 6s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

NOW READY, with many Illustrative Notes from Unpublished Letters, in 2 vols., demy 8vo, 32s.

FAMILIAR LETTERS of Sir WALTER SCOTT.

From the Originals at Abbotsford and Elsewhere.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED, uniform with the above, in 2 vols., demy 8vo, 32s.

The JOURNAL of Sir WALTER SCOTT.

From the Original Manuscript at Abbotsford.

Annotated and Illustrated from his Life and Correspondence.

Edinburgh: DAVID DOUGLAS, 10, Castle-street.
London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & CO., LIMITED.

JARROLD & SONS'

NEW BOOKS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

NOW READY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

AFTER SCHOOL. By ROBERT OVERTON, Author of "Lights Out," "Queer Fish," "A Round Dozen," &c. 24 Illustrations by Reinhold Thiele.

SABLE AND WHITE. The Autobiography of a Show Dog. By DR. GORDON-STABLES, M.D., C.M., R.N. Illustrations by Harrison Weir. "A very pleasing story—capitally told, and wonderfully illustrated by Harrison Weir. A splendid gift book for a boy."—Glasgow Herald.

CLEAR AS THE NOON DAY. By ETHEL PENROSE, Author of "The Fairy Cobbler's Gold," &c. 36 Illustrations by Edith Œ. Somerville.

LORD LYNTON'S WARD. By HELENA BROOKS. 36 Illustrations by Paul Hardy.
"Since Mrs. Hodgson Burnett wrote 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' few more pleasing books have seen the light."—National Press.

THAT BOTHER OF A BOY. By GRACE STEBBING, Author of "Wild Kathleen," &c. 2nd Edition. 35 Illustrations by Paul Hardy.
"The story is admirably told; it moves to laughter in almost every page."—Leeds Mercury.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS IN FAIRYLAND; or, Old Friends with New Faces. By D. S. SINCLAIR, Author of "Sugar Plums for Children," &c. 2nd Edition. Upwards of 30 Illustrations by Paul Hardy.
"There is not a dull line in the theme."—Glasgow Herald.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

JETHOU; or, Crusoe Life in the Channel Islands. By E. R. SUFFLING, Author of "History and Legends of the Broad District," &c.
"We know of no book of adventure likely to be of such absorbing interest to boys."—Bookseller.

ELIAS TRUST'S BOYS. By MARGARET SURREY, Author of "My Hero," &c. Illustrated.
"No boy or girl will read it without being the better for it."—Manchester Evening News.

WILD KATHLEEN; or, Both Sides of the Channel. By GRACE STEBBING. Illustrated.
"It is one of the best books of the season, and should be included in the list of all rewards."—Teachers' Aid.

JACQUELINE'S MESSAGE. A True Tale of the French Revolution of 1789. By L. E. WEEKS, Author of "Reminiscences of Early Days in France." Illustrated.
"A book for girls, and a very pleasant and elevating one."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE WELSH HERMIT. By the Rev. JENKIN JONES, Author of "Ted Rees," "Strait's Cottage," &c.
"The story bristles with interesting incidents. It is a very readable tale."—Christian Age.

STRUWELPETER JUNIOR. Translated from the German. (Copyright.) 1s. 6d. (post 2s.). 73 Editions already sold in Germany.

JARROLD & SONS, 10 & 11, WARWICK LANE, LONDON.

Mr. Edward Arnold's New Books.

Now ready at all Libraries.

THIS TROUBLESOME WORLD.

THE NEW NOVEL, by the Authors of

"THE MEDICINE LADY."

3 vols. crown 8vo, cloth, 31s. 6d.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries.

SEVENTY YEARS of IRISH LIFE. By W. R. LE FANU. With Portraits. 1 vol. 8vo, 16s.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"It would be difficult to find any single volume containing such a multitude of capital stories. The great majority are quite original, and Mr. Le Fanu must be congratulated on having produced a book so brimful of boyish spirits and so crammed with quotable anecdotes."

THE TIMES.—"A feast of amusing anecdote. It will delight all readers."

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries.

RECOLLECTIONS of LIFE and WORK. By LOUISA TWINING. With Portraits. 1 vol. demy 8vo, 15s.

GREAT PUBLIC SCHOOLS: Eton—Harrow— WINCHESTER — RUGBY — WESTMINSTER — MARLBOROUGH — CHELTENHAM—HAILEYBURY—CLIFTON—CHARTERHOUSE. With 100 Illustrations by the best Artists. 1 vol. handsomely bound, large imperial 16mo, 6s.

HARTMANN the ANARCHIST; or, THE DOOM OF THE GREAT CITY. By E. D. FAWCETT. With numerous Illustrations by F. T. JANE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

The TUTOR'S SECRET. (Le Secret du Précepteur.) By VICTOR CHERBULIEZ. Translated by RALPH DERECHEF. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

STEPHEN REMARX: a Story of Society and Religion. By the Hon. and Rev. J. ADDERLEY. New Edition. Small 8vo, paper, 1s.; elegantly bound, 2s. 6d.

LOVE LETTERS OF A WORLDLY WOMAN. By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD, Author of "Aunt Anne," &c. A Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.
PUBLISHER TO THE INDIA OFFICE.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

SECOND EDITION OF MARIE CORELLI'S NEW WORK.

BARABBAS: a Dream of the World's Tragedy.

"The author has tried to tell the story so that it shall be read again with open and attentive eyes by some in whose minds the recital of the well-known originals produced no more effect than the slipping of a smooth stone on smooth ice."—Christian World.

"By the dignity of its conceptions, the reserve round the central figure, and the fine imagery of the scene and circumstance, the book has a far-off likeness to the Ammergau play. The studies of character are very striking. There is much that is elevating and devout in this remarkable work."—Guardian.

CHEAP JACK ZITA. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "Mehalah." Three vols.

"Zita is a charming and attractive character."—Glasgow Herald.

"Fully entitled to rank among Mr. Baring-Gould's most fascinating works."—Daily Telegraph.

"Zita is as original and individual as 'Mehalah.' The author is at his best when he is at his intensest. At such moments he comes near to being a great writer; and there are several of them in 'Cheap Jack Zita.'"—Daily Chronicle.

THE STAR-GAZERS. By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of "Eli's Children," &c. Three vols.

"A stirring romance."—Western Morning News.

"Mr. Fenn keeps the reader's attention on the alert till the end."—Court Journal.

A WOMAN OF FORTY. By ESME STUART, Author of "Muriel's Marriage." Two vols., crown 8vo.

Cheaper Edition of DODO.

In One Volume.

On November 28 will be issued in one volume, price 6s., with cover specially designed, the ELEVENTH EDITION of DODO. By E. F. Benson.

Orders for this Edition should be sent in at once.

MRS. CURGENVEN OF CURGENVEN. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "Mehalah," "Old Country Life," &c. Third Edition, crown 8vo, 6s.

A powerful and characteristic story of Devon life by the Author of "Mehalah," which, in its three-volume form, passed through two editions.

The Graphic speaks of it as "a novel of vigorous humour and sustained power"; the Sussex Daily News says that "the swing of the narrative is splendid"; and the Speaker mentions its "bright imaginative power."

MRS. FALCHION. By GILBERT PARKER, Author of "Pierre and his People." In 1 vol., 6s.

The Athenæum says: "A splendid study of character;" the Pall Mall spoke of it as "but little behind anything that has been done by any writer of our time."

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THE ICELANDER'S SWORD. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "In the Roar of the Sea," &c. With 29 Illustrations by J. MOYR SMITH. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A stirring story of Iceland, for boys, by the Author of "Mehalah."

TWO LITTLE CHILDREN AND CHING. By EDITH E. CUTHELL. Profusely Illustrated, crown 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, 6s.

Another story, with a dog hero, by the Author of the very popular "Only a Guard Room Dog."

TODDLEBEN'S HERO. By M. M. BLAKE, Author of "The Siege of Norwich Castle." With 9 Illustrations, crown 8vo, 5s. A story of military life for children.

METHUEN & CO., 18, Bury-street, W.C.

NEW NOVELS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES. IN THREE VOLUMES.

The Hoyden.

By MRS. HUNGERFORD, Author of "Molly Bawn."

"A clever, sprightly story . . . fresh, sunshiny, and delightful."—Scotsman.

"Mrs. Hungerford's novels are never dull. Her latest romance 'The Hoyden,' has that power of attraction which Mrs. Hungerford's pen possesses in no ordinary degree."—Daily Telegraph.

A Comedy of Masks.

By ERNEST DOWSON and ARTHUR MOORE.

"It is a powerfully-written society tale of London salons and the features of the faces behind the masks which are worn therein. . . . Indeed the dramatic power of the whole book, while free from the least taint of melodrama, is so striking, that if it were rewritten for the stage we should venture to predict for it a brilliant success."—Guardian.

The Countess Radna.

By W. E. NORRIS. Third Edition.

"In style, skill in construction, and general 'go' it is worth a dozen ordinary novels, and justifies the place its author has obtained among living masters of fiction."—Speaker.

The Heavenly Twins.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "Ideala," &c. Fourth Thousand.

"Everybody ought to read it, for it is an inexhaustible source of refreshing and highly stimulating entertainment."—Daily Telegraph.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS IN ONE VOLUME.

FROM THE FIVE RIVERS: Stories of Native Life in India. By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of "Miss Stuart's Legacy." Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Mrs. Steel has written a powerful and delightful book. . . . Force, feeling, and originality mark 'From the Five Rivers' as a book distinctly worth reading."—Spectator.

APPASSIONATA: a Musician's Story. By ELSA D'ESTERRE-KEELING. Crown 8vo, 6s.

MADEMOISELLE MISS: and other Stories. By HENRY HARLAND, Author of "Mea Culpa," &c. Post 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

The National Observer.—"Clever, at times even very clever indeed. . . . Charmingly sympathetic and interesting withal for its intimate knowledge of students' dissipation in Paris. Their conversation after the event is irresistably bright."

The Scotsman.—"Sometimes humourous, sometimes sad, sometimes cynical, always vivid and realistic. . . . All the stories are charming."

The Globe.—"A little book of charming sketches."

The Sun.—"Tinted, touched with soft, harmonious colour, like the voluptuous French illustrations to a sympathetic French story."

The Glasgow Herald.—"The author writes crisply and cleverly. . . . has the light touch of the French."

The Queen.—"Charming. . . Should not be missed by the diligent reader of the newest and best."

SWEET LAVENDER. Being Vol. VIII. of the Plays of ARTHUR W. PINERO. With Introductory Notes by Malcolm C. Salaman. Cloth, 3s. 6d.; paper cover, 1s. 6d.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

GRIFFITH, FARRAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS

A NEW BOOK by Mrs. L. B. WALFORD.

A QUESTION OF PENMANSHIP. Stories by L. B. WALFORD, Author of "Mr. Smith," &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo, cloth, price 10s. 6d. [Next week.

BOND SLAVES: the Story of a Struggle. By Mrs. G. LINNÆUS BANKS. Crown 8vo, with Frontispiece, price 3s. 6d. [Now ready

ON GOLDEN HINGES. By Dora Russell. Crown 8vo, with Frontispiece, price 3s. 6d. [Now Ready.

NEW NOVEL BY C. J. WILLS.

HER PORTRAIT; or, Phillida's Fortunes. A Story told in a Novel Way with Pen and Pencil. Copiously Illustrated by G. A. Storey, A.R.A. Large crown 8vo, cloth, gilt tops, 6s. [Now ready.

Three New Novels in the "Crepon" Series.

Paper covers, price 2s. each.

CONFESSIONS OF A WOMAN.

AN ADOPTED WIFE. By A. Keyser.

DUST AND LAURELS. By M. L. Pendered. Second Edition.

RANDOM RECOLLECTIONS OF SOME NOTED BISHOPS, DIVINES, AND WORTHIES OF THE "OLD CHURCH," MANCHESTER. By the Rev. GEORGE HUNTINGTON, M.A., Rector of Tenby, Author of "John Brown the Cordwainer," "Autobiography of an Alms-Bag," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s. [Just out.

Price 6s. each, in original and attractive binding,

NINETEENTH CENTURY CLASSICS.

A Series of Famous Books in a Dress worthy of their Fame. Specially Illustrated. In clear, good type, paper of the best quality, and unique binding, they are books to read, to keep, or to give away.

THE SCARLET LETTER.
LONGFELLOW'S POETICAL WORKS.
WHITTIER'S POETICAL WORKS.
LALLA ROOKH.
GOETHE'S FAUST.
THE LAST DAYS OF POMPEII.
THE LADY OF THE LAKE.

"Handsome volumes, bound in white and red. . . . . Very well adapted for presents."—Guardian.

TALES FROM THE DRAMATISTS. By Charles MORRIS. With an Introduction by HENRY IRVING, D.C.L. 8 vols., cloth, richly gilt, in case, price 10s. 6d. net.

GRIFFITH, FARRAN & CO., Newbery House, 39, Charing Cross-road, London.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 8d. London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

Hatchards, Booksellers, 187, Piccadilly, London.
ALL THE NEW AND STANDARD BOOKS.
Post Orders Promptly Executed. Usual Cash Discounts.

ORDER AT ONCE.

THE DECEMBER (CHRISTMAS) NUMBER OF THE

PALL MALL MAGAZINE,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.
READY NOVEMBER 25.

It will consist of 192 pages of letterpress, profusely illustrated, and two coloured plates. It will contain important contributions by the best writers and artists of the day.

AMONG MANY OTHER CONTRIBUTORS ARE:—

L. ALMA TADEMA, R.A.
GEORGE MEREDITH.
RUDYARD KIPLING.
BRET HARTE.
DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY.
I. ZANGWILL.
WILLIAM ARCHER.
And many others.

EDITORIAL OFFICES: 18, CHARING CROSS ROAD, LONDON, W.C.

Copies on Sale at all Booksellers, Newsagents, and Railway Bookstalls in Great Britain and Ireland. Publishing Offices:—London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Limited, Broadway, Ludgate-hill, E.C. Manchester:—GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Limited, 16, Jackson's-row. New York: THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS COMPANY. Toronto: THE TORONTO NEWS COMPANY. Montreal: THE MONTREAL NEWS COMPANY.

NOW READY.

THE STRAND MAGAZINE.

For NOVEMBER. Edited by GEORGE NEWNES.

CONTAINING:—

THE ROYAL WEDDING:
FROM AN ORIENTAL POINT OF VIEW.
By MOULVIE RAFIUDDIN AHMAD.
Illustrations from Drawings by Oriental Artists, with a facsimile of the QUEEN'S LETTER TO THE NATION on the occasion of the wedding.

An Illustrated Interview with Sir Henry Halford, Bart., C.B.
By HARRY HOW.

THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES:
The Adventure of the Naval Treaty (concluded).
By A. CONAN DOYLE.

STORIES FROM THE DIARY OF A DOCTOR—A Death Certificate.
By the Authors of "The Medicine Lady."

A HAUNTED VILLA. Founded on Fact.
And other Stories and Articles—with upwards of 150 Illustrations,
Price 6d. Post Free, 9d.

ALSO READY.

THE PICTURE MAGAZINE, No. 11, Nov.
CONTAINING:—
Portraits of 30 Eminent Singers, and about 200 other Illustrations.
Price 6d. Post free, 8½d.
All the back numbers, price 6d. each, are obtainable.

GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, LONDON, W.C.

THE BEST OF THE NEW NOVELS.

AN ANCIENT ANCESTOR: A Tale of Three Weeks.
In three volumes. By CHARLES E. HALL.
Author of the "Truth" Prize Story, "I Revoke."
"Mr. Hall is quite an original novelist."—Glasgow Herald.
"A decidedly readable novel. Delightful description—varied incident—characters cleverly drawn."—Telegraph.
"The outcome of a holiday in Arran."—Athenæum.
"Especially good."—Public Opinion.
"The Ossianic myth—or verity?—is very skilfully woven into the love story."—Black and White.
"A bold experiment."—Scotsman.
"A brightly written, interesting, well-developed, and thoroughly healthy tale. We have nothing but praise. The elopement is capital, described with genuine humour." —Independent.
"Really laughable."—Saturday Review.
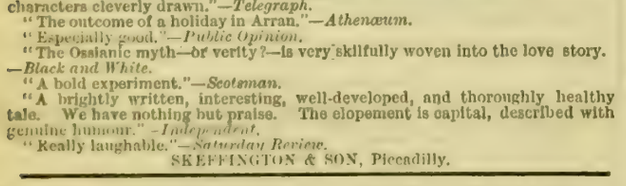
SKEFFINGTON & SON, Piccadilly.

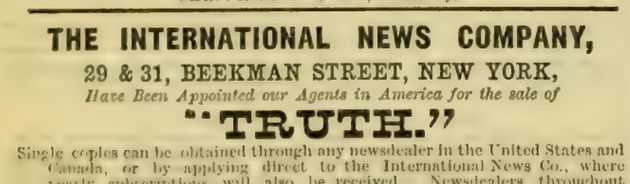
THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS COMPANY,
29 & 31, BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK,
Have Been Appointed our Agents in America for the sale of
"TRUTH."
Single copies can be obtained through any newsdealer in the United States and Canada, or by applying direct to the International News Co., where yearly subscriptions will also be received. Newsdealers throughout the United States and Canada can obtain supplies of TRUTH by applying to the wholesale agents.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST,
PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.



LITERARY MACHINE
For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1 1s.



INVALID COMFORTS
Walking Machine for the lame
Adjustable Couches and Beds, £3. Exercising Chairs £5. 5s. Reclining Boards £1 1s. Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d. Easy Chairs £2. 10s. Commode Chairs £2. 10s.
Carrying Chairs, £1. Bed Tables 7s. 6d. Crutches 10s. 6d. Folding Couch Chairs 10s. Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS
From £1. 5s.

SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS
£2. 2s.

Invalid Carriages
Perambulators
Rubber Tyres
From £1. 10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telegrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL

CONTRIBUTIONS are EARNESTLY SOLICITED towards meeting th EXPENSES of this unendowed Hospital, and will be gratefully received by th Bankers, Messrs. Drummond, or by the Secretary.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.—The long-continued prevalence of scarlet fever is causing a heavy strai on the resources of this Hospital. The benevolent are earnestly asked fo HELP. Annual subscribers of a Guinea and upwards for more than a year, a well as donors of Ten Guineas or more in one sum, are Governors, and ar entitled to free treatment for their domestic servants. Sufferers residin outside the metropolitan area can only be received into the Hospital from th families of Governors.
Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by th Secretary, at the Hospital, MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott, Dimsdale, & Co., 50, Cornhill.

CANCER WARDS at the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL Mortimer-street, W.—The WEEKLY BOARD make an URGENT APPEA for FUNDS in Aid of these Wards. There are 34 beds set apart for patien suffering from this terrible malady. They are admitted without letters recommendation. Everything that human skill and kindness can suggest provided, and sufferers are permitted to remain until relieved by art or release by death. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts & Co.
F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM for IDIOTS.
Nearly 600 afflicted cases are receiving special care and education.
FUNDS urgently REQUIRED.
Special provision is made for the reception of Private Cases on payment.
H. GERARD HOARE, Esq., J.P., Treasurer.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Cheques or Postal Orders may be crossed Messrs. Hoare, Bankers, 37, Flee street, E.C.
Offices, 36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all part willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars a terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools al recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES. — Messr FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Sele Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyd Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

A LADY is anxious to hear of a post as COMPANION SECRETARY, for a young lady of good birth and education. Music (piano and singing). Good amanuensis and excellent traveller. Highe references given.—Address, L. C. T., care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

THE ASCOT BALL will take place on DECEMBER 12th.

TRAVELLERS to EGYPT and OTHERS are specially invite to VISIT ABOUKIR (about 5 miles from Alexandria), if they requi a suitable INVESTMENT (with or without occupation), and a certainty of continuing and increasing income with good landed security, and secure portion of the 23,000 acres at present unsold. Purchases can now be ma on very favourable terms either for cash or by instalments. Leases grante Pamphlets and full information supplied by the SECRETARY, at the Aboukir Company's Office, 134, Palmerston-buildings, Bishopsgate-street, Londo E.C., or by the Chairman, SAMUEL S. SHEPPARD, 57, Old Broad-stree London, E.C.

TRAVELLERS TO BRINDISI AND THE EAS

WILL NOW FIND
BOLOGNA the most convenient stopping-place.
Coupé-lits can be booked beforehand by Mr. FRANK, Hote Brun, for DAILY EXPRESS TRAIN, leaving Bologn 6.55. p.m., arriving at Brindisi 10.50 a.m.

THE INTERNATIONAL SLEEPING CAR and EUROPEA EXPRESS TRAINS COMPANY. TRAINS DE LUXE AND HOTELS. SEASON 1893-4. MEDITERRANEAN EXPRESS EVERY SATURDAY at TUESDAY at 7.25 p.m. from the Gare de Lyons, Paris, arriving Nice 1.28 p.m the following day. Special Ceinture Train from Gare du Nord on arrival of 8 and 10.0 a.m. trains from London. Dinner served on the Trains on leaving Par Through Sleeping and Dining Cars, with covered vestibule inter-communicatio between the cars. Only Dining Car service this year. Three other Daily Servic to the Riviera.
The Company's RIVIERA PALACE HOTEL, NICE (Cimiez).
PENINSULAR EXPRESS EVERY FRIDAY 8.15 p.m., London to Brindis To Cairo under five days viâ P. and O. Steamers. Through Cars from Calais.
The Company's GRAND EAST INDIA HOTEL, BRINDISI.
SUD EXPRESS.—MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS to Pa Biarritz, Madrid and Lisbon, &c.
The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL (Terminus), LISBON.
ORIENT EXPRESS. — Daily to VIENNA, Three Times Weekly CONSTANTINOPLE.
These Trains are composed exclusively of Sleeping, Saloon, and Dining Car comfortably warmed and thoroughly ventilated. For all tickets and full detai of Trains and Hotels apply to Chief London Office, 122, Pall Mall, and Ci Office, 5, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

The 'NEW GUINEA' Spring Bedstead.
Pillars 1-in. Sides 1¼-in. strong Tubes, Double Woven Wire Mattress, Patent 'Reliance' Side Fastenings. All iron and Steel, no Wood-work. Bedstead in 3 parts only.
Easy to fix up and take down.

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.
Orders executed same day as received for this bed.

To be had only direct from—
CHARLES RILEY,
Freeman-street,
BIRMINGHAM.

Illustrated Price Lists Post Free.

21/-
Carriage Paid.

EVERY DESCRIPTION —OF— Bedsteads, Bedding, Spring Mattresses, Bedroom Furniture, &c. direct from the Manufacturer.

AMUSEMENTS.

TOOLE'S THEATRE.—J. K. LAING'S SEASON.—To-Night and Every Evening, at 8 o'clock, a Farce, in Three Acts, by the late Fred Leslie and Arthur Shirley, entitled MRS. OTHELLO. Miss Fanny Brough, Mr. Charles Glenney, Miss Cicely Richards, Mr. Julian Cross, Mr. W. H. Day, Mr. G. Raymond, Miss Blanche Horlock, Miss Florence Melville. Preceded, at 7.45, by THE BROTHERS. Doors open 7.45. Seats at all Libraries. Box-office open daily.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE. Open 7.30.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music and Varieties. At 8.45, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled LIDELIA. At 10.20, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 5,080.

THE EMPIRE.—Two GRAND BALLETS.—At 8, KATRINA, and at 10, THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. Grand Varieties. The new entrance from Leicester-street is now open. Doors open at 7.30. Matinee Saturday Next, at 2.

THE PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue. SCARAMOUCHE, Pantomime Ballet, at 10.40.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with A STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Albert Chevalier, Little Tich, Fannie Leslie, Bessie Bellwood, Carl Hertz, Millie D'Alton, Lucy Clarke, James Fawn, Brothers Griffiths, Alice Leamar, George Beauchamp, Nellie Navette, Herbert Campbell, Alice Mayduc, Billie Carlow; Brown, Newland, and Leclerq, Harry Pleon, Ada Blanche, J. W. Rowley, Harry Freeman, Eugene Stratton, Charles Ross, Tom Bass, G. Robey, Fred Mason, Arthur Rigby, Sells and Young.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

GRAFTON GALLERIES, Grafton-street, Bond-street, W.—EXHIBITION, NOW OPEN, by the leading French ARTISTS in DECORATIVE ART of the Salons of the Champs Elysées and the Champs de Mars.—Admission 1s., from 10 to 6.

THE ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS, by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools, is NOW OPEN at THOMAS MCLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket (next the Theatre.) Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SATURDAY CONCERT, Nov. 25, at 3.—Vocalist, Mr. EUGENE OUDIN. Solo Violoncello, Herr JULIUS KLEUGEL. The Programme will include: Overture to Byron's "Manfred" (Schumann); Introduction to the First Act of "Aida" (Verdi); Concerto for Violoncello and Orchestra (MS.) Kleugel (first time in England); Symphony in A major, "Italian" (Mendelssohn); Solos for Violoncello, "Sur le lac" (Godard); "Serenade" (Hans Sitt); "Tarantella" (Piatti); Ballad for Orchestra, "The Ship o' the Fiend" (Hamish Mac Cunn).—Numbered Seats, 2s. and 4s.; Unnumbered Seats, 1s.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station, in connection with all railways. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations.—New Portrait Models of the late CH. GOUNOD, and their Majesties the EMPEROR of RUSSIA, the EMPEROR of GERMANY, the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA, and the KING of ITALY. Music all day. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open 9 to 10.

NIAGARA FALLS in WINTER.—Finest and Most Realistic Sight in London. Just added, splendid Diorama of Ice Palace at Montreal. NIAGARA HALLS, St. James's Park Station. DAILY, 10 to 10 p.m. Admission 1s. Children 6d. Tickets, including admission, all Dist. and Met. Ry. Stations.

ELOCUTION, EXTEMPORE SPEAKING, ORATORY.—Professor HAYSACK, whose Pupils are among the first clergymen, doctors, barristers, solicitors, public personages, and nobility, GIVES INSTRUCTION. Voice strengthened, defects corrected.—70, Talbot-road, Bayswater.

AMUSEMENTS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 7.45, A LIFE OF PLEASURE, by Sir Augustus Harris and Henry Pettitt. For full particulars see Daily Papers. Box-office open, from 10 a.m., all day.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Mr. TREE, Sole Lessee and Manager.
TO-NIGHT, at 8.15, the 50th Performance of Henry Arthur Jones's New Play,
THE TEMPTER
Mr. Tree, Messrs. Fred Terry, F. Everill, Luther Mollish, G. W. Anson, Chas. Allan, Hodman Clark, Roselle, Baldie, Wyatt, Paton, Cowis, &c.; Miss Julia Neilson, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Mrs. E. H. Brooke, and Mrs. Tree.
MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.15.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) open daily from 10 till 5.—HAYMARKET.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES. Every Evening, at 8, an entirely New Burlesque in Three Acts, entitled DON JUAN, by James T. Tanner. Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Music by Meyer Lutz. With full Gaiety Company, including Miss Millie Hilton and Mr. Arthur Roberts.—Box-office open 10 to 6 daily. Doors open 7.40. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2. Doors open 1.45.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.15, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, UTOPIA, LIMITED, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. Doors open at 7.45 and 2. Box-office open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, R. Harding, J. Carter, H. Russell, and Arthur Williams; Mesdames Mary Rorke, Alma Stanley, and Agnes Thomas.—Box-office 10 to 6. Doors open at 7.30.

GARRICK THEATRE.—Mr. JOHN HARE, Lessee and Manager.—DIPLOMACY, adapted by Clement Scott and B. C. Stephenson. EVERY EVENING, at 8. Mr. Bancroft, Mr. F. Robertson, Mr. A. Cecil, Mr. G. Hare, Mr. Trent, Mr. Mayeur, and Mr. John Hare; Miss Kate Rorke, Miss E. Robins, Lady Monckton, Miss Luck, and Mrs. Bancroft. Box-office 10 to 5.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.10, THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY, By Arthur W. Pinero. Doors open 7.45; carriages, 11. MORNING PERFORMANCE SATURDAY NEXT, at 2.30. Box-office open 10 to 5. Seats may be booked by letter, telegram, or telephone.—ST. JAMES'S.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Every Night, at 8 (doors 7.30), AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY in THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL. Miss Ada Rehan as Lady Teazle; Mr. Wm. Farren as Sir Peter; and Mr. Clarke, Mr. Bourchier, Mr. Gresham, Mr. Gilbert, Mr. Owen, Miss Vanbrugh, Mrs. Gilbert, and Miss Haswell. MATINEE Saturday Next, at 2. Box-office daily, 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries.
"Lady Teazle must be set down as another triumph to be added to the many which Miss Rehan has already won."—Times.

THE TRAFALGAR THEATRE.—Sole Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. FRANK WYATT (Miss Violet Melnotte). Under the Management of Mr. CHARLES H. HAWTREY.—Every Evening, at 9, a New Farcical Comedy, entitled TOM, DICK, AND HARRY, by Mrs. R. Pacheco. Mr. C. H. Hawtrey, Mr. John Beauchamp, Mr. W. R. Shirley, Mr. Ernest Percy, Mr. W. F. Hawtrey, Mr. Charles Milton, Mr. C. Meyrick, Mr. Arthur Playfair; Miss Vane Featherston, Miss Georgie Esmond, Miss Eva Williams, Miss Sophie Larkin. Preceded, at 8.10, by BARBARA. Matinée Every Saturday, at 3 o'clock.—Box-office open from 10 to 10.—Business Manager, Mr. E. F. Bradley.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.30, Musical Comedy, words by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank, Music by Sydney Jones, entitled A GAIETY GIRL. Messrs. C. Hayden Coffin, E. Lewis, Bradfield, Kaye, Bantock, D'Orsay, Porteous, Rimma, and Harry Monkhouse; Mmes. Decima Moore, Juliette Nesville, Cutler, Studholme, Pounds, Phelps, Maud Hobson, Massey, Selwick, Robinson, and Lottie Venne. At 7.45, SIXES. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.15, Vol. II. of MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine, Templar Saxe, and Charles Danby; Misses Jennie McNulty, Agnes Hewitt, Maggie Roberts, and Lettie Lind. Preceded, at 7.45, by Rex Harley, the inimitable Mimic of Popular Actors. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30.—Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

WINTER SEASIDE HEALTH RESORTS,
By SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

CHEAP RETURN TICKETS are issued from Waterloo, Kensington (Addison Road), Vauxhall, Clapham Junction, &c., to the undermentioned places:—

BOURNEMOUTH, THE ENGLISH RIVIERA, In 2¼ Hours.	28s. 6d. First Class, 21s. 6d. Second Class, 12s. Third Class, are issued by all trains on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays. The First and Second Class Tickets are available to return up to and including the Monday week following the day of issue, and the Third Class by any train up to the following Tuesday (day of issue included).
WEYMOUTH, THE ENGLISH NAPLES. In 3¼ Hours.	33s. First Class, 24s. Second Class, 16s. Third Class, are issued from Waterloo, Vauxhall, Clapham Junction, Kensington, &c., on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays, available to return up to the Tuesday following, by any ordinary train.
SOUTHAMPTON, In 1¾ Hours.	20s. 6d. First Class, 15s. 6d. Second Class, 10s. Third Class, issued on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays, available to return up to the following Monday (day of issue included).
SWANAGE, In 3¾ Hours.	31s. 6d. First Class, 22s. 6d. Second Class, 15s. Third Class, issued on Fridays and Saturdays, available to return up to and including the following Tuesday (Sunday excepted).
SIDMOUTH, In 4¾ Hours.	36s. First Class, 26s. Second Class, 16s. Third Class, issued on Fridays and Saturdays, available to return up to the following Tuesday (Sunday excepted).
EXMOUTH, In 4¾ Hours.	40s. First Class, 28s. Second Class, and 17s. Third Class, issued on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays, available to return any day up to the following Monday (day of issue included).
ILFRACOMBE, WARMEST SEASIDE RESORT IN ENGLAND. In 6½ Hours.	First Class Return Tickets issued from London, from November 1st to March 14th, including 7 days' bed, board, and attendance, at the Ilfracombe Hotel, £5 5s. each, available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo at 11.0 a.m. and 3.0 p.m.

First Class Lavatory accommodation in principal trains.
All information can be obtained on application to G. T. WHITE, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station.

CHAS. SCOTT-MOON, General Manager.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards. Tennis Lawn.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table-d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HÔTEL METROPOLE.—On the East Cliff, facing the sea, three minutes' from East Station. The largest, and most magnificent Hotel in Bournemouth. Now open to receive visitors. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

GEORGE ALEXANDER, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.

GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 12s. to 15s. per day.
According to position of rooms selected.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.

G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 783.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

PORT OROTAVA, Teneriffe.—HOTEL MARTIANEZ (late GRAND).—First-class, standing in a beautiful garden. Shady verandahs, large public and private rooms. Billiards, tennis. Good cooking, good wines, excellent spring water.

Manager, J. R. EGGER.

PORTRUSH, co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL (B. and N.C. Rly). Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner. French cuisine. Combined Railway and Hotel Tickets from Belfast.—Illustrated tariff on application to MANAGER.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL.—First and leading hotel in St. Leonards. Unequalled position, detached, faces sea, due south. Modern improvements, passenger lift, electric light in every room, handsomely furnished. Home comforts. Terms moderate. —Address, MANAGER.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

THE CROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.

TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

LANGHAM HOTEL,
PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.

Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6.30 until 8.15.
Under the Management of WALTER GOSDEN.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.

NO SUPPERS.

TELEPHONE No. 3,697.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.

(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).
Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.

Address, MANAGER.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn and Lincoln's Inn Fields. A high-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, happily situated, having all modern conveniences and a moderate tariff. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hote, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d., at separate tables.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Write for tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL, 180 Apartments, Patronised by H. R. H. the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, K.T. Extensive Structural Alterations and Decorative Repairs have been carried out and 30 NEW BEDROOMS ADDED SINCE OCTOBER, 1891. The entire system of drainage has been re-modelled and re-constructed, and the most improved sanitary appliances fitted to all Bath-rooms, &c. The Hotel stands in its own private gardens of 2½ acres, faces the sea, and is only five minutes' from the Harbour in the lower part of the town and Shorncliffe New West End Station, and is most convenient for Continental travellers.—For tariff charges, &c., please address the Proprietor.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

LARGEST, BEST APPOINTED, AND MOST COMFORTABLE HOTEL IN CHANNEL ISLES, AND THE FINEST SITUATION IN JERSEY.
Directly overlooking the Channel. South aspect. Magnificent Public Rooms, all facing sea. Swimming Bath, Hot and Cold Seawater Baths. Tennis Courts, &c. TABLE D'HÔTE DINNER at 7 p.m. (separate tables) "best in Jersey." Reduced Winter Terms on application.

Telegrams—"Grand, Jersey." SYDNEY ROGERS, Manager & Secretary.

HOTEL CONTINENTAL,
CAIRO, EGYPT.

PATRONISED by ROYALTY and the ELITE of SOCIETY, including H.R.H. the DUKE of CAMBRIDGE and H.I.H. PRINCESS VICTORIA of PRUSSIA. Perfect English sanitation. Electric Light. Hydraulic Lifts. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate terms. Under the personal supervision of the proprietors, GEORGE NUNGOVITCH (also proprietor of the HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE) and L. STEINSCHNEIDER, late Manager of Shepheard's Hotel.

— THE —

CAP MARTIN HOTEL,
Between Mentone and Monte Carlo,
RE-OPENS 11th NOVEMBER

(UNDER THE SAME MANAGEMENT).

Perfect Sanitation, Designed and Executed by GEORGE JENNINGS, London.

The Hotel has private Dairy and Laundry. Omnibus meets trains at Mentone.—Address:

MANAGER, CAP MARTIN HOTEL, MENTONE.

THE RUNNACLEAVE, ILFRACOMBE.—Highest average Winter Temperature in England. South aspect. 120 Beautifully-appointed rooms, thoroughly warmed by hot-water apparatus; theatre in constant use; yacht, tennis, billiards, photographic dark room, and indoor skating rink free of charge. Moderate tariff.

HOTELS.

ALBANY HOTEL (ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Typing, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

ILFRACOMBE.

Warmest Seaside Winter Resort in England.

ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. The principal Hotel in Ilfracombe

First-class return tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. Railway, from 1st November to 14th March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance at the ILFRACOMBE HOTEL, £3 3s. each. Available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Ask for Hotel Tickets, available by all trains.

EASTBOURNE.—CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the Grand Parade. Pleasant sea and land views. Patronised by many of the Royal families of Europe. Appreciated for its first-class appointments and homely comforts. Elegant public rooms, convenient family suites, &c. Passenger lift. Table d'hôte. Moderate charges.
G. LOWMAN, Manager.

OATLANDS PARK HOTEL, Walton-on-Thames, 17 miles from London (Waterloo Station). Most comfortable and homely winter residence, warmed throughout. South aspect. Boarding terms, 10s. 6d. to 12s. per day. Capital stabling.—Postal address, Weybridge.

MADEIRA.—REID'S HOTELS, Santa Clara, Miles's Carmo Hortas, New Hotel. First-class, in finest situations. Large gardens. Tennis courts. Billiards. Sea bathing. Modern sanitation. All steamers met. Pamphlet free.—PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, London, E.C.

JULES CAMUSET'S CHAMPAGNE

Established 1796. AY, FRANCE.

The Lancet says:—"We have analysed it, and are able to give it unqualised praise. It is free from adulteration of any kind, and possesses a very delicate flavour."

Price, 72s. per Dozen, Cash.
Delivered at any railway station in United Kingdom.
22, Great Tower Street, London, E.C.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

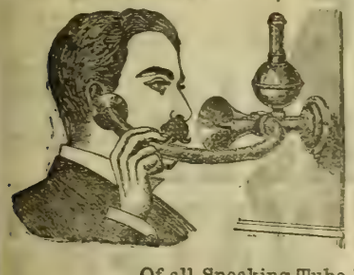
Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

WHAT IS IT?

Why, an ATTACHMENT TO A SPEAKING-TUBE,



by means of which you can carry on a sustained conversation, and need only have one instrument for 6 or 8 Tubes.

Of all Speaking-Tube Fitters, or

THE HOMACOUSTIC SPEAKING-TUBE CO.

Show Rooms—22, Queen Street, London, E.C.

(NEAR MANSION HOUSE STATION.)

SCOTTADIE

115 & 115a REGENT STREET
LONDON W

THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE

For
Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Mauds.
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns.

Telegraphic Address, Scott Adie, London

ATKINSON'S WHITE ROSE.

"A CHARMING SCENT."—H.R.H. The DUCHESS OF YORK. "THE SWEETEST OF SWEET ODOURS."

ATKINSON'S IS THE ONLY GENUINE.

Of all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers, and of the Manufacturers, 24, Old Bond Street, London.

The Burglar Bewildered.

HOW?

THROUGH THE

HOMACOUSTIC

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC?

The HOMACOUSTIC is a contrivance connected with Speaking Tubes, which entirely supersedes, for indoor purposes, not only the Telephone, but all other existing arrangements for indoor inter-communication.

HOW WAS THE BURGLAR BEWILDERED?

The owner of the house fortunately had a Homacoustic commutator fixed in his bedroom. This commutator placed him in direct communication, not only with his butler's rooms, but with seven other rooms in the house.

Directly he heard the Burglars he explained the state of affairs through the Homacoustic to his butler, and to the occupants of the other rooms; arranged what should be done, and they were thus all enabled to pounce on the Burglars together, and catch them red-handed, without their being even aware that their presence was so much as suspected. There was no ringing of electric bells, no creeping about the house to warn the inmates, NO PERSONAL DANGER.

The Homacoustic is far more dreaded by Burglars than any existing arrangement of "Protection from Burglary," for whereas when an electric bell rings, though it may probably arouse the inmates, it also acts as a warning to the Burglars themselves to be off.

NO HOUSE IS REALLY SAFE
— WITHOUT THE —

HOMACOUSTIC

Independent of its protective advantages, the Homacoustic is invaluable in all private houses for everyday use, and in all properly arranged business premises it is an absolute necessity.

The Homacoustic is automatic, not mechanical. Once fixed, always in working order. Its first cost is its last cost.

With the Homacoustic there is no blowing into pipes. The automatic whistle is always in position. One speaks and listens at the same time. The tube is closed when not in actual use. Ordinary speaking tubes can be utilised.

The HOMACOUSTIC SAVES TIME, TEMPER, & TROUBLE.

HOMACOUSTIC SPEAKING TUBE COMPANY
22, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.

ABSOLUTELY THE FINEST TONIC PICK-ME-UP.

Marza Wine

THE ONLY SCIENTIFIC AND PALATABLE IRON AND COCA WINE.

Highly recommended by the "Lancet" and Medical Profession for Anæmia, Insomnia, Debility, Exhaustion, Indigestion, Vocal Fatigue, Neuralgia, and Loss of Vital Force. Invigorating, Sustaining, and Vitalising. Checks and prevents Colds, Chills, and all Lung Weaknesses. A Digestive, Tone-Giving, and Health-Promoting Stimulant for Convalescents after Accouchement, Influenza, Fevers, &c. Invaluable for Athletes, Young Children, and all below par, unstrung, fagged, and weary, Price 3s. 9d. per Bottle, 42s. per dozen, everywhere, or sent Carriage Paid by the MARZA COMPANY, LIMITED, 19 & 21, WILSON STREET, LONDON, E.C.

DESCRIPTIVE PAMPHLETS FREE ON APPLICATION.

SIX GOLD MEDALS

Non-Mercurial.

Goddard's Plate Powder

THE BEST and SAFEST article for CLEANING SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE. Sold in Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Oilmen, Chemists, &c., everywhere

LAIRITZ'S

CELEBRATED

Established 1853. Awarded 18 Medals and Diplomas. For the Relief and Cure of GOUT, RHEUMATISM, COLDS, &c.

Wadding in packets, Knee-Caps, Inside Soles, Oil, EXTRACT FOR BATH, Lozenges. Of all the LEADING CHEMISTS everywhere. Flannels, Underclothing, Knitting Yarn. Sold by all leading Drapers and Hosiers.

Wholesale Depot for Fabrics only: WELCH, MARGETSON & Co., 16, Cheapside, London.

Caution.—Observe the Tree Trade Mark with Signature on each piece.

PINE WOOL.

THE WINDOW

Is the most important thing to be considered in the decoration of a house. The eye naturally turns to the opening by which light enters the room; and in the ideal home the view from that opening, and everything that serves to frame it, should be attractive. The most beautiful thing to be seen through a window is a garden of flowers, but nine-tenths of human habitations in civilised countries are so placed that their windows overlook scenes very different—sometimes dreary streets, stables, and chimney pots. Glacier Window Decoration will add beauty to the window, it is not costly, and no alteration of sashes is required. It is the only effective and reliable substitute for stained glass.

Hundreds of specimens can be seen, and all information can be had at

THE GLACIER DEPÔTS,

153, Piccadilly, W., and 56, Queen Victoria St., E.C.

The Best is the Cheapest! Fixed, moderate prices for first quality.

TRADE MARK ON EACH GARMENT

Dr. Jaeger's "Health Culture," and Jaeger Price List, sent free on application.

WEST-END JAEGER DEPOTS—

3 & 4, Princes-street, Cavendish-square (near Regent Circus);
126, Regent-street (near the Quadrant);
30, Sloane-street (adjoining McPherson's Gymnasium);
456, Strand (near Trafalgar-square).

CITY JAEGER DEPOTS—

85 & 86, Cheapside (near King-street);
[illegible], Fenchurch-street (near Lime-street);
42 & 43, Fore-street (near Moorgate-street Station).

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.

BAHADUR

FOR

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS &c.

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

Cigars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins, 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder for Burning and Inhalation, Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. Of Chemists everywhere.

BENGER'S FOOD.

For Infants, Children, and Invalids.

"Humanly speaking, 'Benger's Food' entirely saved baby's life. He could digest nothing until we began the 'Benger.' He is now rosy and fattening rapidly."—Extract from Private Letter.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED

INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION.

TINS, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s., OF ALL CHEMISTS, &c.

PUREST IN ENGLAND.

BOURNE TABLE WATERS

SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

Analysis, &c., on Application.

R. M. MILLS & CO., BOURNE, LINCOLNSHIRE.

West-End Agent, D. WHEATLEY, 16A, North Audley-st., W. City Agents, ALEX. D. RAE & CO. (late Hardy & Co.), Chemists, 23, Fenchurch-street, and 6, Railway place, E.C.;

And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

CARPETS.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

AXMINSTER PILE CARPETS,
2/11 (American) 3/11 to 4/9

WILTON PILE CARPETS,
3/9 to 4/6

BRUSSELS CARPETS,
2/1 to 3/9

TAPESTRY CARPETS,
1/9 to 2/6

LINOLEUM,
1/- to 4/- PER SQUARE YARD.

DECCAN RUGS,
8/9 EACH.

CATALOGUES FREE.

TRELOAR & SONS

LUDGATE HILL.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses,
2, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C.
(Facing the Mansion House)
158, OXFORD STREET, W.

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET, SHEFFIELD.

BAMBOO FURNITURE (SUPERIOR QUALITY)

MAPLE & Co LTD

TOTTENHAM COURT RD LONDON

The Largest and Most Convenient

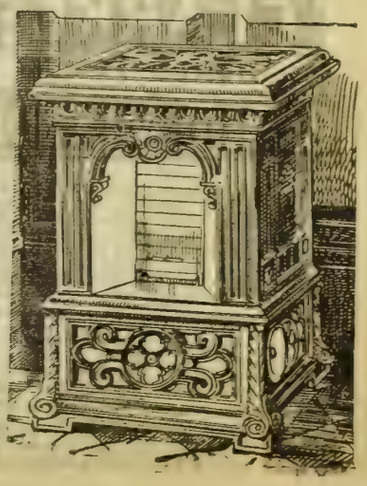
FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT
IN THE WORLD

BAMBOO AND WICKER FURNITURE

SPECIAL CATALOGUE OF NOVELTIES FREE

THE NORHAM CARD TABLE in bamboo, with lacquered top; lined cloth; well for cards or papers, and undertray; top measures 24 by 14 in.; if open, 28 by 24 in.; 30 in. high.
£1. 9s. 6d.

THE ARCADIAN OIL WARMING STOVE, in glazed Doulton ware, constructed on scientific principles, absolutely safe, entirely free from smell; costs one farthing per hour.
£2. 18s. 6d.



TO ENSURE THE GREATEST COMFORT
WEAR THE NEW PATENT

"EIDEX"

COMBINATION

By Royal Letters Patent

FOR

LADIES & CHILDREN.

The demand for Combination Garments generally has considerably increased during the last few years, but the one weak point in this otherwise most sensible garment was the difficulty in securing an efficient wrap at the back.

This has now been overcome by means of an extra covering inside at the back only, which is an improvement of the utmost practical utility. Ladies will immediately apprehend and appreciate the greatly enhanced comfort to be obtained by wearing the "EIDEX" COMBINATION.

Prices: From 6/11 Pure Wool from 9/11 Ribbed do. from 5/6

NOTE.—The Dove Head Trade Mark is Attached to Every Garment.

To be had of all Ladies' Outfitters, and Wholesale only of

STAPLEY & SMITH, London Wall, London, E.C.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?

PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement, and biliousness.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN,

and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

Foreign Medicines & Toilet Articles &c
Roberts & Co
Chemists. 5 R de la Paix Paris
Keep at their London House
76 New Bond St. W.
all French & Foreign Medicines &c

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S
WORLD-FAMED
BLOOD MIXTURE

"CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE is entirely "free from any poison "or metallic impregnation, does not contain any injurious "ingredient, and is a "good, safe, and useful "medicine."

ALFRED SWAINE TAYLOR M.D., F.R.S., Lecturer on Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology.

Warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities from WHATEVER cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the blood and bones. Thousands of testimonials. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent for 33 or 132 stamps, by the Proprietors—THE LINCOLN AND MIDLAND COUNTIES DRUG CO., LINCOLN.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES. Londonderry Wallsend, 36s.; Pittington Wallsend, 35s.; Primrose, 34s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 33s. per ton. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1886.

FARM AND COLONIZATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

DIRECTORS:

WILLIAM WRIGHT, Esq., J.P., Wollaton, Nottingham, Chairman.
FRANCIS W. FOX, Esq., 14, Dean's Yard, Westminster.
HAROLD J. RECKITT, Esq., J.P., Winestead Hall, Hull.
JOHN BROOK BRAY, Esq., Clapham, Polegate, Sussex.
BENJAMIN GLASGOW, Esq., 77, Oxford-gardens, North Kensington, W.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of supplying RELIABLE INFORMATION to intending settlers abroad, and also to give them introductions to the Agents of the Company, who can assist them in any difficulty, and BEFRIEND them until they are sufficiently established to rely upon themselves.

EMPLOYMENT WILL BE FOUND where a living can be earned until the settler is able to farm on his own account.

ASSISTANCE WILL BE GIVEN in the choice of a farm for either special or general farming, also for cotton planting or orange growing.

The Directors and Secretary have a large experience in the requirements of settlers, both at home and abroad; the AGENTS ABROAD are men in good position, and are PERSONALLY KNOWN to the Secretary and some of the Directors.

For further information apply to VICTOR M. HOLLINSWORTH, Secretary.

11, Charing Cross, London, S.W.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

REVERSIONS.—The Reversion Mortgage Trust purchase reversions and life incomes, or lend thereon at 4 per cent. per annum. No charge made unless business results.—Apply to Messrs. FELDMAN, 3 New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London. Solicitors' and Estate Agents' attention particularly requested.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE

63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.
(FIRE.)

BUYERS and SELLERS of quoted and unquoted Commercial, Industrial, and Mining Securities should communicate with THE COMMERCIAL STOCK and SHARE CORPORATION, Limited, Stock and Share Dealers, 10, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C. Telegraphic Address: "UNQUOTED, LONDON." All Mining Shares dealt in at close current quotations. Advances made on Stocks and Shares at moderate rates. Send for List, giving numerous quotations not published by any other firm, post free.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.

No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
[ESTABLISHED 1867.]
ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,
From £30 to £5,000,
To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their
NOTE OF HAND ALONE.
ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.
Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.
NO SURETIES REQUIRED.
Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited
No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.
General Accidents. | Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accident
C. HARDING, Manager.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid up, £300,000. Total funds, £1,600,000. E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.
EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.
Invested Funds, £10,000,000.
The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES.
LONDON OFFICE: 81, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.
ASSETS OVER .. .. £31,800,000.
SURPLUS EXCEEDS .. .. £6,480,000.
This Society originated the Tontine System of Life Assurance, under which the premiums paid form a lucrative investment, and not an expense, affording provision for old age as well as immediate family provision in the event of death.
ABSOLUTE SECURITY. LOW PREMIUMS. LARGE PROFITS.
Before assuring elsewhere, send for Prospectus and Illustrative Pamphlets.
A. MUNKITTRICK, Manager for Great Britain and Ireland.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

The London and South Western Bank, Limited, Fenchurch-street, E.C., and Branches, will receive subscriptions for the undermentioned Capital.

DIVIDEND-PAYING MINE.

THE FISK GOLD MINE, LIMITED.

Capital, £200,000, in 200,000 Shares of £1 each, of which 66,000 are accepted by the Vendor in part payment of the Purchase-money, and the remaining 134,000 Shares are now offered for Subscription, payable 5s. per Share on Application, 5s. on Allotment, and the balance 14 days after Allotment. None of the Capital has been underwritten or guaranteed, although applications for a large proportion have already been received, but the Directors will, as far as they are able, make all allotments pro rata.

DIRECTORS.

HENRY BONNER, Esq. (Chairman, Commercial Brewery Co., Ltd.), The Avenue, Gipsy Hill.
CHARLES HORSLEY, Esq. (A. & C. Horsley, London and Manchester), 24, Southwark-street, S.E.
LIONEL R. NETTRE, Esq. (Director Cortez Mines, Limited).
JAMES STEPHENS, Esq., 2, Brown-street, Manchester.
*JOSEPH WALTON, Esq. (Mountain, Walton, & Co.), 5, Fenchurch-street, E.C.
*Will join the Board after Allotment.

BANKERS.

LONDON and SOUTH WESTERN BANK, LIMITED, Fenchurch-street, E.C., and Branches.

BROKERS.

Messrs. BOURKE, SANDYS, & CO., 7, Austin Friars, London, E.C.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. STOKES, SAUNDERS, & STOKES, 21, Great St. Helens, E.C.

AUDITORS.

Messrs. HERBERT KIDSON & CO., Chartered Accountants, London, Manchester, and Chicago.

CONSULTING ENGINEER.—P. COULSON BUNN, Esq., F.C.S., M.E.
SECRETARY.—WILLIAM HOPE, Esq.
REGISTERED OFFICES.—5, Fenchurch-street, London, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

OBJECTS OF COMPANY.

This Company has been formed to purchase the whole of the Share Capital of the Fisk Gold Mining and Milling Company, of Blackhawk, Gilpin County, Colorado (U.S.A.), the acquisition of which will entitle this Company to the Mine, Mining Rights, Plant and Buildings, and other properties and rights, belonging to the Fisk Gold Mining and Milling Company. The Company has also been formed to purchase a valuable property adjoining, known as the Teller Fisk Mine.

The Mines have been reported upon by Mr. P. Coulson Bunn, who, in his report, dated the 30th day of April, 1893, a copy of which is enclosed with the prospectus, gives the following

DESCRIPTION OF THE MINES.

(1.) The Mines are situated in one of the oldest and most productive gold-mining districts in the State of Colorado, on the line of the Colorado Central Railroad, and adjoin the celebrated Gregory Bobtail Mines, which have been worked for many years, and are reported to have yielded over $17,000,000 of gold, and the developments show the mines to be as rich as ever, vast bodies of ore being blocked out.

(2.) The Fisk Mine is developed by a working shaft about 950 feet deep, from which eight levels have been driven on the vein. The vein is a true fissure, and has an average thickness of three feet, and, like all veins in the district, it is characteristically permanent. The uniformity and strength of the fissure is fully demonstrated, and the history and experience of Gilpin County go to prove, beyond doubt, that the district is a deep mining one, and the yield of gold improves as depth is attained, and it is a known and established fact that the true fissure veins of Gilpin County can be worked to as great a depth as machinery can profitably handle the product. In the Gregory Bobtail Mines, the richest ore is being obtained in the lower levels, and the workings in the Fisk Mine demonstrate the character of the vein as being identical with that of the Gregory Bobtail veins, and it is anticipated that the richest ore will be found as depth is attained.

(3.) The mines are thoroughly dry, the deep workings of the Gregory Bobtail Mine being 1,300 feet below the bottom level of the Fisk, most effectually draining the whole hill.

(4.) The Teller Fisk adjoins the Fisk Mine, and the Fisk Lode runs through it. The Fisk Shaft being sunk on the western boundry of the Fisk Mine, there will be no dead work necessary to open up the lode, beyond driving the levels to the west direct from the Fisk Shaft.

(5.) Both properties are held under letters patent granted by the Government of the United States of America, and there are no rents or royalties payable of any description whatever.

On the recommendation of Mr. P. Coulson Bunn, the Directors have decided to purchase the Teller Fisk, and, in the words of his Report, "with the acquisition of the Teller Fisk, and the erection of air-drilling plant (which can be done from profits) the net revenue of the Company will not be less than £60,000 per annum."

RESULTS OF WORKING.

The Vendor states that mining operations were commenced by the present [illegible] Mine about two years ago and the gross output in that time, money (at the exchange of $4.85) for the first seventeen months' working was as follows:—

For 11 months ending 30th June, 1892	...	£15,073
,, 6 months ending 31st December, 1892		16,049
Total		£31,122

During 1893 Mr. Bunn reports to the Directors that quarterly dividends have been paid at the rate of 45 per cent. per annum, in addition to a large bonus, and the output month by month for the year 1893 has been:—

	Gross Output.	Net Profits.
January	£3,331 6 8	£1,845 15 4
February	4,301 16 11	2,843 5 11
March	6,008 4 9	4,414 4 6
April (3 weeks)	3,844 6 5	2,443 5 11
May	1,636 13 10	382 9 6
June	4,199 19 10	2,385 15 6
July	5,662 5 1	3,737 6 5
	£28,984 13 6	£18,052 3 1
Less value of ore in hand at the end of 1892		308 13 4
		£17,743 9 9

Showing a net profit for the seven months' working of £17,743 9s. 9d., being at the rate of £30,417 8s. per annum. These figures are certified to be correct by Messrs. Herbert Kidson & Co., Chartered Accountants of London, Manchester, and Chicago, who, acting under instructions, have examined the books and accounts at the Mine, and have given the following certificate to the Directors:—

6, St. James's-square, Manchester, and at 54, Gresham-street, London, E.C. and 214, Royal Insurance-buildings, Chicago, U.S.
The Directors of the Fisk Gold Mine, Limited. October 4th, 1893.

Gentlemen,—In accordance with instructions received, we have made a careful examination of the books and accounts at the mine, and certify that the net profits for the seven months ending 31st July last, as shown therein (subject to depreciation and allowance for the President's and Director's remuneration), amounted to £17,743 9s. 9d., or say a profit at the rate of £30,417 8s. per annum.

During the greater part of the month of May the operations were suspended for the purpose of putting in new machinery.—Yours faithfully,

(Signed) HERBERT KIDSON & CO.,
Chartered Accountants.

The above results have been obtained notwithstanding that during the greater part of the month of May the Mine was shut down whilst new hoisting machinery was being erected.

The returns for the last two months, according to cables received from Mr. J. F. Hopkins at the Mine, are as follows, at $4.85, viz.:—

	Gross Output.	Net Profits.
August	£5,154 12 8	£3,711 6 9
September	5,567 0 1	4,123 14 2

Showing net profits for the two months of £7,835, or at the rate of £47,010 per annum.

DIVIDEND PROSPECTS.

Having regard to the rate of profit shown by the above-mentioned recent workings, the Directors anticipate, if the present rate of output should continue, that they will be able to pay quarterly dividends at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum on the Capital of this Company. But when the Company shall have acquired the Teller Fisk Mine, the Directors anticipate a considerable increase in the profit (see Mr. P. Coulson Bunn's Report).

As the Mine is at present a Dividend-producing Mine, and this Company will take over all the profits from the date of the completion of the purchase, together with all plant, tools, and stock, and all moneys earned from the date of completion, the Directors believe that there will be sufficient working capital without making any further provision for the same, but to guard against any contingency, it has been arranged to set aside £10,000 of the Capital of the Company as Working Capital.

RESERVES OF ORE.

As regards the ore in sight in the Fisk Mine, Mr. P. Coulson Bunn, in his Report, states "that between the 600 and 900 ft. levels there remained to be stoped out 25,000 tons of ore, which should produce a net profit of $400,000," and as regards the Teller Fisk, he further states that "assuming the ledge (which there is no reason to doubt) being equal to that of the Fisk, you will have 45,000 tons of ore ready to be worked from the Fisk shaft from the surface to the 900-ft. level, which would produce a net profit of $550,000."

From the reports that have been obtained, and results of the working of the Mine to hand, the Directors are of opinion that the future of this property is not only assured, but progressive, especially as the reports express the view that the richness and quantity of the ore will increase with depth.

Applications for Shares should be made on the form accompanying this Prospectus, and sent with the deposit to the Company's Bankers.

Prospectuses, Reports, and Forms of Application can be obtained from the Bankers and Brokers, or of the Secretary of the Company, 5, Fenchurch-street, E.C.—LONDON, 18th November, 1893.

For full Prospectus see leading daily papers of yesterday, Monday, the 20th.

CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL

TESTIMONIALS.

COLDS.—LADY LYONS writes from Kilbrough, Swansea, 25th October, 1892:—"She wishes another Carbolic Smoke Ball sent her as she found the one she got from them in the summer most useful for warding off Colds."

CATARRH.—Rev. Dr. LUNN, M.D. writes from 5, Endsleigh Gardens, London, N.W.:—"I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad Catarrh."

ASTHMA.—Captain C. N. ROBINSON writes from Aldemay Park, Bromley, Kent, 1st January 1893:—"I may say that I have found the greatest relief from Asthma of a most troublesome nature by the use of your Carbolic Smoke Ball."

THE VOICE.—The Rev. Canon FLEMING, B.D., Chaplain-in-Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen, writes:—"Canon Fleming has pleasure in stating that he has used the Carbolic Smoke Ball with great success. Its use not only checked the progress of a heavy cold in its earlier stages, and removed it, but has prevented it going down into the chest, and preserved his Voice for his public duties."

THE NURSERY.—LADY MOSTYN writes from Caishalton, Cary Crescent, Torquay, February, 1892:—"She finds the Carbolic Smoke Ball is a great acquisition in the Nursery."

Price 10s. Post Free. Can be refilled when empty for 5s.

TO BE OBTAINED FROM ALL CHEMISTS AND DRUGGISTS.

CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL CO., LIMITED,

27, PRINCES STREET, HANOVER SQUARE, LONDON, W.

TWO TIMES TWO

THE Public is duped by worthless evidence of all sorts. Testimonials from Scientific, Clerical, and Theatrical people, big advertisements, medals, large sales, and thumping claims, by no means prove the article advertised to be bona-fide. The one thing in the case of Soap that can alone be relied on is the analysis of some eminent scientific chemist corroborated by that of others.

"VINOLIA SOAP" is the only Soap we know of which has passed through this ordeal. Analyses tell.

Premier, 4d.; Floral, 6d.; Balsamic, 8d.; Toilet (Otto), 10d.; and Vestal, 2s. 6d. per Tablet.

BLONDEAU et CIE., Ryland-rd., London, N.W.

American Depot:—73-77, WATTS-STREET, NEW YORK.

OUR PUZZLES.

RULES.

1. The sum of £2. 2s. will be given every week for the best EPIGRAM, CONUNDRUM, LIPOGRAM, BOUTS-RIMÉS, or whatever the announced subject of the competition for the week may be.

2. The Puzzle Editor reserves the right, however, of dividing the above sum between two or more competitors, or of withholding the prize, should exceptional circumstances render such a course desirable.

3. The decision and award of the Puzzle Editor must be considered final and irrevocable, and, for obvious reasons, no appeal from his critical judgments can be entertained.

4. In every instance the prize will be given in money, subject to no condition whatever, except the publication of the winner's real name and address in this journal.

5. Competitors will be allowed eleven days for the composition and despatch of their efforts; but all such communications must, at the latest, be received at the TRUTH OFFICE by the first post on the morning of the second Monday succeeding the publication of the subject for competition.

6. Not more than one Prize will be given a Quarter to the same competitor.

7. ALL NEW CONTRIBUTORS ARE REQUIRED TO FORWARD WITH THEIR FIRST ANSWERS THEIR REAL NAMES AND ADDRESSES FOR REGISTRATION; such names and addresses will not be published except in the case of Prize winners.

8. The nom-de-plume chosen by competitors should not exceed 12, and must under no circumstances consist of more than 14, letters.

9. COMPETITORS MUST ON NO ACCOUNT CHANGE THEIR NOMS DE PLUME THEY HAVE ONCE ASSUMED.

10. On the announcement of the Prize-winner's nom-de-plume, the successful competitor must write and make formal application for the Prize, stating the address to which the cheque must be sent. Any competitor failing to do so within three months of winning the Prize will forfeit all claim to the same.

11. No communications can be received on post-cards, by telegraph, or by hand. They must all be sent by the time named above. All post letters addressed—

PUZZLE EDITOR OF "TRUTH," CARTERET-STREET, QUEEN ANNE'S-GATE, S.W.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 769.—ORIGINAL ANAGRAM ON "THE FRANCO-RUSSIAN ALLIANCE.—CRONSTADT AND TOULON."

IMARA (real name and address will be given next week) £2 2 0

SPECIAL NOTICE.—"TRUTH" HOME-MADE TOY AND DOLL SHOW AT THE ALBERT HALL.

In less than a month the above Show will be held; a fact to which I would specially draw the attention of those ladies who are dressing, or may intend to dress, dolls for the Exhibition in question. Last week there were 850 undressed dolls at this Office, and some hundreds are still waiting for applicants. The space to be filled at the Albert Hall is very large; and it would be, indeed, a pity if the supply of dressed dolls fell short.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 774.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

A LIST OF THE MOST APPROPRIATE CHRISTMAS PRESENTS WHICH CAN BE PRESENTED BY THEIR SUBJECTS TO 1. THE CZAR OF RUSSIA. 2. THE KAISER OF GERMANY. 3. THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA. 4. THE KING OF SPAIN. 5. THE QUEEN OF HOLLAND. 6. THE KING OF ITALY. 7. THE SULTAN OF TURKEY. 8. THE SHAH OF PERSIA. 9. KING LOBENGULA OF MATABELELAND.

Only one present must be suggested for each potentate, and all lists must reach me by the morning of Monday, December 4, at the latest.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 768.

The result of this competition will be announced next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 770.

The Prize for the best Parodies in this competition will be divided between FELIXICUS and JACK, whose verses were published in TRUTH for November 16.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name and the address of BOBUS, winner of Prize No. 767, are C. R. Renz, Esq., 32, King's-road, Queen's-road, Finsbury Park, N.

 The real name and the address of BLACKHEATHEN, winner of one-half of Prize No. 766, are — Blackburn, Esq., Devonshire Lodge, Heaton Moor, near Stockport.

QUERIST.—The misprint is regretted. The "q" in your anagram should have been an "a." If the compositor had been as mindful of his P's and Q's as you were this mistake would not have occurred.

CHATTE.—You are quite right. Your anagram should have read "Oh, cut cant! for cold Tsar desires tin" (an annual loan).

DANDELION.—Thanks for your note.

SHLOWMOW.—Your anagram was certainly the only one which pointed to the coincidental visit of the British Fleet to Italian waters. Your suggestion for a Puzzle is on my list of available subjects, and I hope some day to be able to use it.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 771.

ANSWERS TO ORIGINAL "TOPICAL" CONUNDRUMS.

 The following is a complete list of the answers to the Conundrums published in TRUTH on Nov. 2, 1893.—THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

1. The present strike.—Cash.
2. Too many hunting crops in his fields.—Cash.
3. Because the ring-leader is Mello.—Cash.
4. One wages a defensive warfare, the other is a defensive war for wages.—Cash.
5. Weak "Ayes" and enlargement of the "Noes" in the upper storey.—Albion.
6. The one is "brought in" by the ladies, but the other was "thrown out" by the Lords.—Clarissima.
7. When La Mer est Toulouse.—Infelix
8. One strikes when he does not mean business, and the other when he does.—Infelix.
9. Because it has been given to Asquith (ask with).—Almaviva.
10. Because his method of fighting is Impi-ous.—Giroutte.
11. An agitato movement in the minors with a finale in extended harmony.—Alice J. Wood.
12. Because it threatens to destroy the plan it mars (the Planet Mars).—Bobus.
13. Because when it takes place they will see a "rent in the clouds," and have no grounds left for complaining.—Bobus.
14. Because when it takes place we may expect to see the "Sunburst" over their heads.—Bobus.
15. Because it has not gone over to the majority, the majority has gone over to it.—Bobus.
16. The one are "spoiling for a fight," the other fighting for the spoils.—Bobus.
17. One looks to the lords of creation to dismember it, the other to the creation of lords to drown it.—Bobus.
18. Because although one of the oldest inmates of the House, he is constantly defying the Guardians of the Union.—Bobus.
19. Because he is shelling the natives.—Bobus.
20. One shells the impis, the other impis (Anglicè empties) the shells.—Bobus.
21. To be lynx-eyed.—Justinian.
22. "Go to the Devil" ("The Tempter").—Idler.
23. Because he had a decided objection to the presence of gore.—Nep.
24. Because it was a gory proceeding.—Nep.
25. To draw a Lyne to any point outside the Congress Hall from a given point in the same.—Nep.
26. Because a draftsman is always able to produce a parallel ruler.—Lunatic.
27. Because there's a Sexton still waiting for it.—Lunatic.
28. Because the eyes (Ayes) had it a little above the nose (Noes).—Lunatic.
29. Because it's thrown out by the Peers (piers).—Lunatic.
30. Because it's only adapted to Mussulmen (muzzle men).—Lunatic.
31. When he's on strike and goes tick.—Lunatic.
32. Because he can always enjoy the presence of May, and she one which is August.—Isinglass.
33. One is a Tory, the other amatory.—Isinglass.
34. Because he does not exhibit common scents.—Isinglass.
35. The one as a fêted novel-ist, and the other as an ill-fated novel hissed.—Cæsar's Corner.
36. The coal strike.—Cæsar's Corner.
37. Because it was a cheap (Cheape) bargain.—Cæsar's Corner.
38. Mashonaland (mash on a land).—Rabelais.
39. Miami (me, ah me!)—Rabelais.
40. Because it is to be converted into a see (sea).—Esperanza.
41. Because it turns to Gaul (gall), and comes near to Marseilles (mar-sails).—Esperanza.
42. Because it is an Impi-ous movement.—Excelsior.
43. One Mayor slew a Tyler; now the Mayor and the Tyler are one.—Excelsior.
44. Because he is often cauld over the coals (called over the coals).—Jo.
45. Because it is gigantic in size and very much puffed.—Jo.
46. Because he is used in taking leave (see letters in Times, October 6, 1893 on subject).—Jo.
47. Not coaled (not cold).—Jo.
48. Because they have left arguing on Ire-land.—Jo.
49. Like! Why, old Sol is berry; he got beam in eye, and mote too go with him beam. Sol-is-berry (Salisbury).—Jo.
50. The boomerang and the Colonial Bishop both come back rapidly to the respective places whence they were sent.—J. McGrigor Allan.
51. The boomerang was intended to come back, and, therefore, performs its duty. The Colonial Bishop was intended not to come back and, therefore, in returning (to get preferment) shirks his duty.—J. McGrigor Allan.
52. Because it is infirm (in firm).—Chirpa.
53. Procrastination.—Chirpa.
54. Because they are coming scars (Comyns Carr's).—Chirpa.
55. Because being miners (minors) they cannot attain a majority.—Gyp.
56. Because their good-will is well looked after by the landlords.—Felixicus.
57. Because the former's will be always "Found Wanting," while the latter's will be "For one season only."—Felixicus.
58. Because the play has a Brand-on which (we all know) should be the making of a coming scar (Comyns Car.—Felixicus.
59. Because they are the centre of "Attraction."—Felixicus.

It may be well to state here that original topical conundrums for which space could not be found were also sent by Meogmta; Dorothea; Æsculapius; Bee; Libra; Morganus; Kibble; Selah; Shlowmow; Archalouer; J. McGregor Allan; Phos; East Anglia; Jilly Slowbury; Magog; J. A. B.; Heurteloup; Ubique; Algredo; R. B. Chambers; R. C. Dick; H. Ranyard; Kibble; H. B. A.; O. P. Q.; Ivy Leaves; Ye Hermit; Sol.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 770.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

PARODIES OF "AFTER THE BALL."

Came a big football straight at my knees,
'Tis a sad story, but true if you please,
In such mad fury, what I shall tell
Pales before giants or devils—well, well!
Play! I can tell you I'm black and blue,
Bruised in the joints, well-nigh pommelled to glue.
Once I'd some clothes on, scanty and small,
But I found them useless after the maul.

After the maul was over,
After the break of bone,
After the players vanished,
All our breath was gone.
Many a limb was aching,
If we could feel them all;
Many the ribs were shattered,
After the maul.

In that great maul, some heavy some light,
Kicked my shins badly, spilled me outright.
Proud of my prowess, scorning alarms,
Crowd of great rough ones clutching my arms;
Follow up—pass back—panting one cried,
Picking up neatly, not stopping his stride;
Kicking half-maddened, I made the chap fall
Nose broke, as my arm was, after the maul.

After long minutes of scrimmage and hush,
Finely our forwards heeled out from the crush;
Paddy is trying to pass, as he flies,
Our centre three-quarters—he muffs it and cries
"I mpire, the man you saw kicking me,
He was my brother, charging was he,
Kicked me! Lor' bless you, yes! 'Stead of the ball
Eood! I was blown after the maul. H. B.

AFTER THE FALL.

A lively young urchin climbed up on my knee,
And said, Uncle Tom, tell a story to me;
Oh, tell me a story of days long ago—
Days when you used always hunting to go.
A story, my boy! Well, here's one, and 'tis true,
How old Beeswax threw me in seventy-two;
'Twas a beautiful day—ah, how well I recall
That fine spanking run—and also the fall.

After the fall was over,
After the bones were set,
After the pain and anguish,
After I'd paid the vete
Many a time I'd hunted,
Breakfasted at the hall,
But all such sport I shunted—
After the fall.

We started one morning—Kate, Grace, Jack, and I—
To the meet of the hounds, at the cross roads close by,
As gaily we ambled and cantered along,
We all sang the chorus of an old hunting song.
The fox breaks away, and we shout "Tally-ho!"
As flying o'er fields and high fences we go,
Till we came to a field with an old gravel-pit,
When my old mare fell and threw me into it.

I was placed on a litter and taken away,
They thought I was dead as unconscious I lay;
The doctor soon came and put my bones right—
How well I remember the pain of that night.
And since then all huntsmen and hunting I shun,
And stick to my cricket, my dog, and my gun;
Let's go and see Beeswax—she stands in her stall—
She ne'er was the same again after the fall.

Suo Marte.

AFTER THE HAUL.

(As sung at the Theatre Royal, Buenos Ayres.)

Came the police here, climbing the seas,
Tell us your story, no bunkum Jabez.
Tell you my story? What shall I tell—
Tales of my clients, like Solomon Pell?
Nay, I will tell you something that's true,
How I sloped from them and dodged children like you.
Once I had "pardners," rogues one and all,
But I knew they'd be faithless after the haul.

After the haul was over,
After the "chink" was gone,
After financiers thieving,
After the cheques were drawn,
Many a heart was breaking
(But that don't count at all),
Many the homes that were shattered
After the haul.

In my grand hall's room gorgeous and bright
Hobbs and I sat one Saturday night,
Proud of the companies built on our crams,
Proud of the soft ones welshed by our shams—
"Wait, some one's knocking!" softly I cried.
Soon I returned, a man by my side,
Whispering, "Gaff's blown on." I felt my jaws fall—
Stone-broke were our companies after the haul.

After a pause of silence and gloom
Away I went straight to my own room,
Packed up, and flying long ere sunrise,
I went—do you see any green in my eyes?
Coppers! the man who was whisp'ring to me,
He was a brother, my "cover" was he.
Good-bye! God bless you! thanks for your call.
Ah, lads, now you know all after the haul!

Dandelion.

DURING THE SQUALL.

Once a young French lady in the Tuileries,
Heard from her father stories of the seas;
Anxious for adventure, and for London's fun,
She went to Calais and was off at one.
I'll tell you something, something that's true,
Every Sunday, praying in her pew,
She had a sweetheart, and his name was Paul,
But she dare not think of him during the squall.

Crossing from Calais to Dover,
Wretched and all forlorn;
Just as the boat was leaving,
Many the oaths that were sworn.
Many a soul was aching,
Many a voice did call,
Oh! how she wish'd she were back
In France, after all.

Loud roared the tempest, down came the rain,
Oh! what would rid her of her woeful pain!
She made one effort, raised a fearful call,
Thinking her voice might reach her darling Paul.
Some one heard it, tho' 'twas not he,
But he looked after her so tenderly,
He gave her brandy, brought her a shawl,
And led her down below during the squall.

Chorus: Crossing, &c.

As she lay below there, she began to dream
All about that "angel" who answered to her scream,
She had not thanked him, and she lov'd him dear,
Oh! how she wish'd that he were once more near.
When she awoke, then, what did she see?
Her own preserver at a maiden's knee!
Who was he? Only steward after all,
And she'd thought him faithless during the squall.

Chorus: Crossing, &c.

Dictator.

Came my wee daughter, climbing my knees,
"Tell me what ails you, do father please!"
Tell you what ails me?—I'm not unwell—
All I regret is my song I can't sell.
Over song-writing time one does waste,
Anything now suits the general taste;
I must write nonsense—nonsense that's all,
And give it a title—"After the Ball."

"After the Ball," I hear it
First in the morning light,
"After the Ball," continues
Through all the hours of night.
Many a tongue repeats it—
Young and old, great and small—
London is going mad over
"After the Ball."

Grand may one's words be, wit may be bright,
He may on subjects suitable write,
Music the sweetest he may compose,
People will only turn up their nose!
I will have done with music and verse—
Oh! had my work been twenty times worse
'Twould have repaid me—made me—that's all!
Rubbish pays best, like "After the Ball."

I've been told in years that have sped,
Genius was held far cheaper than bread;
And this I know—I'm sorry to say—
To be a genius now doesn't pay.
Song-writing I'll ne'er tackle again,
All I can see 'tis labour in vain;
But I'll write something—nonsense, that's all,
And I will call it—"After the Ball."

Dorothea.

"TRUTH"

CAN BE OBTAINED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING AT

THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,

242, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

A PHENOMENAL SUCCESS.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

AN EXCELLENT MEDIUM MILD INDIAN CIGAR.

A most delightful weed. Sample four or five 1s., or free by return post 12 stamps.

BEWLAY'S 49, STRAND, W.C.; 74, STRAND (EAST INDIA HOUSE); & 143, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.

To bacconist to the Royal Family. Estab. 1780. Descriptive Price List post free

"CANADIAN CLUB" WHISKY.

COLD CAPSULES, 1886 make. Bottled at the Distillery in Bond and under Government supervision, whereby the age and genuineness are guaranteed by an official certificate over every capsule.

WHITE CAPSULE, Bottled by the Wine Merchants in England.

Age and Genuineness Guaranteed by the Excise Department of the Canadian Government, by Certificate over the Capsule of every Bottle.

DISTILLED BY HIRAM WALKER & SONS, LIMITED, WALKERVILLE, CANADA.

— OF ALL WINE MERCHANTS. —

TRADE W MARK

LONDON OFFICES: 69 & 70, MARK LANE, E.C.

Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

DECAY OF THE TEETH

arises from various causes, but principally it may be attributed to early neglect or the indiscriminate use of tooth powders and pastes, which give a momentary whiteness to the teeth while they corrode the enamel. The timely use of that delicate aromatic tooth-wash, will speedily arrest the progress of decay, harden the gums, and impart a delightful fragrance to the breath. The formula of Sozodont includes only botanic ingredients, and it contains only the purest and most salutary of these.

FRAGRANT

SOZODONT

BABIES

are often deprived of necessary flesh and strength by the weak and emaciated condition of the mother. The mother's milk is made rich and she is furnished with strength by taking of Cod-liver Oil, with hypophosphites. Wonderful how soon babies and children are made fat and healthy and mothers are nourished back to a normal condition by Scott's Emulsion. Blood diseases and hereditary weaknesses are cured also.

Scott's Emulsion

MOTHERS

ought to give Scott's Emulsion to all growing children, or any member of the family whose health is at a low ebb.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Lim., 47, Farringdon-st., London, E.C.

All Chemists, 2/6 and 4/6.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.

Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.

A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,

HAEMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.

Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.

Sold by all Chemists and Druggists

E. GRILLON,

69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

WESTWARD TO THE FAR EAST.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALASIA.—Varied, picturesque, and fastest route is via Vancouver.

CANADA AND UNITED STATES.—Through tickets to all points; luxurious dining cars, sleeping cars, mountain hotels.

ROUND THE WORLD.—By arrangement with the P. & O. Company, and all Atlantic Lines via Japan or Australia, price £125.

FREE FARMS. With Cash Bonus to Settlers in the North-West.—For berths and descriptive pamphlets, apply PASSENGER DEPARTMENT, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, King William-street, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

GRANT'S MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY.

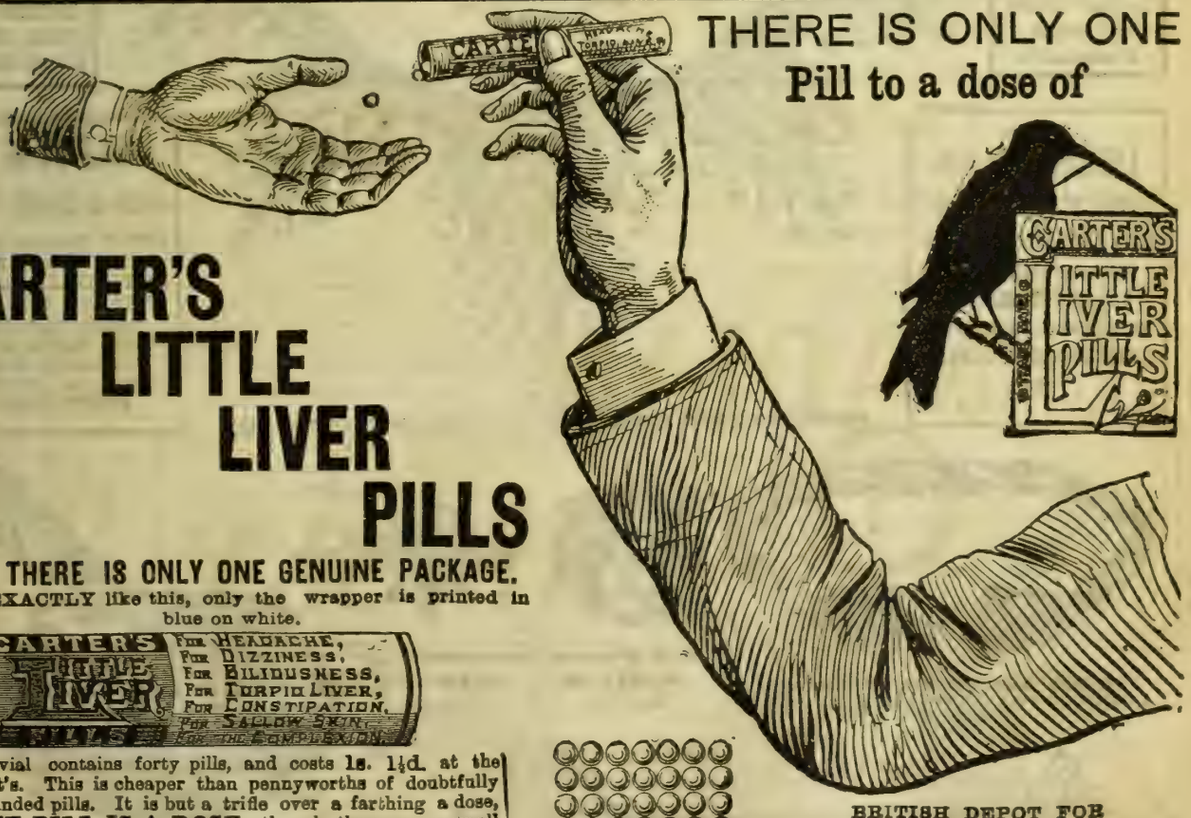
FIRST-PRIZE MEDALS at LONDON, MELBOURNE, and CALCUTTA

Is the most delicious Liqueur in the World.

Have you ever tasted it?

It is very strengthening for the weak and aged, and most comforting in damp and chilly weather. Nice with lemonade or soda water.

Sold by Wine Merchants and at Restaurants.

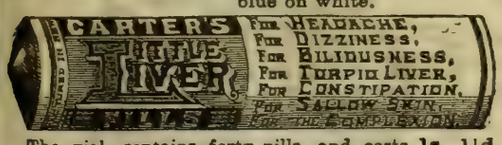


THERE IS ONLY ONE
Pill to a dose of

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

AND THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE PACKAGE.

It is EXACTLY like this, only the wrapper is printed in blue on white.



The vial contains forty pills, and costs 1s. 1½d. at the Chemist's. This is cheaper than pennyworths of doubtfully compounded pills. It is but a trifle over a farthing a dose, for ONE PILL IS A DOSE, though they are so small that FORTY-NINE of them only measure one inch square.

Cure TORPID LIVER WITHOUT FAIL. SICK HEADACHE, MALAISE, DISTRESS FROM EATING, and SALLOW COMPLEXION promptly done away with.

BRITISH DEPOT FOR

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS,

46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C.

LIBERTY & CO.

ARTISTIC JEWELLERY AND GOLD AND SILVER WARE,

Eastern and Western, Ancient, Mediæval, and Modern,

FOR

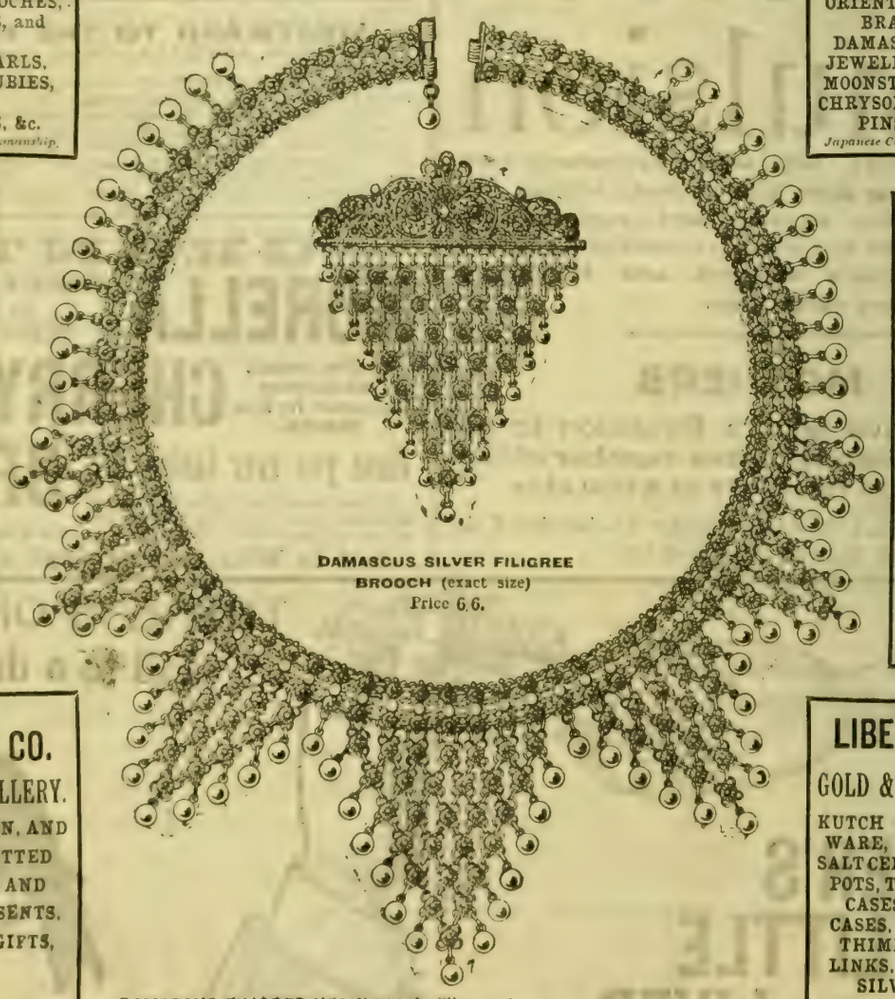
WEDDING PRESENTS, BRIDESMAIDS' GIFTS, PRESENTS DE LUXE, CHRISTENING PRESENTS, BIRTHDAY and YULE-TIDE GIFTS.

Estimates given and Designs submitted.

LIBERTY & CO.
ARTISTIC JEWELLERY.
NECKLACES, BROOCHES, BANGLES, PINS, and STUDS, in DIAMONDS, PEARLS, TURQUOISES, RUBIES, SAPPHIRES, EMERALDS, &c.
Unique Designs and Workmanship.

LIBERTY & CO.
ARTISTIC JEWELLERY.
ORIENTAL NECKLACES, BRACELETS, &c. DAMASCUS FILIGREE JEWELLERY. CEYLON MOONSTONE BROOCHES. CHRYSOPRASE BROOCHES PINS, RINGS, &c.
Japanese Charm Bead Necklaces, &c.

LIBERTY & CO.
ARTISTIC JEWELLERY.
ORIENTAL JEWELLERY in TOPAZES, AMETHYSTS, PEARLS, SAPPHIRES, EMERALDS, and RUBIES. Rich and elaborate Designs. Chaste and elegant Workmanship.



DAMASCUS SILVER FILIGREE BROOCH (exact size) Price 6/6.

LIBERTY & CO.
ARTISTIC JEWELLERY.
Reproductions of Old Flemish Silver Work.
CHATELAINS, BROOCHES, CLASPS, BUCKLES, LETTER CLIPS, PHOTO FRAMES, SUGAR SIFTERS

LIBERTY & CO.
ARTISTIC JEWELLERY.
ESTIMATES GIVEN, AND DESIGNS SUBMITTED FOR WEDDING AND BIRTHDAY PRESENTS, BRIDESMAIDS' GIFTS, &c.

DAMASCUS FILIGREE NECKLACE, in Silver, price 42/-; in Silver Gilt, price 50/-.

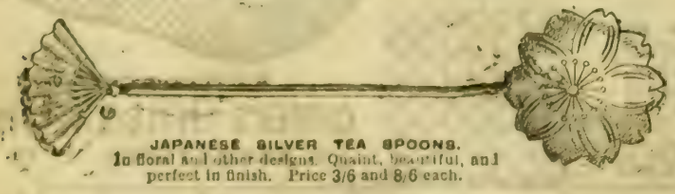
LIBERTY & CO.
GOLD & SILVER WARE.
KUTCH (Indian) SILVER WARE, PEPPER BOXES, SALT CELLARS, MUSTARD POTS, TEA SETS, CARD CASES, CIGARETTE CASES, MATCH BOXES, THIMBLES, SLEEVE LINKS, &c., JAPANESE SILVER SPOONS.

SILVER DAMASCUS TWIST BANGLE.
A quaint armlet of excellent Eastern design and finish. Price 10/6.

GOLD ORIENTAL PUZZLE RING. Price 30/-

CHRYSOPRASE and GOLD BROOCH. Price 27/6.

SILVER SALT CELLAR and SPOON. Kutch Work (Exact size), price 17/6. Gilt inside, price 18/6



JAPANESE SILVER TEA SPOONS. In floral and other designs. Quaint, beautiful, and perfect in finish. Price 3/6 and 8/6 each.

LIBERTY & CO. Goldsmiths and Silversmiths, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER. "Truth" Buildings Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 883. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, November 30, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

THE SEVENTEENTH

CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF "TRUTH,"

"The Spookeries,"

Will be published on

THURSDAY, the 30th of NOVEMBER,

In a Special Wrapper,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

It will be profusely Illustrated by F. Carruthers Gould.

The Illustrations will include THREE DOUBLE-PAGED and FOUR FULL-PAGED CARTOONS, printed in colours :—

1. "Truth" Speaks about Spooks.
2. Viva el Toro.
3. A Demonstration of Loyalty (With a Collection).
4. Salisbury's Stuffed Geese.
5. Chamberlain's Dive.
6. A Royalty Raree Show.
7. Work for the Girl-Flogger.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

I HAVE received about half that is required in order to give every child in a London Hospital or Workhouse a Christmas Toy. I must, therefore, respectfully beg the readers of Truth to send me the other half, or otherwise one-half of these children will remain toyless. This would be a sad disappointment to them. These poor little children have but very few pleasures, and by each one getting a toy at Christmas, at least one day in the year is made a happy one for them. What pleases them is the feeling that they actually have something that belongs to them. Times are bad, but I really think that those who are suffering from the prevailing depression would do well to find some other way to make both ends meet, than by cutting off the trifle which brings home to so many poor children that they are not utterly forgotten. Meanwhile, I have received the following amounts :—

L. M. B., £1. ; Sybil, Ida, Muriel, Hermione, and Granville, 10s. ; Violet, 2s. ; J. G. R., £1 ; Mrs. R. J. Neild, £1. 1s. ; H. T., £1. 1s. ; J. C. K., £2 ; H. B., 5s. ; C. Wilkinson, £1 ; Four little children, P. L. A., £4. 4s. ; J. P. A., £5. 5s. ; A. L. A., £5. 5s. ; Mrs. Steinkopff, £10 ; Henry Smith, 10s. 6d. ; J. G. C., 5s. ; H. U. T., £1. 1s. ; A. H. L., 10s. ; M. and V., £1 ; E. M. A. K., £2. 2s. ; Sympathy, £5 ; Unionist, £2 2s. ; Gladys and Christine, £3 ; Sidney Snelgrove, £2. 2s. ; J. M., £1 ; collected by H. A., 10s. ; Mr. Smith, £1 ; Three Cigars, 2s. 6d. ; J. C. G., £1. 1s. ; Leo, £3 ; Hon. Edwin Portman, £5 ; B. A., £3 ; D. B., £3 ; S. S., £5 ; Lady Dickeson (Grand Hotel), £5. 5s. ; Gordon and Sybil, 2s. 6d. ; J. G. Bartlett, 2s. 6d. ; Vera, 10s. 6d. ; J. F. A., 10s. ; Mrs. E. M. Rodocanachi, £2. 2s. ; Madame Campbell Clarke, £3. 3s. ; W. Theobald, 5s. ; James Carr, £1. 1s. ; Sir George H. Lewis, £5. ; Motherless, £2. 2s. ; Janet and Yda, £2. 2s. ; A. and G. H., 10s. ; Lottie, Harry, May, Edith, and Leslie, 10s. ; K. M., 5s. ; A. B., 5s. ; "Russia," 17s. (Last week I acknowledged 20s. from "X." It should have been 1s. only.)

There is to be the usual memorial service in the Prince Consort's mausoleum at Frogmore on Thursday, December 14, and the Queen and most of the members of the Royal family who are in England will be present. Formerly all the Queen's children, and their wives or husbands, as the case might be, and her Majesty's grandchildren were obliged to attend the function, as a matter of course ; but now invitations are sent out, and only those relations of the Queen who receive them are expected to be present at the service.

The Prince of Wales was shortly to have been the guest of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland at Trentham for a few days, but the visit will not now take place, in consequence of the death of Lord Cromartie.

The Duke of Coburg had three days of most excellent shooting in Devonshire last week. The party at Langdon Court, where the Duke was the guest of Mr. Cory, killed about 2,700 head, principally pheasants, in two days, and on Thursday he went shooting in Cornwall at Cotehele with Lord Mount-Edgcumbe (whose party included Lord Morley), and nearly 700 pheasants were bagged, as well as other game. The Duke, who stayed at Plymouth from early on Monday morning until midday on Friday, dined on two nights with Mr. and Mrs. Cory, on another with Sir Algernon Lyons, and on the other night with Sir Richard Harrison. H.R.H. leaves England to-day for Coburg, where the Duchess is residing The Duke has inherited a beautiful estate in the Tyrol, which affords some of the best chamois hunting in that country. And when he has had some chamois hunting, he will, no doubt, regard with the contempt of a real sportsman slaying tame pheasants by the hundred.

Apropos of the Duke of Coburg remaining a member of the Privy Council, and not having taken the oath, there is a clear statement of the exact position of the Queen's sons as Privy Councillors in the second part of the Greville "Memoirs" (vol. i., pp. 274 and 275), where it is stated, on the authority of the Duke of Sussex, that "the Sovereign's sons are born Privy Councillors, and they are declared sworn by the Queen whenever she pleases," being, in fact, "merely introduced" into Council. This view was accepted by the leaders of both parties in 1840, when there was a question raised as to the form with with Prince Albert was to be made a Privy Councillor.

Prince Christian has gone to Berlin on private business, partly for the Queen, having been charged by her Majesty with a family mission to the Emperor William and the Empress Frederick. Princess Christian and Princess Aribert of Anhalt have been staying with the Queen at Windsor Castle for a few days. Princess Louise has gone down to keep her Majesty company while Princess Beatrice is away in Germany.

It has been suggested at Court that Slane Castle, co. Meath, Lord Conyngham's well-known seat, should be rented as an Irish residence for the Duke and Duchess of York, and other members of the Royal family. Slane, which is one of the finest places in Ireland, is to be let furnished for a term of years, and everything there is in capital order, so no preliminary outlay would be necessary. I would suggest, however, that this residence should only be secured after Home Rule has become law, and then at the cost of Ireland. As, no doubt, the Duke and Duchess of York are most anxious to reside in Ireland, this arrangement would be an additional ground for their being Home Rulers.

Lord Derby's Garter, which has been vacant for an unprecedented period, has been conferred upon Lord Breadalbane, who had a strong claim upon Mr. Gladstone's gratitude, for he has most zealously supported Liberal principles in Scotland during the last twenty years, and has always been an unswerving adherent of the Prime Minister. Lord Breadalbane's appointment was arranged during Mr. Gladstone's visit to Windsor Castle last Thursday, and it meets with the hearty approval of the Queen. It is an open secret that great pressure was brought to bear in order to procure the vacant Garter for the Duke of Fife, whose appointment would have been bitterly resented in Liberal circles, as he is a rabid opponent of the present Government. I cannot say that I personally should object were every Peer, whether Tory or Liberal, made a Knight of the Garter. Once admit that the order is not conferred for merit, and it seems to me that it ought to be a matter of absolute indifference to the world what individuals are allowed to wear it.

The appointment of Colonel Colville to be Master of the Ceremonies vacates the office of Comptroller and Treasurer of the Duke of Coburg's household in England, which he had held since 1871, and also the Lieutenancy of the Yeomen of the Guard, to which he was nominated in 1872. The latter post will be filled up by the Queen from a list of three names which are to be sent in to her Majesty by Lord Kensington, the Captain of the Corps.

A correspondent writes:—

When Prince Alexander of Battenberg visited England shortly after his abdication I had an opportunity of conversing with him, and heard from his own lips the true story of his departure from Bulgaria. Prince Alexander did not fear Russia, but most cordial relations then prevailed between the Court of St. Petersburg and Berlin, and the paramount object of all Prince Bismarck's politics was to maintain this friendship. He, therefore, interfered with Bulgarian affairs in the interests of the Emperor of Russia, and Prince Alexander was plainly threatened with the bitter hostility of Germany if he punished the conspirators against him, who were notoriously the tools of Russia. He therefore left Bulgaria in the interest of the country, and history records no more noble example of pure unselfishness and simple zeal for the public welfare.

Count Moltke formed the very highest opinion of the Prince's military skill, and he regarded him as having all the qualities of a really great General. He still had the prospect of a brilliant career, for in the event of a European war, he would most assuredly have been appointed to a very high command in the Austrian Army. During the recent manœuvres the Emperor William warmly complimented Prince Alexander on the admirable appearance of his regiment and on the skill with which he led the troops under his command.

Lady Downe has gone to Windsor Castle as Lady-in-Waiting on the Queen, in the place of Lady Antrim, who had been in attendance on her Majesty for nearly three weeks. Lady Downe is to be on duty until next Tuesday, and she will be replaced by either the Dowager Lady Erroll or the Dowager Lady Southampton until December 19, when the Dowager Lady Churchill is to arrive, and she will accompany the Queen to Osborne, and will remain at Court until January 9.

Lord Houghton left the Viceregal Lodge last week for England. It is still the fashion in Irish society to boycott the Lord-Lieutenant, who when in Ireland at this season is allowed undisturbed enjoyment of seclusion in the Phœnix Park. The customary shooting parties and country visits which used to afford variety and recreation in Viceregal life at this time of the year are not for Lord Houghton. A Viceroy who presumes to think that the Irish are capable of self-government cannot be entertained by Irish society. The Ascendency classes in Ireland were so long accustomed to have things their own way that the thought of an Irish question having a side which is not theirs transfixes them with indignation. So dependent is their loyalty on their ascendency, that they have summarily boycotted the representative of the Sovereign for not accepting their views. Yet how these Unionists have shrieked against boycotting and disloyalty, only to go and do likewise at the first chance!

The wild waves were very eloquent in the Irish Channel last week, saying a great deal in a most forcible and impressive manner in favour of Home Rule, or the governing of Ireland by the inhabitants of that island. Mr. Morley had experience of one of the roughest passages of the Channel recorded in late years—an experience whose teachings were superfluous in his case. It is a tradition in connection with a former Irish Chief Secretary, however, that, after undergoing severe object-lessons of several stormy journeys between England and Ireland, he became, if not absolutely a Home Ruler, a warm advocate of an extended form of local government in Ireland, especially during the winter months.

The difficulties at Dublin Castle between the Chief Secretary and the Under-Secretary have at length come to an end; the appointment of Sir J. West-Ridgeway to govern the Isle of Man is an accomplished fact, although he is by no means satisfied with this provision. Sir David Harrel becomes absolutely Under-Secretary for

For AMUSEMENTS, see page 1185.
For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 1180 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1187.

Ireland, and at length enters into possession of the very comfortable official residence in the Phœnix Park, where up to this Sir J. West-Ridgeway's family have been residing. Sir David Harrel began his career in the Royal Irish Constabulary, and was made head of the police in Dublin by Lord Spencer after Captain Talbot's resignation. Sir David, who is a North of Ireland man, is popular with all parties, being distinguished by the possession of qualities unfortunately somewhat rare in Ireland amongst officials, tact, moderation, discretion, and, above all, common sense. Whether or not this permanent post will now cease to change with each Government, the future alone will disclose.

The Governorship of the Isle of Man is practically a sinecure, carrying with it a salary of £1,800 per annum, and a house. The Governor only resides there a portion of the year, and usually takes his holiday when the "tripper" season makes the island an undesirable residence. He has to open the House of Keys, and to sit with his two assessors when an important case is being tried—which happens very rarely.

Madame Patti was a passenger to America on the Lucania, and suffered so much from cold and sea-sickness, owing to the stormy crossing, that she was laid up for a fortnight on her arrival in New York. Writing to a friend, she says:—"You ought to see how lovely my rooms look with all the exquisite flowers that my friends here send me. I do believe that the American flowers are the loveliest in the world, especially the roses that are called 'American beauties'; I never saw anything in all Europe to equal them. The doctor will not allow me to go out yet, still I hope to make my rentrée on Saturday quand-même."

Those interested in poultry-farming might with advantage follow the example set by Sir Walter Gilbey and some of his friends and neighbours in Essex, who are getting up a show of dead poultry, to be held at Bishop's Stortford on the Thursday before Christmas. All the poultry shown is to be plucked, and several prizes are offered, the object being to improve the country people in the art of preparing poultry for market, in which the ordinary cottager is at present at a great disadvantage as compared with the professional breeder.

The Smithfield Show, which opens next Monday, promises to be a most successful exhibition, there being 634 entries, which is the largest number ever received. The previous highest entry was 604, in 1888. The Prince of Wales will come to London on Monday or Tuesday from Sandringham on purpose to visit the Show.

Salmon fishing in the Tweed will close to-morrow, after one of the very worst angling seasons that has ever been experienced. The river has seldom been in ply, and even when there were floods the salmon have not run up as formerly, for they seem to be very scarce, and also much smaller in size than usual. Only forty-four salmon have been killed on Galawater, as against 146 last year; and other stretches have been similarly unproductive. Sport has been particularly poor on the Floors waters, which are rented from the Duke of Roxburghe's trustees by Mr. Perkins at the rate of £1,400 a year.

I hear that at the Bournemouth Club a rule has lately been passed excluding all strangers from the Club rooms, so that if a visitor calls at the Club for a member, the member must come out and talk to him at the door. Under ordinary circumstances, such a statement would be dismissed as incredible, but this is not the first time I have heard that the Bournemouth Club is not as other clubs. Its members have attained a world-wide notoriety by their blackballing propensities, and these, I understand, have lately been again exercised at the expense of a retired General and a professional gentleman. Why does not some one start a club at Bournemouth from which snobbery and cliquism shall be excluded?

What can have happened to Mr. Alfred Austin, I wonder? That some of us here on earth were just a little tired of this enterprising bardlet, I am ready to admit; but I was not prepared to find that he was so very weary of us. And yet this would seem to be the fact, for in the St. James's Gazette, of all papers in the world, I observe that Mr. Austin has been passionately adjuring the "Wise autumn wind" not to let him "linger on to know The mournfulness of feelings lost," but to "waft" him forthwith "from winter frost!" Of course, the "wise autumn wind" is not likely to take the poet Austin at his word, but even that the latter should have thus publicly declared his wish to be "wafted" is a significant fact. It would seem to show, indeed, that he thinks it is no good to wait for the Poet-Laureateship any longer.

Mr. Dendy Sadler's old "bucks and blades," already made familiar to us in a score of his paintings, have by no means as yet worn out their welcome. They are especially delightful when, flying "from charms intramural to prettiness rural," they "toy with Amaryllis in the shade," or when they take the cheering but non-inebriating cup with Phyllis and Chloe. Thus, the reproduction of this artist's Academy picture of 1892, "Scandal and Tea," was from the first assured; and in the etching of it, which Mons. E. Gaujean has just completed for Messrs. Frost & Reed, the humorous characterisation of the original has been most successfully preserved. This reproduction is certain to be popular.

A reproduction of a very different kind of picture, which was also exhibited at Burlington House in 1892, has been published by the same firm. "A Message to the Reef," as it is called, depicts a dramatic incident of which the artist, Mr. R. H. Carter, was himself an eye-witness at the Longships Lighthouse off Land's End. This is not an etching but a photogravure, and an excellent specimen of a method of reproduction which has now to a complete extent taken the place of that of line engraving.

The Winter Exhibition at the New Gallery this year is to consist of a collection of paintings and examples of work illustrative of Early Italian art. There is promise of a most interesting show, in which, I hope, even the most sensitive Frenchman will not find a further proof of England's committal to the Triple Alliance.

HÔTEL BURLINGTON, Boscombe, Bournemouth. Perfectly unique!!! Over 200 rooms, practically designed, sumptuously appointed, and fitted throughout with all the comforts of a well-arranged country mansion. Electric light. Passenger lift. Acres of matured grounds sloping to the Pier. Most moderate tariff, forwarded by Manager, or obtainable at the Burlington and Buckingham Palace Hotels, London. Bournemouth EAST Station.

Only ten pictures have been added to the National Gallery during the last year, of which four are by Dutch, and the remainder by British, artists.

All the principal Christmas numbers are now published, and I am surprised to see what a great want of originality there is in them. They nearly all follow along the old beaten track, and a track, too, of which I cannot help thinking the public is nearly tired. The pictures that are given away with the different numbers are in most cases excellent examples of the perfection to which the art of colour-printing has now been brought. But something more is wanting than this, and I certainly advise my illustrated contemporaries to try next year some new departure. Whilst in journalism proper the idea has been to do away with long-winded descriptions and substitute for them short, crisp criticism and chatty paragraphs, the process has apparently been reversed with the Christmas productions, as they now mostly give long and more or less heavy stories, which cannot be made light even by the excellence of their illustrations, instead of the diversified matter of years gone by.

I must, however, congratulate the Editors of the Pall Mall Magazine on their first Christmas number, as it gives most excellent money's worth, both in the matter of text and illustrations. Mr. Rudyard Kipling's verses on Lord Roberts, or rather on "Bobs Bahadur—little Bobs, Bobs, Bobs," are delightfully original. This verse will, I take it, be read with special interest by some or at least one of our other Generals:—

What 'e does not know o' war
Gen'ral Bobs,
You can arst the shop next door,
Can't they, Bobs?

Oh, 'e's little, but he's wise;
'E's a terror for 'is size,
An' 'e—does—not—advertise,
Do yer, Bob?

By-the-bye, I wonder that Lord Frederick Hamilton does not induce his co-Editor, Sir Douglas Straight, to write his reminiscences—Home and Indian—for production in the Magazine.

At the sale of the Hazlitt library last week the collection of letters from literary celebrities realised so little, that the vendor would have done better to publish them on his own account, as most of them are exceptionally interesting and characteristic, and very few of them have been printed. It may be hoped that these letters will be published. The Hazlitt-Coleridge correspondence, an immense mass of letters, realised only £12. The vendor must have been disappointed to find the original manuscript of the "Liber Amoris" knocked down for only £32, which was probably about a third of the amount which it had been expected to realise.

I am asked by the editor of a recently-established journal, called Good News of the Week, to state that his paper has no sort of connection with one of a similar name which is published at Ostend, and engaged—as I have mentioned in TRUTH—in carrying on the missing-word business.

THE COUPÉ COMPANY'S Telegraphic Address is "COUPÉ, LONDON."

No one has done more to raise the tone of music-halls than Mr. Chevalier, and the address that he delivered last Sunday night at St. James's Hall on "Actor and Music-Hall Singer" is well worth perusal. Plays, he says, of the Ibsen kind "that appeal alone to an audience of blue spectacles and forehead, have driven amusement-seekers to music-halls." Nor does he believe in the theatre being a "great moral teacher." No more do I. When I am in want of moral teaching, I no more seek it in a theatre, than I should go to church to learn ballet-dancing. At a theatre a person wants to be taken out of himself, not to be led to reflect on his inner man. I do not agree with Mr. Chevalier in thinking that all drinking in music halls ought to be restricted to bars outside the auditorium, and I speak with perfect indifference of judgment, for I neither drink myself at bars nor in an auditorium. Admitting that spirituous liquor is to be sold, I should say that there would be more moderation in the amount drunk were it consumed in the auditorium. Mr. Chevalier complains that waiters are inclined to uncork bottles at the most sentimental points in his songs. But, surely, under proper arrangements, the uncorking might take place between the songs, or when something is being performed on the stage that, appealing alone to the eye, would not lose its effect by extraneous noise.

An interesting gathering of Rugby men took place last week at the Rugby Boys' Club, Notting Hill, on the occasion of the opening of the new premises of the institution. The Bishop of London presided, and was accompanied by Dr. Percival, the Bishop of Marlborough, and numerous "old Rugs" who have taken an interest in the work. With the additional premises it now possesses, the Club will be one of the most useful institutions of the kind in London. Besides the ordinary features, it possesses a fine swimming-bath, gymnasium, and work-rooms, and it affords to lads the foundation of an excellent technical education; at the same time imparting Rugby traditions to the poorer class of London boys by extensive facilities for football, cricket, and other athletics.

In a lecture printed in the Review of Reviews, Mr. Walter Wren discourses with extreme lucidity, terseness, and force upon the subject of education. I would advise all who are in any doubt as to what education should do, and how it should do it, to study his ideas. Mr. Wren is popularly known as a "crammer." It is, therefore, a notable fact that what he most insists on is the need of thoroughness and minute exactness in reading and in the acquisition of knowledge, and one of his concluding maxims is, "use no cribs or pretended short cuts."

Mr. Wren says, however, in the course of his remarks that while some smatterings are worse than useless, all are not to be despised. As instances of this, he cites Latin and French respectively. Later on he lays down, with equal truth, that modern languages ought to be acquired in the first stage by conversation, not by grammars. Here, then, is a comprehensive condemnation of the average English education—a smattering of classics, which is worse than useless; a smattering of modern languages, which might be of use, only, unfortunately, it is acquired in the wrong way.

C.O.M. WHISKY.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—ANDREWS & CO., Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

Mr. Gladstone has offered the Crown living of Croft, near Darlington, which is worth about £750 a year, with residence, to the Rev. Dr. Cox, Rector of Barton-le-Street, Yorkshire, the eminent antiquarian. This is the second time that Mr. Gladstone has presented to the living of Croft, as just twenty years ago he appointed the late rector, who was for some time tutor to Duke Alfred of Coburg.

The important living of St. James's, Holloway, vacant by the preferment of the Rev. E. A. Stuart (who succeeded the Bishop of Ripon) has been refused by four clergymen in succession. The income has hitherto been large, owing to the popularity of the last two Incumbents, but it depends entirely on fees and pew-rents, and the vicarage is not a very desirable residence, nor is St. James's a pleasant church in which to preach, owing to faults in its construction.

A useful series of articles has been appearing in London on "The Wasted Wealth of City Churches," and I shall cordially congratulate the Editor of that journal if he is more successful than I have been in awakening Londoners to the gravity and magnitude of this scandal. From what I have seen, I doubt whether any serious attempt will be made to apply this wasted revenue of £60,000 or £70,000 per annum to any useful purpose until London is "unified" under a democratic constitution. In the meantime, however, I see that the London articles have produced a grain of practical result. The Rev. W. Carlile, now Rector of St. Mary-at-Hill, has made a straight offer that if the three parish churches adjoining his own (St. Dunstan, St. Margaret Pattens, and St. George's) are removed, he will do the work of all four parishes on his present modest stipend of £400 per annum. That is the sort of offer which ought to be closed with at once. And if the matter were brought to the notice of the Government there is no reason why they should not take steps to carry out Mr. Carlile's suggestion.

The election of Canon Wynne, of Dublin, to the see of Killaloe, which is worth £1,500 a year, has given much satisfaction in Ireland and in Church circles generally. The Canon is a very eloquent and forcible preacher, and a fine scholar, and he is popular among both clergy and laity.

Canon Newbolt is to be in residence at St. Paul's Cathedral during December, and he will preach on Sunday afternoons throughout the month. Dean Gregory is to preach at the evening service next Sunday, and also on Christmas Day.

The appointed preachers at the Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace, during December are:—3rd, the Sub-Dean; 10th, the Rev. Lord Charles Fitzroy; 17th, Canon Phipps; 24th, the Rev. Dr. Troutbeck; and 31st, the Sub-Dean.

WINTER VISITORS TO BOURNEMOUTH will find "The Imperial" one of the most complete residential establishments in the United Kingdom. Finest position on East Cliff. Luxuriously furnished, with appointments and cuisine of the highest order. Moderate tariff.—Apply, Manager.—W. H. DORÉ, Proprietor.

The Bishop of Winchester has given much satisfaction at Portsmouth by presenting the Rev. C. H. Gould, who has been one of Canon Jacob's curates at Portsea during the last four years, to the vicarage of Holmwood, Surrey. Mr. Gould has worked very hard and very well at Portsmouth, and the Bishop's commendable practice of promoting deserving curates meets with general approval in the diocese.

THE BISHOP AND THE BREWER.

[Vide correspondence between the Bishop of London and Mr. E. N. Buxton on the purity of beer.]

Said the Bishop to the Brewer, "I very greatly fear,
From all which I have heard that you adulterate your beer."

Said the Brewer to the Bishop, "That really is not true;
Who told you such a tale? I insist on knowing who."

Said the Bishop to the Brewer, "I can't just now reply,
If you'll have a little patience I will tell you by-and-by.

Said the Brewer to the Bishop, returning to the fray,
"I have waited long enough, now what have you got to say?"

But the Bishop he was silent as to what they put in beer;
He didn't seem to have, in fact, the very least idea.

But he knows that men get drunk when the flowing bowl they drain,
So that something bad is in it, that at least is very plain.

But in all his great researches, in pamphlet and in "vol.,"
It never yet has struck him that it might be alcohol.

Sir William Gull has told us how the world by this is cursed,
And how among all evil things alcohol 's about the worst.

But the Bishop—dear, good man!—he still has got a strong idea
That there's something very charming in the purity of beer.

Oh! these Bishops and these Brewers, I really greatly fear
They will never, never solve this point about what's in the beer.

But the land is full of sorrow, and there's little hope of cure
Unless these wise men hit upon a beer that's really "pure."

Then let us set to work, my boys, with heart, and hope, and cheer,
And help them all we can to get "The Purity of Beer."

'Tis beer which keeps in comfort—as by every one is known—
The Brewer in his mansion, and the Bishop on his throne.

The British Constitution, and all we value here,
Church, Army, Navy, Parliament, its corner-stone is beer;

These blessings every pious heart prays may for long endure,
But he can never hope for that unless our beer is pure.

A Sunday or two ago an amateur performance of the sacred cantata, "The Heavenly Shepherd," was announced to be given (free) at the Public Rooms, Selby, at 7 p.m. In view of this announcement, and of the fact that several lady members of the local Church Guild were to take part in the performance, the Vicar of Selby issued a manifesto to the members of his Guild, expressing his "earnest hope that no member of the St. Mary's Guild will so far forget her duty as a Churchwoman as to think of being present at, or taking part in, any form of entertainment on the Lord's Day." Doubtless I shall incur the displeasure of my Church readers; but here again, it seems to me, is one of those enlightened and tolerant clerics, who are the peculiar possession of the Church of England. Why does he say, "as a Church-woman?" If the rule is good for the Church of England, why not for Dissenters?

During the recent anniversary festival at All Saints', Margaret-street, the Churchwardens asked the congregation for an offertory of £400, in order to pay off some deficit. In response, the congregation gave £398. 14s. 7d.

Another snowball collection! This time the circular purports to emanate from "Mrs. Landon, Carshalton." It states that £5,000 is required to complete the fund for restoring Carshalton Parish Church, for which purpose the recipient of the circular is requested to send Mrs. Landon a shilling, and forward two copies of the appeal to friends. The rolling of the "snowball" is to stop at the number 20. Supposing that Mrs. Landon sent her circular in the first instance to only two people, by the time it has been twenty times repeated, she should have received upwards of £70,000. The collection is stated to have the "sanction and approval of the Rector, the Rev. Lord Victor Seymour." If this is so, I would respectfully inform his reverend lordship that he has given his sanction and approval to one of the most stupid and mischievous modes of collecting money at present practised; and this has been so often shown in the Press that there is no excuse for people who do not know it. Steps should be taken at once to stop this snowball before it has gone further, though, as a matter of fact, when they have once got well under way it is almost impossible to stop them.

I am asked to mention that a concert with a very attractive programme and very reduced prices will be given at the Albert Hall on Tuesday evening next (December 5) in aid of the District Railway Benevolent Fund. Mr. H. C. Tonking will conduct and preside at the organ. A number of distinguished musical artistes will appear, and Mr. Charles Fry will recite.

A concert will also be given at 24, Park-lane by permission of Lord and Lady Brassey, on Thursday evening (December 7), in aid of the building fund of the new Children's Hospital, Paddington-green. £5,500 is still required for this purpose, and the Hospital has special claims upon the West-end, being the only one of its kind in the parishes of Marylebone and Paddington.

Finally, there is to be a concert in the banqueting-room, St. James's Hall, at three o'clock on December 4, in aid of the funds of the Royal Female Philanthropic Society. Tickets may be obtained of Lady Montagu Pollock, 61, Cadogan-place.

After subscribing handsomely to the TRUTH Toy Fund, a lady asks me to mention "three or four deserving charities" which she may assist. I am always averse to recommend individual charities, but I would suggest to my correspondent that her donations would be best disposed on some of the East End hospitals, or the hospitals for children in any part of the Metropolis.

The lady whose letter on the subject of ostrich-plucking in Egypt I published on November 9, writes in answer to the further correspondence which has appeared to point out that she expressed no opinion in regard to South African ostrich farms. This is true, but she censured the Society for the Protection of Birds for not boycotting ostrich feathers, thereby implying that all ostrich-plucking involved cruelty. She concludes her present letter by saying that if the Society will undertake to convert the Egyptian farmer to more humane methods, she will be happy to support it. This, with all respect, is a little captious. A Society of English ladies can hardly be expected to induce a Frenchman residing in Egypt to alter his methods of doing business.

Criticism has perhaps chastened Major-General Synge, for he writes me a most amiable and conciliatory letter in reply to what I said last week about the Army and Navy Convalescent and Training Homes for Invalided Men. Unfortunately, however amiable and conciliatory, his letter makes no attempt to supply the great desideratum—a balance-sheet. He refers me to a pamphlet for an account of all the receipts since 1885, and also a statement of the aggregate excess of expenditure over contributions, and of the way this excess has been met. These particulars I have duly found, but before I or anybody else can form an opinion on the financial management of the concern, it is necessary to find something very much more. I am afraid that Major-General Synge's financial notions are a trifle nebulous. For instance, he writes:—

> The inquiry addressed to me on the part of the Regiment to which you refer was as to the stability of the Institution and as to what guarantee could be given to subscribers of 1d. per month, or its equivalent, of a personal quid pro quo; and the answer to this inquiry it was proposed to give from a balance-sheet of sums in aid, and necessarily showing at the same time an excess of expenditure over such receipts. In all cases in which it might be required, a regimental guarantee was provided from the beginning by vesting the rights of nomination in the donors and subscribers, who could thus if they pleased immediately consume their subscriptions. However, as soon as it was understood that this was not the sole purpose of the inquiry, no available time was lost in forwarding to the Commanding Officer of the Regiment in question a certified statement of with (sic) an examination of vouchers to beyond £200 above the aggregate amount of contributions received during the years in question.

The "guarantee" which is here described as being given to donors and subscribers is the queerest article of its kind that I have ever come across. So far as I can follow him, Major-General Synge has a delicacy about producing a formal balance-sheet which will show a considerable debit balance. I can assure him that nothing is more likely to improve his financial position. He pleads very eloquently the claims of the movement, and he desires to enlist me among its supporters. Nothing would give me greater pleasure—when once I have seen a clear and detailed financial statement brought up to date. As a certified statement has already been sent out, covering expenditure to the amount of £200 beyond the aggregate contributions received, there can be no difficulty in compiling precisely the kind of balance-sheet I want to see. Let, then, Major-General Synge send me such a balance-sheet, and I shall be happy to assist him in impressing the charitable public with the claims of his Convalescent Homes.

Many months back attention was drawn in TRUTH to the overcrowded and insanitary state of Belfast Barracks; but, although a new drainage scheme has been in existence for over a year and a half, and although several cases of enteric fever and pneumonia—the latter, in all probability, due to overcrowding—have recently occurred, no practical steps to deal with the evil have yet been taken. I understand that it has actually been found desirable to send away some 300 men on furlough, to make more room—a desperate step which shows the opinion entertained on the spot as to the condition of the place.

It is to be hoped that the lamentable results which have just ensued from stationing the South Wales Borderers on Portsdown Hill, immediately after their return from India, will have the effect of at least opening the eyes of the War Office to the criminal folly of sending troops fresh from the tropics to such exposed situations. The South Wales men only disembarked on Friday week, and on the following day two privates, caught in the blizzard on their way back to barracks, were overcome by the cold, and died of exposure. It seems perfectly clear from the medical evidence that it really was the cold and nothing else which overcame the men, and that about twenty others would have perished in the same way, had not a search party been sent out to their rescue. The jury expressed a strong opinion that troops fresh from the tropics ought not to be sent to such exposed stations; but seeing how often the same opinion has been expressed in TRUTH, they would have been fully justified in saying that the men lost their lives owing to the negligence of the War Office.

Barracks ought to be systematically reserved in some suitable spot, where Regiments from India could be put for a time until they are acclimatised. But, as a matter of fact, there would have been no difficulty in finding a suitable place for the South Wales Borderers in Portsmouth itself. Two battalions have quite recently been moved into that town, one of which (the Scottish Rifles) has been at home for years, and had just come from camp at Aldershot. If any Regiment was to be sent to the Portsdown Forts, this should have been the one.

On October 12 I published a paragraph in reference to the alleged unjust treatment of a Lieutenant-Colonel in India for having taken certain timely and proper measures which prevented a threatened serious outbreak of rioting between Mahommedans and Hindoos at Malegaon. The officer in question has addressed to me another lengthy communication, from which I find that he was not dismissed from the Army, but transferred to the Pension List compulsorily after he had refused to retire voluntarily. According to his own version of the affair, he was most unfairly and harshly dealt with. I cannot, however, accede to his request that I should go into the details and merits of his case.

A considerable amount of irritation seems to have been caused by the action of Sir Anthony Hoskins in refusing to allow a naval officer to read a paper on "The Mediterranean in Naval War" at the Royal United Service Institution. It is understood that another application on the subject has been made to the Admiralty, which is now being considered by the Board.

From an extract sent to me I see that the Western Morning News has been offering some criticism, which is singularly wide of the mark, upon the grievances of Naval Instructors as represented in TRUTH. It is contended, apparently, that because Instructors start at 12s. a day and rise to £400 a year, "it should not be regarded as a grievance that they are required to provide themselves with uniforms." What has the amount of the pay got to do with it? The grievance is that nothing was said about uniform when the men entered the Service, and that the State has no right to foist upon men a heavy item of expenditure which was not in the original contract. As a matter of fact, to most Naval Instructors a uniform means an initial outlay of two or three months' pay, and the Government has no more right to order such an expenditure, unless with the consent of the officer, than it has to order him to refund the same amount to the Treasury.

The same sagacious critic doubts whether the complaints of favouritism in the allotment of service by land and sea "will bear examination." Well, here are four cases taken from the list at random. A, now at sea, has served twenty-five years at sea and three on shore; B, now on shore, has been on shore twenty-one years and at sea three. C, now at sea, has been at sea sixteen years and on shore six. D, now on shore, at sea eight years and on shore sixteen. Such contrasts might be multiplied indefinitely.

Surely it cannot be true that, in consequence of the breakdown of the Crocodile, the Serapis is to be sent to sea again on trooping service? The Serapis is already in an even more broken-down condition than the Crocodile, and to condemn men to a voyage to India in her would be nothing less than an outrage. As the ship, if she goes at all, will sail about the end of next week, it seems desirable that some protest on the subject should be made without delay.

A Parliamentary paper has just been issued which gives the names of thirty officials at the India Office who draw both salaries and superannuation allowances. Sir Archibald Turner gets £2,700 a year, of which £1,500 is his Indian pension, and he draws £1,200 as a member of Council. Next comes Sir Archibald Alison with £2,400, of which £1,079 comes from the British Treasury and £1,321 from India. Most of the officials in this list draw their Indian pensions from the Civil Service annuity fund, to which they contributed during their period of service in the East.

With regard to the rupee question, I hear that while the compensation for exchange that has been granted to Officers and Civil Servants is allowed as a rule from March 1 last, an exception to the rule is made against Regimental Officers, who are only allowed compensation as from April 1. The reason assigned for this is that Regimental Officers receive their pay in advance. I believe that to the majority of Regimental Officers this was the first intimation ever received that their pay is even supposed to be thus issued; at any rate, I know one officer who has never received a penny in advance during twenty years' service, including a long term in India. Perhaps the Indian Government are about to introduce a change in this respect. Either this should be done at once, or Regimental Officers should receive the same compensation for exchange as the rest of the Anglo-Indian community.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.—Patterns are now ready, & will be sent post free, of these new & fashionable Cards for Christmas (specially printed). A most complete collection, comprising many striking noveltics.—PARKINS & GOTTO, Court Stationers, Oxford-st., Londn.

In one respect I have been sadly disappointed with the London County Council. It has never yet redressed my ancient grievance in regard to the roadway on the Victoria Embankment. Although the Metropolitan Board of Works is dead, buried, and forgotten, some thousands of pounds are still expended every year in first destroying and then re-making the surface of this road—for the benefit, I suppose, of some distressed contractor. This year, however, things are worse. Instead of dealing with half the roadway at a time, so as to leave a thoroughfare always open, the road has now been closed altogether, to the daily inconvenience of thousands. Taken in conjunction with the closing of Waterloo Bridge, this will certainly not enhance the popularity of the Council.

The Surrey County Council have just appointed a new surveyor, and the uninitiated might suppose that he was a gentleman gifted with superlative qualifications for the post, for he has been selected out of 122 candidates, who were winnowed down to four after a preliminary investigation by a sub-committee. In point of fact the fortunate individual is not a member of either of the professional Institutes—the Civil Engineers' and the Surveyors'—and has had no experience outside his father's office; his appointment being apparently due to the fact that his father held the post before him, and that he is about to marry a relative of the Chairman. It is to the Chairman that he really owes his election, for at the last moment the Council was equally divided between this candidate and another, who is a civil engineer of long standing and a Fellow of the Surveyors' Institute, and it was the Chairman's vote which settled the contest. A more iniquitous job was never perpetrated, nor one more insulting to the hundred odd rejected candidates, who were invited by advertisement to compete, only to be knocked out in a contest which was all but a foregone conclusion.

A motion is, I hear, to be proposed at the next meeting of the Lismore Guardians for the adoption of the Infectious Diseases Notification Act. This, at any rate, shows a commendable desire to learn some of the lessons inculcated by the late outbreak of fever, and I hope that the Guardians will accept the motion. By the way, without presuming to deny the accuracy of the figures furnished to me last week, I may mention that I have heard again from my original informant who gave me the number of cases, and he tells me that the figures were supplied by a gentleman in the town, who seems to me in as good (if not a better) position to know the facts than the Guardians' Medical Officer. However, I trust the affair is now a matter of history.

Some time ago I called attention to the extraordinary fact that the town of Weymouth was without a fire brigade, or any organised means of dealing with a fire, otherwise than a municipal hose, to be used if occasion arose by the police. I should like to know whether this state of things has ever been remedied, for one more disgraceful to the local authorities can scarcely be imagined. There is not, I should hope, any other town of anything like the same size in the same condition.

A resident in Worthing objects to my suggesting that it will be ten years before the town recovers from its late disaster. I merely named that time from an estimate given me by one who knows the place, and it does not follow that my saying so will have any effect in keeping people away. I am sure I hope that the place will speedily recover, and there is not the slightest reason why its former friends should shun it. The pollution of the water supply has been removed, and I am told there is no danger whatever of its recurring. A new drainage scheme, costing £60,000, will be completed in two or three months, and with its manifold attractions by the sea and inland there is no reason why Worthing should not be next year as popular as ever—except, unfortunately, that it takes some time to restore confidence after an occurrence of this kind.

Under date November 21, a gentleman whose name I cannot read, but who says that he is the solicitor to Sir Frederick Johnstone, sends me a copy of a letter which appeared in the Southern Times of October 14, and which is apparently supposed to answer a remark with reference to drains on the "Johnstone Estate," Weymouth, which appeared in TRUTH of October 26. On the strength of this I am requested to "retract" my statements of October 26. My statement, so far as the Johnstone Estate is concerned, was that persons residing there have been annoyed by smells from the sewers. I cannot retract this, as my information came from a gentleman familiar with the locality and the smells, who would rightly object to his word being doubted. It appears, however, that "Glendinning-avenue," to which my information had special reference, though popularly described as on the "Johnstone Estate," is on property which was sold by Sir Frederick Johnstone some years ago. Sir Frederick has other property in the neighbourhood, which is, of course, in strictness the only "Johnstone Estate." It is, therefore, erroneous to speak of the Glendinning-avenue smells as situated on "the Johnstone Estate," and I am glad to be able to correct this error.

Protests are being uttered in Yorkshire against a characteristic attempt of the local authorities to improve the moor at Ilkley by cutting artificial paths across it after the manner of a London park, and adorning them with bogus "rocks," arranged as regularly as telegraph-posts, and with about as much resemblance to nature. Neither visitors nor resident ratepayers are likely to approve of this gratuitous and expensive Vandalism, and probably the only person living who regards it with satisfaction is the contractor who has got the job.

PUNGS' PRIZE EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNE.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. Pungs & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

OYALINE TOILET SOAP, made with Yolk of Egg, is a wonderful discovery for the skin and hair. As a Shaving Soap it has no equal. Price, 8d. per tablet, 2s. per box.—52, King st., Regent st., London.

No time ought to be lost in getting away the Blue Coat School from its present site.—TRUTH, May 26, 1892.

Last month scarlet fever broke out amongst the scholars at Christ's Hospital, and the school in Newgate-street has had to be permanently closed.—Daily Telegraph, November 22, 1893.

Cassandra was not popular
When she the world was warning;
Her sound advice too oft was met
With many a carping epithet
And quite a wealth of scorning.
So TRUTH when she gives sound advice
Is not unseldom chided,
And finds her counsels so sincere
With ill-considered flout and jeer
Too frequently derided.

So 'twas when eighteen months ago
An article she printed,
In which, in language calm and cool,
The danger of the Blue Coat School
Was not obscurely hinted.
The Governors were clearly told
What risks they ran in staying
Where drainage wholly out of date
Exposed them to a hazard great
Of outbreaks most dismaying.

But still those Governors stayed on
In stubbornness exceeding;
Still warning and advice disdained,
O'er the volcano still remained,
Unwary and unheeding;
Till suddenly the outbreak came,
And, owning now their error,
Those who refused advice to take
In an excess of panic quake
And yield perforce to terror.

Then surely TRUTH, addressing those
Who with her warnings quarrel,
Can, thus completely justified,
Bid those who counsel good deride
To note the obvious moral;
And learn from what has come to pass,
Within a few weeks' distance,
That those who won't take sound advice
Must be prepared to pay the price
Of their ill-judged resistance.

It is to be hoped that the proceedings at an inquest held at Mortlake on Friday will not escape the attention of the Richmond Board of Guardians. It appeared that the deceased, an aged labourer, was found lying on the pathway, and was carried home insensible. When asked to attend him, Dr. Weir, the parish medical officer, refused to do so without a relieving officer's order, and, according to the widow and niece of the deceased, he made use of the words "let him die." The doctor and his wife, who was present, denied that this expression was used, but the refusal to attend was admitted, and the form in which it was couched is not very material. In so acting Dr. Weir was, no doubt, within the letter of the law, but the Guardians would do well to consider whether an officer who interprets his duty in such a spirit in such an emergency is really fitted for his position—more especially when he further reveals his character by indulging in what a juror described as "disgraceful conduct" in the Coroner's Court. After Dr. Weir's behaviour to Mr. Braxton Hicks, it is easy, as a juryman suggested, to infer how he behaves to the poor people with whose care he is entrusted.

TYPEWRITERS of all makes for Sale or Hire. Machines bought or taken in part exchange for new ones. Documents copied with accuracy and despatch.—N. TAYLOR, Manager, National Typewriter Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane, London.

Three weeks ago I alluded to statements which had been made seriously impugning the conduct of the Mayor of Dudley (Alderman Claughton) in connection with one of the municipal elections. It was alleged that his Worship had been concerned in inducing a Liberal to withdraw his opposition to two Conservatives by promising that his expenses should be paid—a promise which, in view of legal consequences, it was afterwards deemed prudent to break. So far the Mayor has not deigned to take any notice of this charge, and I learn that the indignation which the transaction excited amongst the Liberal Party has been increased by the failure of their representatives to bring the matter forward in the Council. As one of the rank-and-file of the Party says, it is felt that at this rate Alderman Claughton (who derives his power from his position as agent of his relative Lord Dudley) will soon be able to accomplish the enslavement of the entire borough.

As there are indications of a return of the influenza epidemic, I may mention that Surgeon-Major Tuson has called my attention to his method of checking the spread of cholera by means of sulphur fires, which he believes will be equally efficacious in dealing with influenza, or, if I understand him aright, any disease disseminated by floating germs. There seems reason to suppose that sulphur fumigation had a salutary effect when tried in India a few years ago in outbreaks of cholera; and even if it be not equally successful with influenza, the idea ought to be borne in mind in the event of a return next year of the more serious disease.

The North British Railway Company are about to apply to Parliament for powers to use the Aberdeen Station of the Great North of Scotland Railway at Aberdeen. This is in consequence of the recent decision of the House of Lords disallowing the North British line the right to use the station. I would suggest to the North British Company that while obtaining the power for their trains to enter the station, they should endeavour to secure a similar right for the representatives of the various Aberdeen hotels. It will be remembered that at present no hotel porters are allowed on the platform except those of the Railway Company's own hotel. A restriction of this kind, imposed for the benefit of the Company, in defiance of the public convenience and the interests of all the hotel proprietors in the town, is a gross anomaly, and if public opinion in Aberdeen is not strong or independent enough to do away with it, Parliament has a perfect right to interfere.

From the complaints which from time to time reach me, I should say that the Great Western takes the palm as the most autocratic and least accommodating of the English Railway Companies. A gentleman living at Cheddar, whose two sons hold season tickets to Bristol, has been endeavouring to obtain from the Company some facilities for the payment of the annual fares by instalments. The rates at present stand—

	£	s.	d.
Three months	5	10	0
Six months	8	15	0
Twelve months	13	5	0

As a rule, Railway Companies allow an annual ticket to be paid for by two or more instalments, charging in the aggregate a slightly increased sum above what is charged if the payment is made by one instalment. The Great Western, it seems, decline to give any such accommodation. Thus, in the above case, if the tickets are renewed quarterly, £22 would be paid; if half-yearly, £17. 10s. for journeys which, if paid for in one lump, would cost £13. 5s. In other words, a man with two sons, who does not find it convenient to pay all the railway fares of himself and family six or twelve months in advance, may have to pay to the Company in the course of the year from £13 to £26 more than his fellow traveller who is able to pay all at once. Such a state of things demands the attention of the Board of Trade or the Railway Commission.

The outcry amongst all classes is for good coo ing. Those prepared to pay high wages for a cook find it almost impossible to procure the article. Those who have to accept the services of the "plain cook" find her ministrations a mine of indigestion. But all this concerns alone those who can pay others for cooking. In artisans' and agricultural labourers' homes the wife is ignorant of the first elements of cookery: she wastes and she spoils. To alter this is really the duty of the State. I was the other day at the National Training School of Cookery, which is carried on under the patronage of the Prince of Wales and other eminent personages. There are various kitchens for different classes, and in each actual cookery was going on, from soups to sweets, instead of the usual theoretical instruction. I asked the Lady Superintendent to give me in writing what she thought ought to be done to enlarge the work, and to put it on a popular footing. Here is her letter. If girls at schools were taught more of cooking and less of music they would probably be much more useful wives:—

DEAR SIR,—You were good enough to ask me to put the subject of our conversation in writing. This School, which was opened on March 23, 1874, was established with a view to promote generally the diffusion of a knowledge of cookery among all classes of her Majesty's subjects.

Hitherto our work has consisted principally in training teachers in plain and high-class cookery, and these are employed in the London School Board and in elementary schools teaching the children of the working classes, and by the various County Councils all over the country teaching classes of women and girls.

As we have no funds except what we earn, no grant from Government or from any other source, we have carried on this work for nearly the last twenty years under great difficulties, and for want of funds we have not been able to supply the great demand for cooks. At the present moment we are anxious for help to get a grant from the London County Council, in order that we may be able to extend and improve our system of training. We want to establish an organised system of inspection over all the teachers we train.

If the various Provincial County Councils would found scholarships for cooks, we should before very long be able, to some extent, to meet the public demand. A rough idea of what I mean is this. Girls in various villages should receive a preliminary course of instruction from a trained teacher, and those who show an aptitude for this work should be sent here (where they could board and lodge) for further instruction. We would then get them places as kitchenmaids or plain cooks, allowing them from time to time to return here for further instruction. All this, of course, wants a good deal of working out—this is roughly an outline of what I am anxious to accomplish. If you could help me in this matter I think you would be conferring a great benefit on the British public. Believe me, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

EDITH CLARKE, Lady Superintendent.

24, GROSVENOR-GARDENS.—To be Sold, or Let on lease, this Mansion, in perfect decorative and sanitary repair, containing 13 bedrooms, two drawing-rooms, boudoir on first floor, dining-room, library, billiard-room, and dressing-room on ground-floor. Stabling for five horses.—Apply, Messrs. THOMPSON, 6, Bruton-street; or on Premises.

Mr. A. C. Bourner, of Hanley, has favoured me with a copy of an interesting paper on bankruptcy costs, which he read a few days ago before the North Staffordshire Chamber of Commerce. It had been inferred from a letter from the Board of Trade that a certain class of estates were wound up more economically by Official Receivers than by non-official trustees. Mr. Bourner argued that the comparison made in the letter was for various reasons misleading, and he brought forward a mass of facts and figures to show that the Official Receiver does not do the work at less expense than the non-official trustee. But any question as to the relative advantages or disadvantages of the two systems is to my mind far less important than the fact that under both the cost of realising estates is at present nearly always too heavy, and at times monstrously excessive. Scarcely a week passes without some proof of this being given in TRUTH.

I have often noted that the provincial Shylock's charges for interest put into the shade the most exorbitant demands of the West-end usurer. Another illustration of this was afforded at Leominster County-court the other day, when an application was made in reference to the claim of Isaac Gordon, a notorious Birmingham money-lender, against the estate of an insolvent grocer. The solicitor for the bankruptcy trustee informed the Judge that there were four transactions between Gordon and the debtor; in three cases 450 per cent. interest was charged, and in the other 1,900 per cent. It is satisfactory to know that Mr. Isaac Gordon is not likely in this instance to get more than 5 per cent.

A lady wishes me to relate her unsatisfactory experience of County-court procedure. Last February she summoned a man at Bloomsbury for £11 for rent. The debtor is in receipt of £120 a year, together with his board, and at length he was ordered to pay £2 per month, the first payment to be made in August. He did not pay, and at the end of October his committal was ordered; but on his making some plausible excuse it was rescinded. Then, without being asked to do so by the debtor, the indulgent Judge reduced the instalments from £2 to 10s. per month, and granted another month for the payment of the first. Thus nine months have elapsed since the action was begun, and the plaintiff has not yet received a penny. She therefore concludes that, as she is seventy years of age, she is not likely to see the end of the case. As, however, it is now ordained that the debt shall be paid in full by August, 1895, I think my venerable correspondent is unnecessarily despondent.

The following reaches me from a Scotch correspondent:—

The papers have been printing some nonsensical stories about Madeleine Smith. It was always understood in the north that Madeleine married a clergyman within a few weeks of her trial, and the couple wisely disappeared into the crowd. While Madeleine was in prison at Edinburgh she received numerous offers of marriage, and her Glasgow admirers raised a fund of about £10,000 for her benefit, one enthusiastic man giving £1,000. She was indebted for her escape to the late Lord President Inglis, who managed her case with marvellous tact and judgment, and his speech for the defence was one of the finest ever heard in a court of justice. Mr. Carlyle described Madeleine as "a cockatrice," and "a little incarnate devil." Sir James Simpson, the famous physician, attended Madeleine when she was ill in prison, and, on taking leave, he begged to be allowed "to speak seriously to her at parting." Miss Smith replied, "My dear doctor, it is really too good of you, but I won't let you trouble yourself to give me advice, for I assure you that I have quite made up my mind to turn over a new leaf."

SILVER DAMASCUS TWIST BANGLE.—A quaint armlet of excellent Eastern design and finish. Its flexibility renders it perfectly safe, whilst it can be altered to suit any wrist, without losing shape. Price 10s. 6d.—LIBERTY & Co., Art Jewellers, Regent-street, W.

Several people have drawn my attention this week to two cases in which prisoners were bound over under the First Offenders Act. One was the son of an officer, accused at Westminster of stealing £2, belonging to his employers, and the other, a member of the Yorkminster choir, charged with stealing 9s. 6d. In neither instance do I see any reason to complain of the course adopted. It is in failing to give first offenders the advantage of the Act that Magistrates most frequently err. What seems to be a case in point occurred at Thirsk last week, when a young woman, the wife of a labourer, was convicted of obtaining ten shillings' worth of goods from a shopkeeper by the false representation that they were for her mother, and by giving a false address. As there is nothing to the contrary in three different reports which I have before me, it is pretty safe to assume that she had not been previously convicted. And even if she could not be dealt with as a first offender, the sentence of six weeks' hard labour passed by Captain Burton, Sir R. P. Gallwey, and Captain Bell, J.P.'s, was outrageously severe.

Sheriff Mair, of Airdrie, made a most discreditable exhibition of himself at the sitting of his Court on Friday. A young woman, a dressmaker, had been ordered to pay off a debt by monthly instalments of 15s., and had reduced the amount owing from £17 to £4. Recently, as she explained to the Sheriff, she had been unable to pay the instalments in consequence of the serious illness of her father, and of her having become the only support of seven younger brothers and sisters. This statement, which was shown to be perfectly true, would have secured the sympathy and consideration of most Judges; but it failed to touch Sheriff Mair. He remarked that there had been contempt of Court, and without further ado ordered that the young woman should be sent to prison, at the same time abruptly refusing to hear her solicitor. But after emphatically declaring that "the matter was settled" and the poor girl "under arrest," the Sheriff thought fit to change his mind, and adjourned the case The solicitor then attempted to show that the whole proceedings against his client were irregular and illegal, but the Sheriff angrily ordered him to leave the room, and directed an officer "to take that man out of Court." The gentleman thus insulted is the venerable dean of the local Bar, and the extraordinary behaviour of the Sheriff towards him and his client has excited the deepest indignation in the town.

The Waltham Abbey Bench have a remarkably tender and delicate method of dealing with a person convicted of gross cruelty. On a recent occasion one Bartrip was charged with causing a mare to be ill-treated by working it; and, after seeing the animal, the Magistrates came to the conclusion that it was "a very bad case." For this "very bad case," however, they not only let the defendant off with a ridiculously small penalty, but announced their decision in terms which read almost like an apology for venturing to inflict any punishment at all. First of all, the Chairman (Mr. C. J. Bury) said they were very sorry to see the horse; it was really not in a fit state. "Bartrip," he proceeded, "I am very sorry to see you here. You are respected by everybody, but we cannot allow this to be passed over. We must fine you £1, including costs. It is a very bad case." This, I am assured, is a fair sample of the absurdities constantly perpetrated by the J.P.'s of Waltham Abbey.

Two Game Law cases came before the Wootton Bassett Bench the other day with a curious result. In the first a farmer's son, named Slade, was summoned for killing game without a licence, the proceedings being taken in this form at the instigation of a gamekeeper, who was animated, of course, by a disinterested desire for the protection of the Revenue. On the evidence of a gamekeeper and his witness the defendant was convicted, and fined £1 and costs, although he called three witnesses to show that he did not, as alleged, shoot a pheasant. In the second case a pupil of Slade's father was charged with committing a similar offence on the same occasion. But, unfortunately for the Revenue, the gamekeeper in this instance was flatly contradicted by his own witness, and the Magistrates, without waiting for the defence, dismissed the summons. Slade's solicitor thereupon pointed out that his client had been convicted upon evidence which the Bench now decided was unreliable, and he appealed to them to exonerate him. The Bench, however, refused to do this, and so Slade stands convicted whilst his friend is acquitted upon the testimony of the same witnesses regarding offences alleged to have been committed at the same time and place.

At Northampton Assizes last week a man named Read was convicted of armed night poaching and sentenced to four months' hard labour. Read, it was alleged, was "armed" with a stick; a farmer and his three sons with whom the prisoner and his companions came into collision were armed with revolvers and a gun, and some of the poachers were shot, one with nearly fatal effect. It will be interesting to observe what punishment is inflicted upon the person or persons who wounded the poachers—that is, supposing they are ever brought to justice.

Read's conviction was only obtained on a second trial, the first jury being unable to agree. The juror who stood out against a conviction has addressed an instructive letter to the Northampton Mercury, from which I take the following:—

> Two of the so-called "gentlemen" (?) of the jury were most abusive towards me. I was called names, and very offensive language was used. It is only just, however, to say that the foreman apologised on behalf of the remainder. Amongst the arguments used were—"He is a poacher anyway, and anything is good enough for poachers." "Put it to yourself: how should you like your rabbits taken?" "Look at the expression of his face; that's enough!" As though we were trying him for the countenance the Lord had given him. Then it was said the Socialists had been collecting to defend him, and those sort of people ought to be put down. . . . It seems to me, Mr. Editor, there is very little chance of a fair verdict for such men as Read while the juries are all drawn from about one class of men, generally farmers and tradesmen—the former a most prejudiced class of men, although I, a farmer, say it. It seems to me the time has come when every man on the voting list, without any other qualification, should be liable to be summoned on juries, his expenses, of course, being paid; then we should have fairer verdicts, and the poacher even might perhaps get justice, tempered with mercy; but he never will from Magistrates and farmers.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. Perhaps the most striking object-lesson in uneven-handed justice is furnished by the contrast between the respective decisions of the Stipendiaries at Bow-street and Westminster in cases of a similar nature. One defendant, whose furious driving was a source of danger but caused no actual mischief, gets ten days. The other, who by the same kind of recklessness actually brought about a collision and "nearly smashed up a cab," is let off with a fine which he is easily able to pay. The conclusion is irresistible that the disparity between the sentences was due to the difference in the social positions of the two offenders. With regard to the performances of the provincial Magistrates, I would particularly direct attention to the monstrously heavy fines imposed at Cambridge for offences under the Game Laws :—

York City Police-court Before the Lord Mayor and Sir Joseph Terry. James Dawker, labourer, charged with being drunk and disorderly and assaulting a constable. He struck the officer across the head and other parts of the body with a stick, and also on the face with his fist. Fined 15s. and costs.

York City Police-court. Before the Lord Mayor, Sir Joseph Terry, and Mr. W. J. Clutton. John Kelly and William Ellis, charged with sleeping in a brickyard and being without visible means of subsistence. Fourteen days each.

Wrexham County Police-court. Before Captain Griffith-Boscawen, Sir R. E. Egerton, Colonel Meredith, Messrs. W. Trevor Parkins, W. Thomas, J. A. Hogan, A. E. Evans, and E. Hooson. Peter Edwards, butcher and Methodist deacon, convicted of an aggravated assault on his wife, who was granted a separation order. He seized her by the throat, making blood flow from her neck, knocked her down, and kicked her. On a former occasion he broke three of her ribs. Fined £1 and costs.

Wrexham Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. W. E. Samuel, J. F. Edisbury, Evan Richards, R. Owen, and Dr. Palin. Robert Owen, charged with stealing six waistcoats, and Harriet Jones with receiving the same. One month each.

Lexden and Winstree Petty Sessions. Before Mr. J. Bateman, Colonels Green, Lefroy, and Thackeray, Captains Kelso, Brett, and Ind. James Brane, charged with stealing two bushels of peas on June 21. One month.

Bristol Police-court. Before Messrs. H. Thomas, O. Hosegood, and A. H. Ford. Frederick Bowering, convicted of assaulting Thomas Hooper by knocking him down and severely kicking him. Later on defendant renewed the assault, and complainant had to go to the hospital. Fined 20s. and costs.

Bristol Police-court. Before the same Justices. Charles Beer and Wm. Avery, young men, pleaded guilty to stealing a tame rabbit. Beer, one month; Avery, fourteen days.

Westminster Police-court. Before Mr. de Rutzen. Arthur W. Collins, gentleman, charged with furiously driving a horse and dog-cart. Defendant drove along the Brompton-road at a great pace and, in trying to avoid a van, collided with a cab, which was nearly smashed up. The police said defendant was so drunk that he went to sleep three minutes after being placed in a cell. Ordered to pay the damage to the cab and fined £1. 10s.

Bow-street Police-court. Before Mr. Lushington. George Turner, coachman, charged with being drunk and driving to the common danger. It was stated that he drove down Villiers-street on to the Embankment at the rate of ten or twelve miles an hour. Defendant's employer, who was in the carriage at the time, gave evidence on his behalf. It was the man's first offence. Ten days without the option of a fine.

Newcastle-under-Lyme Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Bull, S. R. Edge, and W. Kirkham. George Millington, charged with assaulting his wife, whom he knocked down while she had a baby in her arms. Fined 20s. and costs.

Grimsby Police-court. Before Mr. S. Oates, Alderman Veal, Messrs. E. Bannister, C. Morton, and A. Connell. Abraham Perry, fishing apprentice, charged with absconding from the smack Coventry. Four weeks.

EIDERDON PURE WOOLLEN FABRICS, in various weights and colourings, for Dressing Gowns, Smoking Jackets, Ladies' three-quarter Capes, Dresses, and Underskirts; also the new Ballylareen Duffle Frieze for Ulster Coats, Inverness Capes, and all descriptions of Winter Wraps where "warmth without weight" is the desideratum. The Eiderdon Rug. Samples of Boyd & Company's productions, with "The Book of the Ulster," illustrated, and forms for self-measurement, may be obtained, post free, on application to the Sole Proprietors and Makers, BOYD & CO., 77, Royal-avenue, Belfast.

Lanark Sheriff-court. John Lammie and James Lammie, charged with assaulting a woman by knocking her down and kicking her, breaking her nose and cheek-bone; also with striking her husband with a bottle. Owing to their injuries both the man and his wife were confined to the house for several days. Fined £1. 10s. each.

Rothesay. Before Sheriff-Substitute Martin. Francis Doyle, described as a young lad, convicted on two charges of poaching. Fines and costs, £4. 10s.; in default, fifty-one days' imprisonment.

Wallingford County Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Kirby Hedges, H. B. Morrell, A. C. Arding, H. Hawkins, J. Haylar, and W. Littleboy. George Cannon, convicted of cruelty to a horse by working it while in a very weak and emaciated state. A veterinary surgeon said starvation was the sole cause of the weakness. Fined 10s. and costs.

Clitheroe Police-court. Before Messrs. A. Roberts and J. Brown. William Fallow, aged 18, charged with stealing wood from a fence. He said he took it because they had no fire. This appeared to be his first offence. Fourteen days in default of paying 10s. and costs.

Bradford West Riding Police-court. Before Messrs. T. Peel, E. P. Arnold-Forster, A. Anderton, W. H. Ellis, J. S. Cooke, and E. Slater. Elizabeth T. Slater, charged with cruelty to her step-daughter by severely beating her with a knotted bamboo. The child was sent into a garret, and was so terrified that she got on to the roof, and by means of a clothes-line let herself down to the ground (three stories). Fined 20s. and costs.

Latchington Petty Sessions. Before Rev. E. R. Horwood, Messrs. C. W. Parker, C. A. Parker, John Page, and T. Elsey Bland. George Mott, charged with trespassing in pursuit of conies. Time for payment of £2. 10s. 6d. was refused, and defendant committed for one month.

Braunton Divisional Petty Sessions. Before Mr. W. V. Hiern, General Chichester, and Mr. G. C. Davie. Wm. Newcombe, a boy, charged with ill-treating a cat, at which he threw a stone. Fined £1.

Rotherham Police-court. Robert Atherton charged with allowing a horse to be worked in an unfit state, and Wm. Lofthouse with working the animal. The horse had a dislocated fetlock, the injury being of long standing, and an Inspector said he had never seen an animal worked in such a state. Atherton fined £2; Lofthouse, £1 and costs.

Hastings County Police-court. Before Sir A. Ashburnham, Major-General Sir A. Anson, Colonel Lane, Rear-Admiral Garforth, Messrs. V. B. Crake and C. Pemberton Carter. Henry J. Benge charged with sleeping in a shed. He said it was a rough night, and he had nowhere else to go. Fourteen days.

Cambridge Division Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. H. W. Pemberton, S. H. Rowley, C. J. Clay, J. Todd, and Prof. Sir G. M. Humphry. Thomas Gawthorpe and Charles Chapman, charged with using dogs for taking game on Sunday. There were two summonses against each in respect of alleged offences on the same day. A gamekeeper identified Chapman, but the latter brought such strong evidence to show he was not there that the Bench dismissed the case. Gawthorpe was fined on the two summonses £10 and costs; in default, four months.

Reading Adjourned Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. J. O. Griffits, Q.C., Recorder. Alfred Beasley charged with stealing a side of bacon. On a previous hearing the jury were unable to agree, and the only fresh witness now was one for the defence—a girl, who said she saw the thief, and he was nothing like the prisoner. Twelve months' hard labour and three years' police supervision.

Last week one Crump was brought before the Mayor and an Alderman of Reigate. This hardened miscreant was a basket-maker, and, as was only befitting such a criminal being, looked ill-fed and ill-clothed, and was shivering with cold. It will hardly be believed by those even who take a pessimist view of human nature, that the wretch had been so lost to all sense of right as to gather a few lumps of coke, value threepence, out of a hedge that separated a footpath from a private coal-yard. The Magistrates were so impressed with the wickedness of this proceeding that they fined him 10s. with 14s. costs, or ten days' imprisonment. In vain Crump begged for a little time to pay the money. This was promptly refused, and he was taken off to prison. A local newspaper suggests that the Mayor has little of human sympathy. It really horrifies me to hear a Mayor attacked in this fashion. Only think of Crump, half starved and half frozen, and, because he wanted to get a little fire in his poor abode, actually picking up a few pieces of coke out of a pathside hedge, instead of recognising that he ought to have continued to freeze. May we not be proud of our country, and especially proud of its justice as administered by this Mayor of Reigate, when we see such prompt punishment meted out to a man whose iniquity almost puts him outside the pale of humanity! "Human sympathy," indeed! And where then would be the sacred rights of property? A Daniel, a very Reigate Daniel, come to judgment.

A CHRISTMAS BOX.—A Merryweather's Fire Pump, with Buckets, for my friend's country house. Price Lists.—63, Long-acre, London. W.C.

A Lancashire correspondent sends me the following very queer story:—About seven weeks ago a young collier, of Ashton-in-Makerfield, was charged at the Wigan County Police-court with having been drunk and assaulted a constable. He was fined £1 and 10s. costs. Towards this he at once handed in 10s., and the Bench considerately granted time for the payment of the balance. A few days later the defendant's mother paid the remaining £1 at the Ashton police-office, which is four miles from the head office at Wigan. Justice was thus satisfied, but the police were not. Perhaps they thought the Magistrates had dealt too lightly with the offender. At any rate, a week after the full amount had been paid a constable called on the defendant, told him there was "something wrong about that money," and invited him to "come up and see the Sergeant about it." The defendant went, and was forthwith arrested and despatched by the next train to Preston Gaol. His mother, becoming apprehensive at his absence, sent her daughter to the police-station to inquire how long he would be. "He'll be three weeks," replied the constable, "for he's gone to Preston, and here's a sovereign for your mother," at the same time giving her the money paid in a week previously, which had never been forwarded to Wigan. At the end of the three weeks the defendant was discharged from the gaol at Preston, and, as the authorities do not return prisoners to the place whence they are committed, he had to make his way as best he could—his feet being terribly swollen by work on the treadmill—to Wigan, eighteen miles distant. Arrived at Wigan, he called at the County Police Office and obtained the 10s. first deposited on account of the fine and costs. He was then able to pay his fare on to Ashton.

My informant vouches for the truth of the above narrative. A more shameful abuse of the powers of the police has rarely come under my notice. The official explanation will be, I anticipate, that the balance of the fine and costs was not paid in the proper quarter. But why did not the police forward the money from Ashton to Wigan; or, if it was not their business to do this, why did they accept the sovereign and retain it for a week? Can it be that somebody or other determined by hook or by crook to get this young fellow into gaol in spite of the commendable desire of the Bench to keep him out? It seems to me that if the facts are correctly stated, the defendant has good ground for an action for wrongful imprisonment, and, whether this be so or not, a searching investigation of the whole affair is certainly required.

One of the most unprincipled of the bogus usurers who live by the "preliminary fee" trick is the man Barclay of Westminster Bridge road. In a case that has just come under my notice this shark got £5 out of a would-be borrower, after representing (through his clerk) that there would be no difficulty about lending the required amount on a promissory note at 5 per cent. The £5 once paid, Barclay sprang some trumpery difficulty about the security, and then coolly let the matter drop by ignoring all subsequent letters addressed to him by the victim. It amazes me that after all the warnings that have been given against this trick, in TRUTH and elsewhere, people in want of money should throw away the little they have in this sheepish manner.

The manifold possibilities of the American law against using the mails for fraudulent purposes are further shown in a case just reported from Providence (Rhode Island). One Charles J. Budlong, with the prefix "Rev." to his name, and described as "the Pawtuxet Valley preacher," has been committed for trial for having ordered goods of various tradespeople through the post, and evaded payment. This fully bears out what I said last week. The parties defrauded did not set the law in motion; the prosecution was conducted by the Federal Government under "Section 5,480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States." Were this section embodied, with the necessary alterations, in the Revised Statutes of the United Kingdom, the number of rogues carrying on thriving trades all around us would be speedily reduced.

As a timely example of this, the following advertisement may be cited. It has been appearing in provincial papers of late, among others the Leeds Mercury:—

Clerks.—Evening Employment; 30s. weekly; plain writers. Specimens four stamps.—Mercantile Supply Company, 239, Pentonville-road, London.

This is a barefaced swindle for getting fourpences from clerks out of work. Those who send their stamps in answer to the advertisement hear no more of the matter. Nor will this appear surprising when I mention that 239, Pentonville-road is a newspaper shop, where the "Mercantile Supply Company" has his letters addressed. He calls in person to fetch the letters, and in reply to a personal inquiry for him made on my behalf at 239, Pentonville-road, he leaves a letter stating that the Company only have vacancies for clerks at Glasgow, Leeds, and the other centres where they are advertising. At present there is no reason why this trick should not be carried on as long as newspapers can be found to publish the advertisement. A clerk out of work, having once lost his fourpence, is not likely to spend anything further on discovering and prosecuting the "Mercantile Supply Company," or on the doubtful game of stirring up the Public Prosecutor. What is wanted is a public authority which will systematically hunt down all rascals of this stamp, and there is no more appropriate agency for the purpose than the Post Office. In this instance it will be noted that the "Mercantile Supply" swindler does not directly use the Post Office himself, but he indirectly makes use of it for the transmission of the money which can, in fact, only be sent to him through the post. Presumably the American law is wide enough to cover this, but if not, whenever we pass a similar law, we must take care to construct it of the necessary width.

FEEDING DOGS.—Prof. Woodroffe Hill, F.R.C.V.S., writes: "A sound, well-balanced canine dietary is the secret of success with 'Spratt's Patent.' I have no hesitation in asserting, with regard to biscuit diet, SPRATT'S FIBRINE CAKE is far and away the best in the English market. Some of the dog biscuits I have examined might be composed of pipeclay and sawdust for the nutritive properties they possess. Cheap and dirty means expense and disease." See each "Dog Cake" is stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "X." This is all important.

One day last week the Yorkshire Post, having announced the death of a Mr. John Sedgwick, had to correct the announcement, the gentleman being still alive. By way of putting the matter right, the correction concluded thus:—

The paragraph reached us from a usually trustworthy correspondent, and we regret that he appears to have been misinformed.

This reminds me of a story of Dean Swift. The Dean had announced the death of some one, and the some one wrote to contradict it. "This," said the Dean, "is proof positive that he is dead, for he is incapable of telling the truth."

With reference to the opening of a new Nurses' Residental Club in Nottingham-place, I am asked to mention that this is by no means the first institution of its kind in operation. A similar club was opened in Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square, last March, and there are various "Homes" on a similar plan, besides a non-residential club in Buckingham-street, Strand. I wish them all success.

The Rev. R. Wardlaw Thompson, "Foreign Secretary" of the London Missionary Society, has sent me a long letter explaining the case of the Rev. James Good, to whose acquisition of extensive territories in South Africa attention was called under the heading, "A Mammonite Missionary," in TRUTH of November 3. The letter has required consideration at some length, and owing to the pressure on my space, I am obliged at the last moment to defer publishing it for another week.

I am also for the same reason compelled to hold over the further correspondence which I promised to publish on the subject of quacks and their advertisements. "The Unspeakable Quack" has so much to say that I cannot find room for it all.

"Do you seriously believe," writes a correspondent, "that in a country like this, dependent on its prosperity on being able to sell its manufactured goods abroad, and thus subjected to the world's competition, and in one in which population is ever so increasing, that emigration is as much a necessity as swarming is to a hive of bees, it is possible for the State to secure to all a fair day's wage for a fair day's work?" No, I do not. But in recognising that this would be desirable, and in doing all that we can to attain perfection, we shall go a considerable length on the path of achievement. We can, I think, establish a fair wage, on condition that no one particular trade is over-manned. As regards the unemployed, we can find work for them, so long as there is work useful to the community for them to do. Of course, when we have got to the end of this useful work, we cannot go further, and those left out in the cold would have to emigrate. At the present moment the fight for work in towns is mainly caused by agricultural labourers deserting their villages and flocking into towns. This ought to be met by creating a body of peasantry who are attached to the soil by the fact of possessing a part of it themselves. In every other country except this the system has been adopted, and has been found to succeed. This would be far more practical than asking why it is not adopted here, and leaving echo to shout "why" in the desert.

Various speeches have been made during the week upon the living wage question, and its opponents have launched all the missiles that they can draw from the arsenal of political economy against it. But what is the alternative? That men should be made to work for a wage that is not living, or, in other words, that in return for their labour they should herd in styes with their families like swine, should have no more food than is sufficient to keep body and soul together, and should be without those comforts which, to civilised beings, are practically necessaries. I am old enough to remember when the wage for labour was far smaller than it is now. Every argument that is at present urged against a living wage—to put it more properly, a wage sufficing for a decent and civilised life—was urged then by the Brahmins of political economy. Trades Unions were denounced as asking for what was impossible. Nevertheless, the rise in wages caused by the action of Trade Unions has been proved to be possible without crippling industry. And so it would be now, were the living wage doctrine adopted. "Who," asks a Tory newspaper, "would invest his money in business, were there to be no question of profit until the British workman has taken as much as he may please to ask for?" No one, I admit. But this is not the question, which is, whether any one is entitled to profit by reducing the wage below what the British workmen are entitled to ask for. To my thinking, the sooner no one can invest his money in any business, in which he can only hope for profits by sweating the earnings of his employés, the better will it be for the country.

Government, by giving a Charter to a rotten African Company, has made a present to a gang of financing adventurers of about two millions, which they have been allowed to extract from British investors, and to add to by robbery and murder. We are told that this is only fit and proper, and, no doubt, dozens of saws from political economy may be found to justify it. Yet when any one ventures to assert that millions of men are entitled to regard a fair monetary payment for their honest work before capitalists make a profit by employing them, he is treated as though he were a pernicious idiot. Well, all that I can say is, that I am on the side of the idiots, and that a fair day's wage for a fair day's work is a principle, which recommends itself to me as the corner-stone of the well-being of the community.

"VERREY'S" RESTAURANT, Regent-street, corner of Hanover-street. The oldest and most select French Restaurant in London. Ladies' luncheons at moderate prices a specialty. Dinners à la carte.

A phase of the sweating question which deserves more attention than it receives has been put before me by a Scotch correspondent. The other day he found a cousin of his, a young woman of twenty-two, engaged at her home in making cheap white ties, such as are sold at 2d. each and upwards. She is paid 4½d. per dozen, and by incessant hard work for seven hours each day she earns only 1s. 10½d. It seems that the young woman is not dependent on her wages for her support, and what my correspondent points out is that it is often owing to the competition of home workers of this class that others who have to earn their living by their needle are so abominably sweated. It is difficult, however, to see how such pernicious competition can be prevented. Ladies, young or old, who are ready to submit to the slavery described without necessity, are not likely to relinquish it out of consideration for the consequences to their less well-to-do sisters.

Mr. Mundella will, I suspect, find it somewhat difficult to justify his incautious declaration that the State could not possibly discharge the lifeboat service so efficiently as the National Lifeboat Institution; and I rejoice to see that the Daily Chronicle is devoting some of its energies to an investigation of the operations of that body. I have already given my reasons for doubting whether the Institution is above criticism, and I suspect that a careful investigation on the coast would bring to light much that deserves to be known. I would invite the attention of the Chronicle gentleman to what took place at Dungeness during the gale at the beginning of last week. A vessel was wrecked near the Littlestone Coastguard Station. The Dungeness lifeboat put off and was swamped. The Hythe lifeboat was then requisitioned. It had to be transported from Seabrook to the western end of Hythe, a distance of two miles, in order to be launched, and so much delay occurred that in the result the shipwrecked crew were rescued by a third lifeboat which had come all the way from Dover.

The people at Dungeness maintain that their boat is so long and heavy as to be quite unsuited to the coast. With regard to the Hythe boat, after the disastrous wreck of the Benvenue off Sandgate, it was decided to remove the boat from Seabrook to Hythe. It has taken two years to complete the new house, and though it has been finished some weeks, the boat has not been removed. Even now the slide or slip-way for launching the boat is not constructed, and hence the delay in getting her off in the above instance. In how many cases round the coast are similar instances of bad management to be found?

I was favoured the other day by Mr. S. A. L. Banbury, author of "Sierra Leone; or, the White Man's Grave," with a letter disputing, at considerable length, the accuracy of the statements in TRUTH of November 9 respecting the prevalence of the slave trade in Sierra Leone. Mr. Banbury writes with the authority of a former official of the Colony; but he admits that it is "some years" since he served there. On the other hand, the statement which I made as to "the last slave market in the district" being held only about four miles from Freetown, was expressly given on the authority of one who occupies an official position in the Colony at present. I can hardly be expected to take the evidence of an official who was there "some years since" against that of one who is there to-day. Besides, if Mr. Banbury read TRUTH regularly, he would have seen in my issue of October 12 reference to an official proclamation published at Freetown, in which the prevalence of the slave trade within the sphere of British influence was expressly admitted.

That Mr. Chamberlain is a good debater no one doubts. But he mars his effectiveness as a speaker by indiscriminately falling upon everything, good, bad, or indifferent, in every measure which has his opponents as its godfathers. This was the case with the Employers' Liability Bill. Everything in it, according to him, was bad. Had he kept to the text that it might have been better, his speech would have carried greater weight. The Bill makes the employer responsible for injuries caused by one of his employés to another; but it provides no compensation in cases where the injury is caused by the negligence of the injured person himself, although a very large percentage of accidents are of this nature. At present there are insurance funds to which the employers largely contribute, which cover the two risks. These contributions, they say they will withdraw, unless the employed contract themselves out of the Bill, or, in other words, out of the possibility of not only receiving compensation from the insurance fund, but also from a Court. This was Mr. Chamberlain's first criticism, and there was a good deal of point in it. His second one was equally pointed. The Bill leaves it to a jury to decide whether the injury is the result of the negligence of the sufferer, and if so, what is to be the amount of compensation. This must in the nature of things lead to a good deal of litigation, which means that much of the money intended for the employed will go into the pockets of lawyers. But, having urged these defects in the Bill, Mr. Chamberlain did not make it clear how they are to be avoided, beyond a vague suggestion for a National Insurance Fund.

The withdrawal by the employers of their subscriptions to an insurance fund which covers accidents, no matter how or by whom caused, because they might, were they not to do so, be called upon to pay twice over, might be met by the insurance fund itself insuring the employers against all compensation granted by a Court, and all costs of litigation in a Court. This would work in this way. An employer annually subscribes—say—£10,000 to the insurance fund of his employés. But if the employer has to pay during the year £5,000 in compensation to his employés, or in costs of their litigation with him for compensation, then the £10,000 subscription would become £5,000, the employés having either been paid the other £5,000, or having led to its expenditure in litigation. Thus the Clause in the Bill forbidding contracting out would not be violated, and yet the fund covering all accidents would still continue, the sum total of the annual amount paid by the employer remaining precisely as it is.

MESSRS. HARBOROW, Hosiers, Glovers, and Shirtmakers by appointment to the Royal Family, have opened new premises, 6 and 7, New Bond-street, in connection with their old-established business, 15, Cockspur-street.

Until Christmas, Messrs. BENJAMIN, of Ulster House, Conduit-street, W., will sell their Dress-length Remnants (suitable for presents) of their celebrated Tweeds, Serges, and Homespuns, at 25s., 30s., 35s., and 40s. the dress length.

This week will bring us to the end of November. We have as yet made "progress" backwards in the Parish Councils Bill, for no sooner is one amendment disposed of than half-a-dozen more spring up like Cadmus' dragons' teeth. The Government itself has encouraged this, for it has plastered its own Bill over with amendments. Radical amendments are more plentiful than those of the Tories; and for this the Radicals hardly can be blamed, as the matter concerns the entire local life of the country; and, naturally, they wish that the Bill should run on Radical lines. What, however, is to be done? I greatly doubt whether the House would agree to what is called the guillotine, i.e., passing clauses without any discussion or amendment being allowed. There remain, therefore, four courses:—1, to suspend the twelve o'clock rule, and to sit on Saturdays; 2, to halve the Bill, leaving the Poor Law portion to be dealt with in a future Bill; 3, to carry the Bill over to next Session; 4, to sit on until the Bill be passed this Session. No. 1 and No. 3 are the best of these plans, and either might be adopted. No. 2 would be most undesirable. No. 4 is magnifique, mais ce n'est pas la guerre. Assuming that the Tories are so disposed, they might, with the help of the Lords, so protract discussion that we should only get to the next Session, when, what with finance and with current business, there would be little time for legislation.

Doctor Hertzka has written me a letter complaining of my comments on the British Freeland Association and the methods in which its members propose to found their "Utopia, Limited," in Eastern Africa. He is especially pained that I should have stated that it is the intention of the B.F.A. pioneers to "drive away the natives with mortars and rockets" en route to the Promised Land they propose to occupy. The Doctor assures me that if I had been acquainted with his writings I should have been aware that it was impossible for his followers "to harbour the shameful intentions" I assume. But it so happens that these "shameful intentions" are no assumption of mine. For on page 6 of the official organ of the British Freeland Association for June last I read (in what purports to be an official summary of the Doctor's own anticipation of what his pioneers will do) that during their march from the coast they were supposed to fall in with a marauding body of Masai, whom, "with a sharp fire from mortars and rocket battery (directed over the heads of their assailants), they routed, taking a number of prisoners." How far this kind of operation is consistent with "the lines of absolute freedom and justice" on which the Doctor's new commonwealth is to be founded I leave my unprejudiced readers to judge for themselves.

But there is another point which the Doctor does not satisfactorily explain. He has been asked, he candidly confesses, why he does not start a colony on Freeland principles "on cheap land in Essex or elsewhere at home." And his answer is: "In England the original site would have first to be bought," whereas in Africa his disciples will have a "free command of natural resources;" which I take to mean, in plain English, that they will be able, thanks to their rockets and repeating rifles, to steal from the natives the land which is to be transformed into the B. F. Utopia. Another very odd instance, surely, of proceeding on "the lines of absolute freedom and justice." In short, I am not at all inclined to withdraw anything I have said about Dr. Hertzka and his "Social Gospel," and I still think that it would be much more honest of his so-called "British Freelanders" if they henceforth announced themselves as "The British Filibusters."

Mr. T. P. O'Connor suggests in the Weekly Sun that, were a dozen Members of the House of Commons to have to select a man with whom to pass six months alone on a desert island, they would all choose Mr. John Morley. Well, I should not. And this I say without any imputation on Mr. Morley as a man of varied knowledge and agreeable temper. I should take a Conservative with the cheerful disposition of Mark Tapley, with a wide conversational store, differing from me upon every conversational subject, and possessed of a Crusoe ability in knocking up an abode, milking goats, &c. I can imagine nothing more horrible than this eternal companionship. The pair would be so sick of each other within three months that each would be almost justified in killing the other. And one of the reasons why I should not relish Mr. Morley for my companion is that if he did not kill me, I should probably kill him. Clearly, therefore, my companion ought to be a Conservative.

I once knew two men who determined to pass the rest of their lives on a small island just outside the Gulf of Spezzia. Being rich, they had a comfortable house built for themselves on the island, and started on their Siamese-twin experience. Within a few months they had divided the island into two equal parts. Each lived on his part and forbade the other to enter it.

